Only about one quarter of registered housing associations undertake development. Over the last five years, housing associations have completed the following number of dwellings, through new-build or acquisition and redevelopment, via funding from the Housing Corporation's approved development programme (ADP) and local authority social housing grant (LASHG):

	Approved development programme	Local authority social housing grant
1997–98	35,418	10,152
1999–2000	25,040	8,678
2001–02	22,875	6,971

Information is not available about the allocation of housing association dwellings to people on existing waiting lists or from elsewhere. The Housing Corporation's regulatory code states that registered housing associations must work with local authorities to enable the latter to fulfil their duties to homeless households and people in priority housing need; to the vulnerable and those covered by the Government's Supporting People policy.

Local Government Finance

14. Mr. Kidney: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will place in the Library a summary of the responses to his consultation on reform of local government finance. [77027]

Mr. Raynsford: A summary of responses to the consultation on the formula grant review will be published and placed in the Library before the Government's proposals for the future grant distribution system are announced at around the beginning of December.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions his Department has had with the F40 group in the review of the local government education funding formula to provide a more even funding system for rural and inner city schools. [78878]

Mr. Raynsford: My colleagues and I had discussions with both the F40 as a group and some of their 36 constituent authorities as part of the consultation on the Formula Grant Review.

Similar discussions have taken place between the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's officials and officers representing F40 members. We are currently taking decisions on the new system to be that we will propose following that consultation. In doing so we are considering carefully the evidence, pressures and representations that we received, including those from F40 authorities and campaigners.

Mr. Cran: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what impact changes in the local government formula grant will have on public services delivered by the East Riding of Yorkshire council. [79166]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Brigg and Goole (Mr. Cawsey) on 4 November 2002.

Mr. Cran: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of rural deprivation in the local government formula grant review. [79167]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend, the Member for Brigg and Goole (Mr. Cawsey) on 4 November 2002.

Mr. Cran: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what account he has taken of the extra cost of providing services in rural areas in the local government formula grant review. [79168]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Brigg and Goole (Mr. Cawsey) on 4 November 2002.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what account he has taken of the extra cost of providing services in rural areas in the local government formula grant review. [78879]

Mr. Raynsford: The formula grant review options that were put forward as part of the summer consultation were informed by evidence on relative costs of providing services across the country. We are currently taking decisions on the new system to be implemented following that consultation, and in doing so are considering carefully all of the evidence, pressures and representations that we received, including those from rural areas.

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what impact changes in the local government formula grant will have on public services in (a) the East Riding of Yorkshire and (b) North Lincolnshire. [78881]

Mr. Raynsford: We will announce the new system for distributing Formula Grant, including detailed grant allocations for individual authorities, at the time of the provisional local government finance settlement which we expect to be around the start of December. Once the Government has allocated its grant, decisions about budgets and services are primarily for local councils to make. However, we have already guaranteed that no authority will face a cut in grant next year on a like for like basis, and we hope to do better than that when we announce the actual floors and ceilings scheme as part of the provisional settlement.

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what research was done by his Department into the impact of dispersal and settlement patterns on the cost of providing services in rural areas as part of the local government formula grant review. [78882]

Mr. Raynsford: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister commissioned research into the impact of sparsity, dispersal and settlement patterns as part of the work on the Environmental, Protective & Cultural Services block. In addition other Government departments have undertaken such research covering the services for which they are primarilyresponsible. Officials have also discussed sparsity issues with local government colleagues over the past 18 months in technical groups covering all service blocks. This informed the options put forward in the Formula Grant Review consultation document. We are currently taking decisions on the new system to be implemented following that consultation, and in doing so are considering carefully all of the evidence, pressures and representations that we received, including those from rural areas.

Local Government Officers

Ian Lucas: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to revise the Widdecombe Rules on political activity of local government officers. [76625]

Mr. Raynsford: We intend to conduct a review looking at political restrictions on local government officers, and to publish a consultation paper containing proposals, in due course.

Neighbourhood Management Scheme

Ms Buck: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects to announce a further round of the Neighbourhood Management scheme. [78629]

Mrs. Roche: We are considering proposals for a second round of Neighbourhood Management Pathfinders and hope to make an announcement in the near future.

Non-department Public Bodies

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the non-departmental public bodies affiliated to his Department. [79665]

Mr. Raynsford: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is responsible for sponsoring the following Non-Departmental Public Bodies:

Advisory Panel on Beacon Councils
Advisory Panel on Standards for the Planning Inspectorate
Audit Commission
Building Regulations Advisory Committee
Community Forum
Commission for New Towns/English Partnerships
Castle Vale Housing Action Trust
Housing Corporation
Liverpool Housing Action Trust
Property Advisory Group
Parliamentary Boundary Commission for England
Parliamentary Boundary Commission for Wales
Rent Assessment Panels
Standards Board for England
Stonebridge Housing Action Trust
Tower Hamlets Housing Action Trust
Valuation Tribunals

Park Homes

Mr. Chope: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will place a copy of the survey on the economics of park homes in the Library. [78908]

Mr. McNulty: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the member for St. Helens North (Mr. Watts) on 29 October 2002, Official report, column 680W.

Planning

Mr. Willis: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the planning appeals and their location by local planning authority that have been dismissed on the grounds of health concerns in each of the last three years. [79042]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many public service agreements have been entered into with local authorities in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement; [79593]

(2) if he will list the local authorities which have entered into public service agreements; and if he will make a statement. [79594]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Bath (Mr. Foster) on 22 October 2002, Official Report, column 292W.

Recruitment (Over-50s)

20. Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what percentage of new recruits to his Department in the past two years were aged 50 and over. [79308]

Mr. Leslie: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was formed in May 2002. As part of the former DETR(C) and DTLR(C) the percentage figures for each year for new recruits aged 50 and over in the period requested is as follows:

1. 1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001 = 7.25 per cent.
2. 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002 = 6.5 per cent.

Regional Assemblies

Andrew George: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 23 October 2002, Official Report, columns 389–90W, how he defines the word stakeholder; and if he will list the categories of stakeholders consulted. [79346]

Mr. Raynsford: 'Your Region, Your Choice', the White Paper on regional governance, includes business, trade unions, the voluntary and community sectors, local authorities and other key partners in the public sector, and environmental groups as examples of stakeholders. However, the White Paper is not prescriptive. We would consider that any organisation with an interest in regional governance can be considered as a stakeholder.

The White Paper did not sound out particular stakeholders or groups of stakeholders for consultation. It invited anyone with views on stakeholder involvement with elected regional assemblies to submit their comments.

Registered Social Landlords

Mr. Steen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will (a) list the total debt of each registered social landlord in England and Wales in the last financial year, (b) identify what percentage of each of each debt was incurred through borrowing for council housing stock transfer and (c) state from where. [78916]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested entails listing all social landlords registered with the Housing Corporation of which there are around 2,000. Due to the volume of material, I will write to the hon. Member as soon as the information is collated.

Rural Deprivation

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of rural deprivation in the local government formula grant review. [78880]

Mr. Raynsford: The formula grant review options that were put forward as part of the summer consultation were informed by evidence on relative costs of providing services across the country. Further work on measuring deprivation was carried out during the consultation period as part of discussions with groups representing rural authorities. We are currently taking decisions on the new system to be implemented following that consultation, and in doing so are considering carefully all of the evidence, pressures and representations that we received, including those from rural areas.

Rural Services

Mr. Cran: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what research has been undertaken by his Department into the impact of dispersal and settlement patterns on the cost of providing services in rural areas as part of the local government formula grant review. [79165]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Brigg and Goole (Mr. Cawsey) on 4 November 2002.

Your Region Your Choice

Andrew George: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister with reference to paragraph 9.21 of the 'Your Region, Your Choice' White Paper, what account he has taken of the other views invited; and if he will publish the views submitted. [79347]

Mr. Raynsford: Other than the specific request for views on stakeholder involvement with elected regional assemblies to be submitted by 31 August 2002, the White Paper 'Your Region, Your Choice' was not a formal consultation exercise. The White Paper indicated that the Government would also be interested in views on its other proposals, but there is no deadline and views may still be submitted. We have no plans to publish these views, but we will take them into account as we implement our proposals.

DEFENCE

Live Animals (Exports)

3. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the aims and objectives of the future offensive air system programme. [76695]

Mr. Hoon: The Future Offensive Air System programme is intended to replace the offensive air capability currently provided by the Tornado GR4 strike aircraft towards the end of the next decade. The programme is currently in the concept stage. No final decisions have been taken.

National Missile Defence

15. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what recent discussions he has had with his United States counterpart on national missile defence. [76708]

Mr. Hoon: I last discussed missile defence issues with the United States Secretary of Defence, Donald Rumsfeld, at our meeting in Washington on 11 September.

Regular and Territorial Armies

19. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence by how much the strength of the (a) regular and (b) territorial armies have changed since May 1997; and by how much the number of medically unfit soldiers has changed over the same period. [76712]

Mr. Ingram: In June 1997 the strength of the regular army was 101,360, of which 6.7 per cent. were listed as not employable at full combatant duties. In September this year, these figures were 101,660 and 10. 4 per cent. respectively.

In June 1997 the strength of the territorial army stood at 55, 470. The strategic defence review vision for the territorial army was to restructure it into a more relevant, usable and integrated organisation. The current strength of the territorial army, as at 1 September 2002, stands at 38,835. This includes 400 who are currently mobilised in support of operations.

Middle East

20. Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the role of British forces in international peacekeeping in the middle east region. [76713]

Mr. Hoon: The Strategic Defence Review concluded that our national interests are directly affected by events in the middle east. The deployment of United Kingdom armed forced to Oman for exercise Saif Sareea II graphically illustrated our commitment to stability in the region.

Royal Air Force aircraft continue to patrol the no fly zones over Iraq in support of UN SCR 688, which demanded that Saddam Hussein end the repression of his own people. We also contribute a small contingent of British armed forces personnel to the UN Iraq Kuwait Observer Mission established under UN SCR 687 to monitor the defined border and demilitarised zone between Iraq and Kuwait.

Armed Forces (Careers)

21. Mr. Bailey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures the Ministry of Defence is taking to promote the armed forces as a career to students in schools. [76715]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Workington (Mr. Cunningham).

High-Tech Equipment

23. Lawrie Quinn: What measures his Department is taking to enhance opportunities within the engineering industry to enter into partnership development roles during the procurement of high-tech equipment and software for the armed forces. [76717]

Mr. Hoon: The Ministry of Defence recognises that partnerships with industry in high-tech areas are crucial to military capability and to the UK Defence Industry. The Ministry of Defence has recently launched the "Towers of Excellence" and Defence Technology Centres. These are mechanisms for partnering with industry and academia in priority high technology areas. We are also taking steps, via the National Defence & Aerospace's Systems Panel, to ensure that Ministry of Defence and Department of Trade and Industry Science and Technology spending is fully co-ordinated.

22. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans have been made to train armed forces personnel to carry out duties as firefighters. [76716]

24. Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the deployment of the Army during the firefighters' dispute. [76718]

35. Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the armed forces have been assigned to providing emergency fire and rescue cover in the event of a national firemen's strike. [76729]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for East Devon (Mr. Swire).

38. Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the impact of the firefighters' strike on the training and operational effectiveness of the armed forces. [76732]

Mr. Ingram: The Armed Forces have been particularly busy over the last few years performing their primary duties in defence of United Kingdom interests and acting as a force for good. The deployment to provide emergency fire cover will inevitably impact on their ability to continue some of these tasks at the same level of effort. The longer service personnel are required to provide fire cover the greater the penalties that will accrue to other activities, and in particular on the Armed Forces personnel employed on these duties in place of professional firefighters.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many defence personnel have been trained on equipment introduced in the last 10 years; and what scope there is for training more to help with the current firefighters' strike. [77502]

Mr. Ingram: 31 Breathing Apparatus Rescue Teams (BARTS) and 59 Rescue Equipment Support Teams (RESTS)—a total of about 2,500 personnel—will be deployed should a fire strike take place. They will be fully trained, and provided with modern equipment, to undertake fire rescues and release road traffic accident victims.

The 10,000 military personnel trained to operate Green Goddess fire tenders provided by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will provide basic levels of emergency cover in helping to bring fires under control, and they will act in support of BART and REST teams when fire rescue is required.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what preparations he has made to ensure the safety and continuity of service to the public in the event of a firefighters' strike; and what the cost is to the Department of these actions. [77661]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 28 October 2002, Official Report, column 527W, by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. The cost of providing emergency cover will depend on the extent and nature of any industrial action.

Service Families Taskforce

25. Linda Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the role of the service families taskforce. [76719]

Mr. Ingram: The service families taskforce was set up by the Government in 1999 to deal with service family issues that were outside the control of the Ministry of Defence. However, it is now the tri-Service focus for family issues, both internal and external.

Representatives of service families meet a Minister twice a year to discuss the issues that are of concern to them. In addition, bilateral meetings are held with other Government Departments, as necessary, to discuss changes to any rules and regulations that are considered detrimental to, and discriminate against, service families.

Some are of progress by the Task Force over the last year are:

(a) The new Adoption legislation has been amended to ensure that Service families will not be disadvantaged when overseas.

(b) Legislative changes have been made to enable the Inland Revenue to pay Working Families Tax Credit to Service families on overseas postings.

(c) We have resolved the problems that some Service spouses had encountered in claiming Child Support Agency payments when on an overseas posting.

(d) As a result of discussions with the Department for Education and Skills, the new Code of Practice for School Admissions in England due for publication next year contains specific reference to Service families. This will assist the schools admissions process for their children.

Joint Strike Fighter Project

26. Andy Burnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress there has been to advance UK participation in the joint strike fighter project. [76720]

Mr. Hoon: The recent announcement of the selection of the Short Take off and Vertical Landing variant of Joint Strike Fighter (JSF) to meet the United Kingdom Joint Combat Aircraft requirement reaffirmed our participation in the JSF programme. This decision has been well received by UK industry.

United Kingdom companies have already secured key roles within the programme as a result of their outstanding technology and ability to deliver value for money. Industry estimates that its involvement could be worth up to £27 billion over the whole life of the programme, creating or securing some 8,500 jobs. In addition, we are working closely with the US authorities to facilitate further involvement of UK companies and we are placing particular emphasis on arrangements to smooth the transfer of technology between the US and UK. This builds on the considerable progress already made under the declaration of principles.

NATO

27. Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last discussed with NATO counterparts the potential enlargement of the Alliance; and if he will make a statement. [76721]

Mr. Hoon: I regularly discuss a range of NATO issues, including enlargement, with my Alliance colleagues; I did so most recently at the informal meeting of Defence Ministers in Warsaw in September. The United Kingdom remains a strong supporter of enlargement and continues to look forward to a robust round at Prague.

30. Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last discussed with NATO counterparts the potential enlargement of the alliance; and if he will make a statement. [76724]

Mr. Hoon: I refer my hon. friend to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Tamworth (Mr Jenkins).

Service Personnel (Wales)

28. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) service personnel and (b) agency staff in the defence field are employed in Wales; and how many were employed in 1992. [76722]

Mr. Ingram: The number of fire service personnel currently employed in Wales on Ministry of Defence and QinetiQ sites is 105. This figure covers contract, civilian, and service personnel. As at August 2002, there were 3,733 Agency staff based in Wales; this figure includes those staff working for Trading Fund agencies.

Information on fire service personnel and Agency staff employed in 1992 is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Desert Terrain Equipment

29. Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the suitability of the equipment available to the British armed forces for conflict in desert terrain. [76723]

Mr. Ingram: The recent Exercise SAIF SAREEA 2 allowed us to identify and assess the challenge our armed forces could face when operating in testing desert conditions. This major exercise enabled us to evaluate strengths and indicated where we might make improvements to our equipment and procedures. As a result of the post-exercise evaluation, we are carrying out equipment enhancement programmes to meet the demands of desert environments.

Bullying

31. Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures he is taking to combat bullying in the armed forces. [76725]

Mr. Ingram: The services' policy is that no form of harassment or intimidation will be tolerated; all allegations are investigated, and appropriate action taken. Potential recruits are made fully aware of this policy and it is set out in the Armed Forces Diversity policy issued in June 2002. A confidential helpline is available in case of need. Officers and senior ranks have the responsibility to preserve good order and discipline at all times, and this is reinforced on appropriate training courses. All of these measures are kept under review and adjusted as necessary.

Test and Evaluation Ranges

32. Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his Department's work to find alternative commercial opportunities at test and evaluation ranges. [76726]

Mr. Ingram: Over the next year, Defence Estates will be closely examining QinetiQ's rationalisation plans for test and evaluation ranges to identify whether any property can be declared surplus to Ministry of Defence requirements and released for commercial opportunities. In addition, the Defence Diversification Agency (DDA) continues to work in support of the regional development agencies, which assume overall responsibility for economic regeneration issues. Wherever possible, the DDA assists local communities to secure diversification opportunities through the use of Ministry of Defence technology transfer, expertise and information sharing.

Civil Emergencies

33. Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the role of (a) the Army and (b) the Royal Navy in assisting with UK civil emergencies. [76727]

Mr. Ingram: All three armed forces provide support to the civil authorities during civil emergencies under well understood, long-standing arrangements. These fall into three broad categories: military aid to the civil community, which is provided at times of life-threatening emergency; military aid to other Government Departments, which is provided when essential services cannot be maintained in any other way, and military aid to the civil power which is the provision of specialist support to the police and other law enforcement agencies.

Warships

34. Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Navy warships are operational. [76728]

Mr. Ingram: There are currently 80 HM ships and submarines in the operational fleet. This includes all vessels that are operational or engaged in preparing for service, trials or training.

Reserves

37. Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what progress has been made in enhancing the role of the reserves in home defence; and if he will make a statement. [76731]

Mr. Hoon: My right hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Armed Forces announced the full implementation of our proposals for the use of the Reserves in home defence and security in the House on 31 October 2002, Official Report, column 1023.

The new arrangements will provide significant improvements in three areas. An enhanced regionally-based planning and command capability will make it easier for the authorities dealing with civil contingencies to secure rapid support from the Armed Forces, both Regular and Reserve. An integrated communications infrastructure will be provided by a Territorial Army unit, 2 (National Communications) Signals Brigade, for which we are acquiring new communications equipment compatible with that being introduced in the emergency services. Finally, we are establishing 14 Civil Contingency Reaction Forces, each of some 500 volunteers from existing Reservists, to provide a new planned capability to assist the emergency services and other authorities at short notice.

In total the Reserve Forces will receive an addition of some 700 new posts and some 130,000 man-training days.

Army Recruits

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many Army regiments are running at more than (a) five and (b) ten per cent. below their recommended complement of non-commissioned officers, and if he will make a statement [78274]

(2) how many Army regiments are running at more than (a) five and (b) ten per cent. below their recommended complement of commissioned officers; and if he will make a statement. [78273]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is not held by Regiment, but by Arms/Corps. Those Arms/Corps running at more than five per cent. below their recommended compliment of non-commissioned officers and warrant officers are shown in the table.

	Percentage
Warrant Officers
Queen Alexandra's Royal Army Nursing Corps	−37.9
Non-Commissioned Officers
Royal Artillery	−12.1
Royal Signals	−9.4
Infantry	−8.8
Army Air Corps	−21.2

	Percentage
Royal Army Medical Corps	27.0
Adjutant General's Corps (Staff and Personnel Support)	14.8
Royal Army Veterinary Corps	17.4
Queen Alexandra's Royal Army Nursing Corps	19.9

All figures are as at 1 September 2002 and for trained personnel only.

BAE Systems

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how long the arrangement whereby employees of BAE Systems work on secondment to his Department has been in place, and where those staff are based; how many employees of BAE Systems are on secondment to the his Department; and how many employees of other defence manufacturers are on secondment to his Department, with the number of employees per company. [75229]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 21 October 2002]: The interchange of personnel between the public and commercial sectors is an important feature of the Ministry of Defence's long-standing programme to build stronger links with other sectors of the economy. This programme aims to enhance business performance by exchanging ideas, skills and experience. Encouraging interchange activities is a key part of the Civil Service reform agenda.

The information requested on inward secondees from defence manufacturers to the MOD is as follows:

Parent Company	Number and location	Total
BAE Systems	3 based in Bath 2 based in London 1 based in Bristol	6
Rolls Royce plc	Both based in Bath	2

In addition, there are currently two secondees from QinetiQ, one based in Bristol and one based in London.

Defence Logistics Organisation

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the cost of the introduction by the Defence Logistics Organisation of a single IT system for recording and controlling stocks; and what practical difficulties are still to be addressed. [78315]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Logistics Organisation does not currently plan to introduce a single IT system for recording and controlling stocks.

EU-NATO Consultative Structures

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what permanent arrangements have been put in place to formalise structures and procedures for consultations between EU and NATO; and if he will make a statement. [77815]

Mr. Hoon: The arrangements for consultation between EU and NATO are set out in Annexe VII to Annexe VI of the Presidency Conclusions of the December 2000 Nice European Council. The arrangements for consultation outside times of crisis, as set out in part II of Annexe VII, are now in place.

European Rapid Reaction Force

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the European Rapid Reaction Force will be operational; and if he will make a statement. [77812]

Mr. Hoon: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 23 October 2002, Official Report, column 348W.

Ferry Services (Portsmouth)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether ferry services in and out of Portsmouth harbour were suspended on 26 and 27 October due to dangerous weather conditions; who made the decision as to whether to suspend the services; and if he will make a statement. [78540]

Mr. Ingram: In the event of adverse weather conditions, it is for individual ferry operators to decide whether to suspend services or not. Weather conditions affect some types of vessels more than others, and some ferry operators suspended their services while others did not.

Fleet Air Arm

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he plans to supplement the Fleet Air Arm with additional pilots from foreign and commonwealth countries in order to achieve full manning for the 150 F35 aircraft, once they are acquired. [77935]

Mr. Ingram: As announced by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Defence Procurement, Lord Bach, on 30 September, it has been decided to purchase up to 150 short take-off and vertical landing (STOVL) versions of the Lockheed Martin F35s to meet the future joint combat aircraft (FJCA) requirement for the Royal Navy and Royal Air Force. These aircraft, which are due to enter service in 2012 with the first unit of a new class of carrier, will replace both the land and carrier-based Harrier aircraft of Joint Force Harrier.

No final decision on aircraft numbers has yet been taken. The current planning assumptions to procure up to 150 includes not only front-line aircraft, but also provision for training, maintenance, trials, and attrition.

It is planned that, as with Joint Force Harrier, both Royal Navy and Royal Air Force pilots will fly the F35 aircraft when it enters into front-line service. The exact requirements for front-line crews for the successor joint force have yet to be determined by the Royal Navy and Royal Air Force. On current planning assumptions it will not be necessary to supplement aircrew manning of the joint force from foreign and Commonwealth countries, as we are confident we will be able to fully man the force with regular Royal Navy and Royal Air Force pilots. However, as with all current operational and training squadrons, exchange personnel from foreign and Commonwealth countries may well fill some posts.

Gulf War Syndrome

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the current research programmes funded by the UK Government that involve examinations of UK Gulf War veterans. [78607]

Dr. Moonie: The current research programmes funded by the Ministry of Defence involving medical examinations of United Kingdom Gulf veterans are as follows:

A study by researchers at Guy's, King's and St. Thomas' School of Medicine who carried out clinical tests on number of Gulf veterans who reported significant neuromuscular symptoms in their responses to an earlier epidemiological study funded by the United States Department of Defense. Work is now complete and the findings are expected to be published in a peer-reviewed scientific journal before the end of this year.

A study by a team at Manchester Royal Infirmary who analysed the levels of paraoxanase in blood samples collected by researchers at Guy's, King's and St. Thomas' School of Medicine (blood sample collection was not Ministry of Defence funded). Work is now complete and the results are expected to be published in a peer-reviewed scientific journal.

The Gulf Veterans' Medical Assessment Programme (GVMAP) established in 1993, continues to see patients following a referral from their doctors. Patients seen at the GVMAP undergo a battery of standard tests and if clinically justified, further tests are carried out. The clinical findings for 3,000 service and ex-service patients who attended the GVMAP in the period between 11 October 1993 and 18 June 2001 were published in the Journal of the Royal Society of Medicine on 1 October 2002.

HMS Nottingham

Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when a decision will be made as to where HMS Nottingham will be repaired upon its return to the UK from Australia; what the procurement process will be for the repair work that is needed to HMS Nottingham; and if he will make a statement. [77690]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 22 October 2002, Official Report, column 143W, to the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock). Bids from those companies invited to tender for any repair work will be assessed during Nottingham's journey back to the United Kingdom. Should the decision be taken to repair her, the intention would be to award a contract before she makes landfall in the United Kingdom.

HMS St. Albans

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the sea trials of HMS St. Albans to recommence; and if he will make a statement. [78509]

Mr. Ingram: St. Albans completed her sea trials and became available to the Fleet Time on 30 September 2002.

Until the full damage assessment is complete, and repair options have been considered, it is not possible to say when St. Albans will be able to resume her programme of operational training. Initial indications are that this might be achieved early in 2003.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the latest assessment is of the work needed to repair HMS St. Albans; how long this work will take; who will pay for it; and if he will make a statement. [78511]

Mr. Ingram: The extent of the damage sustained by HMS St. Albans is still being assessed, and until this completed it is not possible to determine how long the repair work will take. An investigation into the circumstances which led to the incident is underway and pending its outcome it is premature to say where repair costs will fall.

Home Defence

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on home defence priorities and how they have changed since 11September 2001. [76707]

Mr. Hoon: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has lead Government responsibility for counter-terrorist policy and security within the United Kingdom, and maintains oversight of the measures being taken to strengthen the United Kingdom's ability to respond to the terrorist threat. The armed forces make an important contribution in support of the police through their specialist skills and capabilities.

Following the attacks on 11 September, as part of the Government's wider assessment of the implications for the United Kingdom, the Ministry of Defence undertook a detailed review of its contribution to home defence, based on the principles outlined in the Strategic Defence Review of 1998. The result was the SDR New Chapter, published in July this year. This outlined enhancements to the command structure for provision of support to the civil authorities and proposals for an enhanced role for the Reserves.

The SDR New Chapter reaffirmed the need to take the fight to the enemy overseas to prevent, deter and disrupt attacks, but it also recognised the need to be better prepared to respond to a threat to the United Kingdom itself. Since 11 September 2001, we have improved our capability to intercept renegade aircraft and shipping, and refined our response to incidents involving the use of chemical, biological, radiological and nuclear devices.

Anti-tank Missiles

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the findings of the search for the anti-tank missiles lost in the Bristol Channel. [78741]

Dr. Moonie: The Royal Navy Southern Diving Group's search report is currently being finalised. When it has been completed I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Low Flying

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many complaints have been received from residents of Dumfries and Galloway by his Department in respect of low flying sorties by the RAF in each of the last five years. [78737]

Dr. Moonie: The number of complaints recorded by the Ministry of Defence Low Flying Complaints and Enquiries Unit over the last five years, from residents of Dumfries and Galloway, is shown in the table.

	Number of complaints recorded
Calendar year
1999	192
Training year[1]
1999–2000	197
2000–01	156

[1] From 1999, recorded by training year from 1 April to 31 March.

Machrihanish Airport

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to shorten the runway at Machrihanish airport. [78833]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence has no plans physically to shorten the runway at Machrihanish. However, we have required Highlands and Islands Airways Ltd. to use a shorter runway in compliance with the terms of their current lease.

Military Airspace

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes to designated military airspace will be implemented following the closure of West Freugh airfield. [78735]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

No decisions have yet been taken about changes to the use of airspace when the airfield closes.

Military Low Flying Training

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low flying training sorties have been flown over Dumfries and Galloway by the RAF in each of the last five years. [78738]

Dr. Moonie: Information on military low flying training in the United Kingdom low flying system is recorded for each low flying area (LFA) in the form of number of hours booked for the aircraft of all three services. Data for Dumfries and Galloway are incorporated in the total for LFA 16, which also includes the Borders region of southern Scotland and other countries up to and including those within the central belt. Figures quoted in the table indicate the number of hours low flying training has been booked by day and night in the LFA over the last five years.

	Total	Fixed-wing	Helicopters
Calendar year
1997	4,023	3,455	568
1998	3,680	2,946	734
1999	3,544	2,843	701

1999–2000	3,408	2,830	578
2000–01	3,735	2,939	796
2001–02	4,080	3,279	801

[1] From 1999, recorded by training year from 1 April to 31 March

Note:
The figure for 2001–02 is some 13.5 per cent. lower than that recorded for 1995.

Military Medical Records

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether military medical records are made available once service personnel (a) have completed their military service and (b) are deceased; and if he will make a statement. [78271]

Dr. Moonie: On leaving the armed forces, personnel are provided with a summary of their medical history (Form F Med 133—Medical History on Release from HM Forces) to give to their civilian doctor. Release of full military medical records is permitted if an individual makes a Subject Access Request to the appropriate Service Records Office. If an individual wishes to make his or her records available to other parties, such as civilian health care providers or solicitors, written consent must be given to release the records.

In respect of deceased persons, the Access to Health Records Act 1990 applies. Records are usually released only for the purposes of litigation or claims, and disclosure of these records is subject to the consent of their executors. Where there are no executors, the consent of the administrator of the estate is required.

Disclosure of medical records of deceased personnel to other Government Departments, such as to the War Pensions Agency for the purpose of establishing entitlement to War Widows' Pensions, is permitted only on a strict "need to know" basis.

Minelaying

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the Royal Navy's minelaying capability is; and what types of mine are in service. [78661]

Mr. Ingram: The Royal Navy has no specialist minelaying vessels although most vessels in the fleet, including submarines, could be adapted to lay mines if deemed necessary. The Royal Navy does not have any mine stocks and has not had since 1992. Notwithstanding this, the United Kingdom retains the capability to lay mines and continues research into mine exploitation. Practice mines, used for exercises, continue to be laid in order to retain the necessary skills.

Nuclear Tests

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of compensation offered to service personnel of other states who participated in UK nuclear tests. [79185]

Dr. Moonie: Australian and New Zealand personnel who participated in the British nuclear test programme and who believe that they were injured or suffered a loss as a result of their participation are entitled to claim compensation from their own governments. However, the Governments of Australia and New Zealand have vigorously defended compensation claims on the grounds that particular regard was taken for the safety and welfare of test participants, and in the absence of evidence of negligence, there is no proper basis for settling the claims. I understand that no compensation has been paid to individual New Zealand veterans, but that 10 Australian veterans have secured compensation from the Australian Government.

Personnel Inquiry

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to publish the findings of the inquiry into armed forces personnel issues. [77789]

Mr. Ingram: The current phase of the Service Personnel Process review, which I announced to the House on 17 July 2002, Official Report, columns 277–78W is due to be completed early in the New Year. I therefore expect to be able to make an announcement about its findings in the Spring. The final phase of the review is expected to last six months, which would point to a further announcement in the Autumn.

Porton Down

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set up a public inquiry into the health risks of the release of zinc cadmium sulphide and radio-xenon from the atomic research establishment, Harwell, by scientists from the chemical and biological defence establishment, Porton Down, in 1961; and if he will make a statement. [78155]

Dr. Moonie: I do not consider it necessary to set up a public inquiry. In 1999, the Ministry of Defence commissioned Professor Peter Lachmann and a team of distinguished scientists to undertake an independent review of the fluorescent particle trials which occurred between 1955 and 1963, and included the four two-hour trials which also involved the release of ^{133} Xenon at Harwell in 1961. The MOD accepts the conclusion of this review, which was that "Exposure to cadmium from dissemination of zinc cadmium sulphide during the 'cold war' should not have resulted in adverse health effects in the United Kingdom population". The findings of the review are summarised in an open literature paper entitled, "The Risk to the UK Population of Zinc Cadmium Sulphide Dispersion by the MOD During the "Cold War" (Occup. Environ. Med. 2002, 59, 13–17). Additionally, the complete review can be found at www.mod.uk/publications/zinc-cadmium.

Pride of Portsmouth (Collision)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who made the decision to allow ferry ships to enter Portsmouth harbour on the 26 and 27 October in poor weather conditions; who was consulted; and if he will make a statement. [78510]

Mr. Ingram: The Queen's Harbour Master (QHM) is responsible to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence for the control of all movements within the Dockyard Port of Portsmouth in accordance with the Dockyard Port Regulation Act 1865 and the Dockyard Port of Portsmouth Order 1978. Although the weather conditions were poor they were not unusual and the duty Harbour Control Officer, acting under QHM's delegated authority and without the need for further consultation, made the decision to allow ferry movements in the harbour.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who authorised the tug boats to be used to assist after the collision of the P&O ferry Pride of Portsmouth and HMS St Albans on 27 October; who was in control of the tug boats; and if he will make a statement. [78538]

Mr. Ingram: The Queen's Harbour Master (QHM) Portsmouth always provides a tug for cross channel ferry movements in winds exceeding 30 knots. A second tug is also available if required. In this case two tugs were provided for the move and were in attendance from the harbour entrance until the ferry berthed at the Commercial Ferry Port. The tugs were under the instruction of the Master of the ferry.

RAF Communications Systems

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in equipping RAF aircraft with secure air-to-air and air-to-ground communication systems fully interoperable with similar systems in use by the United States Air Force. [78313]

Dr. Moonie: A wide range of RAF platforms are fitted with secure air-to-air and air-to-ground communications. These systems are fully interoperable with coalition forces, including the United States.

RAF Machrihanish

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military landings and take-offs were recorded at RAF Machrihanish during each of the last five years. [78731]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

RAF Menwith Hill

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many (a) arrests, (b) reports with a view to prosecution charges, (c) arrests (d) actual prosecutions and (e) successful prosecutions there have been since 1996 under the (i) RAF Menwith Hill Military Land Byelaws 1996 and (ii) the RAF Fylingdales Military Land Byelaws 1986; [77767]

(2) what the cost to his Department is of (a) the new security developments to the main entrance to RAF Menwith Hill and (b) the road development and road widening to the main entrance to Menwith Hill; [77768]

(3) how many breaches of security, in each year since 2000, there have been at (a) RAF Menwith Hill, (b) RAF Fylingdales, (c) RAF Lakenheath, (d) RAF Molesworth, (e) Barford St. John, (f) RAF Croughton and (g) RAF Fairford; and if he will make a statement. [77770]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested for RAF Menwith Hill is shown in the table.

	Arrests	Reports with a view to prosecution
1997–98	49	49
1998–99	30	30
1999–2000	32	32
2000–01	5	5
2002–03 to date	4	4

The records held in respect of RAF Fylingdales only go as far back as 1997–98 and indicate 11 arrests and two reports with a view to prosecution in financial year 2000–01. Prosecutions are a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney General.

The number of incursions recorded against the Ministry of Defence installations indicated in the previous table are shown in the following table:

Number of incursions	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03 to date
RAF Lakenheath	1	0	[1]10
RAF Molesworth	2	3	1
Barford St. John	1	1	0
RAF Croughton	4	3	0
RAF Fairford	1	1	0

[1] This figure relates to incursions that took place on 6 October 2002 during a large demonstration at RAF Lakenheath.

There was no cost to the MOD in respect of the works carried out at Menwith Hill. The cost was funded by the United States authorities.

RAF Squadrons

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many RAF squadrons have their full complement of (a) pilots and (b) ground crews; which squadrons do not have a full complement of (i) pilots, (ii) ground crew; and if he will make a statement. [78270]

Mr. Ingram: On 25 October 13 RAF front line fixed and rotary wing squadrons had their full complement of pilots and 20 had a full complement of ground crew.

The following front line squadrons did not have a full complement of pilots: 1, 2, 7, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 18, 25, 27, 28, 31, 33, 43, 101, 111, 216 and 230.

The following front line squadrons did not have a full complement of ground crew 7, 8, 18, 23, 25, 27, 28, 28, 33, 47, 70, 216 230.

RAF manning shortfalls are well known and are being addressed. The RAF continues to meet its operational commitments.

Rapid Deployment Force

Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from the US Administration regarding NATO's plans to set up a rapid deployment force unit; and if he will make a statement. [77810]

Mr. Hoon: I discussed the proposal for a NATO Response Force (NRF) with the United States Secretary of Defence and other NATO colleagues at the informal meeting of defence ministers in Warsaw in September 2002. The proposed NRF concept is coherent with current work to reform NATO's command and force structures and enjoys the United Kingdom's strong support. Work is now under way within NATO to develop the NRF concept, and guiding principles are expected to be put before Heads of State and Government at the Prague summit for their agreement.

Refit Intervals

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his policy of refit intervals for Royal Navy warships. [78659]

Mr. Ingram: The policy of refit intervals seeks to achieve a satisfactory balance between resources and operational requirements. In general terms, such refits will occur after eight to 12 years for submarines, up to 10 years for major surface ships and one to eight years for minor surface ships.

Submarine Sonar

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research he has undertaken into the effects of submarine sonar on the behaviour and health of cetaceans; and if he will make a statement on the conclusions of the research. [78625]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence is undertaking a range of research projects into the effects of both submarine and surface ship sonar on the behaviour and health of cetaceans. This research is intended to inform the Ministry of Defence's conduct of Environment Appraisals and Environmental Impact Assessments, as required by the Secretary of State for Defence's Policy Statement of 7 July 2000 on the Management of Safety and Environmental Protection in the Ministry of Defence. That Policy Statement requires Environmental Impact Assessments to be conducted for all new equipment projects. A copy of the Policy Statement, together with a chapter on the conduct of Environmental Appraisal and Environmental Impact Assessment, can be found in the Ministry of Defence's Environmental Manual, JSP 418 which is in the Library of the House.

The reason for the research programme is that, to date, it has not been possible to put forward any definitive conclusions on the effects of differing acoustic energy on marine mammals. The research, which is on-going, has not yet reached any conclusion. In addition to the research, Environmental Impact Assessments undertaken by the Ministry of Defence in respect of this subject will also be informed by evidence from leading experts both in the United Kingdom and the United States. We are also monitoring relevant scientific and environmental research around the globe on this issue.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to monitor the effects on cetaceans of the use of sonar in anti-submarine warfare operations. [78628]

Dr. Moonie: It is Ministry of Defence policy to consider the effects of sonar use on cetaceans. An environmental impact assessment is undertaken prior to all new projects and training activities. The way in which the equipment is then used during each subsequent training activity takes the assessment into account. Trials are preceded by a detailed environmental study of the operating area concerned. The operating area continues to be monitored while the trials are under way, and the activity is managed to minimize the potential impacts on cetaceans. Mitigation methods based on best scientific advice, such as acoustic and visual monitoring in accordance with Government and Joint Nature Conservation Committee published guidelines adapted for military use, are used so that the activity will be modified, delayed or moved as necessary.

These measures provide a balance between the requirement for essential trials work and training, and the equally important need to avoid causing any significant adverse effect on the marine environment.

Suicide Prevention

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the rank of officer is who is responsible for suicide prevention at (a) Deepcut Barracks, Surrey and (b) Catterick Barracks, Yorkshire. [78794]

Mr. Ingram: The responsibility for the welfare of recruits, including the identification of those who may be vulnerable to self-harm, rests with the entire chain of command. All staff are aware of the need to identify those who may be vulnerable and an army suicide prevention pamphlet, issued in January 2001, is widely available through the chain of command.

Soldiers are encouraged to discuss any issues of concern and may seek advice from a number of individuals including their immediate superiors, the regimental medical office, Padre, unit welfare officer, Local Army Welfare Worker or Women's Royal Voluntary Service (WRVS) welfare officer. WRVS staff are concentrated at the army's training establishments and provide regular, informal contact with recruits. Regular case conferences are held by these agencies to identify any soldiers who may be particularly vulnerable.

If a soldier wishes to remain entirely anonymous they may ring the army's confidential support line, which has been in operation since December 1997 under the guidance of the Samaritans. Telephone charges are free to the caller from anywhere in the world and the line is widely publicised throughout the army community.

UN Global Ceasefire

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what plans he has to ensure the observance of the UN annual day of global ceasefire; [79158]

(2) what measures he took to ensure that Britain's armed forces observed the UN global ceasefire on 21 September; [79164]

(3) if he will list (a) the countries in which British armed forces are stationed and (b) those countries in which British armed forces observed the UN global ceasefire of 21 September 2001; [79157]

(4) what instructions were received by his Department on the observance of the United Nation's International Peace One Day. [79163]

Mr. Ingram: In 2001 the United Kingdom co-sponsored GA Resolution 55/282, which fixed the International Day of Peace on 21 September each year. The primary objective of the day is to encourage parties engaged in civil war and armed conflict to allow humanitarian agencies to deliver relief and medical supplies to civilian populations. The United Kingdom continues to make an important contribution to United Nations peacekeeping efforts around the world, most notably in Sierra Leone and the Balkans.

The full details as to the countries in which British armed forces are stationed are published in "Tri-Service Publication 6, Global Location of Service Personnel", a copy of which can be found in the House of Commons Library.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action is intended to be taken against the (a) British-registered and (b) British-based persons listed by the UN as having violated the OECD guidelines for multinational enterprises in respect of their activities in relation to the Democratic Republic of the Congo. [78852]

Mr. Rammell: The United Nations Panel of Experts on the Illegal Exploitation of Natural Resources and Other Forms of Wealth in the Democratic Republic of the Congo alleges that 12 UK companies have violated the OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises. We are seeking more details. We are considering a substantive response to the report's recommendations.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the activities of these UK companies and persons based in the UK which have been criticised by the UN for breaking sanctions in respect of the Democratic Republic of the Congo. [78851]

Mr. Rammell: The United Nations Panel of Experts on the Illegal Exploitation of Natural Resources and Other Forms of Wealth in the Democratic Republic of the Congo alleges that some UK based companies and persons have breached sanctions on Zimbabwe and have supplied military equipment to the Democratic Republic of the Congo. We are studying the report's allegations closely and are considering a substantive response to its recommendations. We will also be discussing action on these and other allegations at theUnited Nations Security Council.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what investigations his Department had carried out into sanctions-breaking by (a) UK companies and (b) British-based persons in respect of the supply of spare parts for British Aerospace Hawk jets of the Zimbabwe Defence Force to the Democratic Republic of Congo, prior to the publication of the UN Panel of Exports' report on the Illegal Exploitation of Natural Resources and Other Forms of Wealth of the DRC. [78855]

Mr.Rammell: The information is as follows:

(a) The recent UN Panel report on the Democratic Republic of Congo contains allegations in relation to the supply of Hawk jet spare parts. We are urgently seeking further details from the UN, and will investigate them fully.

(b) None.

Charter of Fundamental Rights

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's policy on the Charter of Fundamental Rights is; how the Government plans to take that policy forward; and if he will make a statement. [75039]

Mr. MacShane [holding answer 23 October 2002]: The Nice European Council agreed that the Charter of Fundamental Rights would be a political statement. As mandated by the Laeken European Council, the Convention on the Future of Europe is examining whether and, if so, how, the Charter should be included in the treaties. EU member states will take the final decision by unanimity at the Intergovernmental Conference in 2004. People need to know their rights and the EU institutions need to respect them. Our policy remains one of strong support for the charter.

Das Air

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the activities of Das Air. [78845]

Mr. Rammell: The United Nations Panel of Experts on the Illegal Exploitation of Natural Resources and Other Forms of Wealth in the Democratic Republic of the Congo lists a number of companies, including Das Air which it considers to have violated the OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises. We are seeking further details from the UN. We are studying the report's allegations closely and we are considering a substantive response to the report's recommendations.

European Union Officials (Salaries)

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will provide a break down of salaries of officials of the European Commission by (a) pay grade and (b) number. [78115]

Mr. MacShane: The following is a breakdown of the number of staff at each grade (top figure in cell) and their relative monthly salaries (bottom figure) within the Commission. Salaries are given in euros. Echelons are the individual pay steps within each grade.

Grade	Echelons								Total number of staff

Firefighters' Strike

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what preparations he has made to ensure the safety and continuity of service to the public in the event of a firefighters' strike. [77667]

Mr. Rammell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Local Government and the Regions (Mr. Raynsford) on 28 October 2002, Official Report, column 527W.

Ipternational Criminal Court

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his answer of 21 October 2002, Official Report, column 38W, on the International Criminal Court, what discussions he has had with his counterpart in the United States on a bilateral agreement with the United States regarding the exemption of US citizens from the ICC. [78800]

Mr. Rammell: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs had a number of discussions with US Secretary Powell about the US Government's request for a bilateral agreement under Article 98.2 of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court in the period leading up to the GAER Council on 30 September. On 17 October, and as part of a tour of four EU capitals, US officials visited London for discussions with FCO officials. Those discussions were of an exploratory nature: the British side explained that HMG was ready to respond, within the parameters of the Guiding Principles agreed by EU Foreign Ministers at GAERC on 30 September. No date has yet been set for further discussion.

Iran/Iraq (Military Conflict)

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Iranian Government regarding possible military action against Iraq. [78440]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: While in Iran on 9 October my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed a number of regional issues, including the threat posed by Iraq's weapons of mass destruction, which have in the past been used against Iran. Both sides agreed on the need for Iraq to comply with its obligations under UN resolutions.

Moscow Theatre Siege

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assurances he has (a) sought and (b) received that the gas used by the Russian authorities was not in violation of the 1993 Chemical Weapons Convention. [78568]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Following inquiries by the United Kingdom and others, Russian authorities have announced that the gas used in ending the siege on a Moscow theatre, on Saturday 26 October, was based on Fentanyl, an opium based narcotic. Fentanyl is not a chemical scheduled under the Chemical Weapons Convention. Non-scheduled chemicals are not in themselves prohibited under the Convention for use in law enforcement, including domestic riot control purposes. On 30 October, the Russian Health Minister, Mr. Shevchenko said "I officially declare that chemical substances of the kind banned under international conventions on chemical weapons were not used".

Namibia

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received about the Namibian Government's plans to pass emergency legislation to make it illegal for foreigners to own land; what his Department's policy is; what plans he has to discuss these issues with (a) his European counterparts and (b) members of the Southern African Development Community; and if he will make a statement. [78805]

Mr. Rammell: We understand that the Namibian Government are considering an amendment to the 1995 Land Reform Bill. We are seeking urgent clarification. EU Heads of Mission in Windhoek are drawing up a report on land reform, and the issue will be discussed within the EU framework. We will if necessary also raise the issue during contact with SADC members.

New Zealand

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library copies of the reports compiled by the secondee from Barrow International to the British Consulate in Auckland, New Zealand in 2001 into export opportunities in the New Zealand marine industry for British companies. [78153]

Mr. Rammell: The report to which I believe the hon. Member is referring was produced in May 2000. I have today asked for the report to be placed in the Library of the House.

Pakistan

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to visit Pakistan. [78870]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has no immediate plans to visit Pakistan. He has visited the country three times in the last 12 months. I hope to be able to visit in the months to come.

Private Sector Secondments

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of the standard contract letter which is drawn up between his Department and secondees from private companies before they start their secondment. [78152]

Mr. Rammell: There are two standard contract letters—one with the secondee and one with the seconding company. I have today asked for these to be placed in the Library of the House.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures are taken to prevent conflicts of interest involving secondees from the private sector to British embassies. [78157]

Mr. Rammell: The potential for conflicts of interest is addressed when BTI and the FCO consider candidates for secondment opportunities and when setting up the secondments themselves. There are two letters of appointment: one with the secondee, and one with the seconding organisation. Both cover this issue. The letter to the secondee states:

> "It is a prime condition of the secondment that you ensure that in the course of official duties there will be no conflict of interest that will cause either embarrassment to, or difficulties for, your parent organisation (Company) or the FCO. You will be expected to ensure that your position here is not, and raises no reasonable suspicion of being, abused either in your own personal interest, or in the interests of (Company). In practise this means that you should not undertake any work or research on behalf of (Company), or present yourself as a representative of the company, for the duration of the secondment. In addition, (Company) should not have priority access to information or sales leads you secure in your work with the (Post), but should receive this information at the same time as all other British companies operating in the market or sector. Any areas of work that might possibly give rise to conflict of interest should be discussed with your line manager. Please be aware that if any of these guidelines are breached, British Trade International reserves the right to consider immediate termination of the secondment."

The letter to the seconding organisation states:

> "I trust (Company) will appreciate and share our concerns that, in the course of (Name) official duties with the FCO, there should be no conflict of interest that would, or might be, a source of embarrassment either to your company or the Department. In practise this means that (Name) should not undertake any work or research on behalf of (Company), or present himself/herself as a representative of the company, for the duration of the secondment. In addition, (Company) should not have priority access to information or sales leads secured in the course of (Name) work with the Embassy, but should receive this information at the same time as all other British companies operating in the market or sector. Please be aware that if any of these guidelines are breached, British Trade International reserves the right to consider immediate termination of the secondment. In addition, may I particularly draw your attention to paragraph vi of the attached letter."

I have arranged for a copy of both letters to be placed in the Library of the House.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library copies of the reports compiled by the secondee from British Nuclear Fuels following his secondment to the British embassy in Sweden between September 1999 and February 2000 to review the energy market in that country and identify opportunities for UK companies. [78158]

Mr. Rammell: I have today asked for this report to be placed in the Library of the House.

Recruitment

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much has been spent in recruiting staff to his Department in (a) London and (b) the south east in each year since 1997. [78563]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office recruits nationally. We do not, therefore break down the recruitment budget by region. The following figures include money spent on recruitment in its widest sense. This includes general marketing via careers fairs, as well as targeted marketing aimed at under-represented groups such as minority ethnic communities and women.

Financial year	£

Soviet Polar Region Medal

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will grant veterans the right to receive and wear the Soviet Polar Region Medal. [79066]

Mr. Straw: My Department has received no formal request from the Russian Government asking that permission be granted to issue the Defence of the Soviet Arctic Region Medal (also referred to as the Polar Region Medal) to British Veterans. Were the Russian authorities formally to ask for this campaign medal officially to be recognised in this country, the matter would be carefully considered, as are similar requests from foreign governments.

Turkey

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his estimate is for a date for Turkey to join the EU. [78867]

Mr. MacShane: The British Government looks forward to Turkey's membership of the European Union as soon as possible. Turkey has not started accession negotiations because it does not yet meet the Copenhagen political criteria, which include rule of law, democracy and respect for human rights and minorities.

We welcome the significant EU-related reforms that the Turkish Parliament has passed this year. As the Brussels European Council agreed, this has brought forward the opening of accession negotiations with Turkey. Brussels also encouraged Turkey to pursue its reform process and take further concrete steps in the direction of implementation.

UK-owned Equipment

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his Department has had with the Governments of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Qatar, Bahrain, United Arab Emirates and the Sultanate of Oman concerning the operation of UK-owned and operated equipment of Israeli origin from their territories. [78464]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I do not know of any such discussions.

Visa Offices

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the opening of visas offices in (a) Jallander, (b) Ahamedblad and (c) Lahore. [78871]

Mr. Rammell: We intend to open offices in Jalandhar and Ahmedabad to make our visa services more accessible to our customers and to provide them with the advice they need. The offices will also act as visa application centres, forwarding completed applications to the relevant visa issuing post for consideration. We are also exploring the possibility of offering similar services in other cities in India.

Given the security situation in Pakistan, there is no current plan to reopen the visa operation in Lahore.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many representations his Department has received concerning the non-payment of pensions (a) by the Zimbabwe Government to British citizens and (b) to former British citizens in Zimbabwe; and what discussions he has had concerning the non-payment of pensions by the Government of Zimbabwe. [77943]

Mr. Rammell: The FCO has replied to 20 letters from hon. Members and five from members of the public between June and September this year concerning non-payment of Zimbabwe civil service or company pensions to British citizens in the UK and overseas. We have also answered five written PQs since February this year.

Responsibility for the payment of these pensions rests with the Zimbabwean authorities and the relevant pension fund managers. We regularly remind the Zimbabwean pension authorities of their responsibility to pay the pensions of those resident outside Zimbabwe in full and on time.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

National Fruit Scheme

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much has been spent on the National Fruit Scheme by the National Opportunities Fund in (a) 2000–01, (b) 2001–02 and (c) 2002–03 to date, broken down by region. [78387]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 31 October 2002]: £42 million is available under the New Opportunities Fund National School Fruit programme. Grants are being awarded through an allocation process. 27 areas have been allocated funds in phase 1 of the programme and these projects started in the summer term 2002. Further allocations will be announced during 2002 and 2003.

The amount awarded to each of the 27 areas under phase 1 of the National School Fruit programme is set out in the table.

Lead organisation	Amount of grant award (£)
London Borough of Barking and Dagenham	180,460.00

Football Commission

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what (a) recent discussions she has had with and (b) representations she has received regarding the Independent Football Commission; and if she will make a statement; [78889]

(2) what research (a) has been conducted and (b) is planned by her Department on the Independent Football Commission; and if she will place the related documentation in the Library. [78888]

Mr. Caborn: The Independent Football Commission was launched in March. In addition to its work in considering individual complaints from supporters, the Commission has already considered issues of racism, merchandising, broadcasting, and the treatment of away supporters. The Commission's success in establishing itself and meeting its initial objectives will be considered in its first annual report, which is due to be published in January 2003. In advance of that report, the Government does not see a need for separate research into the Commission's activities.

I have received one representation on the subject of the Commission since its launch. My Department has, however, drawn the attention of correspondents to it where this is appropriate. I met the Commission's Chairman, Professor Derek Fraser, on 30 April, and will meet him again on 7 January to discuss progress.

Lottery Funds (Village Halls)

Mr Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many representations she has received about the case for village halls to win an appropriate share of Lottery funds; and if she will make a statement. [78444]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received numerous representations from Members of Parliament, village halls advisers and others about the funding difficulties facing village halls. Many village halls have received Lottery funding and the community fund alone has to date awarded £109 million for the building, extension and improvement of 2,271 village halls.

We have asked Lottery distributors to work together to make it easier for community groups to access such funding. Last month distributors launched a £2 million trial programme in the West Midlands involving a shared application process for groups seeking up to £100,000 to improve their community building and the sports, arts or community activities that happen there.

National Lottery Funding

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will issue guidance to direct more funds from the National Lottery receipts to support projects for youth and young people, including the uniformed organisations, which create more facilities and organised opportunities designed to remove young people from the streets. [78479]

Mr. Caborn: The Government has issued policy directions to Lottery distributing bodies which include a requirement to take into account the needs of children and young people in distributing Lottery funds. This summer, 11.5m from the New Opportunities Fund went directly towards diversionary activities for young people to help reduce street crime. We are currently consulting on the future of Lottery distribution and a dedicated Youth Fund is among the options proposed.

New Opportunities Fund

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much was spent of the New Opportunities Fund on PE and sports in schools in rural England in (a) 2000–01, (b) 2001–02 and (c) 2002–03 to date. [78405]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 31 October 2002]: The New Opportunities Fund (NOF) has allocated funding to each LEA area to ensure that funding is available for projects in all parts of England. These allocations are made up of a baseline allocation (based on the size of the school population in the LEA) and a deprivation allocation (based on the levels of deprivation within the LEA).

Out of the £581.25 million available under the New Opportunities for PE and Sport programme in England, NOF has committed around £83 million to date.

Figures are not readily available in the format requested, but rural communities have benefited from the awards made to date, and will continue to benefit from this programme in the future.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations have been made to her by the Scottish Executive on the operation of the New Opportunities Fund in Scotland. [78733]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received a number of representations from the Scottish Executive about the New Opportunities Fund's operations in Scotland. The most recent of these concerned the future allocation of NOF funding in Scotland.

Olympics World Games

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what measures she will take to support the UK delegation at the Dublin Sspecial Olympics world games. [78887]

Mr. Caborn: As the Special Olympics is a grassroots sporting event the United Kingdom delegation does not qualify for specific funding from either Sport England or UK Sport. I understand that in previous years the Special Olympics has canvassed for support from many organisations without relying on any one block grant.

My right hon Friend the Prime Minister has recently provided a message of support for the Special Olympics "Support an Athlete" fundraising initiative. "Support an Athlete" will be launched in January 2003 and will provide companies, individuals and schools with the opportunity to sponsor an athlete or an entire delegation for the duration of the Games. The monies raised will cover all costs involved in hosting the delegations during their two week stay, and includes food, transport, insurance and entertainment for that period.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Pensioner Poverty

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent representations he has received on pensioner poverty. [75897]

Maria Eagle: We regularly receive representation from a variety of sources regarding our policies for tackling pensioner poverty. In addition both Ministers and Officials meet regularly with organisations that represent older people to discuss a range of issues of mutual interest.

Benefit Payments

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what measures his Department has taken to prevent pensions and benefits claimants with (a) learning disabilities and (b) registered sight loss from being penalised following the introduction of Automatic Credit Transfer; [76934]

(2) what funds have been allocated by his Department to prevent pensions and benefits claimants with (a) learning disabilities and (b) registered sight loss from being penalised following the introduction of Automatic Credit Transfer. [76935]

Malcolm Wicks: Many people in these circumstances already opt to be paid directly into their bank account. After April 2003 many others will be able to benefit from the greater flexibility that payment by automated credit transfer offers in terms of when and where they collect their money.

The new service is being designed with the needs of all customers in mind. Banks are making their basic accounts accessible at the Post Office. The Post Office is developing a post office card account which is a simple account just for the receipt of benefit, pension and tax credit payments. As is now the case with orderbooks and girocheques, customers can, if they wish, nominate someone else to collect their money for them. In these cases a second card will be issued.

Our information campaign will take customers through the changes that are being made to the way benefits and pensions are paid. Customers will be supplied with information which clearly sets out their account options including a leaflet which outlines the features of each type of account. This will help customers to decide which account best meets their needs and circumstances.

There have been no specific funds allocated to this group of claimants as the Government are confident that a service will be in place to ensure they will not be disadvantaged.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps will be taken to assist people in hospitals or otherwise unable to get to banks because of illness to collect pensions from source after January 2003. [77095]

Malcolm Wicks: As with orderbooks and girocheques now, customers would need to give someone else access to their account. The precise arrangement would depend on which type of account they have. For those with a current account there are a number of well established options which include Power of Attorney arrangements, third party mandate with the bank or provide another person with a signed letter of authority. Those with a post office card account will be able to nominate someone else to access their account through a second card.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for what reason the Post Office has issued guidance but it will not advise customers on the best route for the payment of benefits after January 2003. [77096]

Malcolm Wicks: It would not be appropriate for post office or Government staff to provide detailed financial advice, including which type of account people should open. The Government will make clear in its literature what options are available to customers. This literature will mention the option of continuing to collect money at a post office branch and the availability of the post office card account. The Post Office will also be able to supply information on banking at post offices. This will enable customers to decide which account best meets their needs and circumstances.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his answer of 24 July, Official Report, column 1570W, on incapacity reviews, what the findings were of the previous studies of sample cases. [77247]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The only previous study of a sample of cases was carried out in 1996 and found that on average the whole medical assessment process took 15.9 weeks where entitlement was confirmed and 17.7 weeks where benefit was withdrawn.

Adult Disadvantage

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what assessment he has made of the incidence of ageism in the workplace; and if he will make a statement; [76961]

(2) what steps he is taking to discourage ageism in the workplace; and if he will make a statement. [76962]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: We have made a pledge to tackle age discrimination and we are committed to introducing age legislation covering employment, vocational training and guidance by 2006.

We have been vigorously promoting the benefits of age diversity and recruitment, training and retaining of older workers to employers through our Age Positive campaign. The campaign focuses on raising employers' awareness of the business case for an age diverse work force and encouraging them to use the Code of Practice on Age Diversity in Employment to inform their employment policies. The campaign features a range of initiatives to promote age diversity, which are shown on our website www.agepositive.gov.uk.

The Code of Practice, published in June 1999, sets out the standards for non-ageist approaches to recruitment, training, promotion, redundancy and retirement, and was developed with leading organisations including the CBI, TUC, the Employers Forum on Age and Age Concern. Evaluation of the Code of Practice, published last year, found that the number of companies using age in recruitment had fallen from 27 per cent. to 13 per cent. and those companies with a policy against employing older people has halved from 14 per cent. to 7 per cent. However it also indicated that 90 per cent. of people believe that employers do discriminate against older workers and although age awareness had increased considerably over the evaluation period, smaller employers were least likely to have realised the implications of ageism.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his Department's policy is towards ageism in the workplace. [77855]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: [holding answer 29 October 2002]: We have made a pledge to tackle age discrimination and we are committed to introducing age legislation covering employment, vocational training and guidance by 2006.

We are already encouraging employers to adopt non-ageist employment practices through our Age Positive Campaign. The campaign raises employers' awareness of the business benefits of an age diverse work force and encourages a flexible approach to retirement to open up choice and opportunity for individuals to stay in work longer.

In 1999 we published the Code of Practice on Age Diversity in Employment which sets out the standards for non-ageist approaches to recruitment, training, promotion, redundancy and retirement. The code was developed with leading organisations including the CBI, TUC, the Employers Forum on Age and Age Concern. Evaluation shows that from 1999 to 2001 the number of companies using age in recruitment had already fallen from 27 per cent. to 13 per cent. and the number of companies having a policy against employing older workers had dropped from 14 per cent. to 7 per cent.

Older workers have a wealth of skills and experience that can benefit individual businesses and the economy as a whole. Our policies will help to improve further the employment rate of people over 50, which has risen considerably since 1997.

Benefit Fraud

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his estimate is of the overall cost of (a) benefits fraud and (b) the agencies and actions taken to discover, prevent and prosecute benefit fraud in the last year for which figures are available. [78469]

Malcolm Wicks: Our latest estimate is that around £2 billion is lost annually through benefit fraud in Great Britain.

The overall aim of the Department's anti-fraud strategy is to have a benefit system, which is secure from first claim to final payment. The implementation of this strategy means that an anti-fraud focus is integral to the work of all staff in the Department, as is dealing with the wider agenda of error and incorrectness in benefit payments. It is therefore not possible to identify separately the cost involved in tackling benefit fraud across the Department and its Agencies.

Backdated Benefits

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much money he estimates has been saved by the government since the rules for backdating of benefits were changed. [76976]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is not available.

Benefit Rates

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will raise the benefit rates for working age adults. [79205]

Malcolm Wicks: We keep all benefit rates under continuous review. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will make an announcement in due course about the proposed rates of benefit which will apply from April 2003.

Employment Agencies

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list his Department's employment agencies operating in Stoke on Trent. [76661]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Jobcentre Plus has the following offices within the boundaries of the Stoke-on-Trent local authority area:

Hanley Jobcentre

Burslem Jobcentre

Longton Jobcentre

Stoke Jobcentre

Hanley Social Security Office

Longton Social Security Office

Firefighters' Strike

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what preparations he has made to ensure the safety and continuity of service to the public in the event of a firefighters' strike; and what the cost is to the Department of these actions. [77655]

Malcolm Wicks: We have put in place procedures to review internal contingency plans and evacuation procedures to ensure the safety of both the Departments staff and its customers. The cost of providing emergency cover will depend on the extent and nature of any industrial action.

Health and Safety Commission

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the change in the number of fatal injuries in the construction industry in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02. [75132]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: There were 113 fatal injuries in the construction industry including workers and members of the public, in 2000–01. The Health and Safety Executive's provisional figures for 2001–02 show that there were 85 fatal injuries to workers and members of the public for the corresponding period.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many inspectors, excluding trainees, are employed by the Field Operations Division of the Health and Safety Executive in (a) Scotland, (b) Yorkshire and the North East, (c) the North West, (d) the Midlands, (e) Wales and the West, (f) London and the South East and (g) the Home Counties; and if he will make a statement. [75138]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The number of inspectors, excluding trainees, employed by the Field Operations Directorate (FOD) of the Health and Safety Executive on 17 October 2002 is:

Division	Number of inspectors
Scotland	80
Yorkshire and North East	85
North West	75
Midlands	106
Wales and South West	75
London	44
East and South East	97
Construction	148
Total	710

The information is not available in the format requested. This reflects the re-organisation which took effect on 8 April 2002.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many companies have been fined for failure to insure their liability to their employees in the event of injury or disease sustained in the course of their employment in each year since 1997. [75849]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The number of employers who have been fined by courts in England, Scotland and Wales for failure to have insurance cover as required by the Employer's Liability (Compulsory Insurance) Act 1969 and the Employer's Liability (Compulsory Insurance) Regulations 1998 each year since 1997 is as follows:

1998—1
1999—4
2000—1

Housing Benefit

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average level of rent paid through housing benefit to private sector tenants in Islington was in each of the past three years; and what the average rent charged to the tenants concerned was. [76330]

Malcolm Wicks: [holding answer 22 October 2002]: The table shows the average weekly Housing Benefit payment and the average rent eligible for Housing Benefit for tenants living in the deregulated private sector, in the London Borough of Islington, at May 2000, 2001 and 2002. There is no directly comparable information about the actual rents paid by tenants.

	Average weekly amount of Housing Benefit paid	Average weekly eligible rent
May 2000	93.00	95.80
May 2001	101.80	105.60
May 2002	112.70	117.10

Notes:
1. The data refer to households claiming Housing Benefit, which may be a single person, a couple or a family. More than benefit household can live in one property, for example two or more adults in a flat or house share arrangement.
2. The eligible rent is the amount of rent which may be met by Housing Benefit after any restrictions applied by the rent officer, taking account of the cost of suitable accommodation in the area.
3. Figures include cases where Housing Benefit is paid at the reduced rate due to the tenant's income.
4. Figures exclude any extended payment cases.

Maternity Benefits

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to introduce improvements to (a) statutory maternity pay and (b) maternity allowance. [79586]

Maria Eagle: Regulations were laid before Parliament on 1 November which:

amend existing regulations to improve the current arrangements for Statutory Maternity Pay and Maternity Allowance and;

amend existing regulations dealing with Income Support, Jobseeker's Allowance, Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit which are needed to take account of measures in the Employment Act 2002 which improve maternity rights and introduce new rights to paternity pay and leave and adoption pay and leave.

These regulations are part of the package of measures developed to help working parents balance their work and family lives and significantly improve and extend the maternity payments made to pregnant and new mothers.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on 24 October laid three draft Statutory Instruments which cover the improvements to maternity leave and the introduction of statutory adoption leave and pay and statutory paternity leave and pay.

Pensions

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the number of people required to retire from their jobs owing to reaching a certain age; and if he will make a statement. [76963]

Maria Eagle: The Department has commissioned a study to update knowledge about older workers' participation in the labour market, including the influences on their remaining in employment and the reasons for retirement. This survey of 2,800 people aged 50–69 asked people why they retired, including whether this was a result of having reached their employer's normal retirement age. The findings from this research, which is on-going, are expected to be published in spring 2003.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will supply the National Pensioners' Convention with a copy of the Government's National Strategy on Pensions; and if he will make a statement. [77040]

Maria Eagle: A copy of the UK's national strategy report on pensions was sent to the National Pensioners' Convention on 17 September.

All EU member states have produced reports as part of an exercise to exchange information and best practice on pensions. The UK report sets out current pensions policy. A draft Joint Commission/Council Report based on the information in the reports from member states is provisionally scheduled to be considered by EU Heads of State and Government at the spring European Council in 2003.

Copies of the UK report are in the Library.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his answer of 24 October 2002, Official Report, column 487W, on contributions to non-state pensions, if he will estimate for each four year period for (a) all people, (b) men and (c) women the percentage of members of each quintile group who contributed to a non-state pension in at least three out of four years. [78806]

Mr. McCartney: The information is in the table.

1. All figures are estimates and are taken from the British Household Panel Survey (BHPS) data set. The BHPS is a longitudinal data set developed at the University of Essex, Institute for Social and Economic Research. The latest data available is for the period 1997 to 2000.
2. The estimates are sample counts, which have been adjusted for non-response using multipurpose grossing factors. Estimates are subject to both sampling error and to variability in non-response. The income measure used is total equivalised household income (that is to say income that is adjusted to reflect the composition of the household).
3. Individuals are assigned between quintiles according to their household income in the first year of each of the four year periods.

Post Offices

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what plans he has to inform benefit and tax credit claimants that they will be able to receive their entitlement in cash over the counter at the Post Office after April 2003; [76105]

(2) what plans he has to publicise the availability of the new Post Office card account. [76106]

Malcolm Wicks: Customers are being supplied with information (including letters and leaflets), which clearly sets out their 'account options'. They can choose the bank or building society account (including the Post Office card account) which best meets their needs and circumstances. All of the Department for Work and Pensions material sets out the key features of the various accounts and mentions the availability of collecting cash from the Post Office, and the Post Office card account.

The material the Inland Revenue have sent out with new Tax Credit application forms also clearly sets out the various account options, and the fact that people will still be able to collect their money from the Post Office if they wish.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer of 15 October 2002, Official Report, column 643W, on winter fuel payments, on what basis he has estimated the one-off cost of paying backdated winter fuel payments for 1997–98 to 2001–02 to British citizens living within the European Economic Area to be less than the future annual cost. [78482]

Mr. McCartney: The one-off costs quoted in my written answer on 15 October 2002, Official Report, column 643W were the administrative costs associated with the implementation of the changes.

The annual cost is the estimated on-going cost of the actual winter fuel payments. Our estimate of the first year cost of such winter fuel payments is around £21 million, which takes account of entitlement for past periods.

Fraud

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average time taken by his Department's Operational Intelligence Unit to respond to requests from local benefit fraud inspectors to requests for data in suspected fraud cases under the terms of the Social Security Fraud Act has been. [74843]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Advertising

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list external (a) public relations/communications companies, (b) advertising and marketing companies, (c) management consultancies, (d) accountancy companies, (e) banking firms, (f) individual consultants and (g) other specialist consultancies used by his Department since June 2001; what actions those consultancies/companies have performed within his Department; and what costs have been incurred through use of these consultancies/companies. [74682]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to ensure that Jobcentre Plus services are available throughout rural areas. [73983]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: We understand the difficulties that people living in rural areas can face, both in securing employment and gaining access to our services. We are therefore developing new ways of making Jobcentre Plus services more accessible to such people, for example by:

- providing a single point of access to jobs and benefits
- providing access to jobs through call centres, touch screen 'Jobpoints' in a wider range of locations, and the internet
- enabling people to make claims for benefit by telephone, and eventually through other channels such as the internet
- extending outreach services such as local community surgeries
- making services available through mobile units
- delivering services from premises shared with our partners in the local community, for example local authorities

We have introduced new services which should be particularly useful for Jobcentre Plus customers in rural areas. "Jobseeker Direct"—on 0845 6060234—is a telephone jobfinding service available to both unemployed and employed people. They can also look for jobs and learning opportunities on the internet, through two websites www.jobcentreplus.gov.uk and www.worktrain.gov.uk.

The integrated Jobcentre Plus offices which we will be extending throughout Great Britain over the next four years will offer a significantly enhanced telephone service that will improve access to services for those who do not live near a Jobcentre Plus office. Each Jobcentre Plus office will have a dedicated telephone contact centre open from 8.30 am to 6.00 pm. Customers will be able to make their initial claim to benefit through this service and book appointments with Personal Advisers.

Employment Initiatives

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to increase the (a) amount and (b) quality of support for the educational, training and employment scheme employees. [74405]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The amount and quality of support available to participants on our educational, training and employment programmes is under constant review as part of our continuous improvement agenda. This is led by Jobcentre Plus in partnership with the organisations delivering the programmes. Organisations wishing to compete for our education, training or employment related contracts are asked to set out how they intend delivering the programme, including the amount and quality of support they will offer participants. The providers who win the contracts are then subject to contractual and quality audits by Jobcentre Plus regional contracts managers, district quality management teams and, in some cases, the Adult Learning Inspectorate. These seek to ensure that providers deliver to the standards proposed in their bids and to support continuous improvement in the quality of their provision.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Food Import Inspections

Mr Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects harmonised European Union legislation will be in force covering food of non-animal origin. [75921]

Ms Blears: I have been asked to reply.

I am advised by the Food Standards Agency that the European Commission is still preparing its proposal for a regulation on official feed and food controls which will cover, inter alia, harmonised controls for imports of food of non-animal origin. The Commission expects to submit its final proposal to the European Council in late November 2002. It is unlikely, therefore, that the Regulation will be agreed and come into force before 2004.

Recycling

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list local authorities that are (a) failing to meet Government recycling targets, (b) expected to meet them and (c) exceeding them; and what the estimates are for recycling in England for (i) the current year and (ii) 2003–04. [HL71110]

Mr. Meacher [holding Answer 19 July 2002]: Local authority Statutory Performance Standard ("targets") for recycling and composting of household waste have been set for the years 2003–04 and 2005–06. Local authorities will submit performance data against which these targets will be measured to the Audit Commission in Summer 2004 and audited performance figures will be available towards the end of 2004.

Targets for individual authorities are listed in the publication "Guidance on Municipal Waste Management Strategies" March 2001. Copies of this document were placed within both libraries of the House on 5 March 2001. They are also published on DEFRA's website at http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/waste/management/guidance/mwms/10.htm.

We will have audited recycling performance figures for 2001–02 in December 2002 and this should give us an indication of progress to targets. A document setting out individual local authorities' targets and the most recent available data for their household waste recycling rates (2000–01), set out in ascending order according to their recycling and composting rate for 2000–01, has been placed in both libraries of the House (Table A).

A further document (Table B) setting out the same information, but also including a column showing the difference between the 2000–01 rate and the 2003–04 target, in order to show "progress to target", has also been placed in both libraries of the House. Those furthest from their target in percentage points are shown at the top of the table. Note that, since all authorities had to achieve different levels of improvement to reach their target, that table does not allow for exact comparison.

We set targets in a way which means all authorities would have to improve their performance over their rate in 1998–99, no matter what their starting point. For that reason, when tracking local authorities' recycling performance, we consider how much the recycling rate has increased, rather than looking simply at the rate.

I have written to the leaders of the local authorities that are listed below about recycling. In these authorities, preliminary performance data for 2001–02, taken from 2002–03 Best Value Performance Plans, shows that the authority's recycling rate has decreased, stayed the same, or only increased by 1 per cent. between 1998–99 and 2001–02. I have invited the relevant leaders to identify work that is already in hand to meet their 2003–04 Statutory Performance Standard for recycling and composting of household waste and to consider the need for further action where this is relevant.

Climate Change

Mr. Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment Food and Rural Affairs, what progress has been made (a) on the Government sustainability index on climate change and (b) towards the Government's domestic target for a 20 per cent. reduction in CO_2 emissions based on 1990 levels; and if she will make a statement. [77462]

Mr. Meacher: (a) The latest figures for the Headline Sustainable Development Indicator for Climate Change were published in a Defra Statistical Press Release on 28 March. Emissions on the "basket" of six greenhouse gases covered by the Kyoto Protocol, weighted by global warming potential, fell by 13.2 per cent. between the 1990 base year and 2000, the last year for which confirmed data is available. There was no change between 1999 and 2000. The UK has a target under the Kyoto Protocol to reduce its greenhouse gas emissions by 12.5 per cent. below 1990 levels by 2008–12. We remain on course to achieve this target.

(b) A provisional estimate of carbon dioxide emissions for 2001, based on energy use, was published by the Department for Trade and Industry in March in its Energy Trends publication. This estimated that carbon dioxide emissions were 154.4 million tonnes of carbon, approximately 6 per cent. below the UK's 1990 baseline emissions of 16.4 million tonnes of carbon.

Agricultural Support

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what assessment she has made of support given to farmers in other countries to enable and encourage them to care for the environment and countryside; and if she will make a statement. [79241]

Alun Michael: Precise support arrangements vary widely between countries. Within the EU, all Member States are able to operate programmes under the Rural Development Regulation. These include agri-environment schemes which encourage farmers to adopt environmentally beneficial farming practices by compensating farmers for the costs and income foregone and by providing an incentive payment.

The Department recently received the final report of an economic evaluation of agri-environment schemes commissioned from the Centre for Rural Economics Research at the University of Cambridge. This report included a comparison of agri-environment schemes offered in other European countries. It will be published shortly and will be available on the Defra website.

All Member States submit mid-term evaluations of their rural development programmes to the European Commission at the end of 2003. The results should allow an EU-wide comparison and assessment of rural development support in general, including agri-environment support.

British Cattle Movement Service

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, (1) what assessment she has made of the accuracy of data held by the BCMS; and if she will make a statement; [79281]

(2) what assessment she has made of how up to date the information held by the BCMS is; and if she will make a statement. [79320]

Alun Michael: The British Cattle Movement Service (BCMS) works hard to validate and cleanse the information it is sent by cattle keepers. The information received by BCMS can often be incomplete or incorrect. The BCMS and the Paying Agencies throughout Great Britain cross check their data to confirm accuracy and identify and rectify anomalies. This is a time consuming and laborious process. The BCMS is working with partners in Government and Industry to improve the quality of the data that it receives.

Refrigerators

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, how many refrigerators are awaiting disposal in Essex; and how much it will cost to dispose of them. [77154]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 31 October 2002]: The exact number of fridges being stored pending treatment in either waste collection authority or waste disposal authority at any one point in time are not held centrally. However, current estimates suggest there are more than 900,000 units awaiting treatment in the UK.

The initial annual UK cost is likely to be around £40 million. This will decrease as plant are commissioned, competition becomes established and more fridges that do not need treatment enter the waste stream.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Press Advertising (Devolved Posts)

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many non-devolved posts were advertised in the Press in each year since June 1999; and what percentage of them were advertised in the Scottish press. [76855]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 24 October 2002]: The information requested is not available.

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to improve the detection of crime and to increase the numbers of criminals brought to justice. [76933]

Mr. Denham: I refer my hon Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Dudley North (Ross Cranston) on 28 October 2002, Official Report, column 626W.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Government's involvement with the International Organisation for Migration; and the role he expects that organisation to take in the UK. [77339]

Beverley Hughes: The United Kingdom (UK) joined the International Organisation for Migration (IOM) in June 2001. This was a result of an agreement between the Home Office, the Department for International Development and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, as the UK was increasingly making use of the IOM's services, and the increasing level of work being taken forward by the Home Office in conjunction with the IOM was at odds with the United Kingdom's retaining "observer"status.

The Government funds many projects undertaken by the IOM. The IOM co-ordinates the delivery of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate's Voluntary Assisted Returns Programme for asylum seekers and failed asylum seekers.

Additionally, the UK part finances IOM projects on return and reintegration.

Furthermore, the IOM have considerable expertise in supporting the victims of people trafficking, and Home Office officials have consulted closely with the IOM in order to develop support systems for victims of trafficking.

We see IOM's assistance to be crucial to our plans for practical action against illegal migration, by working proactively beyond our borders.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of the application pack for candidates for the job of Chair of the Commission for Racial Equality; and if he will make a statement on the differences between this pack and those issued to applicants for this post on previous occasions. [77431]

Beverley Hughes: I have today placed a copy of the information pack for candidates for the post of Chair of the Commission for Racial Equality (CRE) in the Library.

The post of Chair was advertised for the first time in 1999. On that occasion the pack set out basic information about the CRE and the person specification. This time the information pack has been re-designed to provide additional information about the wider race equality agenda and the government's support for the work of the Commission. No new requirements have been added to the role of the Chair, but more information about the role has been included in the information pack.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those public bodies for which his Department is responsible where provision is made in the job description of the Chairman that the policies of the body be compatible with those of the Secretary of State. [77432]

Beverley Hughes: The information pack sent to candidates for the post of Chair of the Commission for Racial Equality (CRE), which is currently vacant, states that:

"The Chair must ensure that the CRE's policies are compatible with those of the Secretary of State and that the Commission's affairs are conducted with probity"

The requirement is not a new one as the Commission for Racial Equality's policy and resource framework is agreed with Ministers who remain accountable to Parliament for the work and efficiency of the Commission.

To my knowledge, this particular form of words has not been used in the job descriptions sent to applicants for the post of Chair of other public bodies sponsored by the Home Office. However, all non Departmental Public Bodies (NDPBs) agree their policy and resources framework with Ministers, and Ministers are answerable to Parliament for the policies and performance of all public bodies sponsored by their departments, including their use of resources and the policy framework within which they operate.

Asylum Applications

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for asylum were made during each of the last three years at (a) Glasgow airport, (b) Edinburgh airport, (c) Rosyth port and (d) Stranraer port. [78497]

Beverley Hughes: Asylum applications were as follows:

Date	Number of applications
Glasgow airport (including Prestwick airport)
1 January 2000 to 31 December 2000	4
1 January 2001 to 31 December 2001	20
1 January 2002 to 30 October 2002	[1] 23
Edinburgh airport
1 January 2000 to 31 December 2000	6
1 January 2001 to 31 December 2001	16
1 January 2002 to 30 October 2002	[1] 19
Rosyth
May 2002 to date[2]	[1] 2

Date	Number of applications
Stranraer/Cairnryan
1 January 2000 to 31 December 2000	11
1 January 2001 to 31 December 2001	31
1 January 2002 to 30 October 2002	[1] 42

[1] Data for 2002 are from local management information and may be subject to change.

[2] The ferry service into Rosyth has only operated since May 2002.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what resources are available to process asylum applications at (a) Belfast port and (b) Larne port. [78504]

Beverley Hughes: No permanent resources are in place at either Belfast or Larne ports. Neither port has international ferry services and accordingly there is no operational need for UK Immigration Service personnel to be stationed there. Any person who indicated to port staff at either port that they wished to claim asylum would be directed to the UK Immigration Service office at Belfast International Airport, where arrangements would be made for screening and interview in the normal way.

Asylum Applications (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons claimed asylum during each of the last three years in Northern Ireland. [78506]

Beverley Hughes: No statistics are kept of the numbers of asylum applicants in Northern Ireland, or any other geographic region in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what resources are available to the Immigration Service in dealing with asylum applications made on entry to Northern Ireland from Eire. [78728]

Beverley Hughes: Any person seeking asylum in Northern Ireland is directed to the UK Immigration Service staff at Belfast International airport, where arrangements are then made for their screening and interview in the same way as a person seeking asylum elsewhere in the UK.

The Belfast office currently has 11.5 staff, part of whose duties is to screen new asylum applicants identified in Northern Ireland.

Asylum Centres

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria are being used in assessing the suitability of contractors for operating the proposed new centres for asylum seekers; and who will decide on the award of contracts. [78549]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 31 October 2002]: Tender documents for the design, build and operation of accommodation centres have not yet been issued to potential contractors.

In due course, the criteria to be used in evaluating bids will involve project management; legal and financial responses; design and construction; and delivery of services and maintenance. Home Office Ministers will make decisions to award contracts.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made for a full year of the cost of the withdrawal of the work concession to asylum seekers in (a) added benefit and (b) payments to detainees; and what he estimates to be the net difference in the costs to each removal centre of employing contract and agency labour in place of detainees working in cleaning and kitchens. [78484]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 31 October 2002]: We do not have figures on the additional costs, if any, of providing support to asylum seekers who can no longer seek permission to work. Internal management Information indicates that during the financial year 2001–02 we made initial decisions on the vast majority of new substantive applications within the initial six months. The number who might have been able to benefit from the concession is therefore much reduced.

The percentage of new substantive cases in 2001–02 which were decided within six months will be available from 29 November 2002 on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1 .html

The work concession for asylum seekers did not extend to asylum seekers in detention.

Immigration detainees held in Immigration Service removal centres have never been required to work nor are they expected to assist in the running of the centres.

Following their redesignation earlier this year as removal centres, the Prison Service detention facilities at Dover, Haslar and Lindholme ceased to operate under Prison Rules. As a consequence, detainees no longer had the opportunity to undertake paid employment in the centres and the practice of relying on such work for the provision of certain ancillary services came to an end. Work formerly undertaken by detainees at these centres has been contracted out or transferred to agency staff. For this year this has resulted in a net additional cost of £1.09 million. This will be met from the Immigration and Nationality Directorate's budget.

Asylum Support

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) local authorities, (b) private sector contractors and (c) voluntary sector contractors are providing accommodation and support services for asylum seekers; and what the financial value is of tenders awarded to each sector. [78544]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 31 October 2002]: The information is as follows:

	Contracts	Grant agreements
Private sector	11	—
Local authorities	11	—
Voluntary sector	—	6

Information on the financial value of contracts is not available in the form requested.

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what geographical areas are covered in each region in the regional breakdown used by NASS; and what powers and responsibilities have been delegated to the individual regions. [78545]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 31 October 2002]: The areas covered by each region are as follows:

National Asylum Support Service (NASS) is planning to increase the number of its staff in each major region. It is expected that the regional infrastructure will be in place by the end of the current financial year. Under the regionalisation programme work related to investigations, outreach and housing contract management will be delegated, with the expectation that aspects of operations work will follow at a later date. Actual locations of individual offices within regions are still being finalised.

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many private contractors providing accommodation or support for asylum seekers have been dropped since 1997 because of dissatisfaction with their performance. [78546]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 31 October 2002]: The National Asylum Support Service (NASS) became operational on 3 April 2000. Since that date NASS has not terminated any contracts with private sector contractors providing accommodation or support to asylum seekers.

Chechens (Deportation)

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will postpone the deportation of Chechens to Russia. [78526]

Simon Hughes [holding answer 31 October 2002]: The Home Office, in conjunction with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, closely monitors the situation in the Russian Federation, and in particular, the conflict in Chechnya. We are aware that the Russian authorities have intensified their security operations in the wake of the terrorist incident in Moscow, but the impact of this remains unclear thus far. Our deportation policy, however, is kept under constant review.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter to him dated 3 September from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Tabasum Raja and Asif Kamal. [78044]

Mr. Blunkett: I wrote to my right hon. Friend on 30 October 2002.

Criminal Records Bureau

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Government is taking to ensure that the Criminal Records Bureau delivers an effective service to its customers. [77742]

Mr. Blunkett: The Government is committed to the delivery of an effective service for undertaking pre-employment criminal record checks for people working with children and vulnerable adults. The Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) has not so far been able to provide a satisfactory service.

A number of steps have already been taken to improve the CRB's performance. In May an initial service improvement plan was put in place. As a result the number of disclosures issued by the CRB has increased from an average of 24,500 per week in August to an average of 39,500 per week in the three weeks ending 26 October. The CRB has now issued 541,000 disclosures.

In addition, in September I announced the appointment of an independent team, led by Patrick Carter, to take a fundamental look at the strategy and operations of the CRB and its private-sector partner, Capita. The team will be looking to identify the longer-term changes in the way the CRB operates to ensure that it can meet the demand both for the standard and enhanced disclosures already in place and the basic disclosures to be introduced in due course.

I expect the independent team to report to me with their conclusions and recommendations by the end of the year. It is likely, however, to require a period of months before any system changes necessary to deliver the required step change in the CRB's output can be fully implemented. In the meantime it is expected that there will be a gradual improvement in performance through the ongoing service improvement plan.

In the interim, we need to take steps to ensure that the demand for disclosures is in line with the CRB's current ability to process the applications. I have therefore agreed with my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Health, and for Education and Skills a number of measures to defer the existing or proposed requirement on certain occupations or office holders to obtain a CRB disclosure.

Persons caring for children and vulnerable adults will, as now, continue to be subject to rigorous pre-employment checks, including confirming previous employment history and taking up references, to ensure their suitability for the position in question. All those occupations which were subject to a criminal record check prior to the advent of the CRB will continue to be subject to such a check.

The details of the measures are set out as follows:

Care Homes

The care homes regulations (relating to care homes for adults) currently require CRB checks for existing staff—that is, those employed to work in a care home immediately before 1 April 2002—to be completed by 31 March 2003. The Government will be amending the regulations to extend this time limit. Existing care home staff will now be required to obtain a CRB check during the course of 2004. New care homes staff will continue to be required to have CRB checks, as will registered providers and managers of care homes.

Nurses agencies and domiciliary care agencies

Nurses supplied by nurses agencies, and staff supplied by domiciliary care agencies, will not be required to have CRB checks for the time being. The Department of Health will still be going ahead with the introduction of the nurses agency and domiciliary care agency regulations to come into effect in February 2003, but without the requirement for CRB checks. Staff will be required to provide a statement that they have no criminal convictions, or to provide a statement of any criminal convictions that they do have.

The CRB check requirements will however, apply to registered providers and managers of nurses agencies and domiciliary care agencies.

Some nurses agencies are already having to comply with requirements for CRB checks, which stem from the care homes regulations and the private and voluntary health care regulations which are already in place. These require checks to be made before temporary staff can be placed in those settings. These requirements have been in place since April 2002, and are not being removed.

Other Department of Health regulations

There will be no change to other regulations under the Care Standards Act 2000. Furthermore, none of these measures affect the requirements of those working with children to have a Protection of Children Act list check and the checks required by the Children's Homes Regulations and the Fostering Services Regulations.

It is planned that regulations on residential family centres and adoption agencies will come into effect, with CRB check requirements, in February and April 2003 respectively.

In addition, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health has agreed to postpone the implementation of the Protection of Vulnerable Adults list provided for the Care Standards Act.

All these arrangements are designed to avoid having regulations in place which cannot be complied with by providers. The Government recognises the importance of criminal records checks but at the same time providers must not be prevented from operating. Care homes have to be able to continue to employ existing staff, and we believe that domiciliary care agencies and nurses agencies should not be prevented from being able to place staff because they have not obtained checks.

The regulations and national minimum standards, even with the CRB check requirements, will still be a significant factor in driving up standards and protecting service users. Among other things, they will cover the way the organisation is run, recruitment procedures, staffing arrangements, user feedback, information for service users, all of which are part of a system to protect vulnerable people.

School Governors

School governors will not be required to have CRB checks for the time being. The Department for Education and Skills will still be going ahead with the introduction of the School Governance (Constitution) regulations to come into effect in April 2003, but without the requirement for CRB checks.

The Government remains committed to introducing CRB checks in these areas at the earliest possible opportunity.

The Home Office, in conjunction with the Department of Health for Education and Skills, will be issuing detailed guidance to Registered Bodies about the implications of the above measures. The three Departments will continue to work with their partners and the CRB as the situation develops.

EU Border Policing

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the timetable through which (a) his press office, (b) his staff and (c) he were informed of proposals in the European Commission for the establishment of common EU border policing. [78125]

Beverley Hughes: The communication from the Commission to the Council and the European Parliament towards integrated management of the external borders of the member states of the European Union was released to member states on 7 May 2002 and deposited for parliamentary scrutiny on 17 May 2002.

The Communication was received by the Home Office and forwarded to the relevant directorates. Press office would not normally receive this as a matter of course.

An explanatory memorandum on the communication was forwarded to my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary on 14 June 2002.

Funded Projects (Kingston upon Hull)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the projects to which his Department has allocated funding in the Kingston-upon-Hull North constituency since 1997, indicating the amount in each case. [76560]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 28 October 2002]: The table outlines projects that have been funded in the Kingston-upon-Hull local authority area.

Neighbourhood Wardens—Caernarfon	35,000
Wrexham Industrial Estate—Targeted Policing Project	188,000
Total Spend	4,827,890

In addition, mainstream funding of £406 million has been allocated to North Wales for policing since 1997.

Immigration Offences (Stranraer and Cairnryan)

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were detained on immigration offences during each of the last three years at Stranraer and Cairnryan ports. [78500]

Beverley Hughes: Persons detained at Stranraer and Cairnryan for immigration offences as follows:

	Number detained
1 January 2000 to 31 December 2000	31
1 January 2001 to 31 December 2001	153
1 January 2002 to 31 October 2002	206

The figure for the current year 2002 is from local management information and may be subject to change.

Immigration Offences (Stranraer)

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of those persons detained on immigration offences at Stranraer port were (a) outbound to Northern Ireland and (b) inbound from Northern Ireland in each of the last three years. [78501]

Beverley Hughes: Persons detained at Stranraer:

	Outbound to Northern Ireland	Inbound from Northern Ireland
1 January 2000 to 31 December 2000	31	0
1 January 2001 to 31 December 2001	135	18
1 January 2002 to 31 October 2002	159	46

The figures for 2002 are from local management information and may be subject to change.

Immigration Service (Scotland)

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Immigration Service staff are based in Scotland; and how many of these are qualified to process asylum applications. [78498]

Beverley Hughes: On 31 October 2002, there were 112 immigration staff based in Scotland. The work of all staff includes some level of involvement in the asylum process.

Iraqi People (Support)

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Iraqis applied for hard case support in each of the past 12 months; and how many received it. [78543]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 31 October 2002]: The requested information is not available.

Leave to Remain

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to replace the application forms for foreign nationals wishing to apply for leave to remain in the United Kingdom. [79538]

Beverley Hughes: The current application forms are valid for use only until 14 November 2002. Revised forms will be prescribed before then. From the time they are issued until 14 November 2002, applications may be made on either the new forms or the present versions. Only the new forms may be used for applications made on or after 15 November 2002. Copies will be placed in the Library when they are available.

Mariana Carr

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, when the application by Mrs. Mariana Carr for British citizenship, ref C1059748, will be dealt with. [78910]

Beverley Hughes: Mrs. Carr's nationality application was approved on 19 September and an oath of allegiance was sent to Mrs. Carr's home address.

Mrs. Carr's certificate of British Nationality was issued on 27 September 2002.

Marsham Street Redevelopment

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what timber has been purchased and used in the redevelopment of 2 Marsham Street, London; and who supplied the timber. [77674]

Beverley Hughes: As of 4 November 2002, no works have been undertaken on the construction of the Home Office's new building at 2 Marsham Street. No timber has been purchased at this time.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures have been put in place to ensure that the redevelopment of 2 Marsham Street, London, will be covered by Government requirements to ensure timber purchases are from legal and sustainable sources. [77675]

Beverley Hughes: Procurement and use of legal timber has been identified as a requirement of the contract signed by the Home Office and Anne Gates Property plc (AGP) in March 2002. Independently verified documentary evidence will be obtained relating to the source of timber.

The contract requires timber to be certified by the supplier as purchased in accordance with the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Flora and Fauna (CITES); to be from a supplier with an environmental timber purchasing policy; and requires AGP to consider acquiring reclaimed timber or products made from reclaimed timber where it is cost-effective and practicable to do so.

AGP are minimizing the amount of hardwood used, both in terms of the use of alternative materials and through the use of veneers. AGP will also ensure, through their Quality Assurance systems, that rigorous checks are made to ensure that timber is procured from sources as contracted.

People Trafficking

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken by the Government to curb the number of women illegally trafficked against their will for use in vice rings. [77555]

Beverley Hughes: We set out a comprehensive approach to tackle trafficking and other forms of organised crime in the White Paper "Secure Borders, Safe Haven" published earlier this year. This approach encompasses new legislation to criminalise trafficking. The Nationality Immigration and Asylum (NIA) Bill currently before Parliament creates an offence of trafficking for the purpose of controlling someone through prostitution, with a tough maximum sentence of 14 years. This measure will tackle the worst forms of exploitation, pending the introduction of comprehensive legislation that will cover trafficking for the purposes of both labour and sexual exploitation.

We are working to tackle the criminal networks involved in people trafficking through Reflex, the multi-agency response to organised immigration crime. Reflex has co-ordinated intelligence on the scale and has assisted with planning operations such as Horsley, which dismantled a group trafficking Thai women into the UK.

We also recognise the importance of providing protection for the victims of trafficking in order to encourage them to co- operate with the authorities. We are developing support arrangements for victims in co-operation with the voluntary sector and plan to establish a pilot scheme next year. In conjunction with this we are developing a toolkit to raise awareness of the problem with police and immigration officers to help them to identify victims.

Finally, we are working with our European Union partners and with source and transit countries to build effective international action. We have established a network of liaison officers to build intelligence on routes and methods used by the traffickers. We are also working with the International Organisation for Migration to develop a programme for the safe voluntary return of trafficking victims.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to tackle human trafficking into the United Kingdom. [78149]

Beverley Hughes: We set out a comprehensive approach to tackle trafficking and other forms of organised crime in the White Paper "Secure Borders, Safe Haven" published earlier this year. This approach encompasses new legislation to criminalise trafficking. The Nationality Immigration and Asylum (NIA) Bill currently before Parliament creates an offence of trafficking for the purpose of controlling someone through prostitution, with a tough maximum sentence of 14 years. This measure will tackle the worst forms of exploitation, pending the introduction of comprehensive legislation that will cover trafficking for the purposes of both labour and sexual exploitation.

We are working to tackle the criminal networks involved in people trafficking through Reflex, the multi-agency response to organised immigration crime. Its remit is to co-ordinate operations against organised immigration crime and to develop the intelligence and strategic planning to underpin them.

We also recognise the importance of providing protection for the victims of trafficking in order to encourage them to co- operate with the authorities. We are developing support arrangements for victims in co-operation with the voluntary sector and plan to establish a pilot scheme next year, in conjunction with this we are developing a toolkit to raise awareness of the problem with police and immigration officers to help them to treat victims compassionately.

Finally, we are working with our European Union partners and with source and transit countries to build effective international action. We have established a network of liaison officers to build intelligence on routes and methods used by the traffickers. We are also working with the International Organisation for Migration to develop a programme for the safe voluntary return of trafficking victims.

Police Arrests (Chorley)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been arrested in the Chorley constituency in each of the last three years. [77765]

Mr. Denham: Information on the number of arrests for notifiable offences is collected centrally at police force area level only. Available information shows that in 1999–2000 there were 37,535 arrests for notifiable offences within the Lancashire police force area and in 2000–01 (latest available) 36,998. Information for earlier years is not available on a consistent basis. Figures for 2001–02 will be available in due course.

Police Formula

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations his Department has made to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in respect of its preferred outcome for the police formula under the Formula Grant Distribution Consultation. [78508]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 30 October 20[illegible]]: The Home Department has regular discussions with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on a number of issues including the Local Government Finance Formula Grant Distribution.

Police Numbers

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there are in (a) Lancashire, (b) the north-west of England and (c) Wales. [77634]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is set out in the table.

Force/region	Police strength as at March 2002	Civilian support staff as at 31 March 2002
Lancashire	3,304	1,442
North West	17,804	7,624

Lancashire constabulary is at record levels of police officers.

Police Officers

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers have been employed by (a) Avon and Somerset constabulary and (b) West Somerset division in each of the 10 years for which figures are available. [77760]

Mr. Denham: The information requested for Avon and Somerset constabulary is set out in the table. Data for individual divisions/basic command units is not collected centrally. By March 2002 Avon and Somerset constabulary had a record number of police officers.

Police Staff

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many non-operational staff are employed by the police in (a) Lancashire, (b) the North West of England and (c) Wales. [77636]

Mr. Denham: Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) has provided the figures set out in the table for the 12 months ending 31 March 2002.

HMIC figures count staff according to the following primary roles (a role that takes up more than half of a person's time):

Operational: any member of staff, including covert staff, whose primary role is to directly deliver the overarching aims of the Police Service;

Operational Support: any member of staff whose primary role is to support the delivery of the overarching aims of the Police Service; and Organisational Support: any member of staff whose primary role is to service the internal needs of the organisation.

The table shows the total of Operational Support and Organisational Support staff.

Force/area	Non-operational police officers	Non-operational civilian support staff
Lancashire Constabulary	233	903
North West Region	1,413	6,276
Wales	526	2,445

Police Training

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he gives to chief constables about the possibility of police forces being (a) prosecuted and (b) sued for the consequences of insufficient health and safety training of their officers involved in various policing situations. [77487]

Mr. Denham: Home Office Circular 33/1997 advises Chief Officers on their duties under the Police (Health and Safety) Act 1997. Annex A refers to the legal liability of Chief Officers.

Policing (Rural Areas)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on policing in rural areas. [75893]

Mr. Denham: Support for the police service in both rural and urban areas continues to be a key element of this Government's policy. We now have the highest levels of police officers since records began in 1921 (129,603).

Last year we provided an extra £30 million through the Rural Policing Fund to tackle problems faced in the 31 more rural police areas. This is being paid again this year.

The Police Authority and the Chief Officer may decide how to spend this additional money for the benefit of rural communities. It may be used to fund additional officers. Some police authorities have used the money to buy and operate mobile police stations to provide an enhanced police presence in remote areas.

Police numbers in the rural areas have increased significantly. At 31 March 2002 there were 60,401 officers in the 31 more rural forces. This represents an increase of 2.6 per cent. over March 2001 and 4.9 per cent. over March 2000.

Police forces can also employ Community Support Officers (CSO's) to provide additional support in rural communities. 19 of the 27 successful bids on the new CSO Fund were from the 31 more rural forces and they will receive between them £3.9 million this year. CSOs will provide a visible police presence and will have a vital role to play in support of the police in reducing the fear of crime, increasing public safety and tackling anti-social behaviour.

Prison Population (England)

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the population of English prisons in each of the last five years for (a) men, (b) women and (c) juveniles. [70817]

Hilary Benn: The number of males and females held in prisons in England since 1998 is shown in the table. The number of juveniles in custody is also shown.

The juvenile estate was established in April 2000, which is when the Youth Justice Board began collecting data on juveniles separately from the prison service. The juvenile figures for 2000 onwards therefore include those children held in private sector secure training centres and local authority secure children's homes in addition to the previously supplied prison service establishments. The juvenile figures for 1998 and 1999 are for those in prison service establishments only.

1998	60,584	3,120	2,446
1999	59,232	3,207	2,359
2000	59,916	3,355	2,665
2001	60,640	3,713	2,777
2002	64,560	4,394	3,014

[1] All data represent 30 June.

[2] Data for males and females include juveniles in prison service establishments.

[3] Under 18 years of age.

Radioactivity Monitors at British Ports

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, when he will announce the (a) location and (b) the commencement date of the proposed pilot to install radioactivity monitors at British ports. [38590]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 4 March 2002]: As a result of the terrorist in America in September last year, reviews have been undertaken of the security arrangements to counter the new threats that now exist to this country. This has resulted in a number of new measures, initiatives and trials. For obvious reasons I do not propose to give details of them. However, I can confirm that screening is part of this overall package.

Retail Crime

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to provide funding to local retail crime prevention initiatives in town shopping centres and secondary shopping areas. [77977]

Mr. Denham: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Brighton, Pavilion (Mr. Lepper) on 14 May 2002, Official Report, column 605W.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he has made of the correlation between retail crime and drug abuse; [78129]

(2) what assessment he has made of the correlation between retail crime and street crime. [78135]

Mr. Denham: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Brighton, Pavilion (Mr. Lepper) on 19 September 2002, Official Report, column 19W.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost of retail crime was to (a) business, (b) local authorities and (c) the police in each of the past three years; and what information he has on the amount spent by the retail sector on crime prevention measures in each of the last three years. [78131]

Mr. Denham: The Home Office does not collect information about the cost of retail crime. The British Retail Consortium conducts an annual retail crime survey and the most recent, published in June 2002, estimated total retail crime losses in the United Kingdom at £2.4 billion in 2001, down from an estimated £2.5 billion in 2000. The survey of crimes affecting retailers and manufacturers announced by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary on 23 April 2002, the results of which should be available next spring, will provide information on the amount spent by the retail sector on crime prevention measures over the past year. The British Retail Consortium is assisting us with our survey.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much of the money allocated to his Department in this year's Budget will be used to tackle retail crime. [78133]

Mr. Denham: It is not possible to provide an overall figure for the amount of money allocated to the Home Office in this year's budget, which will be used to tackle retail crime. Chief officers of police forces and individual crime and disorder reduction partnerships decide on the priorities for their local areas, and a proportion of their mainstream expenditure or their Home Office funding may be spent on tackling retail crime. Many of the measures taken to reduce particular crimes, such as juvenile crime, street crime and drug-related crime, and anti-social behaviour, are also likely to have a beneficial impact on reducing retail crime.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures his Department is taking to tackle retail crime. [78136]

Mr. Denham: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Castle Point (Bob Spink) on 16 May 2002, Official Report, column 846W.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to make retail crime a best value indicator for police force performance. [78137]

Mr. Denham: I refer my hon Friend to the answer I gave to the hon Member for Castle Point (Bob Spink) on 24 July 2002, Official Report, column 1493W.

Special Constables

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many special constables there were in each police force in England and Wales on (a) 1st September 2002 and (b) 1 September of each of the last five years; [77640]

(2) how many special constables there are in (a) Lancashire, (b) the north-west of England and (c) Wales. [77639]

Mr. Denham: Data on police officer numbers in England and Wales, including the Special Constabulary, is collected in March and September each year by the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate and published in the statistical bulletin "Police Service Strength".

The data on Special Constabulary strength for 30 September 1997 to 30 September 2001 is set out in the table. For 2002, the latest figure available is for 31 March 2002.

The Special Constabulary has a vital role to play in reducing crime and providing reassurance to the public and we are committed to increasing the numbers of specials. We are working with stakeholders on a variety of measures, including good practice guidance to help forces improve the recruitment, management and deployment of specials.

Speeding Offences (Police)

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many drivers of police cars were caught exceeding the speed limit by speed cameras in the last year when not attending to an emergency call; [77830]

(2) how many drivers of police cars that were caught exceeding the speed limit by speed cameras in the last year when not attending to an emergency call were prosecuted. [77829]

Mr. Denham: This information is not collected centrally.

Street Crime (Lancashire)

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the levels of street crime in Lancashire. [77635]

Mr. Denham: Lancashire is one of the 10 areas involved in the Government's street crime initiative, which was announced on 17 March 2002.

We published street crime figures on 14 October 2002 charting progress under the initiative to the end of September. There are two indicators of progress: a comparison with the period immediately before the initiative began, and a direct comparison with the same period last year.

In Lancashire, there was a 20 per cent reduction in street crime offences (robbery and snatch theft) between April and September 2002. For robbery, the more serious offence, figures showed 15 per cent fewer offences in September compared to March, the month preceding the initiative.

Year on year comparisons show an 11 per cent reduction in the number of robberies in Lancashire in the six months from April to September 2002, compared to the same period last year.

Published figures for the first six months of the initiative, including a document detailing the achievements made through the initiative's partnership work, can be found in the Library or on the Crime Reduction website atwww.crimereduction.gov.uk/streetcrime.

Violent Crime

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many incidents of violent crime there were in (a) Lancashire, (b) the north-west of England and (c) Wales in the last 12 months for which figures are available; [77633]

Robbery

(2) how many incidents of robbery there were in (a) Lancashire, (b) the north-west of England and (c) Wales in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [77638]

Mr. Denham: The requested details in respect of crimes recorded by the police in the year ending March 2002 have already been published in table 6.06 of the Home Office Statistical Bulletin "Crime in England and Wales 2001–02", which was published in July this year, and is available in the Library. The table also gives rates for overall violent crime obtained from the British Crime Survey, which records people's actual experiences of crime.

Recorded crime figures may have been affected in comparison to the previous year as a result of changes to police recording practices. Some of the forces in Wales and the North West, including Lancashire, implemented the principles of the National Crime Recording Standard in advance of its national introduction in April 2002. This early implementation by these and other police forces had the effect of uplifting the number of offences of violence against the person in England and Wales as a whole in 2001–02 by an estimated 13 per cent.

Work Permits

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many work permits were issued to foreign nationals in each of the last five years. [78723]

Beverley Hughes: The number of work permits issued to foreign nationals is as follows:

2000–01—99,815
1999–2000—63,853
1998–99—57,089
1997–98—47,009

The figures above include all individual and group work permit applications which have been approved in each of the last five financial years.

Yarl's Wood Detention Centre

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the re-opened facility at Yarl's Wood, Bedfordshire will be used from April 2003 for (a) the long-term detention of asylum seekers and (b) their removal after refusal of their applications; and if he will make a statement. [78578]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 31 October 2002]: I can confirm the intention is for the remaining centre at Yarl's Wood to be ready to re-open in April 2003 with a population of single females, and later families, both asylum and non-asylum cases. In advance of this, work has already commenced to install sprinklers and the necessary facilities so that this population can be accommodated. As with all other removal centres, Yarl's Wood will be used to ensure we deliver our commitment to remove those without lawful right to be here. The intention is always to ensure that the period in detention is as short as possible. However, it is sometimes regrettably necessary to detain asylum seekers and other immigration related cases for longer periods of time.

Yarlswood Detention Centre

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what decision he has made in respect of the publication of the report which has been submitted to him by Stephen Moore, in respect of the circumstances of the fire at Yarlswood detention centre on 14 February; and if he will make a statement. [78579]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 31 October 2002]: It has not been decided when the report will be published. Stephen Moore has consulted widely and taken representations from a number of interested parties. However, his terms of reference require him to take full account of inquiries being undertaken by Bedfordshire police and the Bedfordshire fire and rescue service, neither of which has yet concluded investigations. He is also required to conduct his inquiry in a way that would not impede any criminal investigation. Criminal trials arising out of the events at Yarl's Wood on 14 and 15 February are listed for April 2003. Consideration is therefore still being given as to when the report can be completed and published.

Criminal Justice System

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he will take in response to the finding of Home Office Research Study 45: Improving Public Attitudes to the Criminal Justice System, that overall knowledge of the criminal justice system among the general public was poor. [73785]

Hilary Benn: We recognise that public understanding of the criminal justice system is poor, and the Home Office will take this into account when considering future communication activity.

My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has publicly acknowledged this fact, and has sought to encourage a wide-ranging public debate about the criminal justice system in the run up to and following publication of the Criminal Justice White Paper, "Justice for All". Work is under way to develop a plan and programme of work to improve public confidence in the criminal justice system.

HEALTH

EU Directives

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement regarding the EU's requirements with regards to sausage skins. [77049]

Ms Blears: I am advised by the Food Standards Agency that, in the knowledge of a theoretical risk of BSE in sheep, the Agency has recommended to the European Union (EU) Commission that sheep intestines, used to make some sausage casings, be added to the EU list of specified risk material (SRM) prohibited from the food chain. The EU scientific steering committee (SSC) considered at its September meeting the most recent data on BSE and sheep intestines. The SSC decided not to recommend, at this time, the addition of sheep intestines to the list of SRM. At the same time, differing scientific opinions on the effectiveness of processing sheep intestines, in removing potential infective material should BSE be present in a sheep, were acknowledged. The Agency has subsequently suggested to the Commission that experts be called together at EU level to achieve better common understanding. The Commission has agreed to this. In the meantime, there are no restrictions on the sale or use of such sausage casings pending any decision at the EU level.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will assess the impact on the NHS budget of the European food supplements directive and the proposed European directive on traditional herbal medicinal products; and if he will make a statement. [75816]

Ms Blears: The European Union food supplements directive is not expected to have any impact on the availability of vitamin and mineral supplements required by specific population groups, such as pregnant women. It is therefore not expected to have any impact on the national health service budget.

Overall, it is not possible to quantify the likely impact of the proposed traditional herbal medicines directive on the NHS budget.

The proposed directive on traditional herbal medicinal products should ensure the availability of a wide range of traditional herbal remedies made to assured standards of safety and quality, and accompanied by systematic and reliable information about the purpose of the product and its safe usage. Potentially the directive could help members of the public wishing to take greater responsibility for their own health to make an informed choice about which traditional herbal remedy may be helpful. It could also reduce the possibility of the public taking remedies that may be inappropriate to their health needs.

Food Labelling

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his position towards Directive 2002/67/EC (OJ L191, vol 45, 19 July 2002) on the labelling of foodstuffs containing (a) quinine and (b) caffeine; how many products on sale in the UK will be affected; and what cost assessment his Department has made of the cost of change in packaging. [77248]

Ms Blears: These labelling changes will help consumers make informed choices about consumption of these products. Many manufacturers already indicate when caffeine or quinine has been added as an ingredient and most beverages containing high levels of caffeine already carry a warning to that effect. The new rules do not take full effect until 1 July 2004 and the legislation provides for products labelled before that date to continue to be sold while stocks last. This generous transitional period should allow any necessary changes to be incorporated as part of normal label redesign cycles and therefore ensure costs are kept to a minimum.

Cancer Care Action Group

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what representations his Department has received concerning the effectiveness of the Cancer Care Action Group in identifying and implementing improvements to the quality of care for patients; [75748]

(2) if he will list the members of the Cancer Care Action Group and the organisations that they represent. [75747]

Ms Blears: The Cancer Care Action Group was established in 1998 after the Caring for Cancer conference, which brought together statutory and voluntary organisations involved in caring for those with cancer. Following the publication of the NHS Cancer Plan, the group was replaced by a supportive and palliative care strategy co-ordinating group.

The Supportive and Palliative Care Strategy Group membership comprises representatives from the Department of Health, the national health service, the National Council for Hospices and specialist palliative care services, Macmillan Cancer Relief, CancerBACUP, National Cancer Alliance, Marie Curie Cancer Care and voluntary hospices.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health through what mechanisms staff of the Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health, deployed to patient forums, will be accountable to those forums and their local communities. [77425]

Mr. Lammy: Staff will be provided by the Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health to primary care trust patients' forums to support the members of patients' forums in their work. The work programme of the staff will be set by the patients' forum members. Therefore, while staff will be employed by the Commission on a day to day basis, they will be accountable to the patients' forum to which they are attached. It is for the Commission to decide exactly how this dual accountability will be managed and ensured.

Advisory Committee on Resources Allocations

Mr Dave Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the Advisory Committee on Resources Allocations committee recommendations and options; if he will consult on the (a) options and recommendations and (b) weighting that will be given to any measures used to determine need; and what weighting he plans to give to (i) basic per capita allocations, (ii) deprivation, (iii) ethnicity, (iv) poor health indicators, (v) ACA, (vi) low birth weight, (vii) income, (viii) unemployment, (ix) premature death rates and (x) other measures. [78617]

Mr. Hutton: We are currently considering the recommendations of the advisory committee on resource allocation (ACRA) for a new National Health Service funding formula. Later this autumn when we announce the revenue allocations for the next three years we will explain changes to the formula. The team who carried out the research into the new formula plan to publish a full report of their findings.

ACRA is an expert body whose membership is made up of individuals with a wide range of relevant experience and expertise from within and outside the NHS. We do not consult on ACRA's recommendations.

Ambulance Personnel (Assaults)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many ambulance personnel by region have been (a) shot, (b) stabbed and (c) assaulted in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [78428]

Mr. Lammy [holding answer 31 October 2002]: Information on the type of and levels of violent incidents by individual staff group is not collected centrally, but may be held at a local level by national health service employers. Data on violent incidents involving all staff in the NHS were not collected on a national basis prior to 1998.

The results of the 2000–01 survey of reported violent or abusive incidents, accidents involving staff and sickness absence in NHS trusts and health authorities, in England, have been placed in the Library, along with a report setting out the Government's proposed action in light of the findings. The survey found that there were an estimated 13 reported violent or abusive incidents per 1,000 staff per month in ambulance trusts, compared to an estimated 10 such incidents for all NHS trusts.

Ambulance Services (Private Functions)

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent guidance he has issued to ambulance trusts on making crews and vehicles available for hire to cover private functions. [78375]

Mr. Lammy [holding reply issued on Thursday 31 October]: National Health Service Trusts may provide ambulance services to events such as sporting fixtures if there is no detriment to NHS services and the full cost is recovered.

Arthritis

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many persons were suffering from arthritis in each of the last 10 years. [77537]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 28 October 2002]: The information requested is not collected centrally. However, Arthritis Care estimates that there are more than 200 types of arthritis and rheumatic disease, and more than 8 million people in the United Kingdom have long-term health problems due to arthritis or a related condition.

Bed Blocking

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds in (a) Greater London and (b) Essex were occupied by delayed discharge patients (i) at the latest available date and (ii) in each of the last four quarters. [77148]

Mr. Lammy: Information on delayed discharges is collected centrally and is placed in the Library.

Before 1 April 2002 data were collected at the old health authority level. Health authorities were disbanded on 1 April 2002 and replaced with primary care trusts.

Health authority level data up to and including Q4 2001–02 (March 2002) are available.

For Quarter 1 2002–03 (up until the end of June 2002) primary care trust level data are available.

Care Homes (Closure)

Mr Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the closure of care homes. [77512]

Jacqui Smith: Department figures show that between 1997 and 2001, the most recent figures available, the number of care homes in England reduced by only 640 or two per cent. My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State announced, on 23 July, an extra £1 billion for social services by 2006. Some of this money can be used to boost capacity in the care home sector.

Child Prostitution

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children were identified as being involved in prostitution in each of the past five years. [78015]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not held centrally.

Child Protection

Dr Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the Government intends to ensure that the safeguarding of vulnerable children takes place at a primary care level and that GPs participate to an extent which does not impinge upon them carrying out other clinical duties. [78021]

Jacqui Smith: From April 2002, responsibility for securing the provision of the health contribution to child protection services began to be devolved to primary care trusts (PCTs). The particular roles and responsibilities of health professionals for child protection are set out in the Government's core inter-agency child protection guidance Working Together to Safeguard Children. Although this is a new role for PCTs, they are not expected to assume this responsibility without support. Child protection will form a key competency task within the national primary and care trust development programme currently being developed.

The exercise of responsibility for child protection involves more than the specific clinical service; it necessitates PCTs exercising a public health responsibility for a whole population. It will require good partnership working with all stakeholders, in particular councils with social services responsibilities. Guidance on specific action required was issued to all chief executives of PCTs in January this year. This will be followed next year by supplementary child protection guidance for health professionals. In addition, the national primary and care trust development programme team are currently running child protection seminars for PCT directors with responsibility for children.

Dr Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he plans to take to ensure that area child protection committees receive sufficient funding to discharge their responsibilities. [78022]

Jacqui Smith Area child protection committee (ACPC) expenditure and administrative and policy support is a matter for local agreement. As a multi-agency forum, the ACPC should be supported in its work by its main constituent agencies, reflecting the investment of each agency in activities which are of benefit to all, in particular inter-agency training.

The Joint Chief Inspectors' report Safeguarding Children, published on 14 October 2002, contains a recommendation that the Department of Health should review the current arrangements for ACPCs to determine whether they should be established on a statutory basis to ensure adequate accountability, authority and funding. The Government has welcomed the publication of this report. The Government recognises that there is still more to be done to ensure that the highest standards of child protection are applied in every case. That is why it commissioned the Joint Chief Inspector's report. It is also why my right hon. Friends, the Secretary of State for Health and the Home Secretary set up the statutory inquiry, chaired by Lord Laming, into the circumstances leading up to, and surrounding, the death of Victoria Climbie. The Government looks forward to receiving Lord Laming's report later this year. It will respond in full to both reports after it has had the opportunity to consider them fully.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many serious case reviews were carried out by each area child protection committee in each of the last five years. [78023]

Jacqui Smith: Complete statistical information is not held centrally on the numbers or types of serious case reviews that have been carried out in accordance with Chapter 8 of "Working Together to Safeguard Children (1999)".

However, many findings from serious case reviews can serve as an important source of information to inform policy and practice at both national and local levels. In recognition of this, the Department is responsible for identifying and disseminating common themes and trends across review reports, and acting on lessons for policy and practice. We recently published an overview report, "Learning from Past Experience—A Review of Serious Case Reviews", drawing out the key findings of a selection of case reviews from the last two years, and their implications for policy and practice. At the same time, we have recently launched a new comprehensive database, which will in future hold information about all serious case reviews.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of accident and emergency departments do not have access to child protection registers. [78024]

Mr. Lammy: All accident and emergency departments have access to information contained in child protection registers held by local authority social services departments, subject to the normal safeguards. Access out of office hours is through out of office arrangements with local authority social services departments.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) for what reason the Child Protection Register contains those children who are on social services department client index as a consequence of being regarded as at risk; [78027]

(2) what the main criteria is for placing a vulnerable child who has been a client of a social services department on a child protection register. [78031]

Jacqui Smith: As "Working Together to Safeguard Children", the Government's child protection guidance, makes clear, the sole criteria for consideration by an initial child protection conference, when determining whether to register a child's name on the child protection register, is whether a child is at risk of significant harm.

The test should be that either: the child can be shown to have suffered ill-treatment or impairment of health or development as a result of physical, emotional or sexual abuse or neglect and professional judgement is that further ill-treatment or impairment are likely; or professional judgement, substantiated by the findings of enquiries in this individual case or by research evidence, is that the child is likely to suffer ill-treatment or the impairment of health or development as a result of physical, emotional or sexual abuse or neglect.

The decision whether or not to register a child's name on the child protection register should not be taken on the grounds that the child is already known to social services.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the role of child and adolescent mental health services is with regard to safeguarding vulnerable children. [78036]

Jacqui Smith: Guidance on this is given in "Working Together to Safeguard Children: A guide to inter-agency working to safeguard and promote the welfare of children", published by the Department of Health, the Home Office and the then Department for Education and Employment in 1999. A copy is in the Library. Paragraphs 3.39–3.41 of the guide relate to all mental health services and 3.42–3.44 to child and adolescent mental health services. The latter includes the role of relevant professional staff in cases where abuse and/or neglect is identified or suspected and the provision, where appropriate, of a range of assessment and treatment services for children with mental health disorders and their families.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to establish area child protection committees on a statutory basis. [78037]

Jacqui Smith: The Joint Chief Inspectors' report "Safeguarding Children", published on 14 October 2002, contains a recommendation that the Department should review the current arrangements for area child protection committees to determine whether they should be established on a statutory basis to ensure adequate accountability, authority and funding.

The Government have welcomed the publication of this report. The Government recognise that there is still more to be done to ensure that the highest standards of child protection are applied in every case. That is why it commissioned the Joint Chief Inspectors' report. It is also why my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Health and the Home Secretary set up the statutory inquiry, chaired by Lord Laming, into the circumstances leading up to and surrounding the death of Victoria Climbie. The Government looks forward to receiving Lord Laming's report later this year. It will respond in full to both reports after it has had the opportunity to consider them fully.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health to what use child protection registers are put; and how he expects this to change in the next three years. [78038]

Jacqui Smith: A central child protection register should be maintained in each area covered by a social services department. The register should list all the children resident in the area (including those who have been placed there by another local authority or agency) who are considered to be at continuing risk of significant harm, and for whom there is a child protection plan. The principal purpose of the register is to make agencies and professionals aware of those children who are judged to be at continuing risk of significant harm and in need of active safeguarding.

The Joint Chief Inspectors' report "Safeguarding Children", published on 14 October 2002, contains a recommendation that the Department should review the purpose of child protection registers and issue guidance to local authorities.

The Government have welcomed the publication of this report. The Government recognise that there is still more to be done to ensure that the highest standards of child protection are applied in every case. That is why it commissioned the Joint Chief Inspectors' report. It is also why my right hon. Friends, the Secretary of State for Health and the Home Secretary set up the statutory inquiry, chaired by Lord Laming, into the circumstances leading up to, and surrounding, the death of Victoria Climbie. The Government look forward to receiving Lord Laming's report later this year. It will respond in full to both reports after it has had the opportunity to consider them fully.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many area child protection committees do not have representatives from youth offending teams; and if he will set a deadline for all area child protection committees to include representatives from youth offending teams. [78039]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not held centrally.

The Joint Chief Inspectors' report, "Safeguarding Children", published on 14 October 2002, contains a recommendation that the Lord Chancellor's Department, the Home Office and the Department of Health should issue immediate guidance to ensure that local youth offending teams and the Crown Prosecution Service are invited to become full members of all area child protection committees.

Dr Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children in each of the last five years have left local authority care and within five years (a) committed suicide and (b) attempted suicide. [78051]

Jacqui Smith: The Department does not collect statistical information on committed or attempted suicide for children and young people that have left local authority care.

Delayed Discharges

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Government will publish their response to the Health Committee's Third Report of Session 2001–02 on Delayed Discharges. [79584]

Jacqui Smith: The Government's response to the Health Select Committee's Third Report of Session 2001–02 on Delayed Discharges has been published today. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Free Fruit (Schools)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has to introduce free fruit in primary schools; and what estimate he has made of how much such provision would cost. [77011]

Ms Blears [holding answer 29 October 2002]: The national school fruit scheme will entitle every child aged four to six to a free piece of fruit each school day from 2004. The scheme is currently being expanded to all eligible schools through large scale pilots on a region by region basis with funding of £42 million from the new opportunities fund.

The expansion began with the West Midlands and is continuing in London this school term. By the end of this year free fruit will be available to up to 600,000 children in around 4,000 schools. The next regions to benefit will be North West and East Midlands.

We will be closely monitoring and reviewing the experience from the pilots in order to make an accurate assessment of the annual cost of provision on a national scale.

Health Statistics

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths there were from complications arising from fractured bones in each of the last five years. [78571]

Ruth Kelly: The answer requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Dr. Lynne Jones, of 4 November 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question asking how many deaths there were from complications arising from fractured bones in each of the last five years. (78571)

It is not possible from routinely coded mortality data to obtain figures on complications arising from fractured bones. For deaths where an accident or violence initiated the train of events leading directly to death, a code is assigned to the type of injury sustained by the deceased. The figures below indicate the numbers of deaths where that injury was a fracture.

Number of deaths from fractures[1], England and Wales, 1997 to 2001

	Number of deaths
Calendar year[2]
1998	3,536
1999	3,613
2001[3]	4,670

[1] The nature of injury was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9) codes 800 to 829 for the years 1997 to 2000 and, for the year 2001, the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) codes S02, 812, S22, S32, S42, S52, 862, 872, 882, 892, T02, T08, T10, T12, T14.2.

[2] Figures are for deaths occurring in each calendar year

[1] The introduction of ICD-10 for coding cause of death in 2001 means that data for fractures in this year are not comparable with data for earlier years. The introduction of ICD-10 has led to an apparent increase of 17% in the number of deaths coded to fractures. The figures should therefore be interpreted with caution. The effect of the change in classification in 2001 is described in a report published in May 2002.[1]

Hepatitis B (Prisons)

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of prisoners have been vaccinated against hepatitis B; and how many had been vaccinated in 2000. [77998]

Jacqui Smith: Information is not available in the form requested. Returns from prison service establishments indicate that the number of prisoners who completed a course of Hepatitis B vaccinations in 2000–01 was 3,912. The comparable figure for 2001–02 was 5,463.

Impersonation of Doctors

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have been found guilty of impersonating a specialist in (a) obstetrics and (b) gynaecology in each of the last 10 years. [76616]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 24 October 2002]: The crime of pretending to be a registered medical practitioner is a police matter, and I am not aware of statistics for numbers charged or convicted. The Department has issued guidance on the registration and employment of doctors, stating that employers must ensure that any doctor who is offered employment is suitably registered before taking up their duties.

Infertility Treatment

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to end postcode prescribing of infertility treatment. [77840]

Ms Blears [holding answer 29 October 2002]: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence is developing clinical guidelines to cover the treatment of infertility which they expect to deliver in November 2003. The guidelines will make the latest knowledge and best practice available to all parts of the national health service. We expect the fertility guidelines to be implemented consistently across the NHS. Once issued, the uptake of this guidance will be monitored locally and by the Commission for Health Improvement.

Kava-kava

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to publish the conclusions of the Food Standards Agency's consultation to prohibit the herbal ingredient kava-kava in food products. [78159]

Ms Blears [holding answer 29 October 2002]: The Food Standards Agency will advise on action to be taken in relation to foods containing kava-kava when it has considered responses to the public consultation which closed on Friday 27 September.

Leicestershire Health Trust

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many administrators there are as a ratio of the number of clinical staff in the Leicestershire Health Trust. [77947]

Mr. Lammy: The ratio of the number of administration staff to clinical staff at the University Hospitals of Leicester National Health Service Trust is shown in the table.

NHS Hospital and Community Health Services (HCHS): Medical and dental and non-medical staff by specified group within the University Hospitals of Leicester NHS Trust as at 30 September 2001

	whole-time equivalents	headcount
All staff	8,340	10,120
Admnistration[1]	1,680	1,990
Clinical staff[2]	6,200	7,520 of which
Medical and dental staff	1,050.00	1,170
Clinical (Non-medical)	5,150	6,350
Others[3]	460	600
Ratio of administrators to clinical staff[4]	1 to 3.7	1 to 3.8

Notes:

[1] Administration staff includes senior managers, managers, clerical & administrative.

[2] Clinical staff includes medical and dental staff, nursing staff (including learners), allied health professionals, healthcare assistants, and scientific, therapeutic & technical staff.

[3] Others includes maintenance & works, support and other staff.

[4] Based on un-rounded figures.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the current salary is of the Chief Executive of the Leicestershire Health Trust. [77948]

Mr. Lammy: The salary of the Chief Executive of the university hospitals of Leicester National Health Service Trust was published in the Trust's annual report and accounts for 2001–02 as being between £140,000 and £145,000.

Meals on Wheels

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were in receipt of meals-on-wheels in each of the last five years. [77995]

Jacqui Smith: In 2000–01 an estimated 212,000 clients received meals as part of community-based services provided or commissioned by councils with social service responsibilities (CSSR) based on the referrals, assessments and packages of care (RAP) return. Comparable data prior to 2000–01 are not readily available.

Mid Essex Hospital Trust

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects in-patient waiting lists in the Mid Essex Hospital Trust area to fall below the level that they were at on 31 March 1997. [77156]

Mr. Lammy [holding answer 31 October 2002]: Mid Essex Hospitals National Health Service Trust achieved the 2001–02 plan ensuring that no patients were waiting more than 15 months for elective treatment. The trust also exceeded its elective activity while successfully managing an increase in emergency activity.

Currently Mid Essex Hospitals Trust is following government guidelines with robust delivery plans in place to reduce the waiting times for patients on the waiting list to a maximum of 12 months by March 2003.

Mixed Sex Wards

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients are in mixed sex wards, broken down by trust. [74201]

Mr. Hutton: The Department does not collect information on the number of national health service patients treated in mixed sex wards as opposed to single sex wards. NHS trusts are required only to report on total patient throughput per annum.

NHS (European Doctors)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 21 October 2002, Official Report, column 128W, if he will list the contracts signed by NHS trusts to bring teams of doctors from continental Europe to work in the NHS. [78199]

Mr. Hutton: Six contracts to bring over overseas clinical teams have been signed by national health service trusts: two each by Central Middlesex and East Somerset NHS Trust, and one each by South Tyneside Healthcare Acute Trust, and Morecambe Bay Hospitals NHS Trust. A short-term contract was also signed at Mid-Staffordshire NHS Trust.

NHS Direct

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average time it took to get through to NHS Direct was over (a) the last month for which figures are available and (b) the previous six months. [77141]

Mr. Lammy: The average time it took to get through to NHS Direct in September 2002 was 55.73 seconds. The figures for the previous six months are shown in the table.

Month	Seconds
March 2002	74.79
April 2002	61.42
May 2002	59.45
June 2002	69.37
July 2002	69.43
August 2002	66.87

Mr Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the number of nurses working on NHS Direct at each grade. [77603]

Mr. Lammy: At present, the number of nurses working on NHS Direct at each grade is not collected centrally. The nurse grade structure for NHS Direct mainly consists of F and G grade nurses offering medical advice. NHS Direct accounts nationally for around 1,100 (whole time equivalent) nurses, a small number against the overall size of the nursing workforce 346,000 -whole time equivalent—in England. The service had and will continue to follow a range of strategies to minimise the impact of its recruitment on other parts of the National Health Service.

NHS Trusts (Private Operation Bills)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS patients have billed NHS trusts for operations carried out in the private sector; and how many of these were paid and at what cost. [78182]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 29 October 2002]: National health service trusts do not have the power to reimburse patients for operations they choose to have carried out in the private sector. Occasionally circumstances arise in which NHS trusts decide that it is appropriate, on a case by case basis, to make an ex-gratia payment in connection with such treatment. The Department does not hold information on the number of such payments, nor their costs.

NHS Vacancies (Mid-Essex)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many (a) nurse, (b) doctor and (c) consultant vacancies there were at Broomfield Hospital, Chelmsford at the latest available date; [77142]

(2) how many (a) nurse, (b) doctor and (c) consultant vacancies there were in the Mid-Essex Hospital Trust at the latest available date. [77143]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the table. Vacancy information is not collected for specific hospitals, therefore vacancy information is shown for Mid Essex Hospital Trust.

Department of Health Vacancies Survey, March 2002(Vacancies in Mid Essex Hospital Services Trust, doctors, nurses and consultants

			Staff in post
	Three month vacancy rate %	Number of three month vacancies	Whole time equivalent	Head-count
All medical and dental staff	3.1	0	110	160
All consultants	3.4	0	90	100
All other doctors and dentists	2.4	0	20	70
All nurses	1.6	20	1,290	1,720
All qualified nurses	2.2	20	880	1,170

Key notes:
1. Three month vacancy information is as at 31 March 2002.
2. Three month vacancies are vacancies which trusts are actively trying to fill, which had lasted for three months or more (whole time equivalents).
3. Three month vacancy rates are three month vacancies expressed as a percentage of three month vacancies plus staff in post.

4. Three month vacancy rates are calculated using staff in post from the Vacancy Survey and the Consultant Census, March 2002.
5. Staff in post data are from the Non-Medical Workforce Census, September 2001 and the Mini Consultant Census, March 2002.
6. Medical and dental figures exclude staff in training.
7. Percentages are rounded to one decimal place.
8. Vacancy and staff in post numbers are rounded to the nearest 10.

Other notes:

9. Due to rounding, calculating the vacancy rates using the above data may not equal the actual vacancy rates.
10. Figures may not match previously published data due to a different method of rounding used on the staff in post data.

Nutrition

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the annual cost of under-nutrition to the NHS. [75701]

Ms Blears [holding answer 22 October 2002]: The number of finished consultant episodes (FCEs) of in-patient care in national health service hospitals in England in 2000–01 for malnutrition was 321. This figure does not represent the number of patients as a person may have more than one FCE in the year. This is the final figure.

This information is extracted from hospital episode statistics (HES) system which contains details of patients admitted to and treated in NHS hospitals in England. HES does not hold data on cost of treatment for malnutrition.

Occupational Therapy

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the underlying reasons are behind the change in the number of occupational therapy first episodes of care from 2001–02 to 2000–01. [78060]

Mr. Hutton: Table 2 of "Occupational Therapy Services, Summary Information for 2001–02", England, a copy of which is in the Library, indicates that referrals from some sources to national health service occupational therapy services fell while others rose. Information is not collected centrally on the reasons for these changes.

Older People (Care)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his oral statement on 23 July on older people's services, how many extra care home places will result from the plans he announced in each of the next three years. [78913]

Jacqui Smith: In the recently published national health service and social care planning guidance, "Improvement, Expansion and Reform: The next 3 years", the Government indicated a capacity assumption of an increase of 6,000 in the number of people in care homes supported by councils over the three years to 2006. We expect the majority of the places to be provided from April 2004 onwards.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his oral statement on 23 July concerning services for older people, for what reasons he estimates there was a reduction in the number of households receiving home care over the last five years. [78914]

Jacqui Smith: Home care is only part of the care and support provided through non-residential social services. This includes home helps and home care, community equipment and housing adaptations, occupational therapy, day care, and direct payments. We are committed to improving the provision of non-intensive care and support as part of better preventive services.

Organ Retention

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many organs are retained at Leicestershire hospitals from deceased persons. [77962]

Mr. Lammy: There are currently 153 organs retained by the three hospitals covered by the University Hospitals of Leicester National Health Service Trust. Their retention complies with the Department's rules on the removal, retention and use of human organs. We have recently consulted on revised procedures and protocols for the taking, storage and use of human organs and tissue, and a code of practice on the import and export of body parts. That exercise will lead to a new Bill on human tissue in due course.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 16 October 2002, Official Report, column 870W, on parliamentary questions, how many statistical tables requested by hon. Members in parliamentary questions have been placed in the Library and not been published in the Official Report this session. [78372]

Mr. Lammy [holding answer 31 October 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 16 October 2002, Official Report, column 870W.

Patient Forums

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health will be able to provide legal advice to patient forums; and whether it will be specifically funded to do so. [77423]

Mr. Lammy: The Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health will be able to provide legal advice to patients' forums. This is within the commission's function of providing advice and assistance to patients' forums.

It will be for the commission to determine how it spends the money allocated to it—this will be set out in the annual business plan that it produces.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to provide local premises for patient forums in England, and if he will make a statement. [77426]

Mr. Lammy: It is the responsibility of the Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health to decide where patients' forums in England, and the staff supporting them, should best be located to enable them to discharge their functions. To assist the commission in doing so, a change assessment group is being set up for each strategic health authority (StHA) area. It will comprise stakeholders such as the national health service, community health councils, local Government and local voluntary organisations; and will consider issues such as:

Mapping of how the NHS is arranged within the StHA area

Demography

Relationship between the NHS and local Government

Recruitment

ICAS provision

Accommodation.

All the information above will help to inform the commission where the most appropriate accommodation will need to be located—in terms of the NHS, the nature of populations, and in relation to other relevant services. It will also enable the commission to form a clear picture of the nature, type and volume of work that will need to be undertaken by the patients' forums for that area and by the staff supporting them.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of staff required to be employed in patient forums to replace community health councils; what his estimate is of the annual cost of running patient forums in England; and if he will make a statement. [77427]

Mr. Lammy: The final outcome of the current spending review is not yet known. It is therefore not possible to discuss detailed funding arrangements for patients' forums and the Commission for 2003–04.

The Commission's chair designate and her interim team, along with the Department, are still considering potential structures for the organisation of and staffing levels for patients' forums. The level of funding available for the Commission and patients' forums will be a key determinant of this, so, as yet, staffing levels have not been finalised.

It should also be noted that staff working in patient advice and liaison services, staff in local authorities supporting overview and scrutiny committees and other staff that will be commissioned by patients' forums to provide independent complaints advocacy support will also undertake some of the functions currently carried out by community health councils.

Patient Forums (Staffing)

Mr Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff that are currently employed by English CHCs are likely not to be employed by the new Patient Forums; and what redundancy schemes have been put in place for those staff. [77973]

Mr. Lammy: Recruitment of staff for patients' forums will be through open competition and will be organised by the Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health. It is therefore not possible, nor would it be appropriate, to predict who will secure positions and who will not.

The Department is working with the trade unions on the arrangements for Community Health Council (CHC) staff in the run up to the abolition of CHCs.

Patient Prospectus

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which PCTs will have distributed copies of the patient prospectus by the end of October; and if he will make a statement. [77992]

Mr. Lammy [holding reply issued on Thursday 31 October]: We do not have information as to which primary care trusts (PCTs) will have distributed copies of the patient prospectus by the end of October. We expect PCTs to have made the necessary arrangements to ensure delivery of the patient prospectus by the end of November. The Department produced guidance on compilation of the prospectus, and this has been available since July. It has also set up a 'Helpline' function, which has since August, been available to provide PCTs with advice about different methods of prospectus delivery. The Department in conjunction with the strategic health authorities, is continuing to oversee progress with general distribution.

Patient Prospectus Initiative

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Department has to evaluate the patient prospectus initiative. [77991]

Mr. Lammy [holding reply issued on Thursday 31 October]: The Department plans to evaluate the patient prospectus initiative by arranging;

a series of events at which it engages with a cross-section of patients and residents who are in receipt of the prospectus leaflet meetings with representatives of primary care trusts who have participated in compiling the documents locally.

The above exercises are scheduled for completion by early in the new year. By taking part in these interface meetings, the Department is seeking to find out how the prospectus was received locally, and to gain feedback upon its utility. It will also use the information to inform plans for next year's prospectus and to consider potential improvements, for example to content, or in the provision of guidance material.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent by each PCT on the patient prospectus initiative. [77993]

Mr. Lammy [holding reply issued on Thursday 31 October]: The Department does not hold information about primary care trusts' (PCTs) expenditure on the patient prospectus. It is for each PCT to make the appropriate arrangements to facilitate delivery of the prospectus.

Patients Forum (Staffing)

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff were employed in English CHCs in each of the last three years; and what the projected number is of staff to be employed by the Patients Forum when they commence. [77969]

Mr. Lammy: Community Health Council (CHC) staff in England are employed by seven strategic health authorities and are National Health Service employees.

The figures requested are therefore not held centrally. There are currently approximately 700 staff in the 184 CHCs in England.

The chair designate of the Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health CPPIH) and her interim team, along with the Department, are still considering potential structures for the organisation of and staffing levels for patients' forums.

Pharmaceutical Industry

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effects of paralliel trading in the British pharmaceutical industry; and if he will make a statement. [77480]

Mr. Lammy: Parallel imports are estimated to represent 15 per cent. overall of sales of medicines to the national health service, although the proportion of sales represented by parallel imports differs widely between different products. Conclusive information on the economic effect of this trade on the British pharmaceutical industry is not available, given the uncertainty surrounding such factors as the profits made on sales to the country which is the source of the imports and other discounts offered by manufacturers in the United Kingdom.

Residential and Nursing Care

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average length of time was that an individual stayed in (a) residential care and (b) nursing care in England in the last 12 months. [77145]

Jacqui Smith: The personal social services research unit, in research commissioned by the Department, estimated that the average complete length of stay of older publicly funded residents of residential and nursing homes is around 30 months. These data can not be broken down into types of home. This survey was carried out in the winter of 1995–96.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimates his Department has made of the number of people who have had to sell their homes to pay for long-term care (a) over the last 12 months and (b) in each of the last five years. [77146]

Jacqui Smith: This information is not collected centrally. Through the introduction of the 12 weeks property disregard in April 2001 and the deferred payments scheme in October 2001, people have options to help them avoid having to sell their homes on admission to residential care.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many residential nursing home beds were available in each social service area in England (a) at the latest available date, (b) in October 2001 and (c) in October 1997. [77147]

Jacqui Smith: Information on the number of registered nursing home beds is collated as at 31 March each year.

Data by health authority at 31 March 2001 have been placed in the Library. These data for 2001 were published in a Statistical Bulletin—'Community Care Statistics 2001—Residential Personal Social Services for Adults, England'. This publication is available on the Department's website at http://www.doh.gov.uk/public/sb0129.htm.

Data by health authority at 31 March 1997 have been placed in the Library.

Data for 2002 are not yet available.

Single Mumps Vaccine

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the availability of the single dose mumps vaccine in the UK; [76297]

(2) whether the decision to remove the licence from the single mumps vaccine was taken at a ministerial level; and if he will make a statement. [77094]

Ms Blears: Single mumps vaccine is licensed in the United Kingdom, Mumpsvax, Aventis Pasteur MSD, but the marketing authorisation holder does not manufacture this vaccine for the UK market. The Medicines Control Agency (MCA) has taken no regulatory action against the marketing authorisation for this vaccine and the production and marketing of the vaccine is a matter for the company holding the marketing authorisation.

Importation of unlicensed single mumps vaccine is permitted in accordance with medicines legislation when it is supplied in response to a doctor's prescription, issued on his personal responsibility, to meet the special needs of an individual patient. The MCA will, however, object to importation of an unlicensed mumps vaccine if it has concerns over the safety or quality of the vaccine.

The Government recommend that children are vaccinated with the combined measles, mumps and rubella (MMR) vaccine, as the safest way for parents to protect their children against these potentially very serious diseases, and has never recommended single mumps vaccine to be given routinely in the UK.

Suicide

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to tackle the problem of smoking in prisons. [77997]

Jacqui Smith: Individual prisons and their local national health service partners provide various services to help prisoners stop smoking. The range of services provided is determined locally. The Department is sponsoring pilots in five prisons to evaluate the effectiveness of smoking cessation services for prisoners and the best way of providing them.

TB

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what extra funding and resources he has allocated this year to local primary care trusts which have reported high rates of TB. [78187]

Ms Blears [holding answer 29 October 2002]: An extra £400,000 will be made available this year to target primary care trusts with higher than average tuberculosis levels.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he has offered to local primary care trusts who have high rates of TB to help them combat this disease. [78186]

Ms Blears [holding answer 29 October 2002]: Plans for a national strategic action plan for tuberculosis (TB) have been under discussion this year, and have moved forward more quickly under the auspices of the Chief Medical Officer's strategy "Getting ahead of the Curve" which identified TB as one of the key areas for public health improvement. We have held two national conferences with health care professionals, comments from which will help refine and finalise the TB action plan by the end of this year. This plan will form the framework to be tailored to meet local levels of TB.

Waiting Lists

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons patients awaiting diagnostic tests such as gastrointestinal endoscopy are excluded from national cancer waiting lists published by the NHS. [75770]

Ms Blears: Information is not collected centrally on waiting times for diagnostic tests. Currently published cancer waiting times data include patients urgently referred by their general practitioner (GP) with suspected cancer to first outpatient appointment. This data shows whether a patient was seen in secondary care within two weeks but does not contain information on whether a patient was referred direct for a diagnostic test or for assessment by a specialist. Data are also published on the target of a maximum one-month wait from urgent referral to first treatment for testicular cancer, children's cancers and acute leukaemia. This data will include time for the diagnostic phase but does not contain data on waiting times for individual diagnostic tests. Data is also published on the maximum one-month wait from diagnosis to first treatment for breast cancer. This target measures the waiting time to treatment after the diagnosis has been made. By 2005 there will be a maximum two-month wait from urgent GP referral to first treatment for all cancers.

Written Consultations

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) in what format his Department has published the results of its 2001 written consultations; [69854]

(2) how long the Department allowed for consultation on each consultation document it published in 2001 in (a) electronic and (b) printed form; [70089]

(3) whether consultation documents published by his Department in 2001 carried the consultation criteria as recommended in the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations; [70090]

(4) how many consultation documents published in 2001 in (a) electronic and (b) printed form his Department has monitored and evaluated in accordance with the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations. [69855]

Mr. Lammy: The Department issued 67 consultations in 2001, of which eight had periods given for response of less than 12 weeks. All consultation documents were available in printed form on request, and since March 2001, the results of all consultations have been available on the Department's website.

The Department has since reviewed its arrangements and has circulated guidance to all managers, which has been drawn to the attention of all staff. In addition, all consultations will now automatically be posted on the Cabinet Office website at UK Online.

The Department's consultation co-ordinator is Peter Allanson, Head of Corporate Development, Nursing Directorate.

Public Health Laboratory Service

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what arrangements will be made, and for how long, to ring fence public health laboratory budgets when the service is reorganised to the management of local hospital trusts; [74814]

(2) what transitional funding arrangements will be in place for the Public Health Laboratory Service during its reorganisation. [74809]

Ms Blears: Public Health Laboratory Service (PHLS) laboratories transferring to the national health service will receive funding from the NHS and from the proposed Health Protection Agency for their diagnostic work. Traditionally, some of PHLS's core funding has supported the routine services provided to NHS trusts. In 2003–04, transferring PHLS laboratories will receive payments, to be known as "residual subsidy", to cover this support. For 2004–05 the subsidy will be passed to primary care trusts as part of general allocations, and contracts between NHS trusts will operate on a full cost recovery basis.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

1901 Census Website

Ian Lucas: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the 1901 Census website. [78513]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The 1901 Census website went back online as a test site on 27 August 2002. Up to 21 October over 1.4 million people have visited the site. They have conducted 14 million searches and downloaded 600,000 images of the census pages.

Firefighters' Strike

Mr. Evans: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what preparations she has made to ensure the safety and continuity of service to the public in the event of a firefighters' strike. [77668]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Minister for Local Government (Greenwich and Woolwich) on 28 October 2002, Official Report, column 527W.

Legal Aid

Mr. Drew: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many applications for legal aid have been refused since the new rules were introduced. [77847]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 29 October 2002]: Following the implementation of the Access to Justice Act 2000, which led to the creation of the Community Legal Service on 1 April 2000, 61,921 applications for civil legal representation have been refused up to and including March 2002. However, some of these applications may have gone on to be granted following an appeal.

It is not possible to provide figures for the number of refused applications for legal help as the decision to grant legal help rests with the Legal Services Commission's suppliers.

Recruitment

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much has been spent in recruiting staff to his Department in (a) London and (b) the south east in each year since 1997. [78559]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The table provides the information requested, where it is available.

Mr. Key: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what progress she has made on reorganisation of magistrates' courts in Wiltshire; and if she will make a statement. [72612]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 15 October 2002]: I am still considering the representations made to me by the Wiltshire county council and the Wiltshire Magistrates Committee at a meeting together with the hon. Member for Westbury.

I will write to the hon. Member once I have made my decision on the appeal against the closure of the Courthouses at Trowbridge and Devizes.

TREASURY

Currency Transfers

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what research he has commissioned regarding the transfer of currency across national boundaries using electronic technology; and if he will publish the results of this research; [79100]

(2) what research his Department has commissioned into bank charges for the transfer of currency across national boundaries in the European economic area. [79101]

Ruth Kelly: The Chancellor of the Exchequer has not commissioned any research into bank charges for the transfer of currency across national boundaries in the European economic area or the transfer of currency across national boundaries using electronic technology.

Discretionary Trusts

Pete Wishart: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer how many discretionary trusts there are in the UK. [79353]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested is not available.

Economic Cycle

Mr Howard: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer what assumption his Department has made regarding the end date of the current economic cycle; and if he will make a statement. [78649]

Ruth Kelly: Budget 2002 (HC 592) included an assessment of cyclical developments, in particular on pages 26 and 190 to 193. This assessment will be updated in the forthcoming pre-Budget report.

Economic Growth

Mr. Clappison: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to amend his growth forecasts in line with the recent forecast from the International Monetary Fund. [78836]

Ruth Kelly: The Government will publish an updated forecast for the UK economy in the forthcoming pre-Budget report.

Equitable Life

Mr. Clappison: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his Answer of 22nd October, Official Report, column 220W, on the Penrose inquiry, what criteria have been established in respect of decisions to withhold publication of Lord Penrose's report on legal and commercial grounds; and who will apply such criteria. [78892]

Ruth Kelly: It is our intention to make public as much as possible of the results of the inquiry. The presumption is that this will be the full report. However, much of the information being considered by the inquiry is subject to legal and commercial confidentiality restrictions, and such restrictions may also attach to information included in the report of the inquiry. It will not be possible to determine in advance of receiving the report from Lord Penrose whether any such restrictions prevent the report from being published in full.

Treasury Ministers will decide, on the basis of legal advice, whether it is possible to publish the whole of Lord Penrose's report within the restrictions relating to legal or commercial confidentiality.

Euro

Mr. Clappison: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer what work is being undertaken by his Department in advance of a decision on whether to join the Eurozone; and if he will make a statement. [78883]

Ruth Kelly: The Government has said that it will complete an assessment of the five economic tests within two years of the start of this Parliament. The assessment has not yet started, but the necessary preliminary analysis technical work that is necessary to allow us to undertake the assessment within two years as promised is underway.

As we set out in the "Paper for the Treasury Select Committee on the Treasury's approach to the preliminary and technical work", issued on 6 September, "A number of supporting studies will be published encompassing the preliminary and technical work . . . When the assessment is complete, the detailed supporting studies will be published alongside, all to be subject to intensive public scrutiny and debate." More detail on the supporting studies is given in the 6 September paper.

GDP Estimates

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) for what reason gross domestic product estimates for the countries and regions of the United Kingdom are two years behind United Kingdom gross domestic product estimates; [79325]

(2) when gross domestic product estimates will be made for each country and region of the United Kingdom for 2000; [79324]

(3) what the gross domestic product per capita was of each country and region of the United Kingdom in (a) the most recent year and (b) each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [79323]

Ruth Kelly: The answer requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from L. Cook to Mr. Alex Salmond, dated 4 November 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your three recent questions on

(a) the timing of publication of gross domestic product estimates for the countries and regions of the United Kingdom; (79325)

(b) the date for the publication of estimates of gross domestic product for the countries and regions of the United Kingdom for the year 2000; (79324)

(c) what the gross domestic product per capita was of each country and region of the United Kingdom in (a) the most recent year and (b) each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. (79323)

(a) Currently the latest available estimates for the Gross Value Added (GVA*) for the countries and regions of the United Kingdom are for 1999. This publication lag is longer than usual and has been caused by the ONS completing an exceptionally demanding work programme to include a number of new and revised data sources. This additional work led to a deferral of the publication of estimates of GVA from their planned release date in May 2002 and the reasons for this deferral were covered in a ONS News Release of 21 May 2002.

More usually, estimates of GVA below UK level are published some three to four months after the UK-level estimates are released. One of the main reasons for this delay is to ensure that the sub-UK estimates are consistent with (i.e. add up to) those published in the United Kingdom National Accounts. We plan to meet that goal this year by publishing estimates for the period up to 2001 before the end of 2002.

(b) The ONS announced in the August edition of Updates that Regional Gross Value Added is to be published for the years 2000 and 2001 on 17 December 2002.

(c) The estimates of GVA per head for the countries and regions of the United Kingdom for the period 1989 to 1999, consistent with the National Accounts data published in 2000 are shown in table A.

*While the estimates have been historically referred to as Gross Domestic Product (GDP), under the new European System of Accounts 1995 (ESA95) they are more correctly referred to as Gross Value Added (GVA) at basic prices. From 2002 onwards, the term GVA is being used.

[1] Provisional

National Insurance (Armed Forces)

Mr. Webb: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the periods in the last 30 years where the National Insurance Contributions regime for armed forces personnel were different to those that applied to ordinary employees, listing in each case (a) whether such arrangements were (i) voluntary and (ii) compulsory, (b) what rates of contribution applied, (c) whether separate rules applied to (i) men and (ii) women and (d) what benefits accrued in respect of these contributions. [77867]

Dawn Primarolo: [holding answer 29 October 2002]: Prior to 6 April 1996 serving members of Her Majesty's Forces paid National Insurance contributions at a reduced rate. The contributions paid built up entitlement to all contributory benefits although Contributory Jobseekers Allowance and Incapacity Benefit are not payable to serving members of Her Majesty's Forces. The amount of the reductions, which were compulsory, are shown in the table below.

Savings Ratio

Mr. Clappison: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps his Department is taking to increase the amount per capita that is saved ahead of retirement each year in the UK economy. [78834]

Ruth Kelly: There are a range of policies in place to encourage and enable people to save in pensions. We will publish a Pensions Green Paper later this year.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. McNamara: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer whether a person is eligible for working families tax credit, when reapplying, if their average weekly hours worked falls below the 16 hour threshold as a result of the person taking two weeks' paid leave. [77820]

Dawn Primarolo: If average weekly hours worked fall below the 16 hour threshold, then a person is not eligible to claim WFTC. Where a person has a "recognised cycle of work" then any periods of paid leave are omitted from the calculation of average hours worked.

Where there is no "recognised period of work" then the actual hours worked in the five weeks preceding the date of claim are used to calculate eligibility. Longer periods of time preceding the week of the claim may be looked at if this enables the person's average weekly hours to be determined more accurately.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to simplify the claim form for working families tax credit; and if he will make a statement. [79230]

Ruth Kelly: From April 2003 Working Families' Tax Credit (WFTC), Disabled Person's Tax Credit (DPTC) and Children's Tax Credit will be replaced by Child Tax Credit and Working Tax Credit.

The forms for claiming the current tax credits are being replaced by one new form.

Filling in the form is a one-off exercise to get people into the new system. Renewal forms will include much of the information already provided by the claimant(s), so people will only have to update or confirm their circumstances and report their last year's income, rather than fill in a form starting from scratch.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Civil Relationships Registration

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the progress of her Department's review on registration of civil relationships. [78354]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 31 October 2002]: Civil partnership registration, and associated rights and responsibilities, raise a number of complex issues which have prompted a growing debate within society. The Government are watching this debate with interest.

These issues have potentially significant financial and administrative implications. The Government are now examining the issues in detail. My Department co-ordinates this work across all those Government Departments that have an interest.

The Government cannot determine its response to any proposal for change before the completion of this work.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the United Kingdom's foreign direct investment share of the EU was in 2001; and if she will make a statement. [75123]

Ms Hewitt: Figures for 2001 published in September by the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) confirm the UK's premier position in Europe. The UK had $496,776 million stock of inward investment, second only to the US. I welcome the UNCTAD findings. These reflect the hard work done by My Noble Friend the Minister for Trade and Investment, Invest-UK in British Trade International and the Regional Development Agencies in seeking out inward investment in these more difficult conditions and promoting the UK as a top venue. A recent example of this work is the announcement by the ICT Group of Pennsylvania of plans to open a new customer contact centre in Uxbridge, West London creating over 200 jobs.

Beryllium

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her answer of 22 October, Official Report, column 247W, on beryllium, what written assurances were given in relation to the use of beryllium by the University of Sciences and Technology in Iran. [78876]

Nigel Griffiths: The written assurances that were given in relation to the use of beryllium by the University of Science and Technology were consistent with the model format published on the Department of Trade and Industry's Export Control Organisation website.

The website address is http://www.dti.gov.uk/export.control

Citizens Advice Scotland

Ann McKechin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the recent Quinquennial Review of Citizens Advice Scotland. [79401]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The review, which started in December 2001, was recently completed and the subsequent report produced by our consultants was extremely positive about both CAS and the CAB service in Scotland. The report concluded that CAS is an organisation that represents significant value for money, has seen a radical improvement in its governance and organisation over the last five years and is making a very useful contribution in terms of the modernisation and e-Government agendas.

The review demonstrates that both CAS and the CAB service make a significant and positive contribution to individuals and communities in Scotland and Government in all areas and are performing well. The report gives some useful examples of this contribution.

I am arranging for a comprehensive summary of the report, its findings and recommendations to be made available on the DTI website. Copies of the full report will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Commercial Kiosk Service, Cornwall

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the trials will begin in Cornwall of the new Commercial Kiosk Service; how long the trial is due to last; which companies will be providing the (a) hardware, (b) software and (c) training of staff; and if she will make a statement. [77785]

Mr. Timms: The hon. Member should approach e-Daily, the company behind the proposed commercial kiosk pilots, in order to obtain information about its plans.

The company's address is:

The Lansdowne Building
2 Lansdowne Road
Croydon
Surrey CR9 2ER
(Tel: 07949 189330)

Exhibitions Abroad

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the (a) budget allocation and (b) staff allocation is for the Support at Exhibitions and Seminars Abroad section; and if she will make a statement. [78104]

Ms Hewitt: Trade Partners UK's International Business Schemes run the Support for Exhibitions and Seminars Abroad (SESA) scheme, the Inward Mission scheme and a programme to improve sponsor performance. It has a total budget of £20 million for the financial year 2002/2003 and a staff allocation of 26.5.

Expo 2000

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what costs were incurred relating to the British pavilion at Expo 2000; and if she will make a statement. [75122]

Ms Hewitt: The Government provided £7.5 million to fund the UK pavilion at Expo 2000 in Hanover.

The UK pavilion attracted 2.6 million visitors over five months and took 1,242 trade enquiries. The pavilion itself was designed to have an after-life in the spirit of Expo's theme of sustainability.

Export Development Counsellors

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many export development counsellors recruited from the private sector were in place in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99, (c) 1999–2000 and (d) 2000–01; and if she will make a statement. [78112]

Ms Hewitt: The number of export development counsellors in post is as follows:

1998–99: 87
1999–2000: 83
2000–01: 86

The current number of international trade advisers from the private sector (formerly export development counsellors) in post is 123.

Export Market Information Centre

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the (a) operating costs and (b) number of visits were for the Export Market Information Centre in London is in (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99, (iii) 1999–2000 and (iv) 2000–01; what research of customers took place in each of those years; what costs were incurred by that research; and if she will make a statement. [78103]

Ms Hewitt: Operating costs (including Information Resources) and visitor numbers for the years in question were as follows:

	Approximate costs (000) (Running costs and information resources)	Personal Visitors
1997 to 1998	1,423	24,067
1998 to 1999	1,151	22,597
1999 to 2000	1,298	18,167
2000 to 2001	[1]1,974	12,332

[1] In 2000–01 the Export Market Information Centre was renamed the Trade Partners UK Information Centre and Enquiry Service with the additional role of handling telephone and e-mail enquiries for the organisation. The new unit handled over 36,000 telephone enquiries and 3,000 e-mails in 2000–2001, or a total of 50,000 transactions, the highest figure since 1997–1998.

Customer Surveys were conducted on behalf of the Centre in December 1997, November 1998 and November 1999. The total cost of the three surveys was approximately 60,000.

General Agreement on Trade in Services

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what discussions she has had with the Scottish Executive on the impact of GATS on health services in Scotland; [76658]

(2) what procedures she has put in place to ascertain the views of the health service in Scotland on the possible impact of GATS; [76659]

(3) what discussions she has had with (a) the Scottish Executive and (b) principals and vice chancellors of Scottish universities on the impact of GATS on universities and other institutes of higher education in Scotland. [76670]

Ms Hewitt: Public services (i.e. services supplied in the exercise of governmental authority) such as in health and education are excluded from the GATS. The GATS defines these as services supplied neither on a commercial basis nor in competition with other service suppliers. For services within the scope of the GATS (that is, those supplied by the private sector), countries can choose in which sectors to make, or not make, commitments and any limitations or conditions they wish to impose.

The United Kingdom has already made GATS commitments, allowing foreign companies to provide private services in the UK in the health and education area. The Government have made clear to the House in the past that we will not make further commitments that could call into question our continued ability to maintain public health and education services.

My Department has recently issued a consultation document inviting views on requests for liberalisation of services that we have received in the current round of GATS negotiations. The document was drawn up in close co-operation with the Departments of Health, and Education and Skills, with input from the Scottish Executive and other devolved Administrations. Comments are requested by 3 January 2003. My noble Friend the Minister for Trade and Investment has written to all Members drawing attention to this consultation. The document is available on the DTI website www.dti .gov.uk/worldtrade/service.htm and printed copies are being placed in the Libraries of the House.

DTI and DFES officials are in close contact with universities and higher education institutions and the Scottish Executive is also keeping in touch with Universities Scotland on issues related to GATS.

Government Expenditure

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much of the Government funding of £35.1 million over four years in the 1998–99 publication Trade and Industry; The Government's Expenditure Plans, Sectoral Activities section 1.2 has been (a) allocated and (b) spent; which projects received funding, with the amount allocated per project; which projects were refused funding; and if she will make a statement. [77903]

Ms Hewitt: In May 1997, the Government allocated £35.1 million to the 186 winning bids which resulted from the sector challenge initiative. The budget was derived from both DTI's own funds and contributions from other Government Departments. The winning projects were recommended for support by an independent assessment panel and represented £109.5 million in total budget costs.

The winning bids were judged by their respective bidders to be focused on:

	Percentage
People/skills issues	65
Improving access to markets	64
The better exploitation of technology	55
Improving access to finance	11
Representation at trade fairs	4

To reduce the burden on business, the competition was divided into an outline and a full proposal stage. Some 605 outlines were received by the deadline of 13 November 1996. These were judged by an independent assessment panel against the criteria of impact, strategic fit, relevance, quality of content, partnership, value for money, additionality, financial viability and credibility.

340 bids were encouraged to proceed to the full bid stage and 307 full bids were received. From these, the 186 winners were selected.

Information Society Technologies Programme

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made by the Information Society Technologies programme; what costs have been incurred since its start up broken down by financial year; what the budget allocated was in each financial year; when the programme is due to finish; and if she will make a statement. [78108]

Mr. Timms: The Information Society Technologies programme within the EU's Fifth Framework Programme (FP5)—which finished in June 2002—was allocated a budget of €3.6 billion for the period 1998–2002. This budget, for the purpose of encouraging innovative research, development and demonstration projects in the IST area, has now been exhausted and UK companies, in competition with all other member and associated states, have won over £300 million of financial support (around 14 per cent. of the total disbursed) thereby meeting the target set in the 1998 Competitiveness White Paper to stimulate 'strong UK participation in the EU's Framework programmes'.

The indicative budget allocations for each year of FP5 were:

1999	1.31
2002	0.37

During the lifetime of the Fifth Framework Programme DTI funded the UK/SHELP service to provide a website, helpline, national contact point, literature and programme of promotional events to help UK organisations make successful applications for funding support. The annual cost of providing this service was:

	£000
November 1998 to March 2000	705
April 2000 to March 2001	511
April 2001 to March 2002	539
April 2002 to March 2003	441

Note:
Figures include VAT.

The EU will be launching the Sixth Framework Programme in November 2002. IST will again have a budget of 3.6 billion to cover the period 2002–06. DTI officials are currently considering how best to support UK organisations hoping to access this budget beyond March 2003.

DTI is ensuring that UK organisations have early access to all available information about the development of the FP6—by posting information on the UK/SHELP website (http://www.ukishelp.co.uk), holding information events and undertaking a programme of awareness-raising company visits.

The Libraries of the House have copies of recently written case studies about successful projects in the IST area, funded under previous European programmes, which demonstrate the potential gains ('European Programme Funding—Case Studies in Information Society Technologies').

Iran

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the level of (a) exports to and (b) imports from Iran was in 2001–02; and what steps she is taking to expand this trade. [78306]

Ms Hewitt: UK exports of goods to Iran in 2001 were worth £432 million while imports from Iran were worth £28 million. In the eight-month period from January to August 2002 UK exports of goods amounted to £283 million. UK imports were £26 million.

UK exports of services to Iran in 2001 totalled £126 million, imports from Iran were worth £31 million.

Trade Partners UK, including the commercial team at the embassy in Tehran, offers a strong package of support for British companies wishing to do business with Iran. In addition to providing up to date information on market conditions, they support a programme of trade missions to the market, help British groups attend key trade fairs, organise inward missions and provide targeted assistance to UK companies in key sectors.

Iron and Steel Employees Benefits Scheme

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much was spent on the Iron and Steel Employees Re-adaptation Benefits Scheme in (a) 1998–99, (b) 1999–00 and (c) 2002–01; what the budget is for 2001–02; and if she will make a statement. [78290]

Alan Johnson: The current Iron and Steel Employees Re-adaptation Scheme (ISERBS) was introduced in May 2001 and the following amounts have been paid to eligible redundant steel industry workers:

2002 to2003	[1]8,637,920

[1] by 12 November

of which approximately 45 per cent will be recouped from the European Commission The Government will continue to make ISERBS payments to eligible individuals as necessary.

Payments relating to the earlier ISERBS scheme, terminated in 1994, but under which there was residual commitment to pay a small number of individuals who attained entitlement in 1994 but whose redundancy was delayed, were as follows:

1990 to 2000	103,713
2000 to 2001	NIL

Ironbridge Power Station

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions she has had with PowerGen over the future of coal-fired power stations in England, with particular reference to Ironbridge Power Station. [78753]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary for Trade and Industry has not had any recent discussions with Powergen about the future of Ironbridge or other coal fired powered power stations in England.

Joint Export Promotion Directorate

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) DTI, (b) FCO, (c) other Government Departments, (d) secondees and (e) other staff work within the Joint Export Promotion Directorate; and if she will make a statement. [78113]

Ms Hewitt: The Joint Export Promotion Directorate no longer exists. It is incorporated into British Trade International (BTI) in May 1999. BTI is the joint DTI and FCO body responsible for trade development and promotion of inward investment. The breakdown of staff currently working for British Trade International is as follows:

	Number of staff
DTI (HQ)	704
FCO (HQ)	52
OGD plus Government Office	162
Secondees	75
Overseas in staff years	1,522
UK	161

Process Improvement Master Class

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) financial and (b) other support was provided for the Process Improvement Master Class in (i) 1998–99, (ii) 1999–00 and (iii) 2000–01; what budget there is for 2001–02; and if she will make a statement. [78262]

Ms Hewitt: The Process Improvement Master Class (PIMC) is one of the products offered by the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders Industry Forum, whose remit is to help small and medium enterprises improve their productivity. PIMC was developed for the automotive sector, but has also been used in the aerospace sector.

The amount of financial support provided for PIMC by my Department is shown in the table:

1998–99	1.391
1999–2000	1.613
2000–01	2.298
2001–02	1.317

My Department also provided a secondee, at HEO level, to SMMT Industry Forum over this period.

Productivity Gap

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the progress she is making on putting policies in place to narrow the productivity gap relative to other industrialised countries. [75912]

Ms Hewitt: Following the reviews of my Department's priorities and structure and business support, major changes in the Department took place in April this year geared to focusing policies more effectively on raising the UK's competitiveness and productivity, in particular by focussing on successful businesses, world class science and innovation, and fair markets,

As part of the evidence base used to monitor progress I have also published on 15 October-the "Productivity and competitiveness indicators—update 2002". This publication benchmarks the UK's performance in each of the five drivers of productivity against that of our competitors.

Rural Transfer Advisors

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many rural transfer advisors are in place; what plans she has to increase this number; what their objectives are; who is managing them; and if she will make a statement. [77484]

Mr. Timms: There are currently 31 rural transfer advisers (28 full time equivalent.) They have been appointed by Post Office Limited (POL) to prevent avoidable closures in the rural network. Rural transfer advisers are employees of POL Staffing levels are a matter for POL, dti Department of Trade and Industry

Small Business Service

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Chorley (Mr. Hoyle), of 22 October 2002, Official Report, column 248W, on the Small Business Service, which of the targets to be achieved by 31 October have been met. [78434]

Nigel Griffiths: The SBS launched the "Bridges" community development venture fund early in May 2002.

The six Investment Readiness demonstration projects were under way by September 2002.

A National Start-up Forum has been established and considered an outline Action Plan at its first meeting in September. The forum will consider a final version at its second meeting in November with a view to publication of the Action Plan in December.

The SBS strategy for the years 2003–04 to 2005–06 will be published in November.

Trade Fairs (Promotion)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what programmes she has to promote and disseminate information about forthcoming trade fairs and exhibitions in the UK to potential trade visitors from overseas; and how much such programmes have cost in the past 12 months. [77026]

Ms Hewitt: Trade Partners UK (TPUK) promotes forthcoming trade fairs and exhibitions in the UK through the trade fairs and exhibitions website, which is managed by Exhibition Audience Audit (EAA) and sponsored by TPUK at a cost of £2,025 per quarter (£8,100 per year). The website offers a comprehensive listing of all the consumer, public, industrial and trade exhibitions to be held in major venues around the UK.

The monthly TPUK magazine Overseas Trade, distributed to some 36,000 business readers around the world, includes a page of diary dates with a specific section on UK-based events. The annual budget for the magazine is £240,000.

The TPUK Inward Mission Scheme is another effective way of strengthening UK activity overseas. It enables overseas buyers, journalists and business leaders to visit the UK's trade fairs, exhibitions and individual businesses. The annual cost of this scheme is some £400,000.

TRIPS Implementation

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans the Government have to extend the TRIPS implementation deadlines for all developing countries. [78204]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 30 October 2002]: The TRIPS agreement lays down procedures for extending implementation deadlines for the Least Developed Countries (LDC). The general implementation deadline is 2005 but an extension to 2016 was agreed for pharmaceutical products at the WTO Ministerial Conference in Doha. There is no specific mechanism for extending TRIPS implementation deadlines for all developing countries.

The UK Government work through the EU on issues relating to the TRIPS agreement. The UK Government support the development of objective criteria to form the basis upon which extensions of TRIPS transition periods should be agreed. The UK Government therefore support the introduction into TRIPS of a mechanism for extending transition periods for individual developing countries.

Work Permits (IT Workers)

Martin Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many work permit holders given leave to enter the United Kingdom in (a) 2000 and (b) 2001 were employed in the IT sector; and what proportion of IT workers employed were admitted for the purpose of taking up a job in the sector. [77936]

Beverley Hughes: I have been asked to reply.

The total number of work permits issued in respect of information technology (IT) workers in 2000 and 2001 is 18,257 and 26,870 respectively, of which 12,548 and 15,976 respectively were issued prior to entry to the United Kingdom. Labour Force Survey figures for the total number of people employed in computer services are 500,000 in 2000 and 547,000 in 2001.

Pharmacy Dispensing Contracts

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average value of a pharmacy dispensing contract when traded between owners has been in the last two years. [77239]

Jacqui Smith I have been asked to reply. The information requested is not collected centrally.

CABINET OFFICE

Correspondence

Bob Spink: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will ensure that a reference number and, where appropriate, the name and address of the constituent concerned is given in correspondence with hon. Members from Government Departments. [79040]

Mr. Alexander: The Cabinet Office document "Handling Correspondence from Members of Parliament: Guidance to Departments" sets out the principles Departments should follow when replying to correspondence from MPs. Copies are available in the Libraries of the House.

The format of individual replies is a matter for the Minister concerned.

Focus Group Research

Mr. Graham Allen: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office whether commissions for focus group research by Government Departments are subject to competitive tender. [78415]

Mr. Alexander: Overall procurement policy is a matter for the Office of Government Commerce . I can answer for the practice only in the Cabinet Office, the Government Car and Despatch Agency (GCDA) and the Central Office of Information (COI).

The rules for procuring focus group research are the same as for procuring other types of service. In the Cabinet Office, commissions estimated to cost £10,000 or more are normally subject to formal competitive tendering. Commissions estimated to cost less than £10,000 are normally awarded following receipt of competitive quotations.

The GCDA does not commission focus group research. However the COI does, not on its own behalf but on behalf of its government clients. In such cases COI asks three of its roster of suppliers (appointed competitively under EC procurement rules) to submit proposals and costs; the supplier providing the best value for money proposal is appointed. On occasion, the client requires urgent research and COI appoints the roster supplier that it considers to be the appropriate agency for the work.

Non-governmental Organisations

Mr. Norman Lamb: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what plans he has to receive representations from non-governmental organisations as part of the interdepartmental discussions on Criterion 8 of the Consolidated Criteria relating to sustainable development being facilitated by his Office. [71536]

Ms. Hewitt: I have been asked to reply. I apologise for the delay in replying. The interdepartmental discussions on improving procedures for assessing relevant export licence applications against criterion 8 of the consolidated EU and national arms export licensing criteria have already been completed. The results were published on 31 July 2002, Official Report, columns 309 12W.

TRANSPORT

A21

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the local public exhibition of the revised proposals for improvements to the A21 Tonbridge to Pembury stretch is due to be held. [79413]

Mr. Jamieson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Tim Matthews, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Tim Matthews to Archie Norman, dated 5 November 2002:

David Jamieson has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the exhibition of revised proposals for the improvement of the A21 between Tonbridge and Pembury.

The exhibitions are scheduled to be held on Friday 22 and Saturday 23 November at the Weald of Kent Grammar School for Girls in Tonbridge. We shall be publishing a newsletter in the next few days which will give further details of the proposed on-line improvement and exhibition opening times. I will ensure that a copy is sent to you as soon as it is available.

We are also arranging for a preview of the exhibition for yourself and local councillors which will be at a separate venue to the main exhibition. We will write to you soon with an invitation when arrangements for that venue have been finalised.

Should you need any further details about the proposals, Peter Minshull, the Project Sponsor at the Agency's office at Dorking will be happy to discuss these with you. He can be contacted on 01306 878134.

Air Travel Trust Fund

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 15 January, Official Report, column 208W, what plans he has to introduce legislation to provide powers to impose a levy to recoup the costs of the Air Travel Trust Fund; what action he plans to take to defray their debts; and what contingency plans he has made to deal with the situation following the collapse of a travel company; and if he will make a statement. [78797]

Mr. Jamieson: As my right hon. Friend the Minister for Transport said previously, we will introduce a draft Bill to secure the necessary powers to impose a levy when a suitable legislative opportunity arises. The debts of the Air Travel Trust Fund (ATTF) are currently covered by a commercial loan backed by Government guarantee.

In the event of a collapse of a travel organiser which offers holidays including air travel, the Civil Aviation Authority would, under the terms of the Air Travel Organisers Licence (ATOL) scheme, refund or repatriate those customers affected. The Government would ensure that any subsequent calls on the ATTF would be met.

Bus Passengers

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information is collated by his Department on bus passengers and bus passenger miles travelled in Greater London in each year since 1997; what estimate his Department has made for 2003–04; and if he will make a statement. [79634]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department collects information on the number of bus passenger journeys made each year in Greater London, details are set out as follows:

In addition, the National Travel Survey collects information on the characteristics of bus passengers in Greater London (but excludes foreign tourists) and details of journey purpose and frequency.

Although not collected by the Department, details of the bus passenger satisfaction survey sponsored by Transport for London (TfL) are published by the Department each quarter in "Transport Statistics Bulletin: Bus Quality Indicators: England", which is held in the Libraries of the House.

The Department does not collect or collate information on bus passenger miles travelled in Greater London, although details can be found in the TfL publication, "Transport Statistics for London 2001" (also in the Library).

The Department has not made an estimate of passenger journeys or passenger miles in Greater London for 2003–04, although Transport for London has produced some estimates in its Business Plan available on the TfL web site at:
www.transportforlondon.gov.uk/tfl/reports library business.shtml

Car Number Plates

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action is being taken to tackle illegal car number plate duplication. [79754]

Mr. Jamieson: We are taking active and immediate steps to tackle this difficult problem. The Vehicles (Crime) Act 2001 contains measures to require all number plates suppliers in England and Wales to register with the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA). This requirement will come into force on 1 January 2003 and will ensure that in future number plates are only sold by registered suppliers to a purchaser who can show proof of entitlement to that registration mark and proof of their own identity. Records will be kept of all sales for inspection by police or local authority trading standards officers.

Since September 2001 all number plates issued have had to display the name and postcode of the supplying outlet.

Car Sharing

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to encourage car sharing. [79335]

Mr. Jamieson: In August my Department published and disseminated to all local authorities and other major employers in England a guide on "Making travel plans work: lessons from UK case studies" which highlighted successful car-sharing schemes set up by employers as part of their travel plans. A copy of the guide is in the Library of the House. The Government will shortly be responding to the report commissioned by the Motorists' Forum on car sharing and car clubs in which we will set out our plans for further work to encourage car sharing.

Disused Railway Track Beds

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent in each of the past five years in (a) feasibility studies into the possible re-opening of disused railway lines and (b) re-opening closed lines. [79087]

Mr. Jamieson: Although the Strategic Rail Authority undertakes, from time to time, project development work including feasibility studies, it is not possible to identify readily those elements that relate specifically to the re-opening of railway lines. Feasibility studies are also undertaken by other stakeholders, including local authorities.

Inverness-Gatwick Link

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make a decision on the proposed public service obligation on the Inverness to Gatwick route. [79090]

Mr. Jamieson: [holding answer 4 November 2002]: Officials in the Department for Transport are working closely with colleagues in the Scottish Executive on proposals for public service obligations and other options for safeguarding vital regional air services. The Government will publish their conclusion in due course.

Inverness/London Air Service

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what resources he will allocate to a public service obligation for a regional air service between Inverness and London. [78776]

Mr. Jamieson: The current air services between Inverness and London operate without subsidy.

London Buses

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much investment in London Buses there was in each of the last ten years for which figures are available. [77895]

Mr. Jamieson: Information on investment in London bus services by bus operators is not available centrally, although between July 2000 and June 2002, bus companies operating in London introduced some 2,600 new buses.

Other investment in London Buses is set out in London Transport's Annual Report documents, which incorporate their audited accounts—copies of the accounts are available in the Libraries of the House.

Mr Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what route mileage was served, and how many passengers were carried, on London Buses in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [77896]

Mr. Jamieson: The number of bus passenger journeys and vehicle kilometres in London over the last ten years have been compiled from the Department's annual survey of bus and coach operators and information received from Transport for London (TfL). The figures include journeys on a small number of routes not contracted to TfL.

Year	Passenger journeys million	Vehicle kilometres million
1991 to 1992	1,149	316
1992 to 1993	1,129	330
1993 to 1994	1,117	343
1994 to 1995	1,167	356
1995 to 1996	1,205	353
1996 to 1997	1,242	342
1997 to 1998	1,294	362
1998 to 1999	1,279	358
1999 to 2000	1,307	366

London Underground

Mr Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how much investment there was in the London Underground, and how many passengers were carried, in each of the last ten years for which figures are available; [77894]

(2) what proportion of total investment in London Underground has gone into building the Jubilee line in each of the last ten years. [77899]

Mr. Jamieson: The information requested on overall investment and passenger numbers is set out in London Transport's annual report documents, which incorporate their audited annual accounts.

The following table shows the proportion of overall investment that went into building the Jubilee Line Extension each year:

Year	Percentage Proportion of investment
1992 to 1993	9.2
1993 to 1994	33.2
1994 to 1995	42.6
1995 to 1996	48.8
1996 to 1997	56.4
1997 to 1998	49.5
1998 to 1999	37.7
1999 to 2000	60.3[1]
2000 to 2001	0
2001 to 2002	0

[1] London Transport's accounts for 1999–2000 included an estimated accrual for all Jubilee Line. Extension works to be paid in future years.

National Air Traffic Services

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will make a statement on the state of faults on the UK NATS website; and when the faults will be rectified;[R] [79443]

(2) what representations he has received from UK pilots who have to log onto the Swedish air traffic service in order to obtain UK NOTAM for safety and time critical information owing to faults on the UK NATS website.[R] [79442]

Mr. Jamieson: National Air Traffic Services Ltd. introduced a new on-line information system in late August, replacing the former manual system. The change was made after extensive consultation with users. The new system is intended to provide much wider access to pre-flight information, thereby enhancing safety, but some general aviation users who are accustomed to the manual system have not found it easy to adapt.

The system is provided with back-up facilities and, while—as with most other similar websites—it may be necessary to suspend operation for very short periods, I am assured that the continuity of service will not be significantly compromised.

Rail Freight

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what trials have taken place under the auspices of (a) the Strategic Rail Authority and (b) his Department relating to rail freight since June; what assessment is being made of these trials; when the outcomes of these trials are expected to be published; and if he will place related documentation in the Library; [78815]

(2) what the (a) agreed outputs, (b) type of scheme and (c) timetable for introduction are of the winning scheme under the Strategic Rail Authority's Logistics Competition by (i) Blue Circles Industries, (ii) Excel and (iii) Minimodal; what progress has been made; and what the timetable is for further implementation of the schemes as originally outlined; [78818]

(3) what the involvement of his Department was in the Strategic Rail Authority's Logistics Competition; and when trials of these schemes (a) were due to begin when the winners were announced and (b) will now begin; [78819]

(4) what representations have been received and what assessment has been made by his Department of the Strategic Rail Authority's cargo-sprinter train trials; what representations it has received; and what discussions the Department has held on the subject. [78816]

Mr. Jamieson: The SRA's press release, issued on 13 June 2000, provides a description of each scheme. The agreed outputs of the SRA's Logistics Competition are part of the contracts between the applicants and the SRA signed in January 2001 and are commercially confidential.

The wagons and inter-modal units for the Blue Circle Industries project were delivered this summer, with trials commencing in September. A prototype container was produced in spring 2002 for the Minimodal scheme, with trials taking place during the summer. The first trials of the Exel scheme were completed in July-August 2001 with the second trials completed in spring this year. This project has now been completed and Exel are due to provide a final report for publication by the end of the year. Once published this and the reports of the other two schemes will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

My Department has received a number of representations about the competition and is kept informed on its progress by the SRA, but it has not been involved in the assessment of any of the entries or subsequent trials. The SRA is not assessing the trials, as the aim of the competition was to fund companies to take forward their projects and undertake commercial trials in order to demonstrate the concept to the market.

Rail Services

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much investment there was in the London rail commuter services in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; how many passengers were carried; and how many accidents there were in each of those years. [77897]

Mr. Jamieson: Since many rail investment projects benefit more than one part of the country, it is not possible to provide an accurate regional breakdown of total rail investment. The table shows, for 1992–93 and 1993–94, the amount of public service obligation grant paid to British Rail in respect of its Network SouthEast (NSE) sector; and, for each of the six years from 1996–97 to 2001–02, Government support paid to London & South East (L&SE) train operating companies (TOCs):

1992 to 1993	525
1993 to 1994	372
1996 to 1997	573[1]
1997 to 1998	464
1999 to 2000	271
2000 to 2001	175
2001 to 2002	90

Figures for Government support to L&SE TOCs in 1994–95 and 1995–96 are not readily available.

[1] Support for Passenger Rail Services paid by the Franchising Director to British Rail, and from the point of franchise to private sector franchisees, in respect of L&SE TOCs.

Details of passenger numbers on British Rail's NSE sector in 1992–93 and 1993–94 are not readily available. For details of passenger numbers on L&SE TOCs from 1994–95 onwards, I refer the hon. Member to the latest (September 2002) edition of the Strategic Rail Authority statistics bulletin "National Rail Trends," copies of which are available in the House Library. Table Lib on page 4 shows passenger kilometres, and Table 1.2b on page 7 shows passenger journeys, travelled on those TOCs.

The Health and Safety Executive, the rail safety regulator, produces accident data covering the national network and does not produce data on a regional level. Accident statistics for the national network covering the last ten years are in the annual reports of HSE's railways inspectorate, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents there have been on (a) the London Underground and (b) the London rail commuter services in each of the last ten years for which figures are available. [77898]

Mr. Jamieson: Statistics on accidents on the London Underground and the national rail networks are given in the annual report of HM Chief Inspector of Railways, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Recruitment (Over-50s)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of new recruits to his Department in the past two years were aged 50 and over. [79305]

Mr. Jamieson: The percentage figures for each year for new recruits aged 50 and over in the period requested is as follows for DETR(C) April 2000 to March 2001 and DTLR(C) April 2001 to March 2002.

Period	Percentage
1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001	7.2
1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002	6.5

Secondments

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many individuals have been seconded to senior civil servant positions in his Department, in each case listing (a) from which organisation, (b) duration to date and planned duration of the secondment and (c) source of current salary in the secondment post. [79160]

Mr Jamieson: None.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many senior civil servants are seconded from his Department, in each case listing the (a) location, (b) duration to date and planned duration of the secondment and (c) source of the salary in the secondment post. [79161]

Mr. Jamieson: One member of my Department's senior civil servants has just taken up a six month secondment to the South East England Development Agency.

The Department normally expects the host organisation to cover the salary costs of staff on secondment.

Train Services (Midlands)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent assessment he has made of the reliability and punctuality of train services between Worcester and Birmingham via Droitwich Spa and Hartlebury. [79489]

Mr. Jamieson: The Strategic Rail Authority publish performance statistics for all train operating companies in their quarterly "National Rail Trends" publication. The figures for each operator are not broken down to route level, but reflect the performance of their services in aggregate. The most recent edition was published on 12 September. Copies are available in the Libraries of the House.

Trains (Bicycle Carriage)

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1)how many bicycles were carried by train by each train operating company in each year since 1996. [79672]

(2) how many bicycle spaces were provided on the railways (a) at the latest available date and (b) in 1996; and how many bicycles were carried by train by each train operating company in each year since 1996. [79671]

(3) which train operating companies have increased the number of bicycle spaces on board their rolling stock since 1996. [79673]

Mr. Jamieson: Information on the number of bicycles carried each year is not held. There is no method by which this can be monitored, as passengers with bicycles do not necessarily need a reservation, or in most cases even a ticket because the majority of train operators do not make a charge for the carriage of bicycles.

Transport Plan

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has for his Department's forthcoming report on the Ten Year Transport Plan to include (a) a definition of congestion with benchmark figures and interim targets for its reduction, (b) a commitment for the multi-modal studies to be completed by March 2003 with a plan of action to be agreed within six months of completion, (c) interim targets for delivery of (i) new trunk and (ii) local road improvements to 2006 and (d) a commitment to publish annual progress reports on the implementation of the measures set out in the Plan; and if he will make a statement. [78896]

Mr. Jamieson: The report will include a full up-date on progress towards achieving the objectives set out in the 10 Year Plan.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Members' Access

David Winnick: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, if he will make a statement on the arrangements made to ensure hon. Members have access to the House at all times. [78754]

Mr. Kirkwood [holding answer 4 November 2002]: Hon. Members have access to the House at all times. In recent months additional security measures have been adopted on the advice of the Security Service and the Metropolitan Police. These are designed to enhance protection for all those who use the building, commensurate with current threat assessments. The Serjeant at Arms is available at all times to discuss issues of access and security with hon. Members.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Parliamentary Questions

Miss McIntosh: To ask the President of the Council, pursuant to his answer of 15 November 2001, Official Report, column 871W, if he will make a statement on the printing of answers to questions during the summer recess in a special edition of the Official Report; and what plans he has to repeat the exercise. [79555]

Mr. Robin Cook: The hon. Lady will recall that I welcomed her suggestion that answers normally given by letter during a recess should be printed in a special edition of the Official Report.

I am pleased to report that during the period of the summer recess, the Government answered a total of 1,418 questions, all of which were printed in Hansard for the convenience of all Members of the House.

I propose that, even with September sittings, we should continue this new system. [79555]

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

ADSL

Mr. Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make it her policy to require the regulator to ensure that BT reduces the trigger thresholds for converting telephone exchanges to ADSL. [78760]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 4 November 2002]: The rollout of BTs ADSL services., including deciding on trigger levels for enabling its exchanges to provide these services, forms a commercial decision to be taken by BT, As ADSL is not a service that BT is required by its Licence to provide, Oftel has no power to set the conditions under which BT should enable exchanges.

Both Liberty Broadband (at http:/ Mrww.briiigingbroadband2youco.uk/) and the East of England Development Agency (atttp:// www.broadbandbrokerage.com/bbb/) are also running demand registration schemes.

British Printing Industries Federation

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much financial assistance has been given, broken down by financial year, to the British Printing Industries Federation; what future support they will enjoy; and if she will make a statement. [78309]

Mr. Timms: DTI does not provide direct financial assistance to the British Printing Industries Federation but has worked with this organisation in partnership with other industry members to support initiatives aimed at raising this sectors competitiveness and productivity.

In particular, my Department is currently working closely with the British Printing Industries Federation to take forward actions from "Print 21: coming of age?" the competitiveness study for the print industry, published in summer 2001.

Business Sector (West Midlands)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the business organisations in the West Midlands with which she makes it her policy to consult on matters of relevance to the business sector. [79490]

Alan Johnson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry meets with the chairmen of regional development agencies regularly and consults them on matters of interest to them and businesses in their regions. RDAs (which are business led and have 50 per cent. of members with a business background) have widespread links with businesses in each region and are well placed to reflect the business view.

In addition, the Department of Trade and Industry consults widely on specific issues, most recently on the review of its structure and currently on the Review of Business Support. Organisations consulted—and invited to progress meetings (the West Midlands as in other regions) include the CBI, engineering, Employers Federation, RDA, Business Links, Cambers of Commerce, Learning and Skills Councils, local authorities, universities, local enterprise agencies, trade associations, research and technology organisations and other business support bodies.

Capita

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many industrial tribunals involving Capita have taken place in the last five years. [78807]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 4 November 2002]: In the five-year period up to 30 September 2002 16 cases involving Capita came to a hearing at an Employment Tribunal in Great Britain

Source: Employment Tribunals Service

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the contracts for government work held by Capita. [78808]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 4 November 2002]: Central records indicate that the department currently has one live contract with Capita Business Services, for the administration of the Construction Quality Mark Scheme.

Departmental Recruitment

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been spent in recruiting staff to her Department in (a) London and (b) the south east in each year since 1997. [78558]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 4 November 2002]: Information about the cost of centrally managed recruitment is as follows. It is not possible to distinguish between recruitment in London and in the south east.

Year	£000
1997–98	0
1998–99	136
1999–2000	490
2000–01	397
2001–02	117

Discrimination

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many legal claims of discrimination are estimated to have been made as a result of anti-discrimination regulations introduced since 1997. [78992]

Alan Johnson: Anti-discrimination regulations introduced since 1997 have amended existing legislation on race., sex and disability. Detailed information on which to base estimates of legal claims resulting specifically from such amendments is not available.

Energy Review

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she has received a submission from the Scottish Executive with respect to the Government's review of future energy policy. [76912]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 24 October 2002]: Scottish Ministers have submitted a response to the consultation for the Performance and Innovation Unit's "Energy Review". We understand that they see no need for a further formal response to the Government's current review of energy policy, but Scottish officials are working closely with my officials on Scottish aspects of the review.

International Energy Agency

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the IEA has met to discuss the possible scenarios arising from a conflict in Iraq; who the members of the IEA are; and if she will make a statement. [78289]

Nigel Griffiths: The International Energy Agency regularly discusses oil market issues in the Governing Board and in two committees, the Standing Group on the Oil Market and the Standing Group on Emergency Questions. Scenarios relating to a wide range of global issues, including the Middle East, are a normal part of assessment of oil market developments.

The International Energy Agency has 26 member countries: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Czech Republic, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Korea, Luxembourg, The Netherlands, New Zealand, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States and Norway (Norway participates under a special Agreement). The European Commission also participates in the work of the IEA.

OPCW

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many industrial facilities the OPCW has inspected since its inception; and if she will make a statement. [78111]

Nigel Griffiths: The OPCW has produced figures for the total number of sites it has inspected which fall under the three Schedules in the Chemical Weapons Convention (CWC), or which are characterised as sites producing discrete organic chemicals (DOC). The figures available on the OPCW website are as follows:

	Total number of sites inspected
Schedule 1	34
Schedule 2	181
Schedule 3	91
Discrete organic Chemicals (DOC)	85

Note:
Figures as of 28 October 2002

All Schedule 2 and 3 and DOC sites are industrial, while Schedule 1 sites are mainly defence-related. All the Schedule 1 sites and some of the Schedule 2 sites have been inspected by the OPCW on a number of occasions. The inspections are a routine activity whose purpose is to check that the information which the sites have declared to the OPCW is accurate, and to confirm that the activities carried out at the sites are consistent with the CWC. All OPCW inspections carried out on sites in the United Kingdom have found them to be in compliance with the CWC.

Pharmacy Dispensing Contracts

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she expects to receive the report of the Office of Fair Trading investigation into pharmacy contract limitations. [77261]

Miss Melanie Johnson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry expects to receive the report by the end of the year.

Porton Down and Shivenham

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the OPCW last carried out an inspection at (a) CBD Porton Down and (b) the Royal Military College of Science at Shivenham; if she will place the results in the Library; and if she will make a statement. [78110]

Nigel Griffiths: The OPCW last inspected (a) CBD Porton Down on 28–30 January 2002 and (b) the Royal Military College of Science at Shivenham on 23–25 July 2001. These were routine inspections under the terms of the Chemical Weapons Convention (CWC). The OPCW inspectors confirmed that there were no uncertainties regarding the United Kingdom's compliance with the CWC. My officials will consult the OPCW on whether a summary of their inspectors' findings can be placed in the Library. I will write to the hon. Member to confirm the outcome of these consultations.

Raising Finance Booklets

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the booklets on best practice on raising finance, "Money and Machines" and "Informed Investment in Modern Production Machinery" were reprinted. [78303]

Ms Hewitt: Since publication in 1995 "Money and Machines" has been reprinted on a number of occasions the last comprising a full revision in 1998. "Informed Investment in Modern Manufacturing Equipment" was published in 1998 and has neither been reprinted nor revised.

Regulations

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate her Department has made of the costs to business of the regulations introduced by the Government since May 1997. [79079]

Nigel Griffiths: Estimates of the costs and benefits to business of the regulations introduced since May 1997 are shown in the published regulatory impact assessments, which are in the Libraries of the House.

Telemarketing

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to propose legislation to regulate the use of aggressive telemarketing techniques. [76613]

Mr. Timms: Unsolicited direct marketing by telephone has been subject to regulation in the UK since 1999, and there are also consumer protections if individuals enter into contracts during this kind of call.

The current regulations are the Telecommunications (Data Protection and Privacy) Regulations 19995 which provide that individual subscribers who do not wish to receive this type of call can register with a central list—the Telephone Preference Service (TPS). Direct marketers are obliged to check that they do not call numbers on the TPS list when making unsolicited calls. Direct marketers are also obliged to take account of any requests not to call again that they receive direct from individual subscribers. Further details are available on the DTI website at the following URL:
http://www.dti.gov.uk/cii/regulatory/telecomms/telecommsergulations/ec telecomms data protection.shtml.

There will be an opportunity to review the way these regulations are working when we consult next year on implementation of the new version of the directive on which these regulations are based.

Organisations that market by telephone to individuals must also comply with the Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations 2000 that came into force in October 2000. These regulations require those making unsolicited direct marketing calls to identify clearly the company they represent and the commercial purpose of the call at the beginning of the conversation. They also stipulate that the consumer has the right to receive clear information in advance of any decision to purchase, subsequent written acknowledgement of this information., and a seven-day cooling off period for most contracts agreed at a distance. Further information is available on the DTI website at the following URL: http://www.dti.gov.uk/ccp/topics 1 /ecomm.htm.

Young Enterprise

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what support her Department gives to Young Enterprise. [78481]

Nigel Griffiths: For the current academic year (August-July), the DTI is providing Young Enterprise with approximately £250k of support for their MasterClasses and Grauduate programmes and their Innovation Awards.

Your Guide

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much was spent on the Your Guide project; and if she will make a statement. [77755]

Mr. Timms: The Your Guide pilot in Leicestershire and Rutland cost £30 million. Government provided £25 million and I understand that Post Office Ltd. provided in the region of £5 million.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

AIDS (Africa)

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance she is giving to countries in Africa to help combat AIDS. [78926]

Clare Short: HIV/AIDS is one of the most important development challenges facing Africa. My Department committed over £180 million in HIV and sexual health programmes in Africa in 2001–02. DFID's overall programme in Africa is set to increase from £640 million to £1 billion by 2006, and HIV/AIDS will remain one of our highest priorities for the region.

Internationally, a further US $200 million has been pledged towards the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, TB and Malaria, £16 million to support the Microbicides for HIV Prevention Initiative, and £14 million to the IAVI (the international AIDS Vaccine Initiative). Considerable additional resources have also been committed to the United Nations and to civil society organisations to combat this disease and support those already living with it.

Agricultural Subsidies

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions she has had with her French counterparts regarding the impact of agricultural subsidies on development in poor countries; and what these discussions have achieved. [78669]

Clare Short: In June of this year, I wrote to all my EU counterparts on the subject of reform of the common agricultural policy, emphasising the need for this reform as well as for coherence between the objectives of our development co-operation and our other policies which affect developing countries.

The French Government responded positively, saying that they were in full agreement concerning poverty elimination and sustainable development. However, they indicated that agricultural questions were very complex in France, and that a coherent policy was vital.

In my Department, we are following these matters closely. In July, we took an initiative to invite representatives from all EU Governments to discuss "The Impact of CAP Reform on Developing Countries". These discussions will continue. There was a similar meeting in Bonn last month, which will be followed up with a further meeting in The Hague in January.

Burma

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment her Department has made of (a) the treatment of the Karen in Burma and (b) landmines in the Karen region. [78702]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have been asked to reply.

Ethnic minorities, including the Karen, suffer disproportionately from the human rights abuses carried out by the Burmese regime. Continued fighting between the Burmese army and armed Karen groups, which includes the use of mines by both sides, is the cause of on-going suffering among the ordinary people in Karen State.

HMG provides humanitarian assistance to Burmese refugees and those internally displaced, including the Karen.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions her Department has had with the Government of Burma. [78703]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have been asked to reply.

The European Union ban on high-level contact with Burma and our poor bilateral relationship with the Burmese military regime restrict discussions with the Burmese regime. Contact on important issues does continue. The most recent example of bilateral contact was discussions between embassy officials and Burmese officials regarding the International Code of Conduct against ballistic missile proliferation.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions her Department has had with the UN about human rights violations in Burma. [78704]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have been asked to reply.

We have on-going dialogue with the United Nations Special Rapporteur for Human Rights in Burma and the United Nations Secretary-General's Special Envoy to Burma about human rights abuses in Burma. Together with our European Union partners we annually co-sponsor resolutions on the human rights situation in Burma at both the United Nations General Assembly and the United Nations Commission on Human Rights.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what her Department's response is to the recent UN report into the exploitation of the natural resources of the Democratic Republic of Congo by (a) the Democratic Republic of Congo, (b) Rwanda, (c) Uganda and (d) Zimbabwe. [78674]

Clare Short: We welcome the UN Panel report and are studying its allegations closely both within DFID and with other Departments in Whitehall. We are also considering a substantive response to the report's recommendations.

East Timor

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment her Department has made of the humanitarian situation in East Timor; what financial support her Department provides to East Timor; and which organisations her Department supports that work in East Timor. [78705]

Clare Short: An assessment of the Humanitarian situation in East Timor is included in East Timor's National Development Plan, which was described in my answer to the hon. Member's previous question. Full details of my Department's financial commitments to East Timor between 1999 and 2005 are given in the following table:

Activity	Commitment 1999–2005	Disbursed
United Nations: 1999 ballot	800,000	800,000
Humanitarian and Emergency Relief	6,500,000	6,500,000
United Nations Transitional Administration	4,500,000	4,500,000
United Nations: Support for 2001 Elections	500,000	500,000
World Bank Trust Fund (infrastructure)	8,000,000	8,000,000
Support for Developing the National Development Plan (NDP)	300,000	(
NDP Implementation 2002–05	12,000,000	4,000,000
OXFAM: Human Resource Development	1,890,000	590,000
Civil Society and International NGOs	67,831	25,809
Local Civil Society Organisations	450,000	94,579
UK share of European Commission Expenditure, 1999–2005[1]	19,728,000	14,200,000
Total	54,735,831	39,210,388

[1] Estimated UK attribution at 19 per cent. of EC expenditure in East Timor

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on East Timor since its establishment as an independent sovereign state. [78714]

Clare Short: Newly independent East Timor faces a number of challenges. The Government have prepared an excellent National Development Plan (NDP), which describes how these challenges will be addressed. The new nation, however, lacks the financial and technical resources to implement the Plan. Until revenues from offshore oil and gas exploitation come on stream, expected to be in 2006–07, it will be reliant upon financial and technical support from the international community.

Donors have responded well and the NDP is fully financed for the next three years. It is only five months since independence and too early to judge the impact of the NDP. Initial activities have, however, started and Government, together with donors, will be reviewing progress later this month.

The UK contribution to the international effort on East Timor's development is described in my replies to the hon. Member's other questions on East Timor.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much money her Department is giving to East Timor in 2002–03. [78716]

Clare Short: This year my Department will provide grants worth £6.5 million to East Timor. The bulk of these funds, £4 million, is to help the Government of East Timor implement its National Development Plan. The balance comprises residual commitments to UN and World Bank Trust Funds established before Independence, plus £500,000 to support the activities of international and local Non-Governmental Organisations, including OXFAM.

In addition a proportion of the costs of the European Union assistance programme will be attributed to DFID, but it is too early to determine how much this will be in 2002–03.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment her Department has made of (a) the health situation, (b) the education situation, (c) the employment situation and (d) poverty alleviation in East Timor. [78717]

Clare Short: My Department, alongside the World bank and the United Nations, has provided technical advice to the Government of East Timor to help them develop their National Development Plan (NDP). The plan includes a full analysis of the social and economic challenges facing the new nation, including health, education, employment and poverty, and contains the Government's proposals for addressing these. Donors and the international community have commended East Timor on the quality of the plan.

Donors have pledged sufficient funds to fully implement scheduled NDP activities for the next three years. DFID has contributed £4 million to the NDP this year and expects to contribute a similar amount in each of the next two years.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to meet the Government of East Timor. [78720]

Clare Short: I met the Prime Minister of East Timor, Dr. Alkatiri, on 26 March this year, and Dr. Horta, the Foreign Minister, on 12 June. I have no further plans to meet members of the Government of East Timor in the current year.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions her Department has had with Christian Solidarity Worldwide concerning East Timor. [78971]

Clare Short: My Department has had no discussions with Christian Solidarity Worldwide (CSW), nor have we received any proposals from them. The British embassy in Dili has had informal contacts with CSW.

East Timorese Refugees

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what she is doing about the East Timorese in refugee camps in West Timor. [78718]

Clare Short: My Department has not provided direct support to East Timorese refugees in West Timor. We have, however, provided £4.2 million to the United Nations Conflict Reduction and Prevention Unit, which is available for their programmes with refugees in West Timor.

Election Observers

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what financial support her Department provides to election observers; in which countries; and what guidance her Department issues to election observers. [78664]

Clare Short: DFID supports the electoral process in a number of ways in a number of developing and transition countries. In June 1998, DFID and the FCO published "Elections and the electoral process: a guide to assistance", which is available in the House of Commons Library and on our website.

Our support for election observers is usually provided in partnership with an international organisation such as the European Union or the Commonwealth who have developed their own guidance and training for observers.

Human Rights Projects

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the projects by which her Department promotes (a) the freedom of the press and (b) religious freedom in developing countries. [78671]

Clare Short: The information is as follows:

(a) DFID supports the development of the media in a number of developing and transition countries, and published guidance on developing free and effective media to serve the interests of the poor in July 2001. Copies of "The Media in Governance" are available in the House of Commons Library and on our website. Our support aims to balance strengthening the capacity of the press and media to hold government to account with encouraging the press to meet their responsibilities of objective, constructive reporting.

(b) The objective of my Department is the elimination of poverty. Our central focus is therefore respect for the human rights of the poor. Frequently the poorest are ethnic and religious minorities that face discrimination and social exclusion. Our strategy on human rights is set out in "Realising human rights for poor people" published in October 2000.

Ivory Coast

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the recent ethnic strife in the Ivory Coast against the civilians from northern Daloa; and what discussions her Department has had with the overnment of the Ivory Coast on the subject. [78678]

Clare Short: We are working closely with others in the international community to help bring about a swift and peaceful resolution to the conflict in Cote d'Ivoire. We are aware of the reported attacks on civilians in Daloa. Together with our EU partners, we have called on the Ivorian Government to ensure respect for human rights, in particular with regard to civilian populations, and to bring to justice those responsible for any violations of those rights.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what guidance her Department has provided to her Department's employees working in the Ivory Coast. [78706]

Clare Short: DFID has one employee in Cote d'Ivoire. He is working on secondment at the African Development bank and is, therefore, covered by their security and emergency evacuation procedures. Current bank advice is that non- essential staff and all families be evacuated.

DFID is following the situation closely and we are in daily contact with him. He is also in receipt of the latest Foreign Office travel advice.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which organisations her Department supports that work in the Ivory Coast. [78707]

Clare Short: DFID support to Cote d'Ivoire is channelled primarily through UK contributions to the EC and other multilateral organisations such as the World Bank and UN agencies. Direct assistance to Cote d'Ivoire is limited to financial contributions that we make to the West Africa Rice Development Association (WARDA) in Bouake and a Small Grants Scheme, administered by the British ambassador in Abidjan. Beneficiaries of the scheme are mainly Ivorian NGO's.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment her Department has made of the number of internally displaced people in the Ivory Coast; and what assistance her Department is providing to these people. [78708]

Clare Short: Although DFID has not undertaken its own independent assessment we are in contact with those UN agencies in the field that are monitoring the situation closely. The UK was represented at the UN Emergency Regional Contingency Planning meeting in Accra on 17 and 18 October which was called to discuss the humanitarian position. Their assessment of the likely humanitarian needs is awaited before we consider how the UK will respond.

Uganda

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps her Department is taking to promote multiparty democracy in Uganda. [78663]

Clare Short: We are engaged in frequent dialogue with the Government and Civil Society on a range of initiatives to promote the democratic checks and balances, and the rules-based political competition, that are the key to democratic systems worldwide.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment her Department has made of the recent massacres in Uganda by the Lord's Resistance Army; and what discussions her Department has had with the government of Uganda concerning these massacres. [78677]

Clare Short: We have over many years raised our concerns over the security and humanitarian situation in northern Uganda with President Museveni, both bilaterally and with other EU Missions. We condemn LRA atrocities and recognise the Ugandan Government's need to respond militarily. But we have also encouraged the Ugandan Government to pursue all possible avenues for dialogue.

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action her Department has taken to encourage the establishment of multi-party democracy in Uganda following the passing of the Political Parties and Organisations Act of 2 July. [78986]

Mr. Rammell: I have been asked to reply.

We have for some time been engaged in a regular dialogue with the Government of Uganda on the future shape of the Ugandan political landscape. Since the Political Parties and Organisations Act came into force on 2 June, we have continued to urge President Museveni and senior Ugandan Ministers to allow political parties to develop and organise, so that they are able to participate fully in the 2006 elections.

We are working on a range of initiatives to promote democracy. These form an important element of our development programme in Uganda.

United Nations Environment Programme Report

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether her Department has received a copy of UNEP's Report, Global Environment Outlook 3; and if she will make a statement. [79081]

Clare Short: My Department has received a copy of UNEP's Global Environment Outlook 3. It is a very useful reference document which we will take into account in our own monitoring of global environmental trends and their impact on developing countries. In this context we were pleased by the successful conclusion of the negotiations of the third replenishment of the Global Environment Facility last August. The UK has increased its share in the GEF, and will provide £118 million over the next four years, including a voluntary contribution of £15 million.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Assets Recovery Agency

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will announce the first Director of the Assets Recovery Agency, established under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002. [79537]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: I am pleased to announce the appointment of Jane Earl as Director-designate of the Assets Recovery Agency. I expect that she will take up her appointment as Director in the new year, in time for the Agency to start operations next February.

Asylum Applications (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been paid to the PSNI and RUC, during each of the last three years, in respect of costs incurred in processing asylum applications made in Northern Ireland. [78727]

Beverley Hughes: No payments have been made by the Secretary of State for the Home Department to the Police Service for Northern Ireland (PSNI) and Royal Ulster Constabulary (RUC) in respect of costs incurred in processing asylum applications made in Northern Ireland during the past three years.

Asylum Costs (Dumfries and Galloway)

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been paid to Dumfries and Galloway constabulary in respect of costs incurred in processing asylum applications in each of the last three years. [78499]

Beverley Hughes: The Immigration Service has paid Dumfries and Galloway constabulary the following:

1 April 2000 to 31 March 2000	1,950.97
1 April 2001 to 31 March 2001	2,889.50
1 April 2002 to 31 October 2002	32,437.26

The figures for asylum applications are not available. These figures relate to costs related to dealing with immigration offenders.

Correspondence

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letters of 17 June and 9 September to the hon. Member for Tunbridge Wells regarding Yuriy Urchenko, a constituent. [76664]

Beverley Hughes: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Home Office wrote an interim reply to the hon. Member on 4 October in response to his earlier correspondence. In light of the circumstances of this case, I have asked officials for a full report and I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Drugs Trafficking

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to establish a new crime fighting fund to target the illegal drugs trade; and if he will make a statement. [77497]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth [holding answer 28 October 2002]: The financial provision for the law enforcement authorities includes in 2002–03 £376 million for reducing availability of drugs. There are no plans to establish a separate new fun specifically for the purpose.

In addition to that provision, in 2002–03 £70 million has been made available under the Communities Against Drugs scheme for fighting drugs and drugs related crime and for strengthening communities and a significant proportion of the Recovered Assets Fund of £11.7 million will go towards anti-drugs projects.

Recovered Assets Fund

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many bids were submitted for funding in the second round of the Recovered Assets Fund; how many of these were recommended for funding; how the selection of bids was made; and if he will make a statement on when the next round of bidding will begin. [79536]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: A total of 330 bids were received in round two (compared to 130 in round one) of which 27 (21 in round one) with a total cost of £11.5 million (£3 million in round one) were recommended for funding.

The bids selected for an award of grant were those which were assessed as best able to meet the objectives of the Fund and as far as possible ensured coverage of a wide geographical area.

My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary and I are currently reviewing the future use and operation of the Fund. Future bidding rounds will be dependent on the outcome of the review on which I hope to make an announcement before the end of the year.

Retail Crime

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many incidences of retail crime there were in each of the metropolitan boroughs in the last 12 months for which figures are available; [78138]

(2) how many incidents of (a) shoplifting, (b) armed robbery and (c) assaults in high street shops there were in the past 12 months; [77981]

(3) how many incidents of recorded crime in the last three years have been classed as retail crime, broken down by police force; [77980]

(4) how many cases of violent assault there were against (a) rail workers, (b) benefits agency staff and (c) retail staff in the last 12 months for which figures are available; [77978]

(5) how many instances of violence to retail staff were recorded in the last 12 months for which figures are available; [78134]

(6) what percentage of violent crime was against shop staff in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [78130]

Mr. Denham: Recorded crime statistics do not normally identify the location of offences, or the occupation of victims. The one recorded crime which can be identified as retail crime is theft from a shop, and figures for each police force area for the last three years are given in the table. The figures may have been affected in comparison to the previous year as a result of changes to recording practices. Some police forces implemented the principles of the National Crime Recording Standard (NCRS) in advance of its national implementation on 1 April 2002. This had the estimated effect of uplifting total recorded crime figures by 5 per cent. this year.

Figures on the location of firearms robberies indicate that there were 1,323 robberies in shops in the 2000–01 financial year. This includes offences where air weapons, imitation weapons and unidentified firearms were used.

The Home Office, together with the Department for Trade and Industry (DTI) and Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM), will shortly be undertaking a major cross-Government survey of crime that affects retail and manufacturing premises across England and Wales. More than 3,000 premises will be surveyed in each of these sectors. The survey will collect detailed information on the circumstances of crime against business, levels of concern about crime, the overall social and economic impact of crime on businesses and levels of satisfaction with police response and advice on crime.

[2] There was a boundary change on 1 April 2000 in which some parts of the Metropolitan police area were transferred to Essex, Hertfordshire and Surrey, so that the police force areas followed county boundaries thereafter. The figures for these forces before and after this date are therefore not directly comparable.

Yarl's Wood

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if the events leading up to the outbreak of fire at Yarl's Wood Detention Centre on 14 February, with particular reference to the reasons why sprinklers had not been fitted at the centre, formed part of the inquiry of Stephen Moore into the incident; and if he will make a statement; [79254]

(2) if he will list witnesses interviewed by Stephen Moore in respect of his inquiry into the Yarl's Wood fire of 14 February. [79255]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 4 November 2002]: Information about witnesses interviewed by Stephen Moore will be made available when his report is published.

Stephen Moore's terms of reference require him to inquire into the events at Yarl's Wood Removal Centre on the night of 14–15 February 2002 and their causes and to make recommendations. His terms of reference also require him to take full account of inquiries being undertaken by the Bedfordshire police and the Bedfordshire Fire and Rescue Service, neither of whom has yet concluded their investigations.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the strategy is of coalition forces in Afghanistan; if they will take part in the provision of security beyond Kabul to achieve the ISAF effect; and what involvement in humanitarian activities they will have. [79686]

Mr. Hoon: Our objectives for the campaign against international terrorism, and for our forces in Afghanistan, were set out in the paper entitled "Defeating International Terrorism: Campaign Objectives", a copy of which was placed in the Library of the House of Commons on 16 October 2001. We continue to work towards achieving all these aims. As part of this, we are considering with our coalition partners who we might aid the Islamic Transitional Authority of Afghanistan to stabilize further Afghanistan's regions. No decisions on what that might involve have been taken.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will define the International Security Assistance Force effect outside of Kabul; and if he will make a statement on how it will be created. [798685]

Mr. Hoon: The International Security Assistance Force has helped the Afghan authorities to restore and maintain stability within Kabul. We are considering with our coalition partners how we might help the Islamic Transitional Authority of Afghanistan to stabilize further other areas of Afghanistan, but no decisions have yet been taken.

Fire Service Cover

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many green goddess fire engines will be deployed in the Portsmouth South constituency if the fire brigades union takes action; how many servicemen will man each appliance; from what duties they are to be withdrawn from to provide fire service cover; and if he will make a statement. [78968]

Mr. Ingram: Three green goddess fire engines will be based in Portsmouth. The command structure is designed to ensure flexibility when deploying emergency fire cover, and where necessary resources may be deployed from adjacent areas.

Each green goddess has a crew of six per shift, with two shifts, each of 12 hours, providing 24-hour cover. The personnel involved may be withdrawn from a variety of other duties, depending on changing circumstances.

Gunwharf Site

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether the Ministry of Defence, in setting a figure for the disposal of the Gunwharf and HMS Vernon site in Portsmouth to Barclays Homes, took into account the Portsmouth City Council plan for the development of the site; and if he will make a statement; [78516]

(2) what assessment has been made of the potential value of the redeveloped Gunwharf and HMS Vernon site in Portsmouth against the disposal value; and if he will make a statement; [78514]

(3) whether the Ministry of Defence has reserved the right to claw back money on the Gunwharf and HMS Vernon site in Portsmouth if the development brief is altered to bring about a substantial increase in the value of the site; and if he will make a statement; [78515]

(4) who advised the Ministry of Defence on the potential value of the Gunwharf and HMS Vernon site in Portsmouth; and if he will make a statement. [78512]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

HMS Caroline

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much he has spent on HMS Caroline in each of the past five years. [78357]

Mr. Ingram: The operating and running costs of HMS Caroline for the last five years are as follows:

£ million

Financial year	Operating costs (e.g. pay, travel and subsistence)	Maintenance costs
2002–03 (to date)	0.684	0.062
2001–02	1.355	0.080
2000–01	1.230	0.004
1999–2000	1.116	0.034
1998–99	1.013	0.029
Total	5.398	0.209

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library the dossier containing the history of HMS Caroline. [78358]

Mr. Ingram: I have placed a brief history of HMS Caroline in the Library of the House.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Department's use of HMS Caroline. [78359]

Mr. Ingram: HMS Caroline served as the Headquarters of the Ulster Division of the Royal Naval Reserve since 1924 and latterly has been designated as the Reserve Training Centre. She is expected to continue in her present role for the foreseeable future.

Inflatable Tanks

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many inflatable tanks have been (a) stolen and (b) lost in each year since 1991; what the replacement value is of each lost tank; and what steps he has taken to improve protection measures for inflatable tanks. [78653]

Dr. Moonie: There are no records of this type before 1997. Only one tank has been lost since then, on 28 October 2002 due to very high winds, which exceeded tolerances recommended by the manufacturers. These tolerances will be re-emphasised to personnel but protection measures are otherwise considered adequate.

The replacement cost of a single inflatable tank depends upon the model and its accessories and can vary from £8,000 to £14,000.

Iraq

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions (a) his Department and (b) the relevant military authorities at the British embassy in Washington DC had with the US Congressional Budget Office in preparation of the report of 30 September for the Chairman of the US Senate Committee on the Budget, with specific reference to the Report's estimate of UK force involvement. [78799]

Mr. Hoon: There have been no such discussions with the Congressional Budget Office.

Military Airspace

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of UK airspace is reserved for use by exclusively military aircraft. [78724]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

There is no part of UK airspace reserved for the exclusive use of military aircraft. There are some danger areas, primarily firing ranges, where entry is prohibited to all aircraft, civil and military. The airspace affected amounts to approximately 0.015 per cent. of UK airspace. There are other danger areas where access is permitted under certain conditions, amounting to a further 0.83 per cent. of UK airspace.

Missing Weaponry

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many issued (a) rifles, (b) handguns and (c) bullets were unaccounted for at each barracks in each month in Northern Ireland in the last year; what quantity of each was subsequently recovered outside the barracks from which they were taken; and what disciplinary and criminal actions were taken as a result. [78793]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Nuclear Installations

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence with reference to paragraph 27, page 11 of the Government Response to the Defence Select Committee report on Defence and Security in the UK, HC 1230, with which authorities outside his Department he has had discussions in respect of the major programme of activities to reduce the vulnerabilities and strengthen the arrangements for consequence management at nuclear installations. [78654]

Mr. Ingram: The Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) is responsible for security at nuclear sites. Discussions have taken place with several other Government Departments, including the DTI, Home Office, Cabinet Office, Department for Transport, Office for Civil Nuclear Security, and the Health and Safety Executive, together with local authorities, the police and other emergency services, to review the protection of nuclear installations and arrangements for responding to an incident at any such site.

Operation Amber Fox

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the Government's policy is on the EU taking over operation Amber Fox without signing a prior accord with NATO. [79551]

Mr. Ingram: The Government's policy remains, as was agreed by EU nations at the European Council at Seville, that the EU is willing to undertake an operation in Macedonia in succession to operation Amber Fox, at the request of the Macedonian Government, once the EU-NATO permanent arrangements are in place.

Renegade Aircraft

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is in respect of the interception of aircraft assumed to be hijacked entering UK airspace in the London area. [78598]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 4 November 2002]: The Ministry of Defence has an established and well-practised air defence capability. This mechanism is ready to detect, deter and as a last resort if necessary destroy any aircraft intending to attack any target within the United Kingdom.

Sea Harriers

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated saving that his Department will make as a result of the early withdrawal of the Sea Harriers in 2006, from the time of their withdrawal up to the introduction of the F35. [77934]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave on 16 April 2002, Official Report, columns 821–22W, and 29 April 2002, Official Report, column 529W, to the hon. Member for North Essex (Mr. Jenkin). Savings in years subsequent to these answers are outside the Ministry of Defence's short-term planning (STP) period, and are, therefore, not definitive. However, they will be commensurate in value with those in the answers previously provided.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

"Education at a Glance"

Mr. Nick Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the conclusion in the OECD Report, Education at a Glance: Indicators 2002, relating to (a) the impact on school lessons of noise and disorder and (b) boredom among 15 year olds with lessons. [79433]

Mr. Miliband: The OECD report gives a positive overall picture of UK pupils' engagement with school, with above-average scores against a series of measures. Noise and disorder were perceived as problems by 3 percentage points fewer pupils in the UK than the average across other OECD countries, boredom with school by 6 percentage points more.

These figures relate to the year 2000. We believe good teaching and a good curriculum are the best ways to engage and motivate pupils. We have introduced a wide range of strategies to improve teaching and learning, including our widely- acclaimed Literacy and Numeracy Strategies. Since September 2001 we have been implementing our new strategy to improve the attainment of 14 year olds (the Key Stage 3 Strategy). There have already been major improvements: OFSTED now rate nearly 70 per cent. of lessons as good compared with 40 per cent. five years ago. We are also making it a top priority to tackle problems of bad behaviour, including a 50 million.

Behaviour Improvement Programme from September this year to provide intensive support for schools facing the most challenging behaviour.

A-Level Students

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students left the A-level system one year into the course in each academic year since that ending in 1997. [79071]

Mr. Miliband: Currently the only source of individual level data that allows the tracking of young people following the A level route is the Youth Cohort Study (YCS). The latest estimates from the YCS show that 9 per cent. of young people studying A levels in year 12 in spring 2000, were no longer studying them in winter 2000–01 (year 13). Comparable data on A level students in the years 1997–99 are not available.

The Pupil Level Annual School Census (PLASC) was introduced in 2002 for maintained schools in England. PLASC will be able to provide information on the number of students in school sixth forms who leave the A level system after a single year of study from 2003 onwards.

Beacon Schools

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the planned development of the beacon school programme over the next five years. [79250]

Mr. Miliband: The new advanced school programme that will be introduced in April 2003 will replace the beacon model in the secondary sector. There are no plans at present to make changes to the programme in the primary, special or nursery sectors, but we are undertaking a review of the programme to ensure that it continues to offer the most effective means of delivering our objectives.

Child Care

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many child care places have been created through the Neighbourhood Nurseries Initiative; how many of these offer subsidised child care; and at what level of subsidy these places are being offered over what period. [78592]

Maria Eagle: By June 2002, 1,000 Neighbourhood nursery places had been created and an additional 38,000 places are currently under development. Providers can receive funding of up to £5,400 per place over three years to make places affordable to parents in disadvantaged areas, as providers move towards sustainability in the long term.

Parents who receive working families tax credit can also receive help towards child care through the child care tax credit.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of lone parents exclusively (a) use registered child care services and (b) rely on informal child care in Portsmouth, South; and if he will make a statement. [78966]

Maria Eagle: The latest survey carried out by the National Centre for Social Research on behalf of DfES shows that in England, 29 per cent. of all lone parents had used formal child care in the past year and 73 per cent. of all lone parents had used informal child care in the past year. There is no information on exclusive usage or use of registered child care services. The study "Repeat Study of Parents Demand for Childcare" was published by the DfES in May 2002. This data is unavailable at constituency level.

Children's Centres, Battersea

Martin Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) when he will introduce children's centres to the most disadvantaged areas in England; and what plans he has to open children's centres for disadvantaged families in Battersea; [76610]

(2) what investment is being made to enable disadvantaged families in Battersea to benefit from Sure Start style services available to those in the existing Sure Start catchment area in Battersea. [76609]

Maria Eagle: The Government's recent spending review resulted in a significant increase in the combined budget for child care, early years and Sure Start, rising to £1.5 billion in 2005–06. The extra investment will support the integration of good quality child care with early years education, family support and health services through the creation of children's centres in disadvantaged areas, building on the good practice that exists in Sure Start and Early Excellence Centres. By March 2006, an additional 300,000 children and their parents will have access to health, education and other services through children's centres. Announcements about the location of children's centres will be made in due course.

City Academies

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many City Academies have (a) been set up and (b) been committed to be set up; and who the sponsors of each Academy are. [78767]

Mr. Miliband: Three Academies opened in September 2002. These are The Business Academy, Bexley sponsored by David Garrard, Greig City Academy in Haringey sponsored by the Greig Trust and the Church of England and Unity City Academy in Middlesbrough sponsored by Amey plc. 20 Academy partnerships are working to establish Academies. Five of these have funding agreements which are legal contracts to establish an Academy.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether existing schools may apply to become City Academies if suitable sponsors can be found. [78768]

Mr. Miliband: Existing schools may express an interest in becoming Academies. We expect Academies to be set up with the active support of the relevant LEA. For community schools, the LEA would need to publish statutory closure notices in order for an Academy to be established in place of the existing school.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what powers exist for the creation of city academies on a federated basis, by grouping schools under a common governing body. [78771]

Mr. Miliband: Under section 482 of the Education Act 1996 the Secretary of State has powers to enter funding agreements with any person to establish an academy. This power is wide enough to allow funding of a group of academies with a single governing body which could be known as an academy federation. This is not connected with the powers under section 24 of the Education Act 2002, which allow maintained schools to form federations. Section 24 applies only to maintained schools not to academies.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether initial discussions about the setting up of a city academy have begun between his Department, the City of Newcastle upon Tyne LEA and potential sponsors. [78809]

Mr. Miliband: Discussions take place regularly between officials and local education authorities about the scope for academies to play a part in their strategic plans for education. Officials have held such discussions with Newcastle upon Tyne LEA. There has been no formal approach from a partnership, of a sponsor and the local education authority, for an academy in the City of Newcastle area.

Cognitive Ability Tests

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) if he will list the secondary schools in West Sussex which conduct cognitive ability tests in year 7; [79434]

(2) how many secondary schools in England and Wales conduct cognitive ability tests in year. [79438]

Mr. Miliband: Cognitive ability tests for year 7 are commercial tests produced by the National Foundation for Educational Research (NFER) Nelson which schools can purchase if they wish. As such the department has no records of their usage on an individual school, local education authority or national basis.

Departmental Circulars

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the circular documents that were sent by his Department to (a) primary schools, (b) city technology colleges, (c) other secondary schools and (d) special schools between (i) 1 September and 30 September and (ii) 1 September 2001 and 31 August 2002. [76779]

Mr. Miliband: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries.

Departmental Job Vacancies

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many job vacancies there were at (a) administrative assistant or equivalent, (b) administrative officer or equivalent, (c) administrative executive officer, (d) higher executive officer, (e) senior executive officer, (f) grade 7 principal and (g) positions above grade 7 level in her Department for jobs located in (i) London and (ii) the south east between 1 April 2001 and 31 March; and what is the total employment for each Civil Service grade. [76565]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 28 October 2002]: Information on vacancies in London and the south east region between 9 June 2001 (when this Department was established) and 31 March 2002, and numbers of DfES staff in London and the south east region at 1 April 2002, is set out in the table:

Responsibility level	London region vacancies[1]	London region total staff[2]	SE region vacancies[1]	SE region total staff[2]
Grade 6 and above	10	127	0	3
Grade 7	10	286	3	12
Senior Executive Officer	15	217	2	8
Higher Executive Officer	43	570	2	31
Executive Officer	147	500	2	19
Administrative Officer	64	322	0	4
Administrative Assistant	0	76	0	0
Total non industrial staff	289	2,098	9	77

[1] 9 June 2001 to 31 March 2002.
[2] 1 April 2002.

Education Funding

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will calculate (a) the amount spent per pupil on primary and secondary education by Cheshire county council and (b) average amount spent per pupil on primary and secondary education by local authorities in England in the last financial year for which figures are available; what assessment he has made of the effect of the comparison of the resultant figures on educational provision in Cheshire; and if he will make a statement. [79275]

Mr. Miliband: The requested information is as follows:

(a) Net current expenditure per pupil in Cheshire

Primary	2,310
Secondary	2,920
Both	2,580

(b) Net current expenditure per pupil in England

Primary	2,440
Secondary	3,060
Both	2,710

All figures in cash terms and rounded to the nearest 10.

The data have been taken from Cheshire education authority's section 52 Outturn statement for the 2000–01 financial year. Variations in spending per pupil between authorities reflect higher area costs and greater incidence of deprivation in some areas. The Government will be announcing later this year the outcome of its review of formula funding for local authorities.

English as an Additional Language

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance he has issued to schools on teaching English as an additional language. [77802]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 30 October 2002]: The general consensus among practitioners in England is that the teaching of English as an additional language (EAL) is most effective where it is firmly embedded in classroom practice across all national curriculum subject areas. This ensures that pupils have the opportunity to learn English in a meaningful subject specific context. That approach is reflected in the guidance issued by the Department on teaching EAL as part of the national strategies on literacy, numeracy and Key Stage 3. Many schools use the resources provided through the Department's £154 million Ethnic Minority Achievement Grant (EMAG) programme to provide additional tailored support for bilingual learners.

Full-time Students

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of (a) pupils achieved five GCSEs or more grades A*-C and (b) 17 year olds were in full-time education in each region in each year since 1995. [78555]

Mr. Miliband: The information requested is shown in the tables.

(a) Percentage of 15-year-olds achieving five or more GCSE grades A-C or GNVQ equivalent in maintained schools in England, 1995–2001*

Region	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001

England (all schools including independent schools)	43.5	44.5	45.1	46.3	47.9	49.2	50.0

Participation estimates are produced using the academic age of the student (age as at 31 August). Therefore, the estimates for both 16-year-olds (the first post-compulsory year) and 17-years-olds are included. The figures are taken from the latest Statistical Bulletin, "Participation in Education and Training by Young People Aged 16 and 17 in Each Local Area and Region, England".

Individual Learning Accounts

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he will make a statement on the successor scheme to individual learning accounts. [79452]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In June 2003 following the completion of our review of adult learning and as an integral part of our groundbreaking National Skills Strategy and delivery plan.

LEA Directors

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance he gives to directors of local education authorities about the use of their powers to call informal meetings of school governing bodies. [78770]

Mr. Miliband: Directors of local education authorities have no powers to call meetings of school governing bodies, but may invite governors, either individually or collectively, to meet them. Paragraphs 24 to 32 of the Code of Practice on Local Education Authority-School Relations (issued in February 2001) give authorities guidance on their role in monitoring and supporting schools causing concern.

Newcastle Local Education Authority

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the Standards and Effectiveness Unit were satisfied by 1 October that the City of Newcastle Local Education Authority had a strategy for closing the gap between its GCSE target and the aggregated schools GCSE target; and if he will place the plans for targeting challenge and support for schools in the Library. [78766]

Mr. Miliband: Newcastle local education authority (LEA) has submitted information about their strategy for meeting the LEA's targets for pupil attainment in GCSE/GNVQ. Education advisers from the Department's Standards and Effectiveness Unit are meeting all local education authorities during the course of November and December to take stock of progress towards their 2004 targets. The authority's strategy for meeting its GCSE targets will be one of the issues discussed at the meeting with Newcastle.

School Governors

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will place the guidance on (a) the conduct of school governor elections and (b) handling complaints about such elections in the Library. [78764]

Mr. Miliband: School governor election procedures and associated complaints are determined locally by the appropriate authority, as set out in the Education (School Government) (England) Regulations 1999, Schedule 4, a copy of which is held in the Library.

In relation to a community, community special or voluntary controlled school, the local education authority is the appropriate authority. In relation to a voluntary aided, foundation or foundation special school, the governing body is the appropriate authority.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what (a) number and (b) percentage of school governor vacancies in each category of governor there were in each local education authority in Tyne and Wear in the last three years. [78769]

Mr. Miliband: Information on the number and percentage of governor vacancies in LEAs is not routinely collected by the Department. Individual LEAs may collect their own information.

Schools (Newcastle upon Tyne)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the schools in Newcastle upon Tyne that benefited from a special DfES grant in January 2002 for extra (a) classroom assistants and (b) headteacher support. [78765]

Mr. Miliband: On 4 January 2002 my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Education and Skills announced the Transforming the School Workforce Pathfinder Project—which is working with 32 schools to explore new ways of working to free teachers to teach and raise standards in the classroom. The project includes funding for additional support staff and training for headteachers.

No school from Newcastle upon Tyne is participating in the project, although Forest Hall Primary School in neighbouring North Tyneside is one of the pathfinder schools.

The project runs until July 2003 and the lessons learnt will be shared nationally.

Schools (Stoke-on-Trent)

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funds were made available for (a) new school building and (b) schools refurbishment in Stoke-on-Trent in each year since 1992. [79091]

Mr. Miliband: We do not hold information on the amount of capital investment for new school buildings. The following table provides information on capital allocations for new pupil places, and New Deal for Schools (NDS) funding to address the needs of school buildings in Stoke-on-Trent, since 1997–98, the earliest year for which data is readily available.

Capital allocations Stoke-on-Trent

[2] NDS windfall tax funding (1997–98 to 2000–01), NDS Condition (2001–02 and 2002–03), Modernisation (2002–03) and Devolved formula capital grant (2000–01 to 2002–03) allocated to LEA and Voluntary Aided schools

[3] Includes £93million PFI contract involving all schools in Stoke-on-Trent, work to be completed in 2005.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Civil Service Secondments

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many individuals have been seconded to senior civil servant positions in her Department, in each case listing (a) from which organisation, (b) the duration to date and planned duration of conference and (c) source of current salary in secondment post. [78980]

Dr. Howells: There are currently no individuals seconded to senior civil servant positions in the Department of Culture, Media and Sport.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many senior civil servants are seconded from her Department, broken down by (a) location, (b) duration to date and planned duration of secondment and (c) source of current salary in secondment post. [78983]

Dr. Howells: There are current two senior civil servants seconded from the Department and their details are in the following table:

Location	Duration to date months	Planned duration months	Source of current salary
London Arts	10	15	London Arts
Broadcasting Standards Commission	16	18

Cornish Language

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will recognise the Cornish language under the European Charter for Minority and Regional Languages. [77398]

Mr. MacShane: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend, the Minister for Local Government and the Regions today (UIN 79871).

European City of Culture

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the decision will be made on the choice of European City of Culture; and if she will make a statement on the method by which it will be chosen. [78360]

Dr. Howells: The UK's nomination of European Capital of Culture 2008 will be announced in Spring 2003.

Twelve UK cities submitted bids and on 30 October my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced a shortlist of six to go forward for further consideration. This shortlist was recommended to me by the independent Advisory Panel, chaired by Sir Jeremy Isaacs, which my right hon. Friend appointed earlier this to assess the bids against the criteria laid down by the EU and the Government.

The Advisory Panel will undertake a further and more intensive programme of assessment of the remaining bids over the coming months, to identify an overall recommendation for the UK's nomination.

Interdepartmental Group on Sport

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the membership is of the Interdepartmental Group on Sport; what actions have arisen out of the meetings of the group; and if she will place a copy of the minutes in the Library. [79222]

Dr. Howells: The Interdepartmental Group on Sport brings together the Minister for Sport and Ministers and officials from other Departments and related bodies with an interest in sporting issues. The last meeting included representatives from:

Department for Culture, Media and Sport

Department for Education and Skills

Department of Health

Department for Transport

Sport England

New Opportunities Fund

Office of the Deputy Prime Minister

Policy and Innovation Unit

Home Office

BBC.

As I said in my written answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Brent, North (Mr. Gardiner) of 18 June 2002, Official Report, column 275W, the group was set up with the intention that those attending could discuss issues and ideas in an informal way, and in the knowledge that any contributions would remain confidential. It would not therefore be appropriate to reveal details of the discussions or to publish the minutes.

Lottery (Scottish ex-servicemen)

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many awards have been made by the National Lottery to ex-servicemen's organisations in Scotland, in each of the last five years; and what the total amount awarded was in each of those years. [78739]

Dr. Howells: The Community Fund awarded 17 grants totalling £41,150 to ex-servicemen's organisations in Scotland over the past five years. The following2 table lists the number of grants and amount awarded for each of the five years.

Year	Number of grants made	Amount awarded (£)
1998	2	3,513
2000	6	14,164
2001	2	9,110
Total	17	41,150

Parliamentary Channel

Jim Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her policy is on when free to air digital services should include video provision for the Parliamentary Channel. [77466]

Dr. Howells: Since the launch of digital terrestrial television it has been possible to offer only an audio service for BBC Parliament. In its bid to the Independent Television Commission for the former ITV digital multiplex B, and in its subsequent application for a digital programme service licence, the BBC proposed to enhance this service by offering BBC Parliament in video on quarter screen. This arrangement allows the BBC to offer explanatory text simultaneously on screen in addition to the video service and to provide more services on the digital terrestrial platform. With the launch of Freeview this service will now be widely available.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many recipients of severe disablement allowance aged under 20 years on 16 April 2001 have been automatically transferred to incapacity benefit; and how many of these are estimated to have previously claimed (a) free prescriptions, (b) free dental treatment, (c) free eye tests, (d) other healthcare benefits and (e) other passported benefits. [78330]

Maria Eagle: We reformed Severe Disablement Allowance (SDA) in order to provide more support to young people disabled early in life who have never had the opportunity to work. 20,800[1] SDA recipients aged under 20 years on 6 April 2001 were automatically transferred to long-term Incapacity Benefit (IB) in April 2002, making them up to £28.10 per week better off.

Depending on their circumstances, young disabled people receiving IB will still be able to qualify for help with NHS charges (for example, prescriptions, dental treatment, sight tests, money-off vouchers for glasses, wigs, fabric supports and help with the cost of travel to hospital for NHS treatment) on the grounds of low income. We recognise that some will no longer have automatic entitlement to this help but many in this group will already be considerably better off as a result of the changes we have introduced and it would be unfair to treat these people differently to other IB recipients.

Truancy

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment the Government has made of the consequences of withholding child benefit if parents do not co-operate in preventing truancy. [78692]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government are continuing to assess a number of measures related to anti-social behaviour, including actions to deter truancy. Once that assessment has been completed, the Government will come forward with proposals in the usual way.

Mr. Paul Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he plans to publish the proposed Green Paper on pensions. [76092]

Mr. McCartney: The Government will publish a Green Paper on pensions policy later in the year.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) couple families with children and (b) one-parent families will be passported to the Sure Start Maternity Grant under the new tax credit scheme. [77270]

Maria Eagle: It is estimated that there will be around 250,000 awards of the Sure Start Maternity Grant in 2003–04 under the new rules. This compares with 201,000 in 2001–02. Around 25,000 of the additional successful claims will be due to the link to the new tax credits.

Information on eligibility by family type is not available.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many benefit fraud investigators were employed (a) directly by his Department, and (b) by agencies responsible to his Department in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [63682]

Malcolm Wicks: The overall aim of the Department's anti-fraud strategy is to have a benefit system which is secure from first claim to final payment. The implementation of this strategy means than an anti-fraud focus is integral to the work of all staff in the Department, as is dealing with the wider agenda of error and incorrectness in benefit payments.

The information currently available suggests that, throughout the period, around 5,000 staff have been employed by the Department and its agencies in work to investigate suspicions of fraud. However, taking account of changes in data collection measures over time and the integration of investigators more fully with front-line staff, it is clear to me we need to improve the validity and comparability of year-on-year comparisons, and I have asked the Department to undertake further work on this. I have concluded that it is not possible to make valid comparisons between figures year-on-year.

I have therefore asked the Department to undertake a review to improve the consistency of centrally collected information for the future.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his answer of 30 October 2002, Official Report, c. 874W, on incentive payments for postmasters who report suspected benefit fraud, how many payments of (a) £10 and (b) £25 were made in each of the last three years. [79556]

Malcolm Wicks: The information requested is in the table. The number of rewards has reduced as a result of the introduction of the Order Book Control System (OBCS). This is an electronic system that uses barcode scanning to alert a Post Office clerk that the order book presented to them has been reported lost, stolen or recalled. The order book is then impounded by the Post Office clerk. A reward would not normally be payable for order books impounded through the use of the OBCS. National rollout of the OBCS began in March 2000 and more than 99 per cent. of Post Offices were using the system by December 2001.

	Number of £10 rewards	Number of £25 rewards
1999–2000	46,314	16
2000–01	27,669	13
2001–02	17,982	59

Benefit Payments

Mr Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what steps are being taken to help pensioners in rural areas without banks adjust to the move to benefits being paid to banks and building societies; [76949]

(2) how pensioners in rural areas without bank or building society accounts will be able to access pensions in January 2003. [77091]

Malcolm Wicks: Around 90 per cent of pensioners already have access to a suitable bank account.

The Post Office currently have arrangements with a number of banks to allow customers to access their accounts at Post Office branches. This has already enabled banking to return to those rural areas, which have not had bank branches for some years.

These arrangements will be complemented with the introduction of universal banking services. This will help ensure that benefit and pension customers, who wish to do so, can continue to access their benefits in cash at the Post Office. Universal banking services will consist of two elements: access to basic bank accounts and the Post Office card account. This means that those people who want to open an account should be able to do so, including those in rural areas who might not previously have had access to banking facilities.

Our information campaign will take customers through the changes, including getting their money from their account at the Post Office. Customers will be supplied with information, which clearly sets out their "account options" and enables them to decide which account is right for them. The changes in how benefits are paid will be phased in over a two-year period. Customers do not need to take any action until they receive a letter about the change. Until then they can keep their order book or giro.

Although we will start to contact some pensioners in January to prepare for the change, no-one will need to change their method of payment until April at the earliest.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many families will lose entitlement to (a) income support and (b) income-based jobseeker's allowance as a result of the introduction of child tax credit; and what estimate he has made of the average income of those families affected. [77273]

Malcolm Wicks: All families who move from Income Support or Jobseeker's Allowance to Child Tax Credit only will be entitled to the maximum amount of Child Tax Credit up to an annual household income of £13,230. These families can therefore gain considerably from the introduction of the Child Tax Credit.

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his answer of 15 October 2002, Official Report, c. 634–35W, on benefit payments, how the figures quoted relate to his Department's PSA target on the proportion of parents with care on income support and income-based jobseeker's allowance who receive maintenance for their children; and if he will make a statement. [78075]

Malcolm Wicks: The figures are consistent with one another. The figures given in the answer of 15 October 2002, Official Report, c. 635W, on Child Support maintenance, are based on aggregates of:

(a) for 1997, figures, for both total number of parents with care in receipt of the relevant benefit and the number of such parents with care receiving maintenance, for Income Support, income-based Jobseekers Allowance, Family Credit and Disability Working Allowance;

(b) for 2002, figures, for both total number of parents with care in receipt of the relevant benefit and the number of such parents with care receiving maintenance, for Income Support, income-based Jobseekers Allowance and Working Families Tax Credit.

The Department's Public Services Agreement target refers only to clients who are receipt of Income Support.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if benefit and tax credit recipients who opt to receive payment via a Universal Bank basic account will be able to access their money over the counter at any post office branch. [78553]

Malcolm Wicks: Universal banking services will consist of two elements: access to basic bank accounts at Post Office branches and the Post Office card account. Benefit and tax credit recipients who choose to use universal banking services to access their money will be able to do so at all Post Office branches.

Benefits Agency Staff

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff were employed in the Benefits Agency in the last year for which figures are available; how many staff are expected to be employed in (a) Jobcentre Plus, (b) the Pension Service and (c) each of the other bodies that are replacing the Benefits Agency, once they are fully introduced; and if he will make a statement on how the overall reduction in staff will be managed. [78332]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on the numbers of staff in the Benefits Agency at the latest available point, 31 March 2002 is in the following table. Also included are figures for the Employment Service.

Position as at 31 March 2002

	Number
Benefits Agency	66,726
The Employment Service	32,881

Note:
The figures are whole time equivalents

Jobcentre plus and the pension service expect their roll out to be complete by 2005–06 but individual businesses are still developing their staffing plans for the next three years.

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions as at 1st October how many people received benefits and pensions, from his Department paid in cash at Post Offices; and how many of these, at date of commencement or other point prior to 1 October, have been offered the opportunity to have their benefits or pension paid directly into a bank account. [77881]

Malcolm Wicks: Approximately 58 per cent. of claimants currently receive their benefit and pensions in cash at the Post Office and 42 per cent are paid direct into their bank or building society account.

As Automated Credit Transfer (ACT) became available for individual benefits at different times, it is not possible to say how many customers were offered the opportunity to have their benefits or pension paid directly into a bank or building society account at the time of making the claim.

Community Care Grants

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will (a) review the operation of Community Care Grants; and (b) introduce a system of grants for particular life events and needs, available to anyone on a low income. [79216]

Malcolm Wicks: The Social Fund targets the available help on the neediest people in our society.

The Social Fund provides non-repayable Community Care Grants for vulnerable people in a variety of circumstances and we have already introduced improvements to the scheme. For example, the qualifying conditions have been extended to help people setting up home in the community who have been without a settled way of life, and we have increased the annual budget for grants from £97 million in 1997 to £108 million today.

The Fund already provides grants for easily identifiable life events through maternity and funeral payments. The discretionary nature of the Community Care Grants scheme enables it to meet a wide range of needs which a wholly regulated scheme could not.

Contacts (Health and Safety)

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for what reason there was a decrease in the number of contacts with premises by Health and Safety Executive inspectors between 1996–97 and 2000–01. [78447]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The number of regulatory contacts made by Health and Safety Executive staff for each year between 1996–97 and 2001–02 is given in the table. Overall there has been a 3 per cent. fall in numbers over the period. The reduction is a reflection of the increase in both the quantity and complexity of HSE's reactive work in carrying out investigations. The numbers of investigations has increased from 27,889 in 1996–97 to 37,855 in 2001–02, a rise of 35 per cent.

A balanced programme of inspections and investigations is necessary to secure improvements in workplace health and safety.

The majority of regulatory contacts were made by inspectors; a small proportion, approximately 10,000 in 2001–02, were made by workplace contact officers (WCOs). The WCOs are a small team dedicated to providing advice and information specifically to small and medium sized enterprises.

	Regulatory contacts
1998–99	183,000
1999–2000	185,496
2000–01	192,693
2001–02	195,695

Note:
A regulatory contact includes preventive inspections, investigators, advisory visits, and enforcement visits.

Deferred Pensions

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have opted to defer receiving their basic state pension in each year since 1988; and what the average length of time is for which people have chosen to defer their pension. [78334]

Mr. McCartney: The information is not available in the format requested that around three per cent of people who reached state pension age five years ago deferred claiming their basic state pension. On average, these individuals deferred their basic state pension for almost two years.

Notes:

1. Estimates are based on the latest March 2002 RP admin data and the Government Actuary's Department mid-year population estimates.

2. Figures are for Great Britain

Employment Action Teams

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what criteria were used to decide the electoral wards of the City of Newcastle upon Tyne that have the service of employment action teams; how those wards scored on those criteria; how (a) Wingrove, (b) Fenham, (c) Blakelaw, (d) Moorside and (e) Sandyford wards scored on those criteria; and when the criteria will next be reviewed. [78762]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The wards being targeted by the Newcastle upon Tyne Action Team for Jobs were selected because their working age employment rate was 58.5 per cent. or below, at 10 April 2001 when selection took place. All other wards in the City of Newcastle local authority area, including Wingrove, Fenham, Blakelaw, Moorside and Sandyford, had employment rates above this figure at the time of selection. The wards targeted by the Action Team will be reviewed if there is a significant depopulation of the client groups in any of them.

Girocheques

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what the annual administrative cost is of sending girocheques to Mrs Kathleen Lonsdale of Westerlands Residential Home Kingsbridge. [78323]

Malcolm Wicks: Information about individuals is confidential and not disclosed under part 2 paragraph 12 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government information.

However, the current administrative cost of sending on girocheque is £1.47

Injuries

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the record of the Health and Safety Executive in investigating (a) reported major injuries to trainees and (b) major injuries to people on work experience in the last year for which figures are available. [78446]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The Health and Safety Executive does not highlight or target any particular group of workers when selecting incidents for investigation, all workers are treated the same. Enforcement of health and safety is conducted according to the HSC's published Enforcement Policy Statement (EPS). Major injuries to trainees and to people on work experience are likely to satisfy criteria published in the EPS and if they do, would be selected for investigation.

New Deal

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) young people, (b) over 50s and (c) people with a disability have signed up for the New Deal in Tamworth. [78841]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The available information is in the table.

Programme	Cumulative number of participants in the Tamworth constituency
New Deal for young people (NDYP)	1,150
New Deal 50 plus	130

Notes:
1. Figures are from start of the programme to June 2002 for NDYP, and to August 2002 for New Deal 50 plus.
2. Constituency level information is not available for the New Deal for disabled people.

Pension Schemes

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pension schemes have started the winding-up process in each year since 1997; and how many pension scheme members have been affected in each year as a result, broken down into (a) pensioners and (b) people who had not retired when the winding-up began. [78333]

Mr. McCartney: The information requested is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Year	Number of schemes started to wind up	Number of members in schemes started to wind up
1997	84	10,271
1998	113	2,309
1999	4,287	101.236
2000	1,903	74,403
2001	2,206	73,038
2002[1]	1,405	40,158

[1] To date

Notes:

1. The information is based on data held by the Pension Schemes Registry (PSR). It includes all types of pension schemes. The figures are for calendar years.
2. The figures are the sum of those live schemes that have reported they are winding up and those schemes accepted by the PSR as winding up. The latter are schemes where the principal employer has gone into liquidation and they were the sole trustees. The figures do not include schemes that may not have reported to the PSR.
3. The PSR system holds information on the most recent change in scheme status, so schemes which were frozen or closed in earlier years may figure in the wind up figures for a later year. Trustees are required to report changes within 12 months so there is likely to be a lag before the data reflects what is happening currently.
4. Before 1997 figures for starting the wind up of schemes were not categorised:they were subsumed within figures for live scheme. The category of schemes in the process of wind up was introduced gradually. The category for schemes notifying that they were winding up was introduced before the category for schemes accepted by the PSR as winding up. Where an actual date was unavailable the current date was used.
5. The information related to schemes, not employers. Some employers operate several schemes.
6. The numbers of members shown include active, deferred and pensioner members. PSR does not hold data broken down by type of member, as this is not required for their purposes.

Post Office (Benefits Access)

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what safeguards will be put in place to protect the interests of post office customers who open bank accounts in order to access their benefits, pensions and child benefits. [78584]

Malcolm Wicks: We understand that some customers will be concerned about the forthcoming changes. We have designed the new system with their needs in mind. For example, pensioners have told us that two of the most important things for them were to still be able to collect their money from the post office and also to be able to continue to collect it weekly. Both of these options will be available.

Our information campaign will take customers through the changes, including getting their money from their account at the post office. Customers will be supplied with information which clearly sets out their account options and enables them to decide which account best meets their needs and circumstances. Customers do not need to take any action until they receive a letter about the change.

Social Fund Loans

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what measures are being taken to require social fund staff to ensure that applicants are properly advised on the type of payment most helpful to them; [79177]

(2) if he will implement the recommendation of the social fund commissioner for his Department to put in place a system to manage the quality of advice given to people and the appropriateness of application forms issued by office staff; [79209]

(3) if he will review the guidance and training for social fund staff administering funeral payments; [79210]

(4) if he will ensure that those in contact with the recently bereaved are able to give those people accurate information about the social fund funeral payments. [79212]

Malcolm Wicks: We share the social fund commissioner's view that people should receive good quality advice. Although existing procedures are already designed to provide high standards of service delivery, the Department is currently examining what improvements are possible in this area.

The Department continues to work to improve the training and guidance it gives its staff, including non social fund staff who have contact with customers. Any instance where an office gives wrong information will be investigated and the Independent Review Service has now agreed to provide the Department with details of any such cases that it becomes aware of.

We recognise that bereavement is very distressing and training and guidance for staff reinforces the message of sensitivity when dealing with claims for funeral payments and the need to provide accurate advice and information to customers.

Workplace Inspections

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for what reason the number of inspections of workplaces by the Health and Safety Executive reduced in the last five years. [78448]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The reduction in numbers of preventive inspections from 116,652 in 1996–97 to 75,237 in 2001–02 is a reflection of the increase in both the quantity and complexity of HSE's reactive work in carrying out investigations. The numbers of investigations has increased from 27,889 in 1996–97 to 37,855 in 2001–02, a rise of 35 per cent.

A balanced programme of inspections and investigations is necessary to secure improvements in workplace health and safety.

Benefits

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will undertake simulation modelling of the distributional impact of his policies taking account of predicted levels and patterns of non take-up of entitlement to benefits; and if he will make a statement. [74840]

Malcolm Wicks: The distributional impact of policies is assessed by the Department, when it is appropriate and robust to do so, by using simulation modelling based on the Family Resources Survey. The process of making these estimates involves making assumptions regarding the level of take-up of entitlement to income-related benefits. The precise nature of these estimates and assumptions depends upon the context being modelled; we do not explicitly predict patterns of take-up.

Communications Data

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many officers in his Department and officers authorised by him he estimates will be permitted to seek access to communications data as defined in the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000; how many times his Department or such officials sought access to such data from communications providers including Internet service providers under the Data Protection Act 1998 in the last year; and if he will make a statement. [74478]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department is currently making use of powers under the Social Security Fraud Act 2001 which allow authorised officers to require information, including communications data, from the financial, utility and educational sectors to find evidence of fraud. Powers like these will help us continue our crackdown on fraud and make sure that the right benefits go to the right people.

These powers were commenced on 30 April 2002 and 114 officers have so far been authorised by my right hon. Friend. This is in line with our commitment made during passage of the legislation that there would be no more than 300 authorised officers in the department at any one time. In addition, 66 local authority officers have been authorised by their chief executives or chief finance officers.

Information is not held centrally on the number of requests made for data under the Data Protection Act 1998, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Social Fund

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he plans to adopt the recommendation in his Department's Research Report 172, Social Fund use amongst older people, to establish a separate Social Fund for minimum income guarantee claimants as part of the new Pension Service. [74731]

Mr. McCartney: The Government are committed to improving the service currently provided to today's and future pensioners. The Pension Service has replaced the Benefits Agency services for pensioners from 1 April 2002, and is working to introduce an improved service tailored to the needs of pensioners. The Pension Service has been developed as a customer-focused organisation after researching what customers need and expect from the Government in relation to pensions business.

The Pension Service will play a crucial role in both tackling pensioner poverty and encouraging saving by providing a dedicated service for today's pensioners, using modern technology whether they deal with us by telephone or through the internet, by post or face-to-face. It will also improve the service to future pensioners, by providing accurate information to help them make decisions about saving for their retirement. The Pension Service is committed to making access to benefits and services for pensioners, including the Social Fund, as simple and straightforward as possible.

DWP Research Report No. 172 'Social Fund use amongst older people' raised some interesting and important issues. We are giving careful consideration to these issues and how best to address them.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much funding has been given to the Child Support Agency in each year since 1997. [74417]

Malcolm Wicks: The running costs for the Child Support Agency are as follows:

Year to 31 March	£ million
1996–97	213.4
1997–98	213.7
1998–99	208.4
1999–2000	227.1
2000—01	209.3
2001—02	226.2
2002—03	211.9

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Activity-led Funding Sub-group for Education

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will publish the report of the Activity-led Funding Sub-group for Education. [79333]

Mr. Miliband: I have been asked to reply.

A paper on the work of the Activity Led Funding sub group was discussed by the Education Funding Strategy Group on 9 September 2002. It is available on the DfES website at www.dfes.gov.uk/efsg/papers.cfm.

Arson

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many incidents of arson there were, broken down by (a) fire brigade area and (b) local authority in England and Wales in each year since January 1997. [79674]

Mr. Leslie: The table shows the number of malicious fires attended by local authority fire brigades in England and Wales between 1997 and 2000. 2000 is the latest year for which data are available.

Malicious fires by local authority fire brigades 1997–2000

Audit Commission

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister who is responsible for the selection of Audit Commission representatives. [78748]

Mr. Raynsford: Section 1 of the Audit Commission Act 1998 determines that the Audit Commission shall consist of between 15 and 20 members appointed by the Secretary of State. Appointments are made jointly by my right hon. Friends the Deputy Prime Minister and Secretaries of State for Health and Wales, having regard to the Commissioner for Public Appointments' Code of Practice.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will announce the name of the new Chair of the Audit Commission. [79872]

Mr. Raynsford: My right hon. Friends the Deputy Prime Minister and the Secretaries of State for Health and Wales have today appointed for a three year term James Strachan as the new Chair of the Audit Commission.

I have great confidence in his ability to lead the Audit Commission, to which he will bring substantial and diverse experience.

We are driving forward our agenda to reform public services. This appointment comes at a challenging time for the commission, especially with the implementation of the Comprehensive Performance Assessment of local authorities, its new housing inspection duties and the development of a proportionate and co-ordinated audit and inspection regime.

More than 40 applicants were considered for the post and James Strachan was shortlisted by a panel comprising an independent assessor and senior officials from this Office and the Department of Health.

Cornish Language

Andrew George: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will announce whether the Cornish language will be specified within the Council of Europe Charter for Regional or Minority Languages. [76011]

Mr. Raynsford: I am announcing today that, after careful consideration and with the help of the results of an independent academic study on the language commissioned by the Government, we have decided to recognise Cornish as falling under Part II of the European Charter for Regional or Minority languages. The Government will be registering this decision with the Council of Europe.

The purpose of the Charter is to protect and promote the historical regional or minority languages of Europe. It recognises that some of these languages are in danger of eventual extinction and that protection and encouragement of them contributes to Europe's cultural diversity and historical traditions.

This is a positive step in acknowledging the symbolic importance the language has for Cornish identity and heritage.

Cornish will join Welsh, Scottish Gaelic, Irish, Scots and Ulster Scots as protected and promoted languages under the Charter, which commits the Government to recognise and respect those languages.

Officials will be initiating discussion with Cornwall county council and Cornish language organisations in Cornwall to ensure the views of Cornish speakers and people wanting to learn Cornish are taken into account in implementing Part II of the Charter.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what decision the Government have reached following its consideration of the case for recognising the Cornish language under the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages. [79871]

Mr. Raynsford: I am announcing today that, after careful consideration and with the help of the results of an independent academic study on the language commissioned by the Government, we have decided to recognise Cornish as falling under Part II of the European Charter for Regional or Minority languages. The Government will be registering this decision with the Council of Europe.

Empty Homes

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to give local authorities greater power to acquire empty homes compulsorily. [78437]

Mr. McNulty: We have no plans to strengthen existing powers of local authorities to acquire empty homes compulsorily. However, we are currently evaluating the recommendation to allow local authorities to compulsorily lease empty homes put forward in the report by the Transport, Local Government and the Regions Select Committee on Empty Homes earlier this year. We will make a statement in due course.

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans the Government have to introduce compulsory letting of empty residential properties. [79039]

Mr. McNulty: We are currently evaluating the recommendation to allow local authorities to compulsorily lease empty homes put forward in the report by the Transport, Local Government and the Regions Select Committee on Empty Homes earlier this year. We will make a statement in due course.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans his Department has to alter the number and scope of executive agencies affiliated to his Department; and if he will make a statement. [79587]

Mr. Leslie: The work of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's executive agencies is subject to regular review. There are no plans at present to alter significantly their number or remit.

Fire Dispute (Buckinghamshire)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many Green Goddess fire appliances he plans to station in Buckinghamshire in the event of a firefighters' strike; where they will be stationed; and if he will make a statement. [77985]

Mr. Raynsford: Emergency cover in Buckinghamshire is planned to consist of a number of elements, including six Green Goddesses, three breathing apparatus teams, a rescue team equipped with specialist equipment, and the police. These will be based in Milton Keynes, Aylesbury and Marlow.

The provision of MOD emergency fire cover has been planned in consultation with the chief fire officer to maximise the effectiveness of call-outs and the availability of a range of firefighting capabilities.

The command and operational structure for emergency fire cover has been designed to enable maximum flexibility and use of available resources, whether from within a county or from assets deployed nearby in neighbouring counties. The deployment of firefighters will be based on the assessment of how best to respond to an emergency in the quickest time possible. The deployment will be kept under review.

Fire Safety

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what was the cost of the (a) 'Get Out, Stay Out and Call 999' campaign and (b) 'Fire Kills' campaign. [79599]

Mr. Raynsford: Our total budget for fire safety publicity taken forward under the 'Fire Kills' brand is £4.8 million in this fiscal year. Of this, up to £1.8 million has been set aside for the 'Get Out, Stay Out and Call 999' campaign.

Leasehold Valuation Tribunal

Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which (a) ombudsmen and (b) other bodies are able to investigate complaints against the Leasehold Valuation Tribunal. [78467]

Mr. McNulty: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals are independent quasi-judicial bodies which are funded by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. Parties who are dissatisfied with a decision of a tribunal have a right of appeal to the Lands Tribunal. The Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration can investigate complaints by someone claiming to have sustained injustice in consequence of maladministration in the way in which a tribunal administers a case but he cannot intervene in the tribunal's decision.

Local Authority Performance

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on progress with the grading of local authorities under comprehensive performance assessment; and if he will make a statement. [79591]

Mr. Raynsford: The Audit Commission carried out corporate assessments in all English county and unitary authorities this summer, and published the assessment framework on 21 October. They are on schedule to meet the White Paper commitment to announce the final results by the end of this year.

Discussions are now under way between the Audit Commission, Inspectorates, and pathfinder local authorities, to establish the way in which improvement planning can best be undertaken.

The Audit Commission is also currently consulting on the methodology to be employed in assessing district councils' performance as from January 2003.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Flook: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what responses relating to the local government finance consultation (1) have been received from (a) Taunton Deane and (b) Somerset County Council; [79478]

(2) what impact changes in the local government formula grant will have on public services delivered by (a) Taunton Deane Borough Council and (b) Somerset County Council; [79476]

(3) what response relating to the local government finance consultation has been received from Somerset County Council relating to education funding; and when it was received. [79477]

Mr Raynsford: Both Somerset County Council and Taunton Deane District Council submitted responses to the Formula Grant Review consultation (including the education options in the case of the county) before it closed on the 30 of September.

However, in addition the Government have received around 55,000 letters as the result of various campaigns relating to the Formula Grant Review. None of these campaigns was solely based around Somerset, but since the county is a member of the F40 group of authorities who campaign on education funding a number of those letters do relate to that council. We do not record the details of the senders of campaign letters as a matter of course. For this reason, and since very many of them are multiple copies of the same letter sent by the same people to different Ministers, a more detailed answer could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

We are currently taking decisions on the new system to replace SSAs. As we do so we are carefully considering the full range of evidence, pressures and points that have been put to us. We will announce the new system for distributing Formula Grant, including detailed grant allocations for individual authorities, at the time of the provisional local government finance settlement which we expect to be around the start of December. Once the Government have allocated their grant, decisions about budgets and services are primarily for local councils to make. However, we have already guaranteed that we will use grant "floors" to ensure that no authority will face a cut in grant next year on a like for like basis, and we hope to do better than that when we announce the actual floors and ceilings scheme as part of the provisional settlement.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many written representations he received in response to the Local Government Finance White Paper; and if he will make a statement. [79595]

Mr. Raynsford: As a White Paper, "Strong Local Leadership—Quality Public Services" was not a consultation document, and a detailed record has not been kept of all the written correspondence received following its publication. However, the number is about 50. The White Paper was preceded by a consultation document, "Modernising Local Government Finance: A Green Paper", to which we received over 1,100 responses.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will give a commitment that no local authority will receive less grant money in real terms under any proposals contained in the Local Government Finance White Paper adopted by the Government; and if he will make a statement. [79606]

Mr. Raynsford: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will announce its proposals for the new revenue grant distribution system to replace Standard Spending Assessments, including minimum "floors" on grant changes, at the point of the provisional local government finance settlement around the beginning of December. We hope at that point to improve considerably on the interim guarantee already given that no authority will receive less grant next year on a like for like basis.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what research was done by his Department into the impact of dispersal and settlement patterns on the cost of providing rural services in rural areas as part of the local government formula grant review; [79707] s

(2) what assessment he has made of rural deprivation in the local government formula grant review; [79708]

(3) what account he has taken of the cost of providing services in rural areas in the local government formula grant review. [79703]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Brigg and Goole, Mr. Cawsey, on 4 November 2002, Official Report, c. 49W.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many representations he has received relating to the consultation on local government finance as it affects Stockport Metropolitan Borough. [79332]

(2) what proportion of the local government finance consultation responses relating to the Stockport Metropolitan Borough have supported (a) each of the four published options for education funding and (b) a fifth option. [79331]

Mr. Raynsford: We have two responses received from Stockport MBC and four letters from MPs. However, in addition Government has received around 55,000 letters as the result of various campaigns relating to the Formula Grant Review, including campaigns connected with the F40 group of authorities who campaign on education funding. A number of these letters do relate to Stockport.

We do not record the details of the senders of campaign letters as a matter of course. For this reason, and since very many of them are multiple copies of the same letter sent by the same people to different Ministers, it is not possible to provide a more detailed analysis except at disproportionate cost.

We are currently taking decisions on the new system to replace SSAs. As we do so we are carefully considering the full range of evidence, pressures and points that have been put to us.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects the provisions in the Local Government Finance White Paper will be implemented; and if he will make a statement. [79600]

Mr. Raynsford: An implementation plan for the White Paper was published last April setting out the planned dates for delivering the major proposals in the White Paper. It is updated monthly, and is available on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website. There has been substantial progress, including consulting on a draft Local Government Bill that takes forward many of the proposals included in the White Paper.

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what impact he estimates changes in the local government formula grant will have on public services in the Ribble Valley. [79709]

Mr. Raynsford: We will announce the new system for distributing Formula Grant, including detailed grant allocations for individual authorities, at the time of the provisional local government finance settlement which we expect to be early in December. Once the Government has allocated its grant, decisions about budgets and services are primarily for local councils to make. However, we have already guaranteed that no authority will face a cut in grant next year on a like for like basis, and we hope to do better than that when we announce the actual floors and ceilings scheme as part of the provisional settlement.

Mobile Phone Masts

Mr. Pike: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the Cherry report on probable health effects associated with mobile phone base stations. [78032]

Ms Blears: I have been asked to reply.

The report by Dr. Neil Cherry on "Together Against Masts" is concerned with an assessment of possible health effects that might arise from exposure to radio frequency (RF) radiation from mobile phone base stations (masts). It was to address such concerns that in 1999 the Government asked the chairman of the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) to set up an Independent Expert Group on Mobile Phones (IEGMP). The group was chaired by Sir William Stewart FRS, FRSE and reported to Government in May 2000.

A particular issue for the group was the exposures that might be received by members of the public from local base stations and the potential for effects on health. This is the issue addressed by Dr. Cherry. The conclusions in the IEGMP report were that:

> The balance of evidence indicates that there is no general risk to the health of people living near to base stations on the basis that exposures are expected to be small fractions of guidelines

Measurements undertaken by the NRPB and the Radiocommunications Agency have confirmed that public exposures are very much lower than the international guidelines. Network operators have undertaken to ensure that all base stations will be designed and sited, so that members of the public will not be exposed in excess of the recommended basic restriction.

The group were aware, however, that if people are unduly concerned about potential exposures then that in itself may affect their well-being. A number of recommendations of the group were, therefore, designed to provide more information to people about local base stations.

The group also made recommendations for further research work. These proposals for research were principally directed as providing more information on exposures from mobile phones but also have relevance to exposures from base stations. It additionally recommended that there should be a further review of relevant research in three years time, or earlier if circumstances demand it.

The Government welcome the report as an authoritative review of the scientific information available. It also accepted the recommendations and these have been taken forward by Government and by other bodies. A research programme funded by Government and industry on a 50:50 basis is taking forward the research recommendations.

In coming to its conclusions, the IEGMP undertook an extensive review of the relevant scientific literature and heard evidence from 28 witnesses during the course of its work. It also organised five open meetings to hear the views of the public. Many of the references cited by Dr. Cherry were reviewed by the expert group. Professor G. J. Hyland, then of the University of Warwick, whose work is referred to by Dr. Cherry gave evidence to the group. The IEGMP also drew upon evidence provided by the NRPB and other organisations on exposures to RF from base stations.

The further review of research findings is being carried out by NRPB's independent advisory group on non-ionising radiation. It is expected that this will be completed in 2003.

Non-Departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many equivalent full-time employees are employed in (a) non-departmental public bodies and (b) executive agencies affiliated to his Department. [79666]

Mr. Leslie: The latest available figures for the numbers of full-time equivalent employees employed in (a) non-departmental public bodies are:

	Number
Audit Commission	2,436
English Partnerships	376
Housing Action Trusts
Castle Vale	99
Liverpool	79.80
Stonebridge	67
Tower Hamlets	14
Housing Corporation	605.86
Standards Board for England	75
Rent Assessment Panels	70.95
Valuation Tribunals—	155

The latest available figures for the numbers of full-time equivalent employees employed in (b) executive agencies are:

	Number
Fire Service College	250[1]
The Planning Inspectorate	710[2]
The Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre	50
The Rent Service	790

[1] Including 46 lecturers seconded from Fire Brigades.
[2] Excluding 126 fee paid inspectors which are not calculated as full-time equivalents.

In addition, Ordnance Survey, a separate non-ministerial Government Department and executive agency, which is the responsibility of ODPM Ministers, has 1,840 full-time equivalent employees.

Park Home Reform

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his plan for Park Home Reform. [79034]

Mr. McNulty: We are considering what changes in the law would be required to implement such recommendations in the Park Homes Working Party report as the Government have endorsed. The prospects for new legislation on Park Homes will naturally reflect the pressures on the Government's legislative programme. However, as, recommended by the Park Homes Working Party, a study of the economics of park homes was carried out and published on 29 October. We are also working with bodies representing home owners and park owners on such matters as creating a model constitution for residents' associations and model procedures for sales and assignments of homes.

Regional Assemblies

Andrew George: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 23 October 2002, Official Report, columns 389–90W, if stakeholders within the regional assembly can be individuals. [79348]

Mr. Raynsford: The White Paper is not prescriptive as far as the definition of stakeholders is concerned. Organisations or individuals with an interest in the work of an elected assembly can potentially be considered as stakeholders.

Revenue Grant Distribution

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many representations he has received from residents of (a) Cheshire and (b) Macclesfield constituency registering their response to his Department's review of revenue grant distribution; when he expects to announce his decision following his Department's consultation; and if he will make a statement. [79273]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government have received around 55,000 letters from the public relating to the Formula Grant Review, the great majority being as the result of various campaigns that have been organised. One of these campaigns was based in Cheshire, and we estimate that around 200 responses were received as part of that. Cheshire is also one of the constituent authorities of the F40 education funding campaign, and a proportion of the approximately 53,000 responses received as part of that originated from within the country.

We do not record the details of the senders of campaign letters as a matter of course. For this reason, and since very many from the F40 campaign are multiple copies of the same letter sent by the same people to different Ministers, it is not possible to provide a more precise answer, or one for the constituency of Macclesfield, except at disproportionate cost.

We are currently taking decisions on the new system to replace SSAs. As we do so we are carefully considering the full range of evidence, pressures and points that have been put to us. We will announce our proposals for the new system to Parliament at the time of the next provisional local government finance settlement, which we expect to be around the beginning of December.

Rough Sleepers

Tim Loughton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to the answer of 21 October 2002, Official Report, column 61W, when a street count for under 16s living rough last took place in (a) London and (b) West Sussex; what criteria is used to count under 16s in the street count; and when the Social Exclusion Unit will publish its report into young runaways. [78194]

Mrs. Roche: Street counts were last carried out in London and West Sussex during March 2002. These found no one sleeping rough aged under 16. Anyone who is bedded down in the open air, people in buildings or other places not designed for habitation, including those under 16, is included in the figures.

The Social Exclusion Unit hopes to publish its report on young runaways shortly.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent discussions his Department has had with the Home Office regarding police involvement in dealing with the issue of under 16s living rough. [78195]

Mrs. Roche: The police and the Home Office have been key members of the Young Runaways Advisory Group, advising on issues for runaways when they are away from home. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is also a member of the Missing Persons Cross-Departmental Group led by the Home Office. In addition, the police work with outreach teams across the country. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has not had discussions with the Home Office regarding police involvement with under 16s living rough.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many 16 to 18-year-olds are living rough in (a) London and (b) West Sussex following the last street count. [78196]

Mrs. Roche: The street count carried out in London in March 2002 identified one person aged 18 sleeping rough. A full analysis of count information showing breakdown by age is not currently held centrally for West Sussex. When informed of results of street counts we would expect to be notified if a person under 16 is found sleeping rough.

Social Housing

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to (a) increase new social housing provision by 2005–06 and (b) set interim targets to reduce the number of non-decent social sector homes by 2006; and if he will make a statement. [78893]

Mr. McNulty: In his statement to the House about sustainable communities on 18 July, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister promised to return to the House with a comprehensive long-term programme of action to tackle a number of housing and planning issues. That statement, which will be made around the turn of the year, will set out how the additional funding announced in the spending review will be used, and what it will buy over the three years up to 2005–06. It will cover the points raised by the hon. Member.

Starter Home Initiative

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what were the (a) total allocated funds and (b) allocated funds used for administering costs for each scheme manager of (i) round one and (ii) round two of the Starter Home Initiative. [78631]

Mr. McNulty: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Member for Northampton North to the hon. Member for East Worthing and Shoreham (Tim Loughton) on 29 October 2001, Official Report, columns 484–88W, and the reply which was given to the hon. Member on 30 October 2002.

The total amount allocated for scheme managers' administration costs was £11.5 million for round one of the Starter Home Initiative and £0.8 million for round two.

Vehicle Fires

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many non-accidental vehicle fires there were, broken down by (a) fire brigade area and (b) local authority in England and Wales, in each year since January 1997. [79683]

Mr. Leslie: The table shows the number of malicious road vehicle fires attended by local authority fire brigades in England and Wales between 1997 and 2000. 2000 is the latest year for which data are available.

Malicious road vehicle fires, by local authority fire brigade 1997–2000

Flooding

Joan Ryan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to amend the planning legislation, regulations and guidance for (a) the building of new homes on land located within flood plains and (b) for existing buildings in areas prone to flooding; and if he will make a statement. [74609]

Mr. McNulty: There are no plans to amend planning legislation in respect of building new homes in flood plains or for existing buildings in areas prone to flooding.

The Government issued comprehensive strengthened guidance on the operation of the planning system in regard to flood risk in Planning Policy Guidance Note (PPG) 25 "Development and flood risk" in July 2001. We said then that we would review this guidance in the light of experience of its implementation and effectiveness and the developing scientific knowledge on climate change three years after publication. In the meantime we are continuing to monitor how it is being applied through the Environment Agency's high-level target 12. The report for 2001–02 was recently published on the DEFRA website. It indicates that PPG 25 is already beginning to have an effect and that less than 0.5 per cent. of all new homes were subject to sustained objections on flood risk grounds. In the remaining cases, local planning authorities had considered the matter carefully before allowing development to proceed.

To complement the new, stronger planning guidance, DTLR published "Preparing for floods" in February 2002. This contains interim guidance for improving the flood resistance of domestic and small business properties. It provides practical advice for existing property owners whose properties are at risk of flooding and for all those involved with construction of new properties or renovation of existing buildings in areas of flood risk. The Environment Agency, together with the Construction Industry Research and Information Association, has also produced guidance on temporary measures to protect against flooding (such as flood boards) and on what to do after a flood.

In addition, we are working with the Environment Agency, local government, the water industry and others to produce an agreed guidance framework for the development of sustainable drainage systems. Such systems, which are encouraged in PPG 25, aim to control water as near its source as possible and thus reduce the downstream risk of flooding. They will help to reduce the potential impact on existing properties of flooding due to uncontrolled run-off from newly developed areas.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

EU Green Paper

Keith Vaz: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what representations she has received from ADRs concerning the new EU Green Paper. [78868]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Green Paper on Alternative Dispute Resolution in Civil and Commercial Law was issued by the European Commission, and responses to the consultation were to be made directly to the Commission. We did, however, draw the attention of interested parties to the Green Paper and asked them to copy their responses to the Lord Chancellor's Department, in order that the UK Government response would be fully informed. Copies of responses were received from: Advice Services Alliance; Alliance for Electronic Business; Centre for Effective Dispute Resolution; Commercial Bar Association; Finance and Leasing Association; National Association of Citizen Advice Bureaux; UK College of Family Mediators; Morley and Scott (chartered accountants); Arthur Marriot and Henry Brown (solicitors with experience of ADR in both an international and domestic context). There may be other responses that have not been copied to us.

Fines (Prompt Payment)

Dr. Francis: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, whether it is her policy for a discount to be offered to defendants for prompt payment of fines. [78683]

Yvette Cooper: At present there is no provision enabling a discount to be offered to offenders who pay their fines promptly.

The White Paper, "Justice for All", published in July, announced new proposals aimed at improving enforcement rates. These include offering a discount for prompt payment of fines. The measures would be piloted and evaluated prior to any decision to roll them out nationally.

TREASURY

Accesses to Communications Data

Harry Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 17 October 2002, Official Report, column 918W, on the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000, how many of the accesses to communications data in relation to Customs and Excise led to (a) the recovery of VAT and (b) the prosecution of individuals; how many of the accesses to communications data in relation to the Inland Revenue led to (i) the recovery of tax and (ii) the prosecution of individuals; how much tax was recovered; and how many individuals were prosecuted. [78436]

Dawn Primarolo: The information systems of neither department record the total tax recovered nor the number of prosecutions stemming directly from access to communications data. Consequently, this information could be obtained only at wholly disproportionate cost.

Ageism

Sue Doughty: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the processes the Government follows to appraise companies on its tender list for their record with respect to the code of practice on age discrimination. [79377]

Mr. Boateng: Individual Government Departments are responsible for taking decisions on the goods and services they acquire, taking account of the EC procurement rules and the Government's procurement policy of seeking value for money for the benefit of the taxpayer.

In terms of the criteria for the rejection and selection of candidates for a tender list, these are defined in the EC public procurement directives, which are implemented in the UK by the following regulations:

(a) SI 1191 No. 2680—The Public Works Contracts Regulations 1991: Regulations 14 to 19;

(b) SI 1993 No. 3228—The Public Services Contracts Regulations 1993: Regulations 14 to 20; and

(c) SI 1995 No. 201—The Public Supply Contracts Regulations 1995: Regulations 14 to 20

Barnett Formula

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the impact of New Opportunity Fund expenditure in Scotland on the operation of the Barnett Formula. [78736]

Mr. Boateng: The New Opportunities Fund is a Lottery Fund. Lottery funds are distributed by the relevant lottery distributor. They are not part of the Scottish Executive's Departmental Expenditure Limit and do not therefore fall within the Barnett formula arrangements for determining changes to the devolved administrations' budgets.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answers of 5 February and 19 September, Official Report, columns 845W and 207W, when he plans to publish the September 2000 to September 2001 Inland Revenue benchmarking exercise into the level of fraud in working families tax credit. [78891]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 19 September 2002, Official Report, column 207W, to the hon. Member.

Borrowing

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will make a statement on his borrowing plans for the remainder of the financial year; [78990]

(2) what recent assessment he has made of the state of the public finances; and if he will make a statement. [78991]

Mr. Boateng: Consistent with the Code for Fiscal Stability, an interim update of projections for the public finances will be published in the forthcoming pre-Budget report.

Cigarette Smuggling

David Burnside: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the number and value of cigarettes smuggled into Northern Ireland and the loss of revenue to the Exchequer due to such smuggling in the last 12 months. [79192]

John Healey: Customs do not keep separate records of the number and value of cigarettes smuggled into Northern Ireland. The vast majority of smuggled cigarettes enter the UK through the major ports and are then distributed across the UK.

The Government will be publishing figures, for the UK, of the number of cigarettes seized and the latest estimate of the revenue loss from the illicit tobacco market as part of the pre-Budget report.

The most recently published information for the scale of revenue loss in the illicit tobacco market is for the year 2000–01, and is contained in "Tackling Indirect Tax Fraud" published in November 2001, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Departmental Initiatives

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer [pursuant to his answer of 24 October 2002], Official Report, column 441W, if he will list schemes and initiatives sponsored by his Department which are not the subject of national roll-out. [78293]

Dawn Primarolo: I have nothing to add to my earlier answer.

Domestic Fuel (VAT)

Alan Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what barriers exist to prevent domestic fuel being zero-rated for VAT; and if he will make a statement. [79497]

John Healey: Under long-standing formal agreements with our European partners, no member state is permitted to introduce new zero rates or restore a zero rate once it has been withdrawn.

Fuel Smuggling

David Burnside: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the (a) volume and (b) value of petrol and diesel smuggled into Northern Ireland and (c) the loss of revenue to the Exchequer due to such smuggling in the last 12 months. [79191]

John Healey: The Government will be publishing their latest estimates of the revenue loss in the Northern Ireland road fuel sector as part of the pre-Budget report.

The most recently published estimates for the scale of revenue loss in the Northern Ireland road fuel sector, which are for the calendar year 2000 and include both revenue loss from fraud (smuggling, misuse and laundering) and from legitimate cross-border shopping, are contained in "Tackling Indirect Tax Fraud" published in November 2001, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Inland Revenue

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer of 22 October 2002, Official Report, column 218W, if he will list (a) the series of activities to enable the Inland Revenue to manage its records better and (b) the activities to enable the Inland Revenue to manage its records better which existed before the introduction of CR74; when the CR74 series of activities commenced; and if he will make a statement. [78576]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue reviews its record management regularly to seek improvements. The latest exercise, internally called CR74, ran for around six months from the start of this financial year. It involved a check of national insurance numbers (NINOs) held on the existing records. Checking NINOs is part of the Inland Revenue's day-to-day work, but this was a systematic updating exercise conducted over a relatively short period of time. The Department has kept the updated records separate. It has also introduced better processes to trace and match the existing and updated records.

IT Contract

Mr. Caton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the new contractor will be required to provide (a) an employer contributed final salary pension scheme for all employees and (b) a pay and conditions system that guarantees equal pay for equal value, including for sub-contracted staff, when the contract for providing IT services to the Inland Revenue is awarded. [79453]

Dawn Primarolo: The invitation to tender for the procurement will apply Government policy on pensions as set out in "Staff Transfers from Central Government: A Fair Deal for Staff Pensions". An incoming supplier will be required to adhere to this policy and apply it to all staff transferring to them. The incoming supplier will also be obliged to comply with all UK laws and regulations relating to employment and non-discrimination.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether employees will be entitled to join a trade union recognised to negotiate on pay, conditions, pensions, career development and related issues when the contract for providing IT services to the Inland Revenue is awarded. [79458]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue regards human resource and personnel issues as an important element in the evaluation of any bid for the IT contract. The Department will therefore ask bidders to provide information on their intended human resources policies, including their approach to trade union recognition, as part of their response to the invitation to tender. The right to trade union recognition—along with any collective agreements—is one of the transferable rights of any employee affected by a TUPE transfer. Therefore any incoming supplier will be required to provide trade union recognition, where this exists already, for employees working on the Inland Revenue's current IT contracts. The Inland Revenue will oblige the incoming supplier to comply with all UK laws and regulations relating to employment and non-discrimination. The Inland Revenue is actively engaging both PCs and USRO in the procurement process.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the new contractor will be subject to periodic independent reviews of performance when the contract for providing IT services to the Inland Revenue is awarded. [79459]

Dawn Primarolo: The draft contract requires the supplier to engage in a rolling programme of benchmarking to be undertaken by an independent agency to monitor performance. In addition, the Department has also specified rights for both National Audit Office and the Department's own internal audit office to be involved in reviews of systems and processes, in their respective roles, over the lifetime of the contract.

Landfill Tax

Dr. Whitehead: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer what the yield of the landfill levy was in the last 12 months; and what proportion of it was contributed by local authority levy payments. [78655]

John Healey: For the 12 months to end of September 2002, total Landfill Tax receipts were 505m. All revenue receipts are published monthly in Table 2.1 D of the Office for National Statistics publication "Financial Statistics". The proportion of Landfill Tax receipts attributable to local authority activity is not available, as revenue information on Landfill Tax is obtained via the return declarations made by registered bodies, and Landfill Tax is therefore declared by local authorities under their own registration and by private contractors who collect waste on behalf of local authorities and declare the landfill tax on their own returns.

London Stock Exchange

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he plans to visit the London Stock Exchange. [79108]

Ruth Kelly: There are no immediate plans for the Chancellor to visit the London Stock Exchange. However, Ministers have met senior representatives of the London Stock Exchange in the past six months, and also have regular contact with management from companies listed on the exchange and companies who are members of the exchange.

National Insurance

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer of 22 October 2002, Official Report, column 218W, on national insurance, how many letters have been sent to people that have been using incorrect national insurance numbers in the last (a) month, (b) six months and (c) year. [78575]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue does not keep detailed records of the contents of a substantial number of letters received and sent every day. Most letters sent by our staff cover a range of issues relating to a customer's financial affairs that may include or relate to the use of the national insurance number (NINO). It would incur disproportionate cost to identify letters sent to people who have been using incorrect NINOs.

Saving

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps his Department is taking to increase the level of saving in the UK economy. [79095]

Ruth Kelly: The Government recognise the importance of saving and asset ownership in providing individuals with security, comfort in retirement and long-term independence and opportunity. The Government is implementing a saving strategy focusing on three central strands:

creating the right environment for saving by maintaining macroeconomic stability and establishing a well regulated and efficient market in financial services;

creating the right incentives for saving by ensuring that the tax and benefit system does not unfairly penalise savers and by assisting those on lower incomes; and ensuring that people have the information and financial literacy they need to make the right saving choices.

Statements on the progress of specific policies will be provided in the pre-Budget report.

Stability and Growth Pact

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what discussions he has had with his European counterparts regarding the future of the Stability and Growth Pact; [79136]

(2) what discussions he has had with his colleagues in the European Council of Finance Ministers regarding a review of the terms of the Stability and Growth Pact. [79103]

Ruth Kelly: The Government support a prudent interpretation of the Stability and Growth Pact, which takes into account the economic cycle, sustainability and the important role of public investment. We continue to discuss this with our EU colleagues.

Tax Processing

Matthew Taylor: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place the data on (a) outputs and (b) resources underlying the outcome target for tax processing work as reported in the Inland Revenue Annual Report (Cm5428) in the Library; and if he will make a statement. [78413]

Dawn Primarolo: Productivity on tax processing work in 2001–02 showed an increase of almost 1 per cent. over the previous year. The Inland Revenue's Public Service Agreement for 2001–04 set out targets for improvements in productivity, over three years. The aim is to achieve, by 31 March 2004, an increase of 7.7 per cent. (cumulative) equivalent to 2.5 per cent. year on year. Initiatives are in place to achieve the step changes in productivity necessary to meet this target. The productivity index for tax processing is calculated by comparing a basket of outputs representative of this work with the staff time spent carrying out the tasks. These include Self Assessment and Corporation Tax returns captured, PAYE end of year returns reconciled and closed and repayment claims processed.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Fuel Poverty

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will give an undertaking to eradicate fuel poverty by 2010; and if she will make a statement. [77416]

Mr. Morley: The UK Fuel Poverty Strategy, published in November 2001, sets out the approach of the Government and the Devolved Administrations to tackling fuel poverty. It explains that the goal of the Government and the Devolved Administrations is to seek an end to the problem of fuel poverty. In particular they will seek an end to the blight of fuel poverty for vulnerable households by 2010. We are currently consulting on a clarification to the strategy which will set a target for the eradication of fuel poverty in respect of households other than those in the vulnerable categories. The consultation period ends 29 November 2002. We intend to produce an annual report on our progress in implementing the Strategy in the new year.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to increase public awareness of energy efficient products and services. [77442]

Mr. Morley: My Department remains committed to expanding the highly visible mandatory EU energy labelling for appliances and equipment. This also requires the provision of similar consumer information in catalogues and in other product literature which all serve to increase consumer awareness.

We are also encouraging EU-wide voluntary agreements with manufacturers and service providers which aim to set targets for improved products and services and raise awareness of energy efficiency issues. One aspect of this is to provide reliable, public domain consumer environmental information about their products and services via point-of-sale information and searchable product information data- bases.

The Energy Saving Trust, which is funded by my Department, encourages the sustainable use of energy in the domestic and small business sectors. Work includes an Energy Efficiency campaign to encourage domestic consumers to take up energy efficiency measures. The Trust also runs a product endorsement scheme which signposts customers to products that are the most—or among the most—energy efficient available and aims to increase sales of these products. Products that are accredited under the scheme carry the Energy Efficiency Recommended logo. Decisions about future plans for raising public awareness of energy efficient products and services will be covered in the Energy White Paper, which the Government aims to publish around the turn of the year.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make it her policy to allow local authorities to set targets for the improvement of energy efficiency in stock transferred to registered social landlords. [77460]

Mr. McNulty: I have been asked to reply.

Local Authorities are already able to set such targets. The Housing Transfer Guidance 2002 Programme, issued by DTLR in September 2001, expects a local authority to ensure that each transfer proposal agreed with a new landlord delivers the energy efficiency targets that are implicit in the Government's decent homes target (to ensure all social housing is brought up to a decent standard by 2010).

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with HM Treasury on the ways in which economic policies and instruments might be used to assist home energy efficiency. [77470]

Mr. Morley: Defra and HM Treasury have carried out a joint consultation on economic instruments to improve household energy efficiency. The results of thisconsultation will be jointly considered, in the context of the wider process of preparing the Energy White Paper, which the Government aims to publish around the turn of the year. Any decisions on possible tax changes would be a matter for the Chancellor to consider as part of the Budget process.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to develop energy efficiency indicators, targets and monitoring mechanisms for each sector of the economy. [77471]

Mr. Morley: The Government will respond to the PIU's recommendations in the Energy White Paper, which the Government aims to publish around the turn of the year.

Agricultural Subsidies

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much the United Kingdom spent on assistance to agriculture in the last year for which figures are available; and what assistance was provided from EU sources. [79260]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 4 November 2002]: Public expenditure on agriculture in the United Kingdom in the 2000–01 financial year was £3,042million. The UK received £2,720million from the EU under the Common Agricultural Policy in its 2000–01 budget year. These figures include payments of market support, which may not have gone directly to farmers, as traders are also eligible.

Biofuels Directive

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department plans to take on the EU Biofuels Directive; what discussions she has had with those in the agriculture industry on the potential for production and use of non-food crops; and if she will make a statement. [77939]

Mr. Meacher: Negotiations on the EU biofuels targets Directive are still taking place and are being led by the Department for Transport. It is anticipated that the outcome of the discussions will be a requirement for member states to set indicative targets for the use of biofuels as a transport fuel by July 2005. The Government recognise that liquid biofuels and non-food crops in general have potential for UK agriculture and regular discussions are held with farmers and industry representatives on a wide range of non-food crops issues. The Government-Industry Forum on Non-Food Uses of Crops, which includes representatives from the farming sector, was set up in 2001 to review market opportunities for non-food crops and make recommendations to Government on policy affecting their use. The Forum is looking at several non-food crop applications, including biodiesel and bioethanol.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate her Department has made of the spread of bovine TB to farming areas restocked with cattle following the lifting of movement restrictions imposed after the foot and mouth outbreak last year. [77390]

Mr. Morley: All new incidents of bovine TB in cattle are recorded and subject to epidemiological investigation. The information obtained is added to the epidemiological database of information relating to the incidence of bovine TB in Great Britain.

Defra has commissioned extensive research into the transmission of bovine TB in restocked herds, this will cover a period of two years following restocking.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what targets her Department set for the testing of cattle for bovine TB during this year's summer months. [77392]

Mr. Morley: TB testing is an important element in the control of bovine TB. Reducing the number of overdue TB tests to an acceptable level following the testing backlog built up during the foot and mouth disease outbreak is one of the Department's priorities and an additional £3 million has been made available to the State Veterinary Service in England and Wales this year to help with this.

The uptake of testing is traditionally slower in summer months as cattle are out to pasture. While no specific targets were set for the testing of cattle for bovine TB over the summer Defra issued a press notice encouraging farmers to organise their tests. At the end of September the number of outstanding herd tests stood at just over 14,900 tests (down from 27,000 at the end of last year).

On 9 October Defra announced a package of measures for the control of bovine TB in cattle in England. Part of the package is the imposition of movement restrictions on herds with overdue tests. Movement restrictions are being introduced in stages to reflect the risk of disease attached to overdue tests and taking account of the resources available to test herds.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many new cases have been reported of TB on farms in Gloucestershire in the last 12 months; and if she will make a statement. [79315]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 4 November 2002]: In the 12-month period 1 October 2001 to 30 September 2002, 216 new TB incidents were reported on cattle premises in Gloucestershire.

The number of TB incidents reported depends on the number of tests carried out and the nature of the testing regime as well as the underlying prevalence of the disease. Testing resources over the 12 month period October 2001 to September 2002 were concentrated on herds with overdue tests following the foot and mouth disease (FMD) outbreak. These would have had a longer period in which to contract the disease. Those currently tested also contain a higher than usual proportion of high risk herds than were being tested prior to the FMD outbreak. As a consequence it is very difficult to assess whether there has been a greater increase in bovine TB than anticipated and it will remain difficult to interpret the numbers of incidents reported until the backlog of tests following the FMD outbreak has been cleared.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the interim assessment she has made of the cause of TB in cattle. [79316]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 4 November 2002]: Bovine TB in cattle is caused by the organism Mycobacterium bovis. Defra is funding a wide-ranging programme of research into how bovine TB is spread. It includes research into the nature of the disease in cattle; what factors in the environment increase the risk to cattle; the spread of the disease between cattle, and between cattle and wildlife; and the role of the badger and other wildlife in disease transmission. Research is still on-going. It is too early to draw conclusions at this stage.

Bushmeat

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost is per unit of X-ray equipment capable of the detection of bushmeat in aircraft passenger luggage. [75928]

Mr. Morley: The cost of X-ray machines varies with size and specification. Trained operators and associated personnel are also required, all of which add to the costs. Defra is investigating the potential for using X-ray machines to detect illegal imports of meat, meat products and bushmeat in passenger baggage and commercial freight entering the UK. Until these investigations are complete, we cannot calculate costings.

CAP Reform

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with EU entrant countries on CAP reform. [77305]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 28 October 2002]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and my noble Friend Lord Whitty met Ministers from Poland, Estonia, Romania and Turkey in July. CAP reform was among the topics discussed. In addition my noble Friend Lord Whitty visited Hungary, the Czech Republic and Estonia in September and CAP reform featured in his discussions with agriculture Ministers there.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with her European counterparts over reform of the Common Agricultural Policy. [77941]

Mr. Morley: Apart from regular contacts in the Agricultural Council my colleagues and I meet frequently to discuss this on a bilateral basis. Most recently I met with my German opposite number on 24 October and plan to meet my Spanish counterpart on 7 November.

Civil Service Secondments

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many individuals have been seconded to senior civil servant positions in her Department, in each case listing (a) from which organisation, (b) the duration to date and planned duration of secondment and (c) the source of current salary in secondment post. [78981]

Alun Michael: There has been one individual seconded to a senior civil servant position in this Department since its creation in June 2001. The details are as follows:

From	Duration	Source of current salary
Warwick University	March 2002 to March 2007	Warwick University

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many senior civil servants are seconded from her Department, in each case listing (a) location, (b) duration to date and planned duration of secondment and (c) source of current salary in secondment post. [78982]

Alun Michael: There are three senior civil servants seconded from this Department. Details are given in the table.

Collection Bins

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to introduce amnesty collection bins for food products at UK air and seaports. [77540]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 28 October 2002]: We are currently consulting the Home Office, the Department for Transport, HM Customs and Excise, and the relevant ports and airports, on the issues surrounding the provision of amnesty bins or equivalent measures to encourage the surrender of unintended illegal personal imports.

Common Agricultural Policy

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs under the Common Agricultural Policy dairy regime, what overall annual level of payments has been made to dairy processing and exporting companies in the UK over the last 10 years, broken down by type of (a) subsidy, (b) company and (c) product. [76614]

Mr. Morley: The table details expenditure on a calendar year for each of the dairy processing schemes and the dairy product based export refund schemes administered by the Rural Payments Agency (and previously the Intervention Board) from 1993 to 2002 inclusive. These schemes are prescribed by European Community regulation, but participation in them by the industry is entirely discretionary. Beneficiaries under these schemes include:

Creameries and traders (suppliers to the industry).

Manufacturers of pastries, cakes, biscuits, ice-cream, casein/caseinates and concentrated butter for direct consumption.

Suppliers of butter to non-profit making organisations.

Manufacturers of certain animal feedstuffs.

Manufacturers, suppliers (wholesale and retail) and victuallers who export dairy products to non-member countries.

The figures have been rounded to the nearest 100.

Rural payments agency annual payments made to dairy processing and exporting companies in the UK over the last 10 years

Correspondence

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, when she will reply to the correspondence from the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed dated 24 January referring to correspondence dated 23 October 2001 which was referred to her by the Paymaster General relating to constituents who let holiday cottages in an area subject to foot and mouth restrictions. [52099]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend the Paymaster General responded to the right hon. Member on 12 June. His original correspondence was sent to this Department inadvertently and was consequently transferred to HM Treasury.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will send a full response to the letter dated 18 April from the hon. Member for Leominster on behalf of Mr. A. T. F. Brodie, a constituent. [77025]

Mr. Morley: A response was sent to the hon. Member on 1 November.

Egg Packers

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has, in line with the Policy Commission on the Future of Farming and Food's recommendations, to undertake a formal review of the Supermarkets' Code of Practice in order to increase the certainty and security for egg producers by altering the Code in relation to contractual arrangements between egg packers and supermarkets. [77776]

Mr. Morley: We are in discussion with the Office of Fair Trading and the Department of Trade and Industry, which is responsible for policy on competition issues, over the Policy Commission's recommendations with regard to the code. Our response to these recommendations will be published in the Sustainable Farming and Food Strategy later this year.

Energy Efficiency

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what plans she has to expand existing domestic energy efficiency programmes; [77443]

(2) when she plans to develop a new strategy for home energy efficiency. [77444]

Mr. Morley: Decisions about current and future programmes for tackling domestic energy efficiency, including any future strategy, will be covered in the Energy White Paper, which the Government aims to publish around the turn of the year.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what improvement in energy efficiency in domestic properties by 2010 she expects to result from local authorities' activities under the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995; what the predictions were in the UK Climate Change Strategy; and if she will make a statement on how the discrepancies will be addressed. [77439]

Mr. Morley: Circular 2/96 indicated that the Secretary of State expected energy conservation authorities' reports to show a strategy for making at least substantial progress towards a 30 per cent. improvement over a 10-year period. Improvement in the first six years is just over 8 per cent.. It is therefore clear that authorities are not going to make the improvements they originally hoped for. Decisions about the future role of local authorities in local energy efficiency are expected to be covered in the Energy White Paper, which the Government aims to publish around the turn of the year.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if she will list the (a) number, (b) location, (c) socio-economic characteristics, and (d) amount received of those households who have qualified for grants under the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme (i) since it began operating and (ii) allocated for future periods; [77588]

(2) if she will list the (a) number, (b) location, (c) socio-economic characteristics and (d) amount applied for of those households who have applied unsuccessfully for grants under the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme since it began operating. [77587]

Mr. Morley: The Home Energy Efficiency Scheme is now marketed as The Warm Front Team, and is the Government's main programme for tackling fuel poverty in the private sector in England. The Scheme was launched in June 2000 and by June 2002 over 400,000 households had received assistance and some £200 million had been spent on installing measures. Warm Front provides insulation and heating measures depending upon the needs of the householder and the property type.

The Scheme Managers provide, on an annual basis, information on the number, location and measures installed under the scheme to local authorities. However, socio-economic information is not colleted. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam (Mr. Burstow) on 15 January 2002, Official Report, column 275W. Updated information is not available and could not be provided without incurring disproportionate cost.

Clients not eligible for assistance are not recorded. The numbers are likely to be significant and additional costs would be incurred in keying, and maintaining the two Scheme Managers' databases. As an indication of scale, it is estimated that the two call centres handle in the region of 20,000 calls per week in the winter.

The level of funding available for future years of Warm Front will be decided by the Department in the new year as part of the spending review process.

EU Agriculture Spending

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the procedures adopted by the EU if spending on agriculture in any year appears to be likely to exceed the budgetary estimates. [79257]

Mr. Morley: Heading 1 of the annual EC budget sets out expenditure appropriations for spending on the Common Agricultural Policy by budget line. In cases where expenditure for any line looked likely to exceed the appropriation the European Commission would be able to propose an in year transfer from another line within the heading. In the event of unavoidable, exceptional or unforeseen circumstances, the Commission may propose during the year that the budget be amended and submit a preliminary draft amending budget to the Council and the European Parliament. The Commission, Council and European Parliament would remain bound by the expenditure ceilings set down in the Financial Perspective and inter-institutional agreement on budget discipline.

Fallen Stock

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has for the disposal of fallen stock after April 2003; and if she will make available a free service of collection and disposal. [79264]

Mr. Morley: Since April 2002, the Government have been holding discussions with livestock and disposal industry stakeholders with the aim of developing a national fallen stock disposal scheme. At a stakeholder meeting on 18 September the collection and disposal industries submitted a joint proposal for a National Fallen Stock collection and disposal scheme. I intend to meet the industry to discuss their proposal. However, it is for the livestock industry, like other industries, to pay for the disposal of its waste.

Farm Employment

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many persons were employed in the farming industry in each of the past 10 years. [79262]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 4 November 2002]: The answer is as follows:

Total labour force in England

	Thousand
1991	445.0
1992	440.2
1994	430.9
1995	425.2
1996	420.5
1997	417.0
1998	415.0
1999	397.7
2000	373.9
2002 (provisional)	386.9

[1] The figures for June 2000 and 2001 are not directly comparable. Between 2000 and 2001 a review of temporary holdings took place, which resulted in the addition of holdings not previously included in the census. If these holdings had not been included in June 2001 the total agricultural labour force would have been recorded as 368.3 (thousands).

Notes:

1. Includes estimates for minor holdings.
2. The total labour force is that employed on registered agricultural holdings.
3. The estimates include employees, farmers, partners, directors and their spouses where the spouse works on the holding.
4. Estimates have been made for non-respondents
5. Figures exclude school children but include trainees employed under an official youth training scheme and paid at Agricultural Wages Board rates or above.
6. In 1998, fundamental changes were introduced to the labour questions on the June Agricultural and Horticultural Census in England. It appears that this change in questions may have led to the recording of additional Labour who were not previously included in the returns. We therefore advise caution when comparing the 1998 results with previous years.

Farming

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what encouragement the Government are giving to young people to enter farming; and if she will make a statement. [79242]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 4 November 2002]: One of the key tasks of Defra is to work with all concerned to develop an economically viable, sustainable, diverse and dynamic farming industry. Providing such an economic framework is the best way of encouraging young people to enter farming. My Department is preparing a response to the recommendations of the Policy Commission on the Future of Farming and Food; including its recommendations on entry into farming, and on ensuring new entrants have the right skills. An announcement will be made in due course.

Farming (Capping Levels)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with EU Farm Ministers about capping; what steps she is taking to increase the capping levels for UK farms; and if she will make a statement. [79233]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 4 November 2002]: We have made our position on capping of direct payments clear whenever this has been discussed at the Agriculture Council or at meetings of officials preparing for the council. We oppose capping of these payments in principle and have not taken any steps to modify the proposal by altering the levels at which capping would apply.

Fisheries

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions her Department has had with (a) the European Commission, (b) the French Government and (c) other EU member states regarding the possible impact of (i) pair trawling for bass and (ii) industrial fishing methods upon the wider marine environment and the conservation of cetaceans. [79021]

Mr. Morley: Commission proposals for the reform of the Common Fisheries Policy include a commitment to bring forward proposals by the end of 2002 to reduce cetacean bycatch and to commission from ICES a study of the impact of industrial fishing on the wider marine environment. These are plans which the UK supports and will be looking to drive forward when they come up for substantive discussion in the CFP review process. I have written to Commissioner Fischler and to the French Minister pressing the need for action in relation to cetacean bycatch, particularly in the bass fishery: the researchers contracted by Defra to trial measures to reduce cetacean bycatch have been meeting contacts from France and elsewhere to secure wider commitment to this work.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of the total allowable catch of cod available for each of the fisheries management areas for which cod quotas apply has been caught by each of the member states entitled to catch cod around the seas of the United Kingdom (a) in each of the last five years for which figures are available and (b) so far this catching year. [79024]

Mr. Morley: The table containing the required data has been placed in the Library.

Foot and Mouth

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of compensation payments made in the foot and mouth epidemic are estimated to have been in excess of the market value of the animals destroyed; and what steps the Department is taking to recover excessive payments. [79407]

Mr. Morley: Compensation values for animals destroyed in the foot and mouth epidemic were set in accordance with the Animal Health Act 1981 and reflected the market value i.e. the amount the animal destroyed would have fetched at market had it been sold at the time it was slaughtered.

Valuations were made by a large number of independent professional valuers operating as MAFF/ Defra's appointed experts working on site, with the animals in view and with the herd history, recent herd transactions and historical knowledge of market price obtainable for the breed and category of the animal being valued in the relevant geographical area.

150 valuations, about 1 per cent. of the number of valuations, were challenged where it was thought the valuations were excessive. The Department sought further evidence from the valuers on these valuations. This evidence was then scrutinised by the Department's professional adviser before payment was made.

As a result of the scrutiny four valuations were considered excessive. Two were reduced and two others are currently in the Department's Arbitration Unit still to be resolved.

Fuel Poverty

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received from the Fuel Poverty Advisory Group about progress towards meeting the objectives of the UK Fuel Poverty Strategy; and how she intends to respond. [77445]

Mr. Morley: The Fuel Poverty Advisory Group was set up, following the publication of the UK Fuel Poverty Strategy—November 2001, to advise Government on the delivery of its fuel poverty targets. The Group is to report annually to Ministers. The first annual report of the Group is expected around the turn of the year. The representations made will be given due consideration.

Home Energy Conservation

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations her Department received from local authorities (a) prior to and (b) following the withdrawal of the Home Energy Conservation Bill; and if she will list those authorities. [77403]

Mr. Morley: The performance figures for local authorities' progress with their HECA strategies compiled by DEFRA have been collected from the data provided by local authorities in their energy conservation reports. This data have not been subjected to a detailed statistical analysis. Nevertheless, in compiling figures and data relating to the overall position in England, instances where data provided by authorities was clearly incorrect or inappropriate have been pursued with the authority concerned, clarified and, where appropriate, and with the agreement of the authority concerned, amended.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions were held between her Department and the hon. Member for Brighton and Kempton (a) prior to and (b) following the withdrawal of the Home Energy Conservation Bill. [77407]

Mr. Morley: There were discussions between Ministers and the hon. Member for Brighton and Kempton at each stage of the Home Energy Conservation Bill. There have been no discussions following the withdrawal of this Bill.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she intends to adopt as Government policy the target of a 20 per cent. improvement in home energy efficiency by 2010; and if she will make a statement. [77433]

Mr. Morley: The Government will respond to the PIU's recommendations in the Energy White Paper, which the Government aims to publish around the turn of the year.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if she intends to offer further financial support to local authorities to assist them in meeting their targets under the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995; [77456]

(2) if she will make it her policy to fund fully the costs to local authorities of meeting the targets that they have set in their strategies under the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995; and if she will make a statement on any other policies and incentives which she intends to use to ensure that these targets are met. [77438]

Mr. Morley: The Government have no plans to provide local authorities with the full funding necessary to meet the targets they have set in their HECA strategies. Non-local authority programmes, such as the Government's Warm Front programme and gas and electricity suppliers' Energy Efficiency Commitment, will deliver the majority of the improvements needed to meet these non-statutory targets. The full cost will therefore not fall to local authorities. Any new obligations the Government placed on authorities would, of course, be funded in full.

Housing

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment procedures are in place to determine whether (a) shelters, (b) bedsits and (c) houses in multiple occupation are fit for habitation. [77422]

Mr. McNulty: I have been asked to reply.

A residential shelter will normally be regarded as a house in multiple occupation for the purpose of the Housing Act 1985 and a traditional bedsit will normally also form part of a house in multiple occupation.

Section 604 (1) of the Housing Act 1985 provides that a dwelling (including a house in multiple occupation) is fit for human habitation unless the local housing authority is of the opinion it is not reasonably suitable for occupation because it fails to meet one or more basic standards. These include that the dwelling is to be structurally stable, free from damp and serious disrepair; have adequate provisions for lighting, heating, ventilation and supply of water; have adequate facilities for the preparation and cooking of food; have suitably located toilet, bathing and washing facilities and an effective drainage system.

In addition section 352 (1A) of the Housing Act 1985 sets out further standards which may be applied in relation to a house in multiple occupation by a local housing authority in its determination of whether the property is fit for the number of persons or households occupying it. These standards include that the property has satisfactory facilities for preparing and cooking food; an adequate number of toilet, bathing and washing facilities and an adequate means of escape from fire and other fire precautions.

Illegal Meat Imports

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what resources have been provided in the last 12 months to ensure that enforcement officers' searches of suspected illegal meat imports will take place. [76010]

Mr. Morley: Searches for illegal imports of meat and meat products form part of the normal duties of port health authorities and local authorities. However, in this financial year, an extra £1.5 million has been allocated for checks to be conducted by additional enforcement officers at ports and airports. Defra is matching funding with the Food Standards Agency to provide additional training for enforcement officers on import rules.

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what additional measures have been taken to comply with the new rules and regulations which come into effect from 1 January 2003 regarding illegal import of meat and dairy products; and how much additional funding has been allocated to policing the rules and regulations. [79263]

Mr. Morley: The Products of Animal Origin (Third Country Imports) (England) Regulations 2002 will be amended to bring it into line with the new Commission decision on imports of meat and dairy products for personal consumption. Revised penalty posters are being produced, as well as updated information for travellers and airlines. Guidance to enforcement officers is being revised. Stakeholders are being informed of the changes.

The Government have allocated an extra £1.5 million in this financial year for additional enforcement officers at certain ports and airports.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many prosecutions there have been for the illegal importing of meat in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement. [79282]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 4 November 2002]: Figures on prosecutions for the illegal importation of meat are not collected centrally. Responsibility for prosecutions lies with local authorities. We are however aware of one successful prosecution this year, which was brought by Crawley borough council in July. The London Port health authority issued six cautions in October.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to increase the checks made at ports of entry to the United Kingdom of illegally imported meat; and if she will make a statement. [79319]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 4 November 2002]: Plans to increase checks at ports of entry to the United Kingdom are at an advanced stage. Additional checks started at two seaports at the beginning of October, are on target to start at a third seaport on 4 November. Two further teams will start work at airports on 11 and 12 November respectively.

Import Controls

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many representations she has had urging her to tighten import controls on meat from (a) the Meat and Livestock Commission, (b) the NFU and (c) others. [75143]

Mr. Morley: Frequent high-level meetings, at both ministerial and official levels, have been held with representatives of the NFU and, to a lesser extent, the MLC. Both the MLC and NFU sit on the Illegal Imports Risk Assessment Steering Group. Ben Gill, NFU President, addressed the Illegal Imports Stakeholders' Forum held on 21 March 2002. Also present were the International Meat Trade Association, British Meat Manufacturers' Association, National Beef Association, National Pig Association, National Sheep Association, World Wildlife Fund, UK Association of Frozen Food Producers, Local and Port Health Authorities, British Airports Authority and British Ports Association. Meetings of foot and mouth disease stakeholders groups have been held regularly this year, addressing the issue of illegal imports. We have also received a substantial number of written representations from individuals, and organisations including the WI, Townswomen, Councils, legal firms and agricultural equipment suppliers.

Intervention Stocks

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her policy towards Commission allowances for intervention stocks to be directed towards deprived persons; what categories of recipients exist; and in how many instances the Government have applied for such relief in the UK. [77253]

Mr. Morley: The EC Surplus Food Scheme was introduced in 1988 to reduce intervention stocks and benefit the most deprived persons in the Community (those receiving income support, family credit, disability working allowance, together with those living in welfare hostels, and the homeless and destitute). The UK withdrew from the scheme from 1996 because of the reduction of EC food mountains.

Meat Statistics

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much meat was (a) produced in the UK, (b) consumed in the UK and (c) imported into the UK in the last 10 years for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement. [79240]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 4 November 2002]: The following table shows the volume of UK home-fed production, UK imports and UK total new supply of meat for the years 1992–2001.

Supplies indicate the amount of meat available for immediate consumption in the UK.

Nitrate Vulnerable Zones

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement about (a) the areas included and (b) the exclusion of river water in the nitrate vulnerable zone scheme; how it will be policed; and how many extra forms will be generated by it. [79243]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 4 November 2002]: The Nitrates Directive requires the identification of polluted waters using the following criteria: (a) surface and groundwaters which contain or could contain, if preventative action is not taken, nitrate concentrations greater than 50 mg/l; (b) surface waters which are or could become, if preventative action is not taken, eutrophic.

The Nitrates Directive then requires all known land draining into these waters, from which agriculture could contribute to the pollution, to be designated as Nitrate Vulnerable Zones (NVZs). Around 55 per cent. of England has been designated as NVZs on the basis that it drains into these waters.

The Environment Agency (EA) are adopting a risk based approach to the enforcement of action programme measures which farmers located in the NVZs will be required to apply from 19 December 2002. The EA will prioritise farms that have the greatest potential for nitrate loss rather than visiting all farms, and will aim to work with farmers to help achieve compliance over a period of time.

There is no requirement for farmers to fill in any new forms to comply with this legislation. Farmers in Nitrate Vulnerable Zones are expected to keep records of their application of manures and fertilisers. However, there is complete flexibility for farmers to do this in whatever way is most convenient for them, including using existing field records.

Non-food Uses of Crops

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress the Government Industry Forum on Non-Food Uses of Crops has made; and if she will make a statement. [79869]

Mr. Meacher: Over the past year the forum has met six times and has been working on a number of studies of areas of potential development in the non-food crops sector. Examples include biopackaging, the use of natural fibres in composite materials, biosolvents and biolubricants. The forum has also considered generic issues which affect this sector. The forum published its first annual report in August 2002 which details its work and sets out its first series of recommendations to Government. I am placing copies of the report in the Libraries of both Houses.

Pigswill

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government has made to the EU about EU member states still using pigswill. [76314]

Mr. Morley: In negotiations on the EU Animal By-Products Regulation, the UK opposed any delay in introducing an EU-wide ban on swill feeding. However, to secure adoption of the regulation, the UK accepted that a transition period might be appropriate for two member states, Austria and Germany, providing suitable controls were in place during that period.

Public Paths

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Government intend to bring forward statutory instruments to implement the part of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 that will reclassify roads used as public paths as restricted byways. [79379]

Alun Michael: Our aim is to consult on the content of the regulations needed to implement the restricted byway provisions no later than March 2003.

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many roads used as public paths have been reclassified as bridleways following review of their usage in accordance with section 54 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981; [79381]

(2) how many roads used as public paths have been reclassified as byways open to all traffic following review of their usage in accordance with section 54 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981; [79383]

(3) how many roads used as public paths have been reclassified as footpaths following review of their usage in accordance with section 54 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981. [79382]

Alun Michael: The reclassification of RUPPS is the responsibility of Highway Authorities. The information sought is not available centrally.

River Parrett Catchment Project

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if she has received a proposal from the Parrett catchment project to fund a sluice on the River Parrett; [78751]

(2) if she has received a proposal from the Parrett catchment project for a sluice on the Parrett. [78747]

Mr. Morley: A tidal sluice is one of the component options being considered by the Environment Agency (EA) as part of its Parrett Catchment Water Management Action Plan. The EA advises that the technical, environmental and economic evaluation of options is on-going and Defra has not yet received any formal proposal for the proposed sluice on the River Parrett.

School Milk Scheme

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much her Department has spent on the School Milk Scheme in (a) 2000–01, (b) 2001–02 and (c) 2002–03 to date. [78385]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 31 October 2002]: For the year 1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001 the expenditure on School Milk Subsidy was £8,010,877.57.

For year 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002 the expenditure increased to £8,632,079.31.

For year 1 April 2002 to 29 October 2002 the expenditure was £5,849,398.72.

Water Courses

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Environment Agency regarding the cleaning of water courses; and if she will make a statement. [79237]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 4 November 2002]: The Department has frequent discussions with the Environment Agency on reducing pollution from water courses.

Water Industry

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment has been carried out to establish that a customer threshold of 50 megalitres per annum in non-domestic water supply will enable a new entrant to make a viable financial return. [77013]

Mr. Morley: The Government published a consultation paper on July 31; "Extending Opportunities for Competition in the Water Industry in England and Wales". This proposed competition only in the non-household sector, with an eligibility threshold of a minimum of 50 megalitres (Ml) a year. The consultation period closed on 1 October and we are now considering responses.

In preparing the proposals, assessment was made of the broad cost breakdown between the main elements of the supply chain, the likely scope for making savings on these, and the ranges of charges paid by users. Experience shows that the market will determine financial viability in a competitive environment.

These issues will be taken into consideration as we balance the need to create opportunities for competition while continuing to secure the Government's wider objectives for the water industry, which include protecting public health, the environment, social and economic goals, and safeguarding services for household customers.

Wood for Good Campaign

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what contribution the Wood for Good campaign is making towards the goal of ensuring that all timber into the UK is from legal and sustainable sources. [77581]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 28 October 2002]: The impact of the Wood for Good campaign has recently been evaluated by an independent consultancy. The study showed that the campaign is meeting its objectives. These objectives do not include ensuring that all imported timber is from legal and sustainable sources. However, the campaign has improved understanding of the environmental safeguards in wood supplied from the member countries. The demand for construction timber from the member countries has increased and is attributed in part to the campaign.

Woodland Grants Scheme

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much was made available through the Woodland Grants Scheme in (a) 2000–01, (b) 2001–02 and (c) 2002–03; and how many applicants and how much was received by each recipient through the scheme in each of those years. [78393]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 31 October 2002]: The information is given in the table.

	Total paid	Number of schemes for which payments were made	Number of payments made
2000–01	16,513,784	7,639	8,898
2001–02	15,796,737	7,063	8,065
2002–03 (to date)	9,602,179	4,816	5,333

Some applicants have more than one scheme and some have received more than one payment in a year. A list of individual payments would involve thousands of entries, and has not therefore been produced.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

China

12. Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the possible effects if Article 23 of the Basic Law in Hong Kong is enacted; and what representations he is making to the Government of the People's Republic of China. [77173]

Mr. Rammell: The Hong Kong Special Administrative Region Government have published outline proposals—but not yet draft legislation—on implementing Article 23. We have made clear to them that any legislation should be consistent with the principles of the Sino-British Joint Declaration on Hong Kong and the two UN human rights covenants.

International Terrorism

13. Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the state of the international coalition against terrorism. [77174]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The coalition against terrorism that we helped to build in the aftermath of 11 September remains resolute in its objective to eradicate terrorism as a force in international affairs. It has a long list of achievements to its credit: apart from Afghanistan, terrorists have been disrupted and arrested around the world, and there have been significant steps forward in international co-operation. But we have no illusions about how much more needs to be done.

Poland

14. Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the UK's relations with Poland. [77176]

Mr. MacShane: Relations between the UK and Poland are excellent.

Pakistan

16. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the outcome of the recent provincial and parliamentary elections. [77178]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We welcome the holding of multi-party elections in Pakistan. They are an important milestone in Pakistan's on-going transition to democracy. The next crucial step is the transfer of power to the new National Assembly and establishing its role. We are committed to remaining engaged with Pakistan throughout the transition.

Israel

17 Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Israel and the Palestinian Authority. [77179]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Lasting security can only be achieved through a negotiated settlement, not through force. We are committed to reviving final status negotiations by the end of the year. They must have explicitly as their aims an Israeli state free from terror and a viable Palestinian state based on UN Security Council Resolutions 242, 338 and 1397. We fully support the efforts of the Quartet to agree a roadmap which sets out a series of steps, leading to a final and comprehensive settlement by 2005. The priority now is to agree and implement the roadmap.

21 Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what areas of (a) disagreement and (b) agreement he has with the US Administration about the Israel-Palestinian negotiations. [77183]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: In the House on 25 June my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary welcomed the approach to restarting the peace process set out in President Bush's speech of 24 June. We continue to work closely with the US to turn President Bush's vision of a final settlement within three years into a reality. What ever tactical disagreements might arise we are committed to working together to resolve them without delay.

29. Mr. Tom Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent initiatives he has undertaken to promote a peaceful dialogue between Israel and the Palestinian Authority. [77192]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Lasting security can only be achieved through a negotiated settlement, not through force. We are committed to reviving final status negotiations by the end of the year. They must have explicitly as their aims an Israeli state free from terror and a viable Palestinian state based on UN Security Council Resolutions 242, 338 and 1397. We fully support the efforts of the Quartet to agree a roadmap which sets out a series of steps, leading to a final and comprehensive settlement by 2005. The priority now is to agree and implement the roadmap.

34. Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, What action he is taking to secure a peace settlement in the Middle East on the basis of UN Resolutions 242 and 338. [77197]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Lasting security can only be achieved through a negotiated settlement, not through force. We are committed to reviving final status negotiations by the end of the year. They must have explicitly as their aims an Israeli state free from terror and a viable Palestinian state based on UN Security Council Resolutions 242, 338 and 1397. We fully support the efforts of the Quartet to agree a roadmap which sets out a series of steps, leading to a final and comprehensive settlement by 2005. The priority now is to agree and implement the roadmap.

Nigeria

18. Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he is taking to tackle the human rights abuses involved in Northern Nigeria states' use of Sharia law. [77180]

Mr. Rammell: In September my noble Friend Baroness Amos, the Minister for Africa, raised with President Obasanjo HMG's concerns about the harsh sentences imposed under the Sharia penal codes. She emphasised the strength of feeling against them in the UK and reiterated HMG's opposition to the death penalty in all circumstances. The high commission, together with EU partners, regularly raises our concerns about the sentences with the appropriate authorities in Nigeria.

Zimbabwe

20. Tony Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with EU counterparts on the political situation in Zimbabwe. [77182]

Mr. Rammell: We regularly discuss Zimbabwe with our EU partners, at official, ministerial and Heads of Government level. We have worked hard to achieve an EU consensus on policy towards Zimbabwe. This resulted in the EU's Common Position of 18 February, which imposed an EU wide travel ban and an assets freeze on key members of the Mugabe regime. The EU has extended the sanctions twice since February and they now apply to 79 people. We are in regular contact with EU partners to ensure that the sanctions are applied in accordance with the Common Position.

Our dialogue with EU partners on Zimbabwe is on-going. The Minister for Africa, Baroness Amos, is travelling to Maputo in Mozambique this week, for talks between EU Foreign Ministers and Ministers representing the 14 SADC countries.

Finland

22. Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on bilateral relations with Finland. [77184]

Mr. MacShane: Bilateral relations are good. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister last met the Finnish Prime Minister Paavo Lipponen bilaterally in London on 21 October and my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary met his Finnish opposite Erkki Tuomioja on 27 September. We are close EU partners and trading with Finland.

Kashmir

24. Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussion he has had with his counterparts in India and Pakistan about human rights abuses in Kashmir. [77186]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, has raised human rights abuses regularly with the Governments of India and Pakistan, including during his last visit to the region on 18–20 July. I also recently discussed a wide range of human rights issues, including Kashmir, during my visit to India on 17 October.

Mr. Peter Devlin

25. Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he has taken in the case of (a) Peter Devlin from Falmouth and (b) other divers involved in the Friesland salvage. [77187]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: When our consular staff in Madrid were notified on 21 June of the men's detention they contacted the court and were told that Mr. Devlin and the other divers had been released pending further investigations. Our consular staff in London have spoken to Mr. Devlin on five occasions about the matter and our Honorary Consul in Vigo spoke to the judge hearing the case who confirmed that some, but not all, of the men's equipment would be released. My noble Friend Baroness Amos wrote to my hon. Friend on 11 October explaining that this was a legal matter and that the company should be guided by its lawyer.

EU Enlargement

26. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, if he will make a statement on progress towards EU enlargement. [77188]

Mr. MacShane: In line with the objective first set by the Prime Minister, the Brussels European Council agreed that ten candidate countries should be ready to join the EU in 2004 (Cyprus, Czech Republic, Estonia, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Malta, Poland, Slovakia and Slovenia). It also confirmed the objective of completing negotiations with these countries this year. Brussels also confirmed that enlargement will not stop there. The UK welcomes the progress made by Romania, Bulgaria and Turkey.

Colombia

30. Paul Goggins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, What recent discussions he has had with the Colombian Government in connection with their efforts to restore peace and security. [77193]

Mr. Rammell: My hon. Friend the Minister for Europe visited Colombia from 6–8 October. He met President Uribe and other Ministers, and representatives of British and Colombian NGOs and Colombian Trade Unions. He emphasised our willingness to help tackle Colombia's grave problems as well as the importance of further progress on human rights.

Iraq

31. Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, What recent discussions his Department has had with the US Administration concerning Iraq. [77194]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We regularly discuss Iraq with the United States and our other Security Council partners. It is essential that we maintain the pressure on Iraq to comply with its obligations under UN resolutions, including on disarmament, through a tough new United Nations resolution that will ensure the weapons inspectors can complete their task effectively.

37. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, If he will make a statement on the UN weapons inspection programme for Iraq. [77200]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Executive Chairman of UNMOVIC and the Director-General of the IAEA are responsible for ensuring that a work programme for inspections in Iraq is drawn up. It is envisaged that the task of drawing up a work programme will take some 45 days after the arrival in Iraq of inspection teams. The work programme will then be put before the UN Security Council for approval.

Iran

32. Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, What steps are being taken by the Government to encourage the Government of Iran to guarantee human rights for all its citizens. [77195]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We raise human rights issues with the Iranian authorities at all levels. My right honourable Friend the Foreign Secretary did so while in Iran on 9 October. We supported the recent EU decision to establish a formal dialogue on human rights with Iran with the hope that this will bring about improvements in Iran's respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms. We have made clear that we expect to see concrete results and will assess progress before taking a decision on whether to sponsor a resolution at the Commission on Human Rights.

Convention on the Future of Europe

35. Ms Munn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress in the Convention on the Future of Europe. [77198]

Mr. MacShane: I refer my honourable Friend to the answer I gave earlier in the House today to my honourable Friend the Member for Rhonnda.

Arms Sales

36. Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the breach of UN sanctions by European countries on the sale of arms. [77199]

Mr. Rammell: The Government works to ensure the rigorous enforcement of United Nations (UN) Sanctions and takes all breaches very seriously. When the Government receives information regarding an alleged breach by a third country we raise the issue with the country concerned. We also where appropriate ensure that the breach is acted on by the relevant UN Sanctions Committee.

Afghanistan

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans are in place to provide continuing security to Afghanistan through the International Security Assistance Force. [79664]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The United Nations Security Council Resolution authorising the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) in Kabul and its immediate environs will expire on 20 December. There is, however, a clear need for ISAF to remain in Kabul for the foreseeable future. We are in discussion with our UN partners about an extension beyond that date. The provisional offer made by Germany and the Netherlands on 24 September to replace Turkey as lead nation of ISAF is very welcome and is an important sign of the international community's continued commitment to sustaining ISAF for as long as it is required.

Bali

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the remains of British citizens killed in the Bali bombing to be returned to relatives in the United Kingdom. [79524]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The remains of 14 victims of the Bali bombing have been repatriated.

We are still awaiting the positive identification of three British victims. This is expected to be completed within the next few weeks.

Four British Citizens are still missing.

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support the British Government are giving to the Indonesian and Australian authorities who are engaged in the identification process of those murdered in the Bali bombing. [79525]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We immediately sent a team of police officers led by the anti-terrorism branch to Bali including investigators, family liaison officers and officers skilled in identification processes. A UK coroner and pathologist travelled to Bali to ensure the Indonesian/Australian identification and repatriation processes were in line with ours. Police and consular staff are present throughout the day in the local mortuary. British police also arranged for relatives' DNA samples both in the UK and overseas to be taken and transferred to Australia for profiling.

Beryllium

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry's Answer of 22nd October, Official Report, column 247W, on beryllium, what end-use monitoring has been undertaken in relation to the export of beryllium to Iran. [78875]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: As stated by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State at the Department of Trade and Industry (Mr Nigel Griffiths) on 28 October 2002, Offical Report, Columns 531–532W, the Government attaches great importance to ensuring that UK exports are not misused, diverted or re-exported to undesirable end-uses. A risk assessment was made at the licensing stage of this export, including careful examination of information about the proposed end-use and end-user of the goods. We continue to believe that the export of less than half an ounce of beryllium to the University of Science and Technology in Tehran is not of concern with respect to use in weapons of mass destruction and that the end-use stated in the original export licence application was legitimate. In these circumstances we have considered end-use monitoring not to be necessary for this export.

Bus Lanes (Government Cars)

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when a Government car service vehicle in which he was a passenger last travelled outside the exempted hours on bus lanes; and what exemption there is to rules about passenger cars using bus lanes in central London for ministerial cars. [78488]

Mr. Straw: The official vehicles in which I travel are not operated by the Government car service. They are adapted for police use, and are driven by police officers who are subject to the same provisions of the law as other officers in similar circumstances.

Cayman Islands

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what developments there have been in the constitutional review process in the Cayman Islands. [79982]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We have now completed our review of the report of the Constitutional Review Commissioners and associated papers, forwarded by the Governor of the Cayman Islands in August. We have invited representatives of both Government and Opposition parties to an informal meeting in London on 9–11 December to discuss how to take the various proposals forward. I have made arrangements for the relevant reports to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Eritrea

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he will make to the Eritrean authorities concerning persecution of evangelical Christians in that country. [79190]

Mr. Rammell: In May this year, the Ministry of Information ordered all minority religious groups to register or cease all activities. The outcome of the registration process is not yet clear.

Our Ambassador in Asmara, along with other EU Missions, raised the issue of human rights at every opportunity. He discussed the issue of registration of minority churches with the relevant Minister in June.

We will continue to raise breaches of fundamental human rights bilaterally and with EU Partners.

Guatemala

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on the attacks carried out against human rights workers in Guatemala; [78774]

(2) what assessment he has made of the human rights situation in Guatemala; [78773]

(3) what representations he has made to the Government of Guatemala regarding implementation of the commitments it made to the Grupo Consultivo in February. [78775]

Mr. Rammell: The human rights situation in Guatemala has improved since the end of the civil war in 1996. But it remains unsatisfactory. MINUGUA (UN Verification Mission to Guatemala) has expressed deep concern at the increase in intimidation against human rights activists, politicians, members of the judiciary and media involved in efforts to confront impunity. The UK shares MINUGUA's concerns and will continue to work with the EU to urge the Government of Guatemala to take all necessary measures to protect these groups and bring human rights abusers to justice quickly.

When my predecessor, my hon. Friend the Member for Rotherham (Mr. MacShane) visited Guatemala in May this year he saw for himself the difficulties facing human rights defenders. In his discussions with the Government, he emphasised the importance HMG attaches to human rights.

HMG urges the Government of Guatemala to implement all unfulfilled commitments under the Peace Accords, particularly those relating to human rights. The UK, with the EU, will continue to monitor the human rights' situation in Guatemala, and the Government's efforts to honour their commitments.

International donors (including the UK) will review the Guatemalan Government's progress at the follow-up meeting of the Consultative Group (The "Group Consultivo")in spring 2003. This will not be a formality.

Lisbon Council

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made on the economic objectives agreed at the Lisbon Council. [77171]

Mr. MacShane: There has been progress in the sense of 5 million new jobs in the EU since 2000, and cheaper telephone calls thanks to telecom liberalisation but the EU needs to go further in order to advance its ambition of being the world's most dynamic and job creating economy by 2010.

Ministerial Meetings (Namibia)

Mr Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the President of Namibia; whether he discussed the present land situation in Zimbabwe; what other matters were discussed; what plans he has to assess the need for a legal programme of land resettlement in Namibia; and if he will make a statement. [78804]

Mr. Rammell: [holding reply of 4 November]. We support the need for land reform in Namibia, but any programme must be transparent and within the rule of law. My noble Friend the Minister for Africa met the Namibian Foreign Minister on 17 September. She raised our concerns about land reform in both Namibia and Zimbabwe. On the same day, President Nujoma addressed the Namibian Agricultural Union assuring them that land reform would proceed within the rule of law and would be transparent.

PLO (Intifada)

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on negotiations with Chairman Arafat of the PLO regarding the intifada. [78441]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: International efforts are currently focussed on ending violence in Israel and the Occupied Territories, including the current intifada, by restarting a process of negotiation which will lead to a final settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian dispute. We continue to give those efforts our full support.

Poppy Farming

28. Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the change in levels of poppy farming since the overthrow of the Taliban regime. [77190]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The UK contributes funds to the opium poppy survey in Afghanistan conducted by the United Nations Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention. It reported on 25 October that poppy cultivation in 2002 was 74,000 hectares. This is more than in 2001, but significantly less than the record level in 1999 when 91,583 hectares were cultivated.

Prisoners (Peru)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he will make to the Peruvian Government concerning (a) the imprisonment of Olga Gonzalez Zevallos, Jorge Julian Godoy and Carlos Yalle Laura and (b) the incarceration of other prisoners who have been recommended for release by the Peruvian Government's Pardoning Commission. [79189]

Mr. Rammell: Our Embassy in Lima last raised these cases with the Peruvian Ministry of Justice on 31 October. The Ministry said that the cases are being reviewed but admit delays are occurring in the process due to lack of resources.

Private Sector Secondments

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what committee within his Department overseas the placement and monitoring of secondments from outside organisations to his Department. [78154]

Mr. Rammell: British Trade International—the joint DTI/FCO body responsible for trade development and promotion of inward investment—overseas the placement and monitoring of secondments from outside organisations to Foreign and Commonwealth Office. In doing so BTI respects the Cabinet Office guidelines on interchange and the Civil Service Commissioners' Recruitment Code.

Radio Voice of Hope

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether his Department is contributing towards the South Sudanese radio station Radio Voice of Hope. [79386]

Mr. Rammell: HMG has not contributed to Radio Voice of Hope.

Somalia

19 Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the situation in Somalia. [77181]

Mr. Rammell: I join the international community in welcoming the ceasefire deal signed on 27 October by Somali groups taking part in the peace and reconciliation conference at Eldoret. I hope it will pave the way for a return to peace and stability in Somalia.

Sudan

15. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the (a) situation and (b) peace negotiations in Sudan. [77177]

Mr. Rammell: The Government of Sudan and the Sudan People's Liberation Movement/Army resumed the peace talks on 14 October and have agreed a cessation of hostilities and unrestricted humanitarian access for the duration of the talks. We welcome these developments and shall continue to provide our full support as they work for a just and lasting peace.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the status of Operation Lifeline Sudan; and whether flights are reaching those people in need of food and other necessities. [79387]

Mr. Rammell: Operation Lifeline Sudan remains the principal mechanism by which humanitarian assistance is provided to war-affected areas in Sudan. The UN and the Humanitarian Affairs Commission and the Sudan Relief and Rehabilitation Authority met in Nairobi on 25 October, they discussed the implementation of unrestricted humanitarian access agreed in the Memorandum of Understanding on the Cessation of Hostilities on 17 October. We warmly welcome these developments.

We continue to urge all parties to give all possible help to the UN and non governmental organisations (NGOs) to ensure speedy delivery of humanitarian assistance. Our Ambassador in Khartoum raised the general issue of humanitarian access with the Sudanese Minister of International Co-operation on 24 October.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on funding arrangements through the UNHCR for refugees in the Sudan. [79388]

Mr. Rammell: This year the UK is providing a core contribution of £14 million to UNHCR and in each of the following years (£56 million over four years). Sudan is one of UNHCR'spriorities.

Sudan-Eritrea Relations

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations between Sudan and Eritrea. [79385]

Mr. Rammell: Relations between Sudan and Eritrea were formally restored in January 2000. Recent tension caused by fighting in eastern Sudan has affected relations between the two countries. But this has eased since the signing on 17 October of a Memorandum of Understanding on a cessation of hostilities between the Government of Sudan and the Sudan People's Liberation Movement/Army.

Taiwan

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations with Taiwan. [79035]

Mr. Rammell: HMG does not recognise Taiwan as an independent state. We acknowledge the position of the Chinese Government that Taiwan is a province of the People's Republic of China. Taiwan is one of the world's largest economies and a key economic partner for the UK. Although we do not have diplomatic relations with Taiwan, we are keen to develop further economic, financial, cultural, educational, science and technology and other exchanges where we have mutual interests. The British Trade and Cultural Office in Taipei actively promotes these exchanges and represents British interests in Taiwan in the absence of formal relations.

Terrorism

33. Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, If he will make a statement about the state of the international coalition against terrorism. [77196]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The coalition against terrorism that we helped to build in the aftermath of 11 September remains resolute in its objective to eradicate terrorism as a force in international affairs. It has a long list of achievements to its credit: apart from Afghanistan, terrorists have been disrupted and arrested around the world, and there have been significant steps forward in international cooperation. But we have no illusions about how much more needs to be done.

Trade Relations

27. Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action his Department is taking to promote trade relations between India and the United Kingdom. [77189]

Mr. Rammell: Trade Partners UK is a joint FCO and DTI organisation, established to enhance the competitiveness of companies in the UK through overseas sales and investments. It has a comprehensive business plan to help UK firms expand their activity in the Indian Market. This includes a wide range of activities in business sectors where there are commercial opportunities.

The New Delhi Declaration signed by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and the Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Atal Bihari Vajpayee, in January this year, includes a section highlighting the importance of our bilaterial trade and investment relationship.

Uzbekistan

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's relations with Uzbekistan with particular reference to human rights and religious freedom. [76657]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The UK's relationship with Uzbekistan is developing well. Since 1992 we have seen Embassies established both in Uzbekistan and the UK. Both are extremely active and are doing much to bring the relationship forward. Education and drugs co-operation are key elements of that relationship.

Much of the UK's work in Uzbekistan is devoted to pressing for improvements in the human rights situation. Bilaterally, and through the EU and the OSCE, we have urged Uzbekistan to take greater steps towards democratisation and respect for human rights. We recognise that there have been some small steps to address the human rights situation, including an invitation to the UN Special Rapporteur for Torture. But Uzbekistan needs to do much more. In particular, we would like to see reform of the criminal justice system, and wider recognition of independent human rights groups, religious groups and political parties. We stand ready to help Uzbekistan make these improvements, in line with its international obligations and commitments.

Weapons of Mass Destruction

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking, within the United Nations, to secure the right of unrestricted access of weapons inspectors to identify whether Russia has been acquiring undeclared weapons of mass destruction. [78569]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Russia is a State Party to all the major arms control treaties governing weapons of mass destruction—the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT), the Biological Weapons Convention (BWC) and the Chemical Weapons Convention (CWC). Russia already complies with the inspection requirements imposed by its treaty obligations.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations between the United Kingdom Government and the Government of Zimbabwe. [78442]

Mr. Rammell: Relations between the United Kingdom and Zimbabwe are poorer than at any time since Zimbabwe's independence in 1980. The ZANU (PF) regime has undermined the democratic principles on which an independent Zimbabwe was founded. It has manipulated the democratic process to retain power, as clearly seen during the presidential election in March and in elections since. It has used violence, intimidation and the withholding of food aid to cow the opposition and gain political advantage. It has seriously undermined the independence of the judiciary and subverted the rule of law. It has systematically attacked Zimbabwe's free and independent media. Its record on human rights abuses is appalling. Its economic and land policies are major contributors to the current humanitarian crisis. Relations between the UK and Zimbabwe will not improve until a government in Harare makes a genuine attempt to address these concerns.

HEALTH

Cancer

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to include figures for patients awaiting diagnostic tests in the national cancer waiting lists currently published by the NHS. [75771]

Ms Blears: The NHS Cancer Plan set out waiting time targets for cancer. These targets aim to reduce the amount of time patients have to wait from urgent referral to beginning treatment, which will include the diagnostic phase, and from diagnosis of cancer to first treatment. We have no plans to include waiting times for individual diagnostic tests in cancer waiting times monitoring.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations his Department has received concerning the number of patients that have been denied treatment with specific cancer drugs, including Herceptin, owing to delays in obtaining NICE guidance. [75801]

Ms Blears: Prior to publication of recommendations by the National Institute of Clinical Excellence (NICE), the Department received numerous representations about the availability of Glivec for the treatment of chronic myeloid leukaemia; Herceptin for the treatment of breast cancer and MabThera for the treatment of follicular lymphoma.

The appraisal process, from referral to completion, has been designed to allow the full participation of patients, clinicians, companies and stakeholders. NICE is fully aware of the need to ensure that the process is as streamlined as possible, without losing any of the important safeguards it contains, in order to publish guidance soon after the treatments are launched.

It is not acceptable for funding authorities to refuse to fund a newly licensed treatment just because it is awaiting appraisal by NICE. Decisions on funding should be based on local consideration of the available evidence when NICE appraisals are awaited.

Acute Beds

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many acute beds there were in each of the last five years; and how many he expects there to be in the next 12 months. [78698]

Mr. Hutton: The average daily number of beds in acute wards in England since 1996 is:

Year	Acute beds
1996–1997	108,869
1997–1998	107,807
1998–1999	107,729
1999–2000	107,218
2000–2001	107,956

Source:
Department of Health form KH03

The NHS Plan made a commitment to increase the number of beds in general & acute wards by 2,100 by 2004.

BCG Vaccination

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the suspension of BCG vaccination programmes in schools. [78849]

Ms Blears [holding answer 4 November 2002]: There have been concerns over the school BCG programme following Evans Vaccines Ltd. withdrawing all batches of the BCG vaccine as a precautionary measure. However, the Danish company Statens Serum Institut (SSI) were granted a trading licence by the Medicines Control Agency for its BCG vaccine on 9 September this year.

Stocks of SSI's BCG vaccine are currently being packaged for the UK market and we hope to receive this in mid-November. Once BCG supplies are available, the priority will be to vaccinate those at highest risk of tuberculosis, principally new born babies whose parents are from higher risk communities or who live in high risk areas. The schools programme will then follow on afterwards.

Biological Drugs

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he intends to provide to patients regarding the safe (a) transport, (b) storage and (c) use of biological drugs. [78489]

Ms Blears: information regarding the transport, storage and use of biological drugs is specifically provided on the product label and, in more detail, in the patient information leaflet (PIL). The PIL is supplied with the packaged product. Information and advice on transport, storage and handling of each medicinal product is based upon the scientific data, including the stability of the drug in the final packaging, which is evaluated as part of the marketing authorisation application.

Biotechnology

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies he has funded this year to consider the impact of patenting biotechnology inventions on health care provision; for what purpose such studies were funded; and when they will be published. [77875]

Ms Blears: The Department has commissioned an independent study into the impact and management of intellectual property rights within the health care sector. This fulfils the commitment made in the Government's response to the report on human genetic databases from the Select Committee on Science and Technology in the other place. The study is proceeding in two stages. The first stage is complete and a report entitled "Identification of Intellectual Property Rights Relating to Healthcare" was published in September 2002. A conference to discuss the outputs of the second stage of the study and to build a consensus on possible actions is being planned for 12 February 2003.

Blood Products

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to submit all blood and blood derivative products available in the United Kingdom to the Medicines Control Agency; [75003]

(2) what plans he has for all plasma products to be evaluated by NICE. [75005]

Ms Blears: There are no plans to submit blood and blood components to the Medicines Control Agency for licensing. We do not believe that doing so would confer any additional public health benefit. The Medicines Control Agency already ensures that the United Kingdom blood services meet European good manufacturing practice standards. In addition, the new European Blood Directive will, when adopted, require the accreditation of all blood establishments to ensure common standards of safety and quality in blood and blood components across all Members States. We have no plans to refer the use of all plasma products to NICE for evaluation. Safety issues relating to plasma products fall within the remit of the United Kingdom expert advisory committee on the microbiological safety of blood and tissues for transplantation (MSBT). MSBT seeks specialist advice where necessary or includes the relevant specialists among its members.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the safety of fresh frozen plasma and methylene blue treated plasma; and if he will make a statement. [75004]

Ms Blears: The Government's advisory committee on the microbiological safety of blood and tissues for transplantation (MSBT) is continuing to consider the relative efficacy and risks of the different types of fresh frozen plasma (FFP) available. United Kingdom FFP is already a very safe product. To minimise the risk from viruses, it is made only from previously tested blood donors. The current high levels of safety are achieved by screening out potential high risk donors and then further testing every unit of donated blood for the presence of infections such as HIV, hepatitis B and hepatitis C. FFP produced by the national blood service (NBS), using UK donors, has also been leucodepleted to remove white cells, which evidence suggests may carry the greatest risk of transmitting vOD. Over 300,000 units of FFP are issued annually and it is only given in life-threatening situations to prevent or stop haemorrhage associated with abnormal blood clotting. MSBT has recommended importing single unit FFP from the United States. On 15 August 2002 the Government announced that imported FFP will be used for new-born babies and young children born after 1 January 1996, as an added precaution against the theoretical risk of vCJD transmission. On the advice of MSBT, US sourced FFP will be virally inactivated using methylene blue (MB) treatment. MB has been administered in medical practice since 1900, and in much larger doses (many thousand-fold) than the NBS will be using. NBS will be removing more than 90 per cent, of MB before the FFP is issued to National Health Service hospitals. MB is a registered medical device under the Medical Devices Directive and has a European safety (CE) marking.

Cardiac Surgical Services

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what further cardiac surgical services are planned in West London; and when they will be operational. [77970]

Mr. Hutton: The parallel developments at Hammersmith Hospital and the Paddington Basin will see the creation of two specialist centres for heart surgery in north west London in modern facilities to replace the existing centres. The two centres will provide benefits of greater service concentration, including integration with a wider range of services, and a strengthened teaching and research capacity. Whilst the developments are underway investment is being made to improve existing services. This includes creating more surgical capacity where possible and replacing worn out equipment, including operating theatres and catheter laboratories to ensure that services continue to improve in line with patient and Government expectations.

Child Protection

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many child protection officers who had been in post for more than one year were active in each London borough and metropolitan borough in the last year; [78018]

(2) how many child protection officers were active in each London borough and metropolitan borough in each of the past five years. [78017]

Jacqui Smith: Data on the number of staff working in child protection are not available centrally.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what role the Department of Health plays in ensuring adequate child protection among vulnerable families living in Army garrisons. [78029]

Jacqui Smith: Local authorities have the statutory responsibility for the protection of the children of service families, including those living in army garrisons. All three armed services also provide professional welfare support, including "special to type" social work services and, in some cases, medical services to augment those provided by local authorities. When UK service families are based overseas, the responsibility for the protection of their children is vested with the Ministry of Defence.

The Department of Health, the Home Office and the Department for Education and Employment, in jointly revising the "Working Together to Safeguard Children" child protection guidance, were careful to remember the particular needs of children living in army garrisons. Appendix 2 of this guidance provides points of contact for armed forces arrangements for child protection.

Clinical Negligence

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to continue the pilot project for dealing with small clinical negligence claims; and if he will make a statement. [77917]

Mr. Hutton: The Chief Medical Officer has been reviewing arrangements for handling clinical negligence claims. Plans to implement any future measures for handling clinical negligence claims will be developed later this year in the light of Ministers consideration of the Chief Medical Officer's recommendations for reform.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to reply to the letter to him dated 25 September from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Ms J. Hamnett. [79446]

Mr. Milburn: A reply was sent to my right hon. Friend on 4 November.

Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy

Diana Organ: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to fund research into finding a cure for Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy. [77617]

Mr. Hutton: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend, the Member for Cardiff West (Kevin Brennan) on 30 October.

District Nurses

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many initial contacts per district nurse there were in each of the past five years. [78056]

Mr. Hutton: District nurses are registered nurses who have undertaken further training as specialist community practitioners (district nursing). Most district nurses lead teams of staff nurses and health care assistants who will not have been included in the figures requested.

The number of initial contacts per whole time equivalent district nurse in the past five years is shown in the following table.

Year	Number of initial contacts per district nurse (w.t.e.)
1997–98	5.1
1998–99	4.9
1999–2000	5.1
2000–01	5.4
2001–02	5.4

Domiciliary Oxygen Service

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects the review of the domiciliary oxygen service to be concluded. [78094]

Ms Blears: The review is at an advanced stage, but I cannot say at present when it will be completed.

Finnish Nurses

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many Finnish nurses are employed by the NHS. [77623]

Mr. Hutton: Information on the numbers of Finnish nurses employed in the National Health Service is not collected centrally.

There is currently no government to government arrangement with Finland regarding the recruitment of Finnish nurses.

Focus Group Research

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what use he and his Department has made of focus group research since June 2001; if he will identify for each research project the topics covered, the person or organisation carrying out the research, and the total cost; and if he will publish the research on his Department's website. [74993]

Ms Blears: A table listing focus groups and their purpose carried out by my Department since June 2001 has been placed in the Library. The Department's expenditure on these can only be provided at disproportionate costs.

Health Allocation (Review)

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) guidelines and (b) criteria are for the review of health allocation to local health trusts. [78616]

Mr. Hutton: The existing formula used to allocate National Health Service resources has been reviewed by the Advisory Committee on Resource Allocation (ACRA). ACRA's terms of reference are to advise the Secretary of State for Health on the distribution of resources across primary and secondary care. Guidelines for the review are to put in place new mechanisms to distribute NHS cash more fairly and that the healthcare needs of populations, including the impact of deprivation, will be the driving force in determining where the cash goes. The main criterion of the review has been to contribute to the reduction in avoidable health inequalities.

Health Inequalities

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of inequalities in access to health care services in England and their relationship with income inequality; and if he will make a statement. [77797]

Ms Blears [holding answer 29 October 2002]: The NHS Plan emphasised the importance of reducing inequalities in access to national health service service as part of an overall effort to improve health and reduce inequality.

Following the assessment of the Independent Inquiry into Inequalities in Health, it recognised that the worst health problems will not be tackled without dealing with their fundamental causes, including poverty and economic and social disadvantage.

That is why we introduced national health inequalities targets in 2001:

> starting with children under one year, by 2010 to reduce by at least 10 per cent., the gap in mortality between "routine and manual" groups and the population as a whole.
> starting with local authorities, by 2010 to reduce by at least 10 per cent., the gap between the fifth of areas with the lowest life expectancy at birth and the population as a whole.

and gave priority to improving access of care to all services and reducing health inequalities in "Improvement, Expansion and Reform: The Next Three Years", the priorities and planning framework for 2003–06 published on 2 October.

Health Service Finance

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what account he will take of rurality in his revised allocation formula for funding primary care trusts. [78460]

Mr. Hutton: The existing formula used to allocate national health service resources has been reviewed by the advisory committee on resource allocation (ACRA). We are currently considering ACRA's recommendations. Later this autumn when we announce the revenue allocations for the next three years we will explain changes to the formula.

Imported Poultry

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average time taken to test a consignment of imported poultry meat for the presence of nitrofurans has been in the last year for which figures are available. [77825]

Ms Blears: Information provided by the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development in Northern Ireland (DARDNI), who carry out the testing of poultrymeat from Thailand for nitrofurans, shows the average turnaround time, from 22 May when the first results were reported to 25 October 2002, to be eight days from receipt of sample. 90 per cent. of samples within this time period were analysed within the agreed 10 day turnaround time.

There are no figures available for the turnaround time for the testing for nitrofurans in Brazilian poultrymeat as testing has only recently commenced.

Infected Blood Transfusion

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his Department's estimate is of the number of hepatitis C sufferers who contracted the virus from NHS blood transfusions. [75497]

Ms Blears [holding answer 21 October 2002]: A lookback programme conducted by the national blood service from 1995 identified 669 people who contracted the hepatitis C virus from blood transfusions before screening for thevirus was introduced in September 1991. However, it has been impossible to trace the majority of those likely to have been infected. Work has been undertaken to estimate the numbers involved and we expect the results to be published later this year.

Jams Regulations

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the maximum penalties are for breaches of the Jams Regulations; and what the maximum penalties he intends for breaches of the EC Jams Directive (2001/113/EC). [77824]

Ms Blears: The maximum penalties for an offence under the Jams and Similar Products Regulations 1981 are: on summary conviction, a fine not exceeding 5,000; on conviction or indictment, a unlimited fine or imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or both.

New domestic regulations are being prepared to implement Directive 2001/113. It is intended, subject to the outcome of a full public consultation, that the maximum penalty for an offence under the forthcoming Regulations will be a fine not exceeding £5,000. This is in line with the penalties provided by comparable compositional legislation for other foodstuffs.

Latex-free Equipment

Vernon Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the guidelines to the NHS regarding the provision of, and access to, latex-free material and equipment. [77019]

Mr. Hutton: Guidance issued to the national health service relating to latex and latex-free equipment is based on the Health and Safety at Work etc Act 1974, and is intended to remind NHS managers of their duty to comply with that legislation in assessing risks to their staff.

A wide range of latex-free equipment is now being manufactured and many companies are now moving away from using latex in their products altogether. There are no cost implications associated with using latex-free equipment, and the latest data from NHS Logistics suggest that NHS employers are increasingly moving to latex-free equipment.

MRSA

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people contacted MRSA and in which hospitals in 2001. [77963]

Ms Blears: These figures are not available as information on Methicillin Resistant Staphylococcus Aureus (MRSA) infections, apart from MRSA blood stream infections, is not collated centrally. Mandatory reporting of MRSA blood stream infections was introduced for all acute national health service trusts on 1 April 2001 and data are routinely published. Results by individual trust for the first year of this scheme (April 2001 to March 2002) were published in the Communicable Disease Report Weekly on 20 June 2002 and are available on the Public Health Laboratory Service website www.phls.co.uk/publications/cdr/PDFfiles/2002/cdr2502.pdf.

National Alcohol Reduction Strategy

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, how many copies of the National Alcohol Reduction Strategy Consultation Paper have been sent out to user groups in the voluntary and commercial sectors. [78180]

Ms Blears: [holding answer 29 October 2002]: The Government launched the National Alcohol Harm Reduction Strategy Consultation Document on 15 October 2002, and the consultation period will run until 15 January 2003. Copies of the consultation document have been placed on the Department's website www.doh.gov.uk/alcohol/alcoholstrategy.htm and on the strategy unit website www.strategy.gov.uk/2002/alcohol/consultationdocument.shtml.

The Government are keen to receive a wide range of responses from all stakeholders including user groups. The document has been circulated either in hard copy or electronically to a wide range of interested groups, including representatives of the alcohol counselling and prevention services (ACAPS), the alcohol service users national alliance (ASUNA) and the London drug and alcohol network (LDAN).

NHS Finance

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average cost per patient of alcohol and drug rehabilitation on the NHS was in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [78532]

Ms Blears: There are around 3,100 bedspaces within the drug and alcohol residential rehabilitation sector. The cost per week, per patient, varies from around £250 for a placement within hostel accommodation to around £1000 for a placement within a medical/clinical facility. There is no information collected at present on community rehabilitation programmes, although work is being developed on this by the national treatment agency.

NHS Information Technology

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on (a) the personal responsibilities of the Director General of NHS Information Technology, (b) his responsibility for the NHS Information Authority and (c) his role in directing the implementation of NHS information technology at regional level. [76323]

Ms Blears: Richard Granger has been appointed as Director General of Information Technology in the national health service and is responsible for delivering the national programme for IT. This focuses on the key developments that will make a significant difference to improving the patient experience and the delivery of care and services. There are four key deliverables: electronic appointment booking, an electronic care records service, an electronic prescribing service and an underpinning IT infrastructure with sufficient connectivity and broadband capacity to support the critical national applications and local systems.

Gwyn Thomas is the Chief Executive of the NHS Information Authority (NHSIA), which is a special health authority. Richard Granger will be working closely with the NHSIA, the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency and the Information Policy Unit in the Department of Health. Working together and maintaining strong working relationships will be important for all parties.

In the new NHS planning system, strategic health authorities (StHAs) are responsible for producing local delivery plans that will link sound local investment plans on IT into the national arrangements and framework. Richard Granger will be working through StHAs to ensure that for IT, the focus is on the key deliverables for the national IT programme. He will work with the chief executives and chief information officers at each StHA to ensure that progress is maintained against the critical path for implementation. The chief information officers will report to both their own chief executives and to Richard Granger.

NHS Organisations (Running Costs)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total running costs of NHS organisations serving (a) Portsmouth South and (b) Hampshire were in 1997; what the totals are now; and if he will make a statement. [78965]

Ms Blears: The total expenditure of the local provider organisations serving the former Portsmouth and South East Hampshire health authority area in 1997–98 was £242.9 million. This included Portsmouth Hospitals National Health Service Trust and Portsmouth Healthcare NHS Trust. The total forecast out-turn expenditure in 2002–03 for Portsmouth Hospitals Trust and the provider functions of the East Hampshire, Fareham and Gosport and Portsmouth City Primary Care Trusts is £383.6 million. It is not possible to provide information for the Portsmouth South constituency.

The total expenditure by health authorities in Hampshire and the Isle of Wight in 1997–98 was £971.7 million and the forecast outturn expenditure in 2002–03 for the Hampshire and Isle of Wight Strategic Health Authority and the 10 constituent primary care trusts which have commissioning functions is £1,501.4 million.

In both cases it is difficult to make direct comparisons between 1997–98 expenditure and 2002–03 forecast out-turn expenditure because of the various organisational changes which have taken place in the intervening years.

NHS Services (Hampshire)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff were employed to carry out administration for NHS services for residents of (a) Portsmouth South and (b) Hampshire in 1997; how many are employed; and if he will make a statement. [78963]

Ms Blears: Information is not collected centrally by constituency. Information by health authority is shown in the table.

NHS Trusts

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mergers between NHS acute services trusts there have been in each year since trusts were formed. [76264]

Mr. Hutton: A list of all national health service trusts that have been involved in major reconfigurations since 1991–92 have been placed in the Library. Most of these have merged by dissolution and establishment of new NHS trusts, but there are also absorption mergers and parts of NHS trusts involved in the formation of new NHS trusts and primary care trusts.

NHS Work Force Statistics

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to publish the next NHS workforce statistics. [78183]

Mr. Lammy [holding answer 29 October 2002]: Figures for 30 September 2002 are due to be published in February 2003, in line with timing for previous years.

NICE

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list members of the National Institute for Clinical Excellence who are ethicists. [78954]

Ms Blears: The constitution of the National Institute for Clinical Excellence's board reflects its primary role of providing clear guidance on clinical and cost effectiveness to the national health service. It does not include any members appointed specifically because of their formal training in ethics.

Number of Doctors and Nurses

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate he has made of the number of doctors per head of population in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) each other European Union country; and if he will make a statement; [76295]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of (a) doctors and (b) nurses per 1,000 head of population in England; and if he will make a statement. [77798]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 29 October 2002]: The information requested is shown in the tables.

The comparative information about the number of doctors in the United Kingdom and the European Union is published by the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), and the latest figures are shown in the table. However, these figures need to be interpreted with caution because different countries calculate the figures in different ways. If comparing United Kingdom data with other countries, we consistently appear near the bottom for doctors per 1,000 head of population, but this is mainly because we count only national health service doctors, whereas most other countries figures include all registered doctors, therefore counting, for example, private sector doctors and doctors who are not actually working.

Pilot Schemes

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reason the Health Authorities Preparation of Proposals for Pilot Schemes (Personal Medical Services) (Amendment) Directions 2002 were laid before the House on 21 October. [78072]

Mr. Hutton: The Health Authorities Preparation of Proposals for Pilot Schemes (Personal Medical Services) (Amendment) Directions 2002 were not laid before the House on 21 October.

Psychiatrists

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many CAMHS psychiatrists were employed in each strategic health authority in each of the past five years. [78020]

Mr. Hutton: The number of child and adolescent psychiatrists is shown in the following table. The number of consultants in the specialty has increased by 9 per cent., between September 1997 and March 2002.

Public Health Laboratory Service

Mr Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans there are to maintain standards in the public health laboratories after their privatisation. [78740]

Ms Blears: All the laboratories of the Public Health Laboratory Service (PHLS) are Clinical Pathology Accreditation UK Ltd, accredited. It is envisaged that those PHLS laboratories that will transfer to the National Health Service in the coming months will maintain this accreditation. There is no plan to privatise PHLS laboratories.

Mr Ian Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many public health laboratories will be privatised. [78742]

Ms Blears: None of the laboratories will be privatised. From 1 April 2003, approximately 35 will transfer from the Public Health Laboratory Service to the management of National Health Service trusts. The remainder, approximately ten, will transfer to the Health Protection Agency when it is established.

Mr Ian Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what co-ordination there will be between public health laboratories; and who will be responsible for checks on them after they are privatised. [78744]

Ms Blears: None of the laboratories will be privatised. The Health Protection Agency will be responsible for monitoring the specialist services across the National Health Service laboratories transferring from the Public Health Laboratory Service, as well as their own laboratories. NHS trusts will be responsible for the routine microbiology services in their own trusts. They will be subject to the same performance monitoring as well by primary care trusts. External accreditation programmes will also remain in place. In time, the laboratories will form part of local pathology managed clinical networks. It is hoped that, until then, informal links will be maintained and strengthened between individual laboratories.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many posts will be lost as a result of changes to the Public Health Laboratory Service. [78786]

Ms Blears: Under the change management protocol which has been agreed with the current employers and the unions concerned, all staff transferring to the Health Protection Agency on its establishment or to a National Health Service trust will have guaranteed continuity of employment until April 2004.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether the terms and conditions of employment of staff transferred to the proposed Health Protection Agency will be rationalised so that common terms and conditions apply to all staff, regardless of whether they came from the National Radiological Protection Board or the Public Health Laboratory Service; [78789]

(2) which aspects of health protection are proposed to be dealt with by the proposed Health Protection Agency; and which posts with the Public Health Laboratory Service are to be transferred to the HPA; [78790]

(3) what evaluation has been made of the case for abolition of the Public Health Laboratory Service. [78791]

Ms Blears: "Health Protection: A Consultation Document on creating a health protection agency", published in June 2002, proposed that the agency would take on responsibilities in relation to the control and prevention of infectious disease, including most of the functions of the Public Health Laboratory Service (PHLS), radiological protection, protection against chemical and poisonous hazards and health emergency planning. All PHLS staff would transfer to the agency, other than those in the laboratories which will transfer to the national health service by 31 March 2003, under separate decisions announced on 3 September. We are currently considering responses to the consultation document and will announce our decisions as soon as possible.

The consultation document also proposed that staff would transfer on their existing terms and conditions of service. Future changes would be a matter for the board of the proposed agency to agree with the recognised trades unions.

Re-offending

Mr. Keith Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he has taken to implement the recommendations relevant to his Department in the Social Exclusion Unit report, "Reducing Re-offending by Ex-prisoners". [76809]

Mr. Lammy: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, on 24 October 2002, Official Report, column 494W.

Salisbury Alcohol and Drug Advisory Service

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are on the waiting list for counselling at Salisbury Alcohol and Drug Advisory Service; and how long they are expected to wait for an appointment. [77314]

Ms Blears: The way in which waiting lists are measured at this service does not allow us to provide a number for those specifically requiring counselling. It is estimated that there are approximately 110 people on the waiting list at the Salisbury Alcohol and Drug Advisory Service (SADAS) for structured counselling and/or other treatment requirements.

Current waiting times reported by SADAS

	Number
Highest priority cases	1 to 2 weeks
Treatment for under 25-year-olds	Up to 8 weeks
Arrest referral	Up to 12 weeks
Low risk	Up to 52 weeks

Note:
It should be noted that the figures above measure the time from referral to treatment, and not from the first appointment, which may have occurred at an earlier date.

Seroxat

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment his Department has made of the accuracy of labelling and associated information material for the anti-depressant drug Seroxat, with regard to (a) side effects and (b) difficulty of withdrawal; [76226]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the side effects of the anti-depressant drug Seroxat, including difficulty of withdrawal. [76227]

Ms Blears: Seroxat (paroxetine) is a member of a group of drugs known as selective serotonin reuptake inhibitors (SSRIs). Before a product is granted a licence for use in the UK, it must meet appropriate standards of safety, quality and efficacy. After licensing, the safety of all medicines, including SSRIs, is continually monitored by the Medicines Control Agency (MCA) and the independent expert advisory body, the Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM), and any new evidence that emerges is carefully reviewed.

The MCA/CSM carried out a major review of all side effects associated with SSRIs, which was completed in 2000 and resulted in product information for all SSRIs, including Seroxat, being updated and harmonised to reflect the common safety profiles of these medicines. An article in "Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance" in 2000 informed presenters about this review and reminded them about the risk of withdrawal reactions.

Withdrawal reactions are an important and well-recognised side effect of Seroxat and also occur with the other SSRIs. The MCA/CSM warned prescribers about the possibility of withdrawal reactions associated with Seroxat via an article in the Bulletin, "Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance" in 1993. The CSM re-reviewed the issue of withdrawal reactions and possible dependence with Seroxat and the other SSRIs in 1998–99. From a detailed review of all available data, the CSM concluded that all SSRIs may be associated with withdrawal reactions on stopping, but that on current evidence, they are not associated with dependence. As a result of this review, product information for all SSRIs was updated in relation to withdrawal reactions. This issue was also reviewed at a European level by the Committee on Proprietary Medicinal Products (CPMP), which reached similar conclusions.

The product information for Seroxat, which includes the summary of product characteristics (SPC) for prescribers and the patient information leaflet (PIL), contains full details of side effects and warnings about withdrawal reactions. Doctors are advised to consider gradual tapering of dose when Seroxat is discontinued rather than abruptly stopping to avoid withdrawal symptoms.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the drug Seroxat. [76741]

The MCA/CSM warned prescribers about the possibility of withdrawal reactions associated with Seroxat via an article in the Bulletin, "Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance" in 1993. The CSM re-reviewed the issue of withdrawal reactions and possible dependence with Seroxat and the other SSRIs in 1998–99. From a detailed review of all available data, the CSM concluded that all SSRIs may be associated with withdrawal reactions on stopping, but on current evidence, they are not associated with dependence. As a result of this review, product information for all SSRIs was updated in relation to withdrawal reactions. This issue was also reviewed at a European level by the Committee on Proprietary Medicinal Products (CPMP), which reached similar conclusions.

The product information for Seroxat, which includes the summary of product characteristics (SPC) for prescribes and the patient information leaflet (PIL), contains full details of side effects and warnings about withdrawal reactions. Doctors are advised to consider gradual tapering of dose when Seroxat is discontinued, rather than abruptly stopping, to avoid withdrawal symptoms.

Smoking Rates (Children)

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the smoking rates among children in each year since 1990 in (a) England and (b) each NHS region. [75639]

Ms Blears: Information on smoking among young people aged 11 to 15 years is obtained from a series of surveys of school children. Until 1998, these surveys were carried out every two years; since then they have been annual. The available information is shown in the tables.

Prevalence of regular cigarette smoking among secondary school children aged 11 to 15, England, 1990 to 2001

	Regular smokers[1] (percentages)	Base number
1990	10	3,121
1992	10	3,295
1994	12	3,045
1996	13	2,854
1998	11	4,723
1999	9	9,333
2000	10	7,061
2001	10	9,271

[1] Regular smokers are defined as those who smoke at least one cigarette a week, on average.

Staffing Levels (Portsmouth Hospitals)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on staffing levels at (a) Queen Alexandra Hospital, Portsmouth, (b) St. Mary's Hospital, Portsmouth and (C) St. James Hospital, Portsmouth. [76506]

Ms Blears: This information is collected centrally at trust level and not by individual hospital site. Information on vacancy rates has been collected in the national health service vacancy survey since 1999. Information, taken from the surveys for 1999 to 2002, has been placed in the Library.

We recognise that the south-east has suffered problems in recruiting and retaining staff. Portsmouth Hospitals NHS Trust and the local health community continue to work to ensure that vacant posts are filled as soon as possible.

Stem Cell Research

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Government are taking to support stem cell research to combat disease. [77489]

Ms Blears: The Government believe that the UK is well placed to remain a world leader in stem cell research.

The Government have been working with funding agencies and other research bodies to make stem cell research a priority area for funding. The Medical Research Council (MRC) has taken the lead with other funders in developing a national Stem Cell Initiative.

Outcomes during 2002 include new appointments and research support, the establishment of the national stem cell bank and the organisation of a major stem cell conference that was opened by my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary for the Department for Trade and Industry Lord Sainsbury and attended by 400 delegates from 0 countries, including representatives of 20 companies.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what resources are being allocated to the setting up of the stem cell bank. [77491]

Ms Blears: The Medical Research Council (MRC) announced details of the new national stem cell bank in September 2002. MRC has awarded a grant to the National Institute for Biological Standards and Control (NIBSC) to establish and run the United Kingdom stem cell bank for an initial period of three years at a total cost of £2.6 million. The Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council (BBSRC) will contribute 25 per cent., of the set up costs; MRC will manage the grant.

The grant will commence on 1 January 2003 and the funding profile is as follows:

Year 1	472
Year 2	1,305
Year 3	822
Total	2,599

Additional moneys will be sought for phase two of the bank, specifically relating to increasing capacity for therapeutic purposes.

Stents

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the effectiveness of (a) drug coated and (b) plain stents; and if he will publish relative success rates. [78580]

Ms Blears [holding answer 31 October 2002]: The Department referred drug coated stents, also called drug eluting stents, to the National Institute of Clinical Excellence (NICE) on 20 May this year for appraisal. NICE will produce technology appraisal guidance for the National Health Service on the clinical and cost effectiveness of drug eluting stents and on the appropriate use of this new technology. The Department does not currently collect information on the number of percutaneous coronary interventions that involve the use of stents or the relative success rates of different types of stent.

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines his Department has issued to primary care trusts regarding the use of drug coated stents. [78581]

Ms Blears [holding answer 31 October 2002]: The Department has not issued any guidelines to primary care trusts regarding the use of drug coated stents, also called drug eluting stents. However, the Department referred drug eluting stents to the National Institute of Clinical Excellence (NICE) on 20 May this year for appraisal. NICE will produce technology appraisal guidance for the National Health Service on the clinical and cost effectiveness of drug eluting stents and on the appropriate use of this new technology.

Suicide

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have attempted suicide in each of the past five years and have been admitted to hospital as a consequence. [78047]

Jacqui Smith: Information on the number of people who have attempted suicide in each of the last five years and been admitted to hospital as a consequence is not collected centrally.

The table shows the number of finished consultant episodes in national health service hospitals with a primary diagnosis of injury and poisoning between 1996–97 and 2000–01 England.

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
All completed injury and poisoning episodes	744,870	765,560	747,260	775,130	761,220
No external cause given	110,190	113,620	111,550	114,690	120,500
Percentage of total injury and poisoning	14.8	14.8	14.9	14.8	15.8

Note:
This information is taken from Hospital Episode Statistics system (HES) and relates to in-patients who have finished their hospital episodes under the care of a consultant and have been discharged, transferred to another hospital or consultant specialist or died.

Surgical Procedures (Safeguards)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many surgical procedures have taken place in the private sector in the last six months; and what safeguards are in place to prevent a conflict of interests of those medical staff working in both the private and public sector. [78697]

Mr. Hutton: The Department does not collect information on the number of surgical procedures that take place in the private sector. We expect doctors who work both in private and public sector, like all doctors, to behave in a professional manner. The General Medical Council's ethical guidance Good Medical Practice states that doctors must not put pressure on patients to accept private treatment and must always act in their patients' best interests when making referrals and providing or arranging treatment or care.

Teenage Pregnancy Strategy

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Teenage Pregnancy Strategy commenced; how many girls in England and Wales (a) under 16 years of age and (b) under 18 years of age expressed as a total figure and as a percentage of the total number of girls, in each age range, have been provided with (i) contraception and (ii) emergency contraception in schools, pharmacies, family planning clinics and other establishments authorised to provide contraception since the commencement of the Teenage Pregnancy Strategy. [78003]

Ms Blears: Information is not available in the form requested.

Information about the number of girls under 16 and aged 16–19, and rates per 100 population attending family planning clinics are available in the statistical bulletin "NHS Contraceptive Services, England: 2001/02" copies of which are available in the Library and on the Department's website at www.doh.gov.uk/public/sb0220.htm.

Information for 2002–01 and 1999–2000 is also available in statistical bulletins for the relevant years, copies of which are available in the Library.

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many boys in England and Wales (a) under 16 years of age and (b) under 18 years of age, expressed as a total figure and as a percentage of the total number of boys in each age range, have been provided with contraception in schools, pharmacies, family planning clinics and other establishments authorised to provide contraception since the commencement of the Teenage Pregnancy Strategy. [78004]

Ms Blears: Information is not available in the form requested.

Information about the total number of males attending family planning clinics and the rate per 100 population, is shown in Table 2 of the statistical bulletin "NHS Contraceptive Services, England: 2001–02". Data is included from 1991–92 to 2001–02 but is not broken down by age. The bulletin is available in the Library and on the Department's website at www.doh.gov.uk/public/sb0220.htm.

Transfusions

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the proportion of patients requiring transfusion plasma who received only virus inactivated products in the past year. [75002]

Ms Blears: No data are collected centrally on the proportion of virally inactivated fresh frozen plasma (FFP) received by patients. In April 2002, the national blood service (NBS) introduced methylene blue treatment of FFP for neonates and children born after 1 January 1996. United Kingdom FFP is already a very safe product. To minimise the risk from viruses, it is made only from previously tested blood donors. The current high levels of safety are achieved by screening out potential high risk donors and then further testing every unit of donated blood for the presence of infections, such as HIV, hepatitis B and hepatitis C. FFP produced by the NBS, using UK donors, has also been leucodepleted to remove white cells, which evidence suggests may carry the greatest risk of transmitting vdD. A commercially produced, pooled solvent detergent treated FFP is licensed in the UK and available to the National Health Service.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review the use of methlyene blue treated fresh frozen plasma in children. [75006]

Ms Blears: Provision of methylene blue (MB) treated fresh frozen plasma for children born after 1 January 1996 is part of a larger strategy to provide single unit, virus inactivated non-United Kingdom plasma for this group. Steps are actively being taken to find a safe, reliable source of plasma from the United States, an area free of BSE. The use of a non-pooled product minimises the risk of spread of pathogens, which may not be susceptible to the pathogen inactivation process. Currently, MB is the only available product for virally inactivating single unit plasma.

This policy will be kept under review by the Government's expert advisory committee on the microbiological safety of blood and tissues for transplantation.

Tuberculosis

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many teenagers in the UK were vaccinated against TB last year. [78188]

Ms Blears [holding answer 29 October 2002]: Information about the numbers of teenagers receiving BCG vaccinations is contained in table 4 of the statistical bulletin "NHS Immunisation Statistics, England: 2001–02". A copy of the bulletin is available in the Library and can also be found on the Department's website www.doh.gov.uk/public/sb0218.htm.

Information for Wales, Scotland and Ireland is a matter for the devolved Administrations.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what co-ordination is in place from his Department with the Homelessness Unit at the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in combating the rise of TB in the homeless. [78185]

Ms Blears [holding answer 29 October 2002]: Screening policy for the homeless is determined at local levels; London wide there has been regular screening of homeless people at drop-in centres, and there are studies currently looking at screening homeless people more effectively and efficiently.

United Healthcare Group

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the agreement between his Department and the United Healthcare Group. [78311]

Mr. Hutton: The government is committed to encouraging expressions of interest from successful international organisations to partner Primary Care Trusts (PCTs) in developing and testing models of integrated care in the national health service. In line with this commitment, the Department is in discussion with United Healthcare Group with a view to entering into a contractual relationship with them to provide hands-on support to a number of PCTs to test elements of United Healthcare Group's Evercare model in this country and tailor it to the needs of the NHS. Under the Evercare model, doctors and nurses in primary care work together with care staff to identify vulnerable individuals at highest risk of hospitalisation. This allows for early intervention and treatment, thus avoiding inappropriate hospital admission, and facilitating safe, early discharge where a stay in hospital is necessary. The work will be carried out under the national primary and care trust development programme to promote significant transformational change.

Waiting Lists (Eastbourne)

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients at Eastbourne District General Hospital waited longer than (a) four and (b) 24 hours in accident and emergency in each of the last 12 months; and what proportion they were of the total. [78699]

Ms Blears: Eastbourne Hospitals National Health Service Trust merged with Hastings and Rother NHS Trust in April 2002 to form East Sussex NHS Trust. Data are collected by NHS trust and not by individual hospital site. Therefore data are presented for Eastbourne Hospitals Trust up to March 2002. From April to September 2002, the data are for East Sussex NHS Trust as a whole.

The number of patients spending over four hours in accident and emergency (A&E), from arrival to departure, for each month in the last year is shown in the table.

Month	Patients spending over four hours in A&E	Total A&E attendances	Percentage of total
September 2001	472	3,176	14.9
October 2001	533	3,889	13.7
November 2001	484	3,124	15.5
December 2001	645	3,708	17.4
January 2002	506	2,810	18.0
February 2002	464	2,810	16.5
March 2002	511	3,080	16.6
April 2002	1,060	6,371	16.6
May 2002	1,400	8,394	16.7
June 2002	1,051	6,876	15.3
July 2002	1,560	8,976	17.4
August 2002	1,233	7,376	16.7
September 2002	1,298	6,005	21.6

These data are taken from management information provided by the trusts and have not been validated by the Department.

Information is not collected centrally on the number of patients spending over 24 hours in A&E. Information is collected on the number of patients waiting over 12 hours for admission via A&E, the time from the clinician's decision to admit until the patient is admitted to an in-patient ward. Eastbourne District General Hospital, now part of East Sussex NHS Trust, has not reported any of these in the past 12 months.

Working Time Directive

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1)what assessment he has made of the impact on medical staffing rotas of extending the Working Time Directive to junior doctors; and if he will make a statement. [77504]

(2) what pilot studies are being undertaken in NHS hospitals to demonstrate innovative ways of complying with the requirements of the Working Time Directive. [77506]

Mr. Hutton: From August 2004, junior doctors will come within the remit of the European Working Time Directive. The key aspect is that junior doctors must have 11 hours rest in every 24 hours.

It will not be possible for the National Health Service to achieve European Working Time Directive compliance by applying a single "one size fits all" model across the whole country. Instead, compliance will be achieved with a portfolio of action at local and national level.

Individual NHS trusts will need to look critically at working patterns and whether it is necessary for doctors to be resident. Where the intensity of calls requires resident cover, it will generally be necessary to move to new patterns of working such as shifts or partial shifts.

The Department will be issuing guidance on implementation this Autumn and is working with stakeholders including the medical Royal Colleges, British Medical Association, NHS Confederation and the service to ensure that effective solutions are developed.

The Department is therefore funding a programme of pilot projects based in NHS trusts to develop and test innovative solutions to European Working Time Directive implementation. We are funding about 20 pilot studies in individual NHS trusts and groups of NHS trusts on innovative ways of delivering services while complying with the requirements of the post-2004 Working Time Directive legislation. The individual pilots will cover areas such as night teams, health care practitioners, nurse practitioners and whole systems service redesign.

Full details of the pilot programme will be announced shortly and will be available on the Department's website www.doh.qov.uk/workinqtime/.

Workplace Nurseries

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of NHS facilities have workplace nurseries attached. [77996]

Mr. Hutton: A national survey of national health service child care provision, undertaken early in 2001, found that 114 NHS trusts provided nursery facilities for their staff. Since April 2001, a further 117 schemes for new or extensions to existing nurseries have had capital funding agreed as part of the NHS child care strategy. As a criterion of funding these nurseries should, wherever possible, provide places for the use of all health care workers, including those at other NHS organisations.

Further capital funding will be made available in 2003–04 to meet the NHS plan target of 150 new nursery schemes by March 2004. All new build hospitals must also include a nursery in their plans.

Obesity

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of sick days taken in each of the last five years for which figures are available as a result of illness arising from overweight and obesity; and what his strategy is for addressing this problem. [74459]

Ms Blears: The National Audit Office report, "Tackling Obesity in England, published February 2001", estimated that in 1998 overweight and obesity contributed to 18 million sick days. The Government are committed to tackling the rising trend in obesity. The National Health Service priorities and planning framework for 2003–2006 includes targets on reducing coronary heart disease (CHD). One of these targets requires practice-based registers and systematic treatment regimes, including appropriate advice on diet, physical activity and smoking; it also covers the majority of patients at high risk of CHD, particularly those with hypertension, diabetes and a body mass index greater than 30. The Department is working with a range of partners at national, regional and local levels, on programmes to improve diet and increase physical activity levels. Action to improve diet includes a Five-a-day programme, including initiatives with the food industry, including manufacturers and caterers, improving the overall balance of diet—working with the Food Standards Agency—and a food in schools and healthy schools programme. Plans were recently announced to transform physical education and school sport and club links over the next three years. There is investment to develop local exercise action pilots, led by primary care trusts, and the new opportunities fund is supporting the delivery of a physical education and sports programme.

Weight Management

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information is given on the database of weight management services developed by his Department; and how many times it has been updated since it was created. [74460]

Ms Blears: The database of weight management services was completed in 1997 and made available at National Health Service regional offices for local dissemination on request. The project had two aims, one of which was to identify existing projects on weight management in the regions and to compile a directory of services. The database is a directory of weight management services in England, but does not claim to be comprehensive. Entries are arranged by region and, within each region, alphabetically by town. Each entry has details of project name, funding organisation, contact name and details and information on the services the project offers and if the project has been evaluated. The information has not been updated since publication.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 6 November 2002

DEFENCE

Army

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how many members of the Army indicated when last questioned that they have been a victim of (a) harassment, (b) discrimination and (c) bullying in the Army; what percentage of those responding this represents; what percentage of actual strength this represents; and if he will make a statement. [78635]

Mr. Ingram: In response to the latest Army Continuous Attitude Survey, those members of the Army that indicated they had been the victim of harassment, discrimination and bullying in the last 12 months are shown in the table.

Question	Number of Army Personnel who alleged:	Percentage of Respondents	Percentage of those Surveyed
Racial Discrimination	42	2.0	1.0
Racial Harassment	36	1.8	0.9
Sex Discrimination	64	3.1	1.6
Sexual Harassment	33	1.6	0.8
Bullying	110	5.4	2.8

The latest survey was undertaken in March–April 2002 and sent to a 4 per cent. random sample of the trained Army (excluding Gurkhas and Full Time Reserve Service personnel); 3,978 questionnaires were sent out and 2,037 were returned.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, (a) how many and (b) what percentage of army recruits (i) went absent without leave and (ii) left the Army within the first six (A) weeks and (B) months of training in the last year for which figures are available. [79717]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how many members of the Army indicated when last questioned the preference that unmarried partners should be granted the same support and allowances as the spouses of officers and soldiers; what percentage of those responding this represents; what percentage of actual strength this represents; and if he will make a statement. [78639]

Mr. Ingram: In response to the latest Army Continuous Attitude Survey, 842 members of the Army indicated they believed that partners should have the same support and allowances as the spouses of married officers and soldiers. This represents some 41 per cent. of those who responded and 21 per cent. of those surveyed.

The latest survey was undertaken in March–April 2002 and sent to a 4 per cent. random sample of the trained Army (excluding Gurkhas and Full Time Reserve Service); 3,978 questionnaires were sent out and 2,037 were returned.

Army Equipment

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what estimates his Department has made of how much, on average, individual members of the Army spent on purchasing additional or replacement clothing and equipment to supplement standard issue kit over the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [78637]

Mr. Ingram: None. Service personnel are provided with all the equipment they require to do their jobs. The clothing and equipment with which they are issued is designed to be fit for purpose in a range of circumstances.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how many members of the forces have indicated that they (a) have and (b) have not purchased additional replacement (i) clothing and (ii) equipment supplementing kit issued by the Army in the last 12 months; what percentage of actual strength this represents in each case; and if he will make a statement. [78636]

Mr. Ingram: In response to the latest Army Continuous Attitude Survey, 1,037 individuals indicated that they had purchased some item of equipment or clothing in the last 12 months. This represents some 26 per cent. of those surveyed. Seventy four per cent. of individuals indicated that they had not. The survey does not ask the individual to make the distinction between clothing or equipment, and purchases may include items which are not issued by the Army. The survey was administered to a 4 per cent. random sample of the trained Army (excluding Gurkhas and Full Time Reserve Service personnel); 3,978 questionnaires were sent out.

Operation Sandcastle

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what the cost was of Operation Sandcastle. [79549]

Mr. Ingram: We estimate that the cost of Operation Sandcastle was around £364,000 at 1991–1992 prices.

No-fly Zones

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what offensive operations were conducted by the Royal Air Force against military installations in Iraq on (a) 21 September 1999, (b) 21 September 2000, (c) 21 September 2001, (d) 20 September 2002 and (e) 22 September 2002. [79159]

Mr. Ingram: RAF and other coalition aircraft conducting legitimate patrols of the No-Fly Zones over Iraq are regularly threatened by Iraqi air defences. When this occurs they may respond in self-defence, against air defence sites.

On 21 September 1999 and 21 September 2001 RAF aircraft responded against, respectively, air defence radars and a surface-to-air missile site in southern Iraq, using laser-guided bombs.

No responses took place on 21 September 2000, or 20, 21 or 22 September this year.

Apache Helicopter

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) for what reasons the organisations training pilots for the Apache helicopter have experienced delays in providing equipment and facilities; [79580]

(2) if the private organisations training pilots for the Apache helicopter will be removed from the project; [79582]

(3) if he will make a statement on the delay in training pilots for the Apache attack helicopter; [79578]

(4) what measure he is taking to ensure that the timetable for training pilots for the Apache helicopter is brought forward; [79583]

(5) for what reasons the organisations involved have been unable to meet deadlines set for the training of pilots for the Apache attack helicopter; [79579]

(6) what penalties were written into the contract for late delivery of equipment and training of pilots for the Apache helicopter. [79581]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Animal Experiments

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how many animals covered by the Sixth Report of the Animal Welfare Advisory Committee were bred, for the period in question, for possible use in procedures but subsequently (a) destroyed and (b) passed on to other bodies without so being used. [79048]

Dr. Moonie: The sixth report of the Independent Animal Welfare Committee covers the period from 31 October 2000 to 28 February 2002. Animal figures are compiled on the basis of the calendar year. In 2001 Dstl Porton Down bred two different types of rodents and two types of non-human primates. Of these, 21 mice and six rats were humanely destroyed without use. 916 mice, 2,624 rats and 10 rhesus macaques were issued dead to other organisations.

TREASURY

Split Capital Investment Trusts

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, what representations his Department has received regarding a compensation package for investors who have lost money due to market abuses relating to split capital investment trusts. [79106]

Ruth Kelly: Treasury Ministers receive a wide range of correspondence relating to financial service matters.

Landfill Tax

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, what representations his Department has received regarding the optimum level for landfill tax. [79098]

John Healey: Treasury Ministers have received a variety of representations about the rate of landfill tax.

Charities (Tax Relief)

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, how much has been contributed annually to the charitable sector (a) overall and (b) through the Gift Aid scheme, since the scheme's introduction; what these sums are as proportions of the total turnover of the charitable sector; and what the total cost is to his Department of the tax refunds resulting from the Gift Aid scheme. [79111]

John Healey: Figures on Gift Aid are published in the income tax section of Inland Revenue Statistics at: www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/index.htm. Consistent and reliable estimates for total donations to charities are not available centrally, nor are figures on turnover. However, a survey by NCVO/NOP estimates that the value of individual donations was £6.8 billion in 2001. In addition charities benefit from donations from companies. The Charity Commission shows that at the end of the second quarter of 2002 the annual income of registered charities in England and Wales was £28.5 billion.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what his estimate is of the amount of tax forgone as a result of tax allowances granted to charities in England and Wales in (a) the last financial year and (b) each of the previous six financial years; [79135]

(2) what the total amount of tax relief for charities has been since 1997; and how much was relief on (a) income tax, (b) corporation tax, (c) capital gains tax, (d) inheritance tax and (e) stamp duty. [79092]

John Healey: The available estimates, which relate to the United Kingdom, for the total cost of tax forgone are about £2 billion in each of the last six financial years. This includes income tax, inheritance tax, business rates and VAT. Figures for the first two categories were published in various issues of the FSBR and in Table 1.5 of Inland Revenue Statistics at: www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/index.htm. These figures will be updated in the Tax Ready Reckoner published at the time of the Chancellor's Press Budget Report. Estimates for relief on corporation tax, capital gains tax and stamp duty are not available.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what plans he has for the Payroll Giving scheme providing tax relief for charitable donations; and if he will make a statement. [79093]

John Healey: In April 2000, the Government abolished the maximum amounts that could be given under Payroll Giving. To boost the scheme, the Government announced a three-year publicity campaign to promote the scheme to more employers and their employees and a 10 per cent. supplement on all Payroll Giving donations until April 2003. The cost of the supplement is met from public expenditure. The amount given under Payroll Giving has increased from £29 million in 1998–99 to about £70 million in 2001–02.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment his Department has made of the level of charitable donations since the abolition of the minimum limit on donations through the (a) Payroll Giving scheme and (b) Gift Aid scheme. [79110]

John Healey: In April 2000, the Government set a target to raise the amount given through Payroll Giving to £60 million by April 2003. The total given in the year 2001–02 was around £73m. In 2001–02 nearly £450m was repaid to charities under Gift Aid. The Government looks forward to the continuing success of both schemes.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to prevent suspended shares being given as part of the Gift Aid scheme. [79104]

John Healey: The Gift Aid scheme only covers gifts of money. The relief for giving listed shares, introduced in April 2000, allows individuals and companies to deduct the market value of gifts of listed shares from their income or corporation tax calculation. Where shares are being actively traded, the value will normally be easily ascertained by reference to published prices. However, where trading is suspended, the value will be the price which might have been paid in a transaction at arm's length. Any relief would therefore reflect the suspension of trading in the shares. The shares would still, of course, be of value to the charity, when trading resumed.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has for the Gift Aid scheme tax relief for charitable donations; and if he will make a statement. [79094]

John Healey: In April 2000, the Government abolished the minimum donation of £250, so that every donation, no matter how large or small, can come within the Gift Aid scheme, providing the donor meets the scheme's conditions. From April 2003, donors will be able to carry back Gift Aid donations made before they make their self assessment tax returns into the previous tax year, thereby obtaining any higher rate relief earlier. From April 2004 taxpayers will be able to nominate a charity to receive part or all of a tax repayment that is due to them.

The Government continue to support The Giving Campaign, a charity sector-led body, which has done a great deal to raise awareness of the Gift Aid scheme among both charities and donors.

Pool Re'

Mr. Flight: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, if he will make it his policy to introduce the necessary legislation regarding Pool Re' insurance cover to include the Government's new wider definition of terrorism. [79017]

Ruth Kelly: We currently have no plans to amend the definition of acts of terrorism in the Reinsurance (Acts of Terrorism) Act 1993. We are not persuaded that there is an issue of sufficient substance to justify primary legislation.

Mr. Flight: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, if he will make a statement on the Government's discussions with the commercial insurance sector regarding commercial cover being available in respect of the substantial area not covered by Pool Re' where presently commercial exclusion is absolute; and if he will make a statement. [79016]

Ruth Kelly: The availability of terrorism cover in the commercial market is a matter that we have and will continue to discuss with the insurance industry. We are not persuaded that there is an issue of sufficient substance to justify primary legislation to amend the definition of acts of terrorism in the Reinsurance (Acts of Terrorism) Act 1993.

Death Benefits

James Purnell: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate what the annual cost would be of in-service death benefits extended to unmarried partners, in accordance with the rules for the new Civil Service Pension, for the financial year 2003–04, and each of the five subsequent years at 2003–04, prices for (a) the whole of the public sector, (b) the Teachers' Pension Scheme, (c) the NHS Pension Scheme, (d) the Local Government Pension Scheme, (e) the Firemen's Pension Scheme, (f) the Police Pension Scheme and (g) the Armed Forces Pension Scheme; [78857]

(2) if he will estimate what the costs would be for the future service of current members if in-service death benefits were extended to unmarried partners, in accordance with the rules for the new Civil Service Pension, at 2003–04 prices for (a) the whole of the public sector, (b) the Teachers' Pension Scheme, (c) the NHS Pension Scheme, (d) the Local Government Scheme, (e) the Firemen's Pension Scheme, (f) the Police Pension Scheme and (g) the Armed Forces Pension Scheme. [78858]

Ruth Kelly: There is no cost to the Exchequer from the introduction on 1 October 2002 of new pension arrangements for the Civil Service. Members participating in those arrangements will meet the full costs of all the benefit improvements, including the introduction of survivor pensions for unmarried partners, through higher employee contributions.

Our policy is that public service pension schemes may introduce unmarried partner pensions only if members want the change and are prepared to pay for it through higher member contributions or a rebalancing of other benefits which is cost neutral overall to employers and the taxpayer. Death lump sum benefits may be provided, however, to unmarried partners in schemes where members are able to nominate the recipient.

European Union

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, what Britain's net contribution to the European Union was (a) in the last year and (b) excluding the budget rebate. [79097]

Ruth Kelly: Details of the United Kingdom's net contribution in 2001–02, and the abatement included within it, can be found at Table 3.1 (page 12) of the 2001 European Community Finances White Paper (Cm 5547). Equivalent figures for calendar year 2001 can be found at Table 3 (page 40) of the same publication.

Drug-related Deaths

Lynne Jones: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer to parliamentary question 76983, if he will provide separate figures for deaths caused by (a) crack cocaine and (c) cocaine in each of the last five years. [79384]

Ruth Kelly: The answer requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Lynne Jones, dated 6 November 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question asking for separate figures for deaths caused by (a) crack cocaine and (b) cocaine in each of the last five years.

It is not possible to provide separate figures on deaths related to crack cocaine and cocaine from routine mortality data, as these substances are not generally separately identified on death certificates.

The Office for National Statistics routinely publishes a combined figure for deaths mentioning cocaine on the death certificate. It is not possible, in cases where more than one substance is mentioned on the death certificate, to state which was primarily responsible for the death.

Money Laundering

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent research his Department has commissioned into money laundering in the UK; and if he will publish the results of this research. [79102]

Ruth Kelly: The Treasury is preparing a strategy document to explain the objectives and key criteria of the UK's anti-money laundering regime, and assess the extent to which current measures meet our overarching objectives. This will be finalised after discussions in the Money Laundering Advisory Committee and will then be published on the Treasury website.

Public Service Agreement

Mr. Flight: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer what procedures his Department has in place to monitor other Government Departments' performance in relation to their agreed public service agreement. [79077]

Mr. Boateng: Departments provide regular information about their performance to the Treasury. Departments will shortly publish progress in their Autumn Performance Reports, and the Government will introduce regular web-based reporting of progress against all the PSA targets announced in the 2002 Spending Review.

Ageism

Mr. Jenkins: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer what strategies his Department has to ensure that there is no ageism in recruitment and retention processes. [79293]

Ruth Kelly: The Treasury is committed to age diversity and has implemented the recommendations of the Government's "Winning the Generation Game" report.

Equality of opportunity for all staff is a key feature of all civil service employment. As part of this, ageism is not tolerated.

Recruitment, development, performance management and retention policies are continuously reviewed. There are no age barriers to employment and retirement age is determined on business needs only. The Treasury has no upper age limit for any of its recruitment schemes, other than the retirement age, which is currently 60. The recruitment literature states,

"we recruit and promote strictly on ability and performance. We welcome applications from all qualified individuals. We do not discriminate on grounds of gender, marital status, race, colour, religion, ethnic origin, sexual orientation, disability, community background or age subject to our policy that all staff retire at 60."

Mr. Jenkins: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of new recruits to his Department in the past two years were aged 50 and over. [79306]

Year	Percentage of New Recruits Aged 50 and Over
1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001	2.2
1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002	1.6

Asbestor-based Liability Claims

Mr. Flight: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer what assumptions he has made regarding the costs of asbestos-based liability claims against Her Majesty's Government over the next 20 years. [79018]

Ruth Kelly: The Treasury makes no assumption about the costs of asbestos liability claims. It is for individual Departments to make provision in their accounts for any liabilities against them. Details of a Department's provisions and possible contingent liabilities can be found in the notes to their Resource Accounts in the line with UK Generally Accepted Accounting Practice (UKGAAP)

British Energy

Mr. Flight: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what recent meetings his Department has had with the Department of Trade and Industry regarding a merger of British Energy with BNFL; and if he will place the minutes in the Library; [79014]

(2) what recent meetings his Department has had with the Department of Trade and Industry regarding British Energy; and if he will place the minutes in the Library; [79013]

(3) what recent meetings his Department has had with (a) the Finance Director and (b) the former Chief Executive of British Energy; and if he will place the minutes in the Library. [79015]

John Healey: I refer to the answer given by the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 11 February 2002, Official Report, c.114–15. In line with previous Administrations, it is not this Government's practice to provide details of the meetings they routinely have with a wide range of organisations.

Mr. Flight: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations his Department has received from British Energy requesting exclusion from the Climate Change Levy; and if he will place in the Library the minutes of meetings with British Energy on this subject. [79019]

John Healey: Treasury Ministers have received numerous representations on the climate change levy. As the Chancellor of the Exchequer said in his answer of 11 February 2002, Official Report, c. 114–15, in line with previous Administrations, it is not this Government's practice to provide details of the meetings they routinely have with a wide range of organisations.

With regard to nuclear power, the Government made it clear when the detail of the levy was announced in the November 1999 PBR that electricity from nuclear power would be subject to the levy. The Government have restated since then that there are no plans to exempt nuclear energy from the levy, which is designed to encourage energy efficiency across the business and public sectors and to increase the use of sustainable forms of energy.

Thalidomide Trust

Pete Wishart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, how much money the Government have paid into the Thalidomide Trust since 1973; how much tax the Government have collected from payments from the Thalidomide Trust to thalidomide victims; what tax rate is applied to payments to thalidomide victims from the Thalidomide Trust; and if he will estimate the uptake of tax reclaim under the previous fiscal system by thalidomide victims who pay tax on money from the Thalidomide Trust. [79354]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 4 November 2002]: The Government paid £5m into the Thalidomide trust in 1974, £800,000 in 1978, and £7m in 1996. Taxpayer confidentiality prevents the disclosure of specific details on how much tax the Government has collected from payments from the Thalidomide trust to thalidomide victims. As with other discretionary trusts, the trustees account for tax at 34 per cent. on the income they pay out. The beneficiaries are then subject to tax on this income in the normal way, and they may claim credit for the tax paid by the trustees. This tax treatment has not changed so it is not possible to estimate the uptake of tax reclaim under a previous fiscal system. Information on the numbers of thalidomide victims claiming tax repayment is not available.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what recent meetings have been held between the Treasury and Thalidomide Action Group UK on the tax status of beneficiary payments from the Thalidomide Trust. [79356]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 4 November 2002]: The Chancellor has not held any meetings recently with the Thalidomide Action Group UK on the tax status of beneficiary payments from the Thalidomide Trust.

Pete Wishart: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, how much direct compensation the Government have paid to thalidomide victims since 1972. [79355]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government have provided thalidomide victims with support from health and social services. In addition thalidomide victims benefit from payments from the Thalidomide Trust.

Departmental Recruitment

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been spent in recruiting staff to his Department in (a) London and (b) the south east in each year since 1997. [78561]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 4 November 2002]: The costs of recruiting staff fall largely to individual teams, and are charged to team budgets. Therefore information on the total cost of recruiting staff is not available centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Enterprise Zones

Albert Owen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans the Chancellor has to introduce Enterprise Zones in deprived areas of England and Wales. [79520]

Mr. Healey [holding answer 5 November 2002]: The Government have designated 2000 Enterprise Areas across the UK, comprising the most deprived wards in the country. In England these are the most deprived 15 per cent. of wards, and in Wales the most deprived 42 per cent. The Enterprise Areas already qualify for stamp duty relief on all transactions up to £150,000, and the Government will remove stamp duty for all non-residential transactions subject to State Aids approval. Businesses in Enterprise Areas are also eligible for other forms of assistance such as the Community Investment Tax Credit and the Phoenix Fund, and at the Pre-Budget Report the Government will publish details of further plans to boost awareness and take-up of these measures.

Working Families Tax Credit (Scotland)

John Thurso: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what estimate he has made of how many families in Scotland are eligible to receive the working families tax credit. [79740]

Dawn Primarolo: No such estimate is available.

Mapeley Steps Ltd.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answers of his answers of 22 October 2002, Official Report, column 213W, on estate sales, when Parliament was informed of the sales to Mapeley Steps Ltd; and whether the Watch House (Customs House), Cowes, has been sold. [78292]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue and Customs & Excise issued a joint press release "Strategic Transfer of the Estate to the Private Sector (Steps)" (jw 4/01) on 9 March 2001, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. This press release mistakenly stated that the transfer was made to Mapeley Ltd. The transfers were in fact made to Mapeley Steps Ltd and this has been corrected in subsequent press statements.

The Watch Tower, Cowes was sold to Mapeley Steps Ltd as part of the Steps arrangements.

Cash Plan Providers

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1), what revenue he estimates would be generated by the taxation of the trading surpluses of non-profit distribution health cash plan providers; [78496]

(2) what recent representations he has received concerning proposed changes in the tax treatment of trading surpluses generated by non-profit health cash plan providers; what assessment he has made of the implications of the proposed changes for the level of voluntary donations made by this sector to the National Health Service and other health charities; and how many (a) non-profit health cash providers and (b) plan holders he anticipates will be affected; [78494]

(3) what assessment he has made of the impact of the taxation of the trading surpluses of non-profit distributing health cash plan providers on the level of donations made by such bodies to the NHS and medical charities. [78495]

Ruth Kelly: Ministers have received a number of letters about the tax treatment of health cash plan providers. Providers who are not trading on a mutual basis are able to make rule changes necessary to comply with the requirements that exempt them from tax. There is no retrospective tax charge. No information is available on the impact of these changes, or the revenue generated as these depend largely on decisions taken by individual providers.

Savings Gateway

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, if he will make a statement on the four Savings Gateway pilots. [78327]

Ruth Kelly: Pilots for the Savings Gateway were launched in August 2002. The Government will provide a statement on the progress of the pilots in the Pre-budget report.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many full-time equivalent staff there were in the Treasury's departments in each of the last five years. [78412]

Ruth Kelly: The information on total employment (full-time equivalent) in the HM Treasury as at 1 April in each of the last five years is shown in the table:

Table Showing Total Staff as at 1 April for Years 1997–2002

Date	Total Staff Full-time equivalent
1 April 2002	1060
1 April 2001	875
1 April 2000	870
1 April 1999	926
1 April 1998	893
1 April 1997	888

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the success of the pilots for the Savings Gateway. [79396]

Ruth Kelly: Pilots for the Savings Gateway were launched in August 2002 and will last for two and a half years including evaluation. The Government will provide a statement on the progress of the pilots in the Pre-budget Report.

Ministers (Tax)

David Davis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the taxable benefits from accommodation for Cabinet Ministers; [78643]

(2) if he will list benefits in kind to Ministers that are (a) tax exempt and (b) not tax exempt; [78641]

(3) what the maximum tax liability is for each benefit in kind to Ministers; [78640]

(4) if the Government will initiate a review of benefits in kind to Ministers and their taxable status. [78642]

Ruth Kelly: Government Ministers occupying official residences provided by reason of their office meet the statutory conditions for exemption from the tax charge on living accommodation. Where exemption applies and associated services, such as heating, lighting, cleaning, decoration, are supplied as well there is a tax charge of 10 per cent. of the individual's net emoluments from the employment or office. These are the rules applying to all taxpayers.

Ministers of the Crown, along with the Speaker and Opposition office-holders, are exempt, under Section 200AA of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act, from tax on transport or subsistence benefits provided for them or their families; otherwise the benefits tax rules are the same for Ministers as for other taxpayers. There is no statutory maximum on the amount of benefits that can be provided for and taxed on an employee or office-holder.

The Government have no plans to review the tax treatment of benefits in kind provided to Ministers.

Penrose Inquiry

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many requests by Lord Penrose's inquiry for the production of documents he has declined; and on what grounds they were denied; [78830]

(2) what steps have been taken to ensure that information in the possession of the Treasury of relevance to Lord Penrose's inquiry but not specifically requested by him is made available to him; what steps have been taken to identify such information; and how much such information has been supplied to the inquiry; [78826]

(3) what guidance he has given to his officials regarding their co-operation with the inquiry by Lord Penrose into Equitable Life; [78839]

(4) if he will list the requests for information from Lord Penrose's inquiry with which he has yet to comply; and when the request was made in each case; [78831]

(5) what request for papers and other sources of evidence and information the inquiry by Lord Penrose has made to Her Majesty's Treasury; on what date each request was received; and when each was complied with; [78827]

(6) what procedures are in place in his Department for responding to (a) correspondence and (b) requests for information from the Penrose Inquiry; and if he will publish these procedures; [78829]

(7) if he will list the documents and other evidence provided by Her Majesty's Treasury to the inquiry into Equitable Life by Lord Penrose. [78828]

Ruth Kelly: It was made clear at the outset of the Inquiry that the Treasury would co-operate fully with Lord Penrose. We have done so and all relevant officials are aware of this requirement.

The Treasury has sought to provide all relevant information to the Inquiry, including information not specifically requested.

The Inquiry has made a wide range of requests for documents and information and Treasury officials have co-operated fully in identifying and supplying the requested documents where they have been in the possession of the Treasury. No record of individual requests has been maintained, nor have specific procedures been put in place for dealing with such requests. No requests for the production of documents have been declined and we are not aware of any outstanding requests for information with which we have not yet complied.

Savings (Low Incomes)

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what role he plans for the Friendly Society Movement in increasing savings for those on low incomes. [79393]

Ruth Kelly: Friendly societies have an important role, in competition with other service providers, in providing access to savings products. The Government are committed to encouraging a stronger saving habit in people from low-income groups. That is why we are introducing the Saving Gateway and the Child Trust Fund. Both measures will help develop a stronger saving habit, which should benefit friendly societies. The friendly society movement has played an important role in the establishment of the Child Trust Fund by providing advice and expertise.

Financial Education

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the strategy for a national financial advice network; and if this will include the contribution made by (a) credit unions and (b) friendly societies in providing advice to the financially excluded. [79399]

Ruth Kelly: It is important that everyone should have access to appropriate financial education, information and generic advice to understand his or her options, as well as having access to regulated product specific advice where appropriate.

There have been proposals for a new network to provide financial education, information and generic advice, and we have noted those proposals with interest. Many organisations are already involved in the provision of those forms of help.

All financial services firms can already support the provision of help for the financially excluded.

The Credit Unions Act 1979 sets out the objects of a credit union, which include the training and education of members in the wise use of money and in the management of their financial affairs. The Government support credit unions welcome contribution to tackling financial exclusion.

Financial Products

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the contribution tax free financial products make to the quality of life for the less affluent; and if he will make a statement. [79398]

Ruth Kelly: The Government recognise the importance of savings in providing people with security if things go wrong, independence throughout their lives and comfort in old age. The Government's strategy is to create the right environment for saving, create the right incentives for people to save and ensure that individuals have the information and financial literacy they need to make the right saving choices.

The Government have already introduced successful products such as Individual Savings Accounts (designed to encourage saving among individuals, particularly those with little or no savings) and Stakeholder pensions (which have extended the benefits of pension saving to previously excluded groups). In addition, pilots for the Saving Gateway were launched in August 2002 and further proposals are being developed for the Child Trust Fund. Statements on the progress of the Government's saving policies will be provided in the Pre Budget Report.

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the likelihood of less affluent consumers buying financial products without face to face advice. [79397]

Ruth Kelly: Many financial products (for example insurance, and cash savings) are widely bought without face-to-face advice.

Generally, more sophisticated consumers are more likely to buy investments without face-to-face advice.

But, while sales of retail investments without face-to-face advice have grown, the bulk of sales generally continue to be through advisers who will have met their client. However, as the Sandler Review of "Medium and Long Term Retail Savings in the UK" found, distributors have strong incentives to focus on higher income consumers. The Sandler Review therefore recommended building on existing product standards through the introduction of "stakeholder" products that could significantly help less affluent consumers by providing them with simple, good value, and risk-controlled products that could be sold face to face but without the time and cost associated with regulated advice.

Sandler Review

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what progress has been made with the Sandler Review. [79400]

Ruth Kelly: Ron Sandler's report was wide-ranging and contained recommendations for Government and the regulator, as well as for the retail savings industry. The Treasury is planning to consult on the Sandler recommendation for a suite of regulated products early in the new year. The consideration of Sandler's tax recommendations are being taken forward as part of the normal budget process. The FSA is considering the recommendations that touch on its responsibilities.

Neighbourhood Renewal

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, how many of the recommendations of PAT14 have been achieved. [79395]

Ruth Kelly: Details of progress against specific recommendations of PAT14 were set out in the National Strategy for Neighbourhood Renewal: Policy Action Team Audit report, published in January 2001. Although most proposed actions that were listed have been completed, the report recognised that the work to eliminate financial exclusion is on-going. While we have made important progress across the areas identified by PAT14—credit unions, banking and insurance services, financial education and ethnic minority issues—we need to continue to work with the financial services industry, voluntary and community groups to end financial exclusion.

Credit Unions

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what his Department has done to support (a) credit unions and (b) friendly societies since 1997. [79394]

Ruth Kelly: The Government welcome the contribution of the mutual sector, including credit unions and friendly societies, to increasing choice and widening access in financial services.

Following the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, the Financial Services Authority has assumed responsibility for the regulation of credit unions and friendly societies. The Act also introduced an independent ombudsman scheme and single financial services compensation scheme. These measures should increase confidence in those considering membership of either credit unions or friendly societies.

We are in the process of delivering a programme of deregulatory measures with the aim of increasing the operational flexibility of credit unions. For example, four measures were introduced in July this year, including enhancement to credit unions' ability to borrow from external sources and more flexibility in the way credit unions can pay dividends to members.

Measures such as the introduction of the Saving Gateway and the Child Trust Fund are intended to encourage saving by low-income groups, which should benefit credit unions and friendly societies.

Inflation

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 15 July 2002, Official Report, column 65W, on inflation, if he will estimate the cost of measuring such differences; and if he will make a statement. [79516]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter to Mr. Matthew Taylor from Len Cook, dated 6 November 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question concerning an estimate of the cost of measuring inflation rates between regions.

The development of regional inflation measures would require a major expansion of existing data collections and a substantial development programme to resolve a number of conceptual and technical issues. This would involve significant additional expenditure involving many millions of pounds.

There are several reasons why the current available data is not suitable for the compilation of reliable regional indices. The selection of locations is not designed to be representative of individual regions; the locations would have to be resampled, increased in number, and substantially more prices collected. In addition, many of the centrally compiled indices (e.g. housing, cars, PCs) are designed as national indices; the possibility of developing these to produce regional indices would need to be investigated.

The data used for the weights (such as the Expenditure and Food Survey) would also have to be significantly enhanced to ensure that detailed regional expenditure categories (by type of good or service, and by type of outlet) were being weighted appropriately and represented in the sample of prices being collected. Finally, there will be a significant cost arising from the development of computer systems to produce regional indices.

The conceptual issues to be resolved include whether the items to be priced should be representative of national or regional baskets (different users will have different needs), and also the treatment of regional boundaries. Households do not necessarily restrict their shopping to the region where they live; they may physically cross regional borders for shopping or do so via Internet or mail order shopping.

FSA

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to encourage easier access to professional indemnity insurance for the Financial Services Authority in response to the recent recommendations from the FSA. [79710]

Ruth Kelly: Regulatory requirements relating to professional indemnity insurance are a matter for the Financial Services Authority, which is the single statutory regulator for the UK financial services industry.

In a press statement on 29 October 2002, the FSA announced technical changes to its rulebook regarding professional indemnity insurance.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate his Department has made of the number of higher rate tax payers resident in each parliamentary constituency in the last 12 months. [79860]

Dawn Primarolo: A reliable estimate could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Chartered Jets

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, how much was spent by the Government in each year since 1997–98 on chartering business jets as a result of the RAF's jets in 32 (The Royal) Squadron being unavailable or unsuitable. [79463]

Mr. Alexander: I have been asked to reply.

Since 1999, the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The list makes clear where private charter or RAF aircraft have been used. The Government have also published on an annual basis the overall cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. The costs include all Ministers' visits overseas undertaken by private charter or RAF aircraft. Copies of the lists and costs for the period 2 May 1997 to 31 March 2002 are available in the Libraries of the House.

All travel is undertaken fully in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Information in respect of travel by Ministers within the UK is not held centrally. However, the use of private charter jets within the UK would be expected to be exceptional.

Mr. Love: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer what evaluation he has made on extending the discretion to local authorities to charge the full rate of Council Tax on empty properties; and if he will make a statement. [77106]

Mr. Raynsford: I have been asked to reply.

An analysis of the responses to the consultation exercise is already available in the Library of the House and on the website of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. I hope to be able to announce our decisions on the way forward shortly.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effects of measures to allow sports clubs to claim council tax relief through becoming registered charities; and if he plans to amend these regulations. [79110]

Mr. Leslie: I have been asked to reply.

Sports clubs will normally be liable for national non-domestic rates.

The Charity Commission announced new rules allowing sports clubs to qualify for charity status in November 2001 and now recognise as charitable purposes certain sports related activities. Mandatory rate relief at 80 per cent. of the rates bill is available for all premises used wholly or mainly for charitable purposes. However, no assessment of the number of sports clubs that qualify for mandatory rate relief is available.

Non-profit making sports clubs that are not registered charities can receive discretionary relief from their local authorities. Sports clubs will also benefit from our proposals for small business relief included in the draft Local Government Bill.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefits Agency

Diana Organ: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will make a statement on his plans for the jobcentres and benefits offices in the Forest of Dean; and what steps he will take to ensure that there will be sufficient resources to guarantee the effectiveness of jobcentre plus and the Pension Service in the Forest of Dean; [77113]

(2) what plans he has to close existing offices of the Benefits Agency and jobcentres in the Forest of Dean. [77116]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: We are currently taking forward one of the largest organisational changes in the history of the civil service. We are integrating the whole of the old Employment Service and the Benefit Agency's services for people of working age to form Jobcentre Plus whilst simultaneously launching the new Pension Service.

A key aim of the programme is to improve access to services providing active work-focused help to people of working age through Jobcentre Plus and an expert pensions advice service through The Pension Service. We are currently reviewing the facilities available to us to provide these services across the country. We are looking to make the most efficient use of these facilities whilst maintaining a high standard of service to all our customers. Both agencies are extending access to their services with, for example, the innovative use of new technology, the use of contact centres staffed by expert advisers, the extension of face-to-face services into communities and the sharing of facilities with our local partners such as local authorities.

In spring 2003 Bath Pension Centre is scheduled to take over benefit processing and the telephone advice service for the Gloucestershire area. Pensioners will still be able to meet an adviser face to face at local advice surgeries or by arranging a home visit. This will be backed up by local services delivered in partnership with local authorities and voluntary sector organisations. Pensioners will receive letters explaining the changes fully and giving them all necessary contact details.

The Coleford Jobcentre will be moving to new premises in the near future, as the current premises do not meet the requirements of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. Jobcentre Plus are also considering moving delivery of Social Security services from Cinderford to this new Coleford office. We will be reviewing the delivery of Jobcentre Plus services as part of the roll out the new integrated offices throughout Gloucestershire by 2005–06. No decisions have yet been made on their location.

All of these changes will be managed so as to ensure that high quality public services can be maintained throughout the transition to the new arrangements.

Automated Credit Transfer

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what provisions he plans to introduce for disability claimants to claim their benefits via ACT. [79153]

Malcolm Wicks: From April 2003, the normal method of payment for benefits and pensions will be direct into bank and building society accounts (including the Post Office card account).

All customers, including those in receipt of disability benefits, will be supplied with information which clearly sets out their account options. They can choose the bank or building society account (including the Post Office card account) which best meets their needs and circumstances.

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on what date each disability benefit switches to payments via ACT. [79154]

Malcolm Wicks: From April 2003 the normal method of payment for benefits and pensions will be direct into bank and building society accounts (including the Post Office card account).

The Department will invite existing customers to convert to payment into an account on a benefit by benefit basis. The precise dates for inviting disability benefit customers are yet to be finalised. However current proposals are that customers in receipt of Invalid Care Allowance will start to be contacted in June 2003 and customers in receipt of Disability Living Allowance and Attendance Allowance will start in August 2003. Customers do not need to take any action until they receive a letter from the Department about the change.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many married women since June 1997 have had claims for incapacity benefit disallowed on the grounds that they did not, in respect of one of the last three years before making a claim, pay before the relevant time contributions of a relevant class from which the earnings factor is not less than 25 times the lower earnings limit for that year. [78209]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 30 October 2002]: The information is not available.

Information is not collected about the marital status of those making claims to Incapacity Benefit, as it is not relevant to their claim; therefore claims made by married women cannot be disaggregated from those made by unmarried women.

Employment Initiatives

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the employment initiatives that are in place, who is eligible for each initiative, what help is offered in each case, and which schemes will be affected by the Minister for Social Exclusion's statement of 16th October. [78328]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Details of our employment programmes are set out in Appendix 3 of the Departmental Report 2002 (Cm 5424), a copy of which is available in the Library.

Our policies have created a strong economy geared to delivering stability, low inflation and sound public finances. Alongside this, our labour market policies promote attachment to the job market. As a result of our policies we have around the lowest number of unemployed people in a quarter century, and more people in work than ever before, with an increase in overall employment of almost 200,000 in the last year.

We are actively considering what more can be done to streamline our welfare to work programmes, achieve even greater coherence between the New Deals, and transfer lessons learnt into mainstream provision. But as my hon. Friend the Minister for Social Exclusion has made clear we have no plans to stop running Action Teams for Jobs, Employment Zones or the ethnic minority outreach service.

Schemes and Initiatives

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the schemes and initiatives sponsored by his Department and its agencies which are not the subject of national roll out, showing (a) the authorities or areas covered by the scheme and (b) the budget of the scheme in the last year for which information is available. [75678]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The table provides information on the Department's current initiatives (at 21 October 2002) which are not part of a national roll out.

Note:
[1] These initiatives are being funded through the New Deal and Innovation Fund, therefore separate budget figures are not available.

Health and Safety

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what help he gives businesses in the Scottish Borders to improve health and safety in the workplace. [75853]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The Department of Work and Pensions is the sponsor department for the Health and Safety Executive (HSE), the government body set up to help protect people at work.

Health and safety law is enforced in the Scottish Borders, as it is throughout Great Britain, either by HSE inspectors or inspectors from the relevant local authority, depending on the nature of the work activity. Businesses receive advice during inspection visits or they can contact their local enforcing authority. In addition, HSE works in partnership with other organisations such as Scottish Enterprise and trade associations to provide advice to businesses in Scottish Borders.

HSE provides information and advice on improving health and safety in businesses in a variety of other ways. HSE Infoline, a telephone public inquiry service, answers general inquiries, gives information about free and priced publications and directs callers to other sources of advice in HSE. Over 600 free publications are available from HSE's website (www.hse.gov.uk).

HSE is also assisting Scottish Executive and other stakeholders in Scotland in setting up an occupational health and safety support service for small and medium sized enterprises and their employees across Scotland. The service will provide telephone advice and guidance with the possibility of a workplace visit carried out by an occupational health nurse or equivalent health and safety specialist.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to reform employer liability law. [75852]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The Department is currently engaging with other interested Government Departments, the Health and Safety Executive and non-governmental organisations including the Confederation of British Industry, the Trades Union Congress and the Association of British Insurers to discuss their assessment of the long-term issues affecting employers' liability compulsory insurance.

Income Support

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of pensioners received part of their income from means-tested social assistance, benefits and income support in each of the last five years; and what his estimate is for this figure for the next five years. [78474]

Mr. McCartney: The information is not available in the format requested. However around one third of pensioner benefit units have been in receipt of income-related benefits over the past five years. This proportion is expected to remain broadly constant over the next five years.

Notes:

1. We have defined pensioners by the Income Support definition i.e. where either partner is aged 60 or over.

2. Income related benefits have been defined as Housing Benefit, Council Tax Benefit and Income Support/Minimum Income Guarantee/Pension Credit. Each benefit unit is only counted once, for example a benefit unit in receipt of both Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit won't be counted in each group.

3. All estimates provided are consistent with those supplied for the 2002 Spending Review, and include the estimated effects of Pension Credit and New Tax Credits where appropriate.

4. Estimates provided include people in residential care and nursing homes as well as private households.

Ageism

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what strategies his Department has to ensure that there is no ageism in recruitment and retention processes. [79294]

Mr. McCartney: Equality of opportunity for all staff is a key feature of all Civil Service employment. As part of this, ageism is not tolerated. Our Diversity and Equality policy statement specifies age as an area where we "will provide equality of opportunity". This equality of treatment extends also to the new external recruitment system where potential recruits will be selected on the basis of competencies.

The Department includes age as part of its equality proofing of policies and procedures. Our current HR Change Programme is continuously reviewing its recruitment, development, performance management and retention policies. Alongside this work we are implementing the outcomes of the Performance and Innovation Unit's "Winning the Generation Game" report.

All applicants and employees are treated fairly to enable them to develop and fulfil their potential, valuing the contribution each person can make to the organisation. Vacancies are open up to everyone up to the age of 65 and a person's age is not taken into account at any stage of the selection process.

In addition to its usual recruitment procedures the Department also recruits employees through the New Deal programme, both for Young People and 25 and 50 plus.

All staff in the Department, below the Senior Civil Service, are able to choose to remain beyond 60, up to the age of 65. Staff over 60 are subject to the same terms and conditions as staff under 60 with no special reviews of performance applied. The Department's flexible approach to age retirement allows staff to continue to work in their current grade and, subject to business need, to seek promotion to a higher grade or voluntarily to downgrade. Subject to business need staff may also choose to work full or part time.

Departmental Websites

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, if he will list the web site links associated with his Department, including sites now dormant or closed, and indicating whether they are live, dormant or closed; what the start up costs were for each site listed; what the operating costs were in each year since start up for each site; which company hosted each site; what assessment takes place for each site; which company does the assessment; if he will place the assessment reports in the Library; and if he will make a statement. [75573]

Malcolm Wicks: The information on the start up and operating costs for Department's websites is only available in part. In-house staff maintain the department's websites and operation cost could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. Web hosting and provision of web services is provided by the department's IT contractor. However, Internet services are not accounted for separately.

The departmental site www.dwp.gov.uk formerly the DSS site www.dss.gov.uk, was launched in August 2000 at a production cost of £183,650 for the research, design and building of the site. In December 2001 the site was redeveloped for DWP and broadened to include information for the new department at a cost of £48,193.

Qualitative and quantitative research of sites has taken place along with weekly monitoring of statistics. The companies used have been appointed through the Central Office of Information. The qualitative and quantitative research reports have been placed in the Library.

The information in the table details website associated with DWP and includes live, dormant and closed websites, all DWP sites are hosted on servers provided by Electronic Data Systems with the exception of New Deal which is on a Youthnet server managed by a third party. PSA Targets

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, if he will place the data underlying his Department's value for money scores in relation to the 1998 public service agreements in the Library; and if he will make a statement. [78970]

Mr. McCartney: The Department's Public Service Agreement (PSA) for the period 1999–00 to 2001–02 (published as Command Paper 4315) set out a number of value for money measures. These were reported on in the Department of Social Security's 2001 Departmental Report and the Department for Work and Pensions' annual report for 2002 (Command Papers 5115 and 5424 respectively), both of which are in the Library.

Pensions

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent assessment he has made of the cost of reintroducing the link between the state pension and average earnings. [79765]

Mr. McCartney: Reintroducing the earnings link does nothing to help poorer pensioners. To do so would cost around £410m net in 2003–04 in today's prices. However, we will be spending an extra £6bn a year in real terms on pensioners as a result of policies introduced since 1997. This includes £2.5bn more on the poorest third of pensioners. This is three times more than an earnings link since 1998 would have given them.

Increases in the basic State Pension over the last two years have given single pensioners £2.10 a week more than an earnings link would have given them and £3.35 more for couples.

Note:

The costs of increasing the basic State Pension by earnings are in 2002–03 prices, rounded to the nearest £10m.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the (a) net cost of linking pensions to earnings and (b) surplus in the National Insurance Fund in (i) 2000 and (ii) 2010. [79362]

Mr. McCartney: The net cost to Government of increasing the basic State Pension by earnings, after taking account of savings in income-related benefits would be around £410 million in 2003–04 in 2002–03 prices.

The surplus in the National Insurance Fund for the year ending 31 March 2000 was £2,161m. Long-run projections of the National Insurance Fund are contained in the report by the Government Actuary on the costs of uprating the basic retirement pension in line with the general level of earnings (CM 4920).

Notes:

1. The net cost of increasing the basic State Pension by earnings is, in 2002–03 prices, rounded to the nearest £10m.

2. The Government Actuary's Department provides estimates of the cost to the National Insurance Fund of increasing the basic State Pension by earnings. Net costs are calculated using the DWP Policy Simulation Model.

3. The surplus in the National Insurance Fund for Great Britain is taken from National Insurance Fund accounts and is in cash terms, showing the excess of receipts over payments.

Winter Fuel Payments

David Cairns: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he has taken to ensure that winter fuel payments can continue to be paid to a non-eligible person who is in receipt of income support or income-based jobseeker's allowance on behalf of a partner who is eligible for a payment. [80315]

Mr. McCartney: Regulations laid before Parliament on 24 October will permit winter fuel payments to be made, where Income Support or income-based Jobseeker's Allowance is in payment for a couple, to the partner who is claiming for both, even if that person is aged under 60 and it is the other member of the couple who is entitled to the winter fuel payment. This will ensure that around 15,000 households continue to receive winter fuel payments automatically and timeously, without the need to claim. Such payments to the non-eligible partner made for the last two winters (£3 million per year) were not supported by legislation and the Department's relevant accounts will be noted accordingly.

Post Offices

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what information will be provided to pensioners regarding the introduction and use of Post Office card accounts; and if he will make a statement. [78079]

Malcolm Wicks: All customers will be supplied with information (including letters and leaflets), which clearly set out their "account options" so they can choose the bank or building society account (including the Post Office card account) which best meets their needs and circumstances.

Social Exclusion Unit

Mr. Keith Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what action he has taken to implement the recommendations relevant to his Department in the Social Exclusion Unit report "Reducing re-offending by ex-prisoners." [76806]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by the Minister of State, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on 24 October 2002, Official Report 1, 495W.

Benefits

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will introduce a fast-track scheme to provide interim advance payments to people who appear to have a valid claim to benefit; [79187]

(2) if he will introduce a fast-track scheme to provide interim advance payments to people who appear to have made a valid claim for benefit from the Social Fund. [79217]

Malcolm Wicks: We recognise that many people making a claim to benefit will be in need of immediate financial support. To avoid unnecessary hardship, discretionary payments on account of benefit can be made where a claim has not been determined but the Decision Maker is satisfied that the basic conditions of entitlement for the benefit are likely to be met.

Social Fund Crisis Loans can be made to people in an emergency where there are no other means of preventing serious damage or serious risk to health or safety. An inherent feature of Crisis Loan applications is that they should be dealt with on the day the need arises.

In the case of the regulated Social Fund, for example Sure Start Maternity Grants or Funeral Payments, it would not be appropriate to make interim awards pending receipt of a valid claim. However, we believe arrangements for both elements of the scheme are sufficiently flexible to allow staff to have regard to the urgency of an application.

Tax Credits

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the rules will be for passporting families to entitlement to the Sure Start maternity grant when the new tax credits come into force in April 2003. [77274]

Maria Eagle: From April 2003, Sure Start Maternity Grants will be payable to families receiving Income Support, income-based Jobseeker's Allowance, Child Tax Credit at a rate greater than the family element, or Working Tax Credit where a disabled worker is included in the assessment.

Applications may be made at any time from 11 weeks before the baby is due until three months after the birth, or up to three months after the date of an adoption or parental order.

Child support

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what estimates he has made of the rate of compliance under the new Child Support Scheme; [76110]

(2) what estimate he has made of the change in the child support maintenance compliance rate that will result from the new scheme reforms. [79359]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 4 November 2002]: A target of 75 per cent. compliance, to be achieved by the end of 2003 and applying to cases assessed under the new scheme, was included in 2000 in the Public Services Agreement for the former Department of Social Security. We have a long-term goal of improving on this figure, as our experience of the new scheme increases.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the extent of delay in introducing new Child Support Agency assessment procedures. [78732]

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, when the reforms of the CSA will be fully implemented [79004]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the letter sent to hon. Members on 19 September 2002 by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, a copy of which was placed in the Library.

Social Fund

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people who applied for a budgeting loan in 2000–01 had an outstanding Social Fund loan; [77271]

(2) what his estimate is of the cost of replacing the double debt rule (Social Fund Direction 53), with a restriction based on just the amount owing. [77272]

Malcolm Wicks: The double debt rule is designed to ensure that people do not become over indebted by borrowing additional amounts from the Social Fund until they have repaid a reasonable proportion of the original loan. Further loans are refused to applicants who have an outstanding budgeting loan debt of more than half the maximum amount available to them. Once their existing debt drops to less than half they can reapply, although the amount of further loan available to them could still be affected by any outstanding debt.

It is estimated that the cost of abolishing the rule while broadly maintaining maximum amounts available, would be around £100m in the first year. The cost would fall to £25m in the second year and £10m in the third [1].

Information is not available on the number of people applying for budgeting loans who already have an outstanding Social Fund loan. However, during 2000–01, 1,114,000[2,3] applications were made for a Social Fund budgeting loan where there was an existing Social Fund debt. This figure will include cases where one person has made more than one application.

Note:

[3] The figure for applications from people with existing Social Fund debt includes Crisis Loan debt which is not subject to the double debt rule.

Customer Service

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the benefit claims forms that referred claimants to the Citizens Advice Bureaux Service for assistance and advice in their completion as at 30th September; what percentage of documents issued referred benefits claimants to Citizens Advice Bureaux (a) in 2001 and (b) up to 30th September; and what discussions the Government has had with the National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux in respect of the inclusion of such references to advice. [76540]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 23 October 2002]: In accordance with the expressed wishes of the National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux, the Department routinely advises customers on its claim forms and other written information products that they may seek further advice from sources such as their local Citizens Advice Bureau.

The majority of our claim packs, covering most major benefits, include reference to the advice available from local Citizens Advice Bureau. We have recently confirmed with the National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux that it is still their wish that we should do so. The purpose of the reference to local Citizen's Advice Bureaux is to make customers aware of the availability of their independent advisory services.

Child Benefit

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place in the Library a copy of the letter to be sent to child benefit customers on 28th October informing them of their options for receiving benefit from April 2003. [76108]

Malcolm Wicks: A copy of the mailing sent to child benefit customers has been placed in the Library. The mailing consists of an invitation letter, supplementary information, a form to capture bank details and a pre-paid envelope. It explains account options that are open to customers and how to transfer to payment directly into an account.

Statistical Publications

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if his Department's research programme for 2002–03 includes research into the impact on the health of mental health service users of his Department's benefits policies; and if he will make a statement. [78608]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has no plans to conduct research into the impact on the health of mental health service users of the Department's benefit policies in its 2002–2003-research programme. However, the Department conducts a wide range of research with its service users, which includes mental health service users in receipt of benefits.

The Department publishes its research programme and all its commissioned research.

Fuel Poverty

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which of his Department's Public Service Agreements relate to fuel poverty reduction and what progress has been made to date in achieving them [79496]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department for Work and Pensions has no Public Service Agreement relating to a reduction in fuel poverty. Departments that do have Public Service Agreements on fuel poverty will report on progress against the targets in the Autumn Performance Reports, which will be published shortly.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what progress has been made in developing improvements to the Fuel Direct scheme; what the purpose of an improved scheme will be; and by what date a revised scheme is likely to be in place. [79495]

Malcolm Wicks: The Fuel Direct scheme is designed to protect the fuel supplies of people receiving income-related benefits—particularly families—who have run up arrears, by making payments direct from their benefit to the supplier until the debt is cleared. The scheme works well and there are no plans for a radical overhaul.

As part of the Government's Fuel Poverty Strategy the Department has been working with the Office of Gas and Electricity Markets (Ofgem) to make a number of operational improvements to the scheme for the benefit of both customers and suppliers. The first stage of these improvements was introduced in March 2001 and work is underway to further rationalise the scheme.

Uprating

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions' pursuant to his answer of 15 July 2002, Official Report, column 114W, on state pensions, if he will increase the basic state pension increments paid to pensioners who retired before April 2002 so that they maintain their original proportionate value as outlined in Benefits Agency literature. [74742]

Mr. McCartney: The legal requirement, as set out in our literature, is that where people defer taking their pensions and, as a result, earn increments, then for every six days of deferral (excluding Sundays and days for which certain NI benefits are received) the amount of the increments will increase by about ½p for each £1.00 of the weekly rate payable at the time the person becomes entitled to the state pension. We are also obliged to increase all parts of state pension by at least the rate of RPI on an annual basis. We have met these legal requirements.

British Residents

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will issue advice to British nationals residing in the islands of (a) Martinique, (b) Guadeloupe and (c) Reunion on the rationale of paying winter fuel payments to them; [74560]

(2) when he was advised by the European Commission that the Government was obliged to pay winter fuel payments to British residents in the overseas territories of the EU; what legislation governs this requirement; and if he will list the cost of such payments, broken down by current overseas territory of the EU; [74558]

(3) if he will make a statement on his policy for paying the winter fuel payment to British residents in (a) French Guiana and (b) Guyana; and if he will make a statement on how to determine the location of the British nationals who reside for part of the year in each country. [74559]

Mr. McCartney: The Government, after careful consideration of its legal obligations under EC Regulation 1408/71 and discussions with the European Commission, concluded that certain people living in the EEA (or from winter 2002–3, Switzerland) could continue to get Winter Fuel Payments. I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave to my hon. Friend the member for Caephilly on 19 July 2002, Official Report, column 599w.

The EC regulation applies to member states, French overseas departments (Martinique, Guadeloupe, French Guiana and Reunion), the Azores, Madeira and the Canary Islands. It also applies to Switzerland from 1 June 2002.

We estimate the annual cost of such payments to be around £10 million.

Eligible people, generally EEA nationals (which includes UK nationals) who qualified for a payment in Great Britain before moving to another EEA country will be able to continue receiving Winter Fuel Payments whilst they are ordinarily resident in another EEA country or Switzerland, provided that they continue to satisfy the eligibility criteria.

If a person lives in more than one country, a decision will need to be made to determine whether he is entitled under the current rules.

Notes:

Winter Fuel Payments can only be made to people living in Switzerland from this coming winter. This is because, while Switzerland is not a member of the EEA, a formal agreement between Switzerland and the European Community (EC) countries will enable the EU Social Security coordination regulations to apply between Switzerland and the EC countries. The agreement came into force from 1st June 2002 and therefore, for Winter Fuel Payments, applies from winter 2002–03, but not before.

However, the agreement does not extend to the three countries who are not part of the EC but who are part of the EEA, namely, Iceland, Liechtenstein and Norway. Therefore in some circumstances, Winter Fuel Payments may continue to be paid to people who are Swiss nationals who live in Switzerland or one of the EC countries, but not when they live in Iceland, Liechtenstein or Norway. Similarly Winter Fuel Payments may continue to be paid to people who are nationals of Iceland, Liechtenstein or Norway who live in an EEA country, but not when they live in Switzerland.

Basic Pensions

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of how much the state pension will be worth over the next 50 years. [79745]

Mr. McCartney: The Government believe that the State Pension should remain the essential foundation of income in retirement.

The basic State Pension is currently £75.50 for single pensioners. In the short-term we have given the guarantee that the basic State Pension will be increased by at least £100 a year for single pensioners and £160 a year for couples in 2003–04. In future years, the basic State Pension will be increased by 2.5 per cent. or the increase in the September Retail Prices Index, whichever is the higher.

Based on current policy, we estimate that the rate of the basic State Pension will be around £76.25 in 50 years time in today's prices.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in which countries UK citizens entitled to receive the winter fuel allowance can reside and receive the allowance. [79065]

Mr. McCartney: UK citizens who are entitled to Winter Fuel Payments will continue to receive the payments if they move to another European Economic Area country or Switzerland, provided that they continue to meet the eligibility criteria.

TRANSPORT

Freight Vehicles (EU Regulations)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, whether the 48 hour average working week restriction will apply to drivers of large freight vehicles; if operators can require drivers to work more than

48 hours without having to sign an opt-out agreement to EU Regulation 3820/85; and if he will make a statement. [74344]

Mr. Spellar: Directive 2002/15/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council on the organisation of the working time of persons performing mobile road transport activities was adopted on 11 March 2002 and must be transposed into national law not later than 23 March 2005. This directive, which matches the scope of Regulation (EEC) 3820/85 on drivers' hours, requires member states to ensure that the average weekly working time may not exceed 48 hours over a reference period of 4 months which may, in certain circumstances, be extended to 6 months. Neither directive 2002/15/EC nor Regulation 3820/85 provides for an opt out.

London Underground

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, (1) if he will list the sub-contracts entered into as part of the London Underground Public Private Partnership by (a) Bechtel, (b) Jarvis, (c) Amey, (d) Balfour Beatty, (e) W. S. Atkins, (f) Bombadier Transportation, (g) Thames Water, (h) Seeboard, indicating the (i) value and (ii) purpose of these sub-contracts; how many of these sub-contracts are with the above companies and connected businesses and how much these contracts are worth; [79535]

(2) if he will list for (a) Bechtel, (b) Jarvis, (c) Amey, (d) Balfour Beatty, (e) W.S. Atkins, (f) Bombadier Transportation, (g) Thames Water and (h) Seeboard, how much investment they have made into the London Underground Public Private Partnership to date; how much they are expected to invest and over what timescale; how much has (i) been paid to them from public funds and London Underground Limited to date and (ii) expected to be paid to them over (A) 70 years and (B) 30 years of the contracts they are involved in; [79539]

(3) if he will list each contract agreed in the London Underground Public Private Partnership with (a) Bechtel, (b) Jarvis, (c) Amey, (d) Balfour Beatty, (e) W. S. Atkins, (f) Bombadier transportation, (g) Thames Water and (h) Seeboard, indicating in each case the (i) value and (ii) purpose of the contract; [79474]

(4) what the estimated value to the London Underground is of investment via the Public Private Partnership by (a) Bechtel, (b) Jarvis, (c) Amey, (d) Balfour Beatty, (e) W. S. Atkins, (f) Bombadier Transportation, (g) Thames Water and (h) Seeboard over (i) 70 years and (ii) 30 years of the contracts they are involved in; whether this estimated value includes the profit element from these contracts to these companies; and if he will set out how this estimated value is calculated; [79540]

(5) what assessment he has made of the levels of profits likely to be achieved from contracts and sub-contracts associated with the London Underground Public Private Partnership in (a) seven and a half years and (b) 30 years by (i) Bechtel, (ii) Jarvis, (iii) Amey, (iv) Balfour Beatty, (v) WS Atkins, (vi) Bombadier Transportation, (vii) Thames Water and (viii) Seeboard. [79831]

Mr. Jamieson: London Underground Limited is conducting a procurement exercise for each of the three contracts to modernise the London Underground's infrastructure. The preferred bidder for the JNP contract is Tube Lines Group. The preferred bidder for the BCV and SSL contracts is Metronet. London Underground is proposing to enter into contracts with these consortia, not the individual companies listed.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, when he expects to transfer responsibility for the London Underground Public Private Partnership to the Mayor of London and Transport for London; whether he expects to set conditions on the transfer; and if he will make a statement. [79475]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government will retain responsibility for London Underground until the competitions for the PPP contracts have been completed, as envisaged by the GLA Act 1999. The Mayor and Transport for London will inherit the PPP contracts when London Underground Limited is transferred in due course.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, what representations his Department has made to the Mayor of London in relation to his plans to appeal about the PFI on London Underground to the European Courts. [79534]

Mr. Spellar: The Mayor's plans are a matter for him. A third legal challenge to the proposed PPP arrangements would simply delay further the investment the Underground system needs. There have already been two such delays, at significant cost to taxpayers in London.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what (a) financial and (b) other information (i) his Department and (ii) London Underground Limited collate on (A) Bechtel, (B) Jarvis, (C) Amey, (D) Balfour Beatty, (E) W.S. Atkins, (F) Bombadier Transportation, (G) Thames Water and (H) Seeboard in respect of the London Underground Public Private Partnership; and if he will make a statement. [79830]

Mr. Jamieson: The competitions for the PPP contracts to modernise the London Underground's infrastructure are the responsibility of London Underground Limited. The preferred bidders are Metronet and Tube Lines Group, each of which is a consortium. Assessment by London Underground, with its advisers, of the capacity of the preferred bidders to carry out their obligations under the contracts is an important part of the competitions. It is for London Underground, and not for the Government, to satisfy itself in relation to the bidding consortia.

Motorways

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those persons who have the right to direct that a stretch of motorway be closed to traffic in England and Wales; what criteria need to be applied in each case; and what (a) safeguards and (b) guidelines exist to ensure that such closure decisions are properly made before implementation. [79132]

Mr. Spellar: Two organisations can close a motorway: the police, under the emergency powers granted to them by the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 Section 67, and the relevant highway authority under Section 14, of the same act. The police use their powers to prevent obstruction of, or danger to or from, traffic as a result of extraordinary circumstances. In such an emergency, the police notify the highway authority that an incident has taken place, and ask for traffic management and diversion routes to be put in place. By their nature, closures by the police cannot be foreseen.

As far as the trunk road network is concerned, the Highways Agency, in its role as Network Operator, is working pro-actively with its maintaining agents and the police forces in England to better manage incidents and help reduce the knock-on effect of congestion.

Highway authorities are allowed to close roads where works on or near the road are likely to cause danger to the public or damage to the highway. Before closing a road, the authority is required to take account of the availability and suitability of alternative routes and, because closures are planned, advance warning is given.

On the trunk road network the Highways Agency is working closely with its contractors to introduce more effective construction and maintenance techniques leading to fewer hold-ups while essential repairs are carried out.

In either case, the decision to close a road is a matter for judgment taking into account the safety of the travelling public and, where appropriate, the workforce.

Speed Cameras

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria there are on installing roadside speed cameras on stretches of road which have a bad safety record in advance of safer stretches of highway. [79133]

Mr. Spellar: Guidance on speed camera deployment is contained in Circular Roads 1/92. Additional rules and guidelines have been made available to those areas participating in the netting off funding system for safety cameras. In both cases the guidance is that speed cameras should be placed at sites and on routes where there is a history of speed-related crashes resulting in casualties.

Road Deaths

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many deaths there have been involving motorists on the hard shoulder of (a) motorway and (b) dualled trunk carriageways for which the Highways Agency is responsible in (i) 1997, (ii) 1999 and (iii) 2001; and if he will make a statement. [79064]

Mr. Jamieson: In the last five years, including the years for which information was requested, the numbers of people killed in an accident involving motorists on the hard shoulder are.

	Motorways	Dual Carriageway trunk roads
1997	9	7
1998	24	6
1999	13	9
2000	16	19
2001	14	11

The numbers quoted for dual carriageway trunk roads also include people killed in lay-bys.

Compared to all road accidents on motorways and dual carriageway trunk roads, there are relatively few deaths directly caused by accidents on the hard shoulder. Road accident figures are constantly monitored to identify where road improvements would be effective.

Car Sharing

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, what encouragement his Department offers to advance car sharing by its staff. [79337]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 5 November 2002]: The Driver Vehicle and Licensing Agency in Swansea operate a voluntary car sharing scheme for its staff. Staff registered on the database are encouraged to car share by the provision of a free emergency taxi service should their sharing travel arrangements break down unexpectedly.

Car Registration

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, what his estimate is of the number of unregistered cars being driven; what plans he has to strengthen the law requiring registration and increasing penalties for non-registration; and if he will make a statement. [79115]

Mr. Jamieson: The National Roadside Survey of Vehicle Excise Duty evasion which took place in June 1999 showed the level of evasion as 3.9 per cent. of revenue due which equates to £191 million in 2001–02. This was offset by £110 million recovered through enforcement activities. The number of unlicensed vehicles at any one time is around 1 million vehicles.

We have introduced legislation which will make the registered keeper of a vehicle remain liable for it until a formal change of keepership is notified to DVLA. This system of continuous registration will help to improve the accuracy of the vehicle register which will lead to more efficient tax collection, and more effective enforcement. The legislation will be brought into force by regulations.

In addition DVLA is working closely with the police and local authorities to target unlicensed and abandoned vehicles. Last year, DVLA took successful action against 800,000 evaders recovering some £110 million in fines, penalties and re-licensing revenue.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimates his Department has made of how many vehicles have not been registered by their present owners with the DVLC as having changed hands. [79026]

Mr. Jamieson: It is extremely difficult to provide a precise estimate of the number of vehicle keepers who failed to notify a vehicle transfer. The main problem is one of delay when the new keeper fails to notify acquisition until the licence is due for renewal. This will be addressed by our planned introduction of a system of continuous registration which will encourage immediate notice of transfer.

Around 500,000 vehicles are currently shown on the register as "between keepers", the majority are in the hands of motor traders.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, what plans he has to encourage vehicle owners to register a change of ownership with DVLC. [79027]

Mr. Jamieson: The Modernising Vehicle Registration Implementation Board was established earlier this year with representatives from industry, motorists' organisations, the police and the insurance industry to advise my right hon. Friend on ways to improve procedures. The aim is to improve the accuracy of the vehicle register to combat vehicle crime, to help local authorities trace the owners of abandoned cars and to bear down on vehicle excise duty evasion.

Progress on these issues have been reported to the House in my right hon. Friend the Minister for Transport's answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Ellesmere Port and Neston (Mr. Miller) on 11 June 2002, Official Report, column 1138W and in my answer to the hon. Member for East Worthing and Shoreham (Mr. Loughton) on 21 October 2002 [Official Report, column 27W].

Rail Franchising

Lawrie Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, if he will make a statement on rail franchising policy. [79825]

Mr. Darling: The Strategic Rail Authority has announced today a new approach to franchising. Under it the SRA will be much clearer what it expects from each train operating company. Train companies will not just be judged on whether trains run on time but also on the cleanliness of trains and stations, accurate travel information and passenger security.

The nature of the franchising structure put in place at privatisation has contributed to the difficulties in the railway industry—especially poor performance and variable quality of service.

Today, with the Government's support, the SRA has announced a new approach to franchising that puts passengers first. It intends to do so through: tighter specification of services, station standards, train cleanliness and journey quality; and robust incentives and penalties that will influence positively the behaviour of operators. These include: changes to the performance regime; quantified performance indicators for service and station quality, with payment by results; and a new approach to the award and management of franchises. The first franchise awarded under the new basis is expected to start operating in 2004.

The SRA has also announced proposals to make better use of the railway by combining franchises at key London stations—from 3 to 1 at Liverpool Street, from 2 to 1 at Waterloo and from 3 to 2 at Paddington.

Transitional arrangements are being put in place as it is not practical to award all of the franchises due to expire by 2004 simultaneously. The SRA has therefore made a number of detailed announcements on individual franchises today. These include: an invitation to Connex Transport UK Ltd and First Group/Keolis SA to proceed to detailed negotiations on Heads of Terms for the TransPennine franchise; negotiations with Arriva Trains Northern on an interim franchise to operate services until the Northern Rail franchise commences in 2004; a one-year extension to the current South West Trains franchise to February 2004 and the agreement of principles with Stagecoach Holdings plc for a new South West Trains franchise extending to 2007.

Further adjustments to franchise periods may be necessary to facilitate an orderly transition from the existing franchise regime to the new one. I shall be prepared to use my powers of direction under section 26 of the Railways Act 1993 for this purpose.

This announcement is another step towards delivering a reliable and safe railway and builds on the SRA's consultation on its Capacity Utilisation Strategy launched on 5 September.

Copies of the SRA's Franchising Policy Statement have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Railtrack

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, what property rights the Government possessed in respect of the assets of Railtrack on 10 May. [79917]

Mr. Jamieson: In connection with the construction of the Channel Tunnel Rail Link, the Secretary of State had (and continues to have) rights under a Property Agreement entered into with Railtrack plc to buy from the company any land owned by the company which is needed for the Channel Tunnel Rail Link, and certain rights of access.

Cliffe Airport Option

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the distance is from the mean low water mark on the OS map to the edge of the four runway Cliffe Airport Option at the nearest point; and whether the four runway Cliffe Airport Option would be built past the mean low water mark at any point. [79790]

Mr. Jamieson: The Cliffe option boundary, as published in the The Future Development of Air Transport in the United Kingdom: South East consultation document, is around 1300 metres from the general Mean Low Water (MLW) line (excluding inlets and streams) and would not require building past the MLW mark.

The precise location of this, and all other published options, should be considered as indicative only. If any option is supported in the air transport White Paper more detailed design and project definition will be required.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the distance is from the proposed edge of the four runway Cliffe Airport Option to the borough constituency boundary for Castle Point, at the closest point. [79787]

Mr. Jamieson: As published in The Future Development of Air Transport in the United Kingdom (South East) consultation document, the Cliffe option lies about 2.5 kilometres from the Castle Point borough boundary, at the closest point.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how high above the River Thames, at low tide, (a) the runways and (b) the highest buildings would be in the Cliffe Airport four runway option. [79788]

Mr. Jamieson: The South East and East of England Regional Air Services study (SERAS) analysis indicates that the runways associated with the Cliffe option would be between 12 and 15 metres above mean sea level. The analysis did not include either a calculation against low tide levels or the design of airport buildings and associated infrastructure.

If the option is supported in the air transport White Paper, more detailed design and project specification would be needed.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the proposed length is in the Cliffe Airport Option, of (a) the cross-wind runway and (b) the main east-west runways. [79789]

Mr. Jamieson: The Cliffe option published in The Future Development of Air Transport in the United Kingdom (South East) consultation document has a main east-west runway length of around 4000 metres. The diagonal runway is 3000 metres long. Both include an allowance for runway end safety areas.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in what circumstances in the Cliffe Airport Option the cross-wind runway will be used for passenger movements. [79786]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 15 October 2002, [Official Report, column 724W].

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Palace of Westminster

Mr. Shepherd: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, how many members of the Metropolitan Police Fire Section are based within the precinct of the Palace of Westminster; and if he will list (a) their duties and (b) the equipment available for use in an emergency. [78597]

Mr. Kirkwood: There are 21 Metropolitan Police Fire Officers based on the Parliamentary Estate. Their duties include fire prevention, response to alarm calls, patrols of the estate to ensure fire safety measures are in place, together with initial response to fires. In the event of Fire Brigade Officers attending a fire, the role of the Metropolitan Police Fire Officers is to liaise, brief and guide. They are provided with personal protective clothing and they have access to hand held fire extinguishers.

Portcullis House (Fire Certificate)

Mr. Shepherd: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, if, in the absence of a fire certificate for Portcullis House, the certificate of employers' liability insurance issued to hon. Members remain valid; and if the (a) fire safety doors, (b) alarm systems and (c) evacuation procedure meet British safety standards. [78596]

Mr. Kirkwood: Despite the delay in granting a fire certificate for Portcullis House, the employers' liability insurance arranged on behalf of Members remains valid.

The fire strategy for Portcullis House, which encompasses safety doors, alarm systems and evacuation procedures, conforms to British safety standards and the terms of relevant legislation. I will arrange for the hon. Gentleman to be supplied with further details if he wishes.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Road Peace

Simon Hughes: To ask the Solicitor-General what actions she proposes to take to respond to representations from RoadPeace following their meeting with Ministers on 10 October, and if he will make a statement. [79619]

The Solicitor-General: The Attorney and I recognise that fatal road traffic crashes have a devastating effect on the family and friends of the victim. The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) is committed to ensuring that such cases are dealt with sensitively and are reviewed by prosecutors with requisite experience. The Attorney and I will continue to ensure the CPS implements its commitment under the Victim's Charter and the Direct Communication with Victim's initiative to provide support to victims and those who have been bereaved as a result of road traffic offences.

The CPS has, since the meeting with RoadPeace, re-issued nationally to its staff a reminder to implement, so far as is possible, guidance provided in various cases, on how best to deal with situations where inquests and criminal proceedings arising out of the same incident are pending.

The CPS brings to the Law Officers' attention, in appropriate cases, sentences passed by the Crown Court for us to consider a referral to the Court of Appeal as an Unduly Lenient Sentence. Since the beginning of this year we have referred to the Court of Appeal 6 cases involving either death by dangerous driving or death by careless driving when over the prescribed limit for alcohol.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Solicitor-General if she will publish the responses her Department receives to the consultation on the Criminal Justice White Paper and place them in the Library. [79620]

The Solicitor-General: The responses to the consultation exercise are currently being considered. I will make arrangements to publish those that we have received once that work is concluded.

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Jim Cunningham: To ask the Solicitor-General what role the Crown Prosecution Service has in prosecuting antisocial behaviour orders. [75305]

The Solicitor-General: Pursuant to the answer, 24 October 2002, column 452W. Details for the final paragraph should read as follows:

There were prosecutions of 78 breaches of ASBO's occurring between January—December 2000, leading to convictions in 69 (9 were dismissed). 7 of the breaches were not proceeded with on public interest grounds.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Drinks Licences

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what plans he has to transfer responsibility for the granting of drinks licences in Northern Ireland from magistrates to local government authorities. [79768]

Mr. Browne: Northern Ireland has its own law on liquor licensing as contained in the Licensing (Northern Ireland) Order 1996. There are no plans to transfer responsibility for the granting of drinks licences from magistrates to local authorities in Northern Ireland.

Gaming Machines

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, if he will bring Northern Ireland legislation on gaming machines into line with that in the rest of the United Kingdom. [79199]

Mr. Browne: Northern Ireland has its own law on gaming machines which is included in the Betting, Gaming, Lotteries and Amusements (Northern Ireland) Order 1985. While this is broadly in line with the equivalent legislation in Great Britain, there are significant differences which take account of local circumstances in Northern Ireland. I have no plans to change this arrangement.

Wind Farms

Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many representations in each of the last five years he has received recommending an increase in the speed with which planning applications for wind farms are considered. [78997]

Angela Smith: The Secretary of State's office has not received any such representations during the period specified.

HMS Caroline

Mr. MacKinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, if he will have discussions with the Ministry of Defence to bring about the future use of HMS Caroline as part of the wider tourist attractions of the Belfast Harbour and River Lagan. [78362]

Mr. Pearson: HMS Caroline is currently a training ship of the Ulster Division of the Royal Navy Reserve (RNR) docked in Titanic Quarter, Belfast. I understand that the RNR has plans to build a new on-shore base in Belfast once the finance becomes available and as a result, HMS Caroline will be surplus to requirements. However, until the shore base plans are implemented, HMS Caroline will remain a training ship.

I will ask the Northern Ireland Tourist Board to explore with relevant partners, including the Ministry of Defence, possibilities for the future use of HMS Caroline.

Grammar Schools

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 24th October 2002, Official Report, column 476W, on selective schools, what his estimate is of the level of public support for the retention of grammar schools in Northern Ireland. [79313]

Jane Kennedy: Grammar schools are popular with parents and, like many other schools, are oversubscribed each year with applications for places.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH

European Union

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when (a) his Department and (b) Ministers were informed of plans to introduce an EU top level domain; and if he will make a statement on the accuracy of his Department's initial press briefings on this subject. [78126]

Mr. MacShane: The information requested is not available at this time. However, I shall write to the hon. Member with a full answer as soon as possible.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the European Union offices outside of the EU, indicating the number of permanent staff; what the annual running cost is, of each office; what the diplomatic status of staff is; and if he will make a statement on the relationship between his Department and them. [78116]

Mr. Macshane: There are 144 European Delegations in Third party countries, employing a total of 843 permanent staff:

Note:
Where no permanent staff are listed, delegations are managed in entirety by locally engaged staff.

The total allocation under Title A6 of the budget (Staff and Administrative Expenditure of European Community Delegations) for 2002 is €273.3 million.

Whether or not delegation officials enjoy diplomatic status depends on the individual arrangements agreed between the European Commission and the relevant host country or organisation.

Diplomatic List

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will ensure that individuals on secondment from the private sector in embassies are marked as such in the Diplomatic List, listing the firm from which they originated and the dates of their secondment. [78156]

Mr. Rammell: The Diplomatic Service List normally includes only established members of the Diplomatic Service. Although secondees from the private sector and other Government Departments may be entitled to diplomatic privileges when abroad, they are not established members of the Diplomatic Service. The relatively short duration of secondments from the private sector means that, if included, entries for secondees could well be out of date by the time the list was published.

Arms Sales (Iraq)

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to his Serbian counterpart regarding deliveries of Yugoslav arms to Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [79553]

Mr. MacShane: We are very concerned about recent reports of arms sales from the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia to Iraq. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I raised this with the Yugoslav Foreign Minister, Dr. Goran Svilanovic, when he visited the UK on 30–31 October. We urged the Yugoslav Government to investigate the matter fully and bring criminal prosecutions against those responsible. We will continue to press for a thorough investigation.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, if he will make a statement on the NATO operation in the Bosnia entity of Republika Srpska related to the sale of military equipment to Iraq. [79550]

Mr. Macshane: NATO Stabilisation Force troops carried out a two-day search of the Bosnian Serb government owned Air Force Institute, Orao, on 11–13 October. The search uncovered evidence that Orao had been providing spare engine parts for Iraqi MiG fighter jets, as well as technical assistance in repairing the engines.

Lord Ashdown, the High Representative in Bosnia, made a statement on 27 October demanding an immediate end to such assistance to Iraq and a full enquiry. He called for all those responsible to be brought to account, and for new controls to prevent any recurrence.

A number of officials have since been dismissed. On 30 October, the State government announced a total ban on all arms imports and exports. We strongly support Lord Ashdown's proposals, and will continue to make clear to Bosnian leaders the need to address this as a matter of urgency.

Ageism

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what strategies his Department has to ensure that there is no ageism in recruitment and retention processes. [79290]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: All recruitment to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) is on merit on the basis of fair and open competition. This is in line with the Civil Service Commissioners' Recruitment Code. It means that all applicants are treated equally regardless of age, gender or marital status, ethnic origin or disability.

There are upper age limits for application to join the Diplomatic Service. Applicants must be able to complete at least one overseas tour before the normal retirement age. This allows us to achieve a sensible return on recruitment and training costs.

Zimbabwe

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the extent of human rights abuse in Zimbabwe; if he will list the human rights abuses perpetrated in Zimbabwe that have been (a) reported to and (b) investigated by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [79327]

Mr. Rammell: Zimbabwe's human rights record is appalling. In its latest report on political violence dated 9 October, the Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum recorded 223 cases of abduction/kidnapping, 7 of rape, 1057 of torture and 58 of murder, in the period 1 January to 30 September 2002. Most of the violence has been perpetrated by Zimbabwe's ruling party, ZANU(PF). The vast majority of victims are opposition supporters, or those suspected of being such.

The international community, including the UK, has consistently condemned these abuses and called on the Zimbabwe Government to respect their obligations under international human rights conventions. The EU, the US and others have imposed targeted sanction on the Mugabe regime and the Commonwealth has suspended Zimbabwe from its Councils.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the adequacy of food supplies in Zimbabwe; what steps he has taken to monitor the future availability of adequate food supplies for the population of Zimbabwe; and if he will make a statement. [79326]

Mr. Rammell: The food situation in Zimbabwe remains of serious concern. We, and other donors, are doing all we can—through the UN World Food Programme and Non-Governmental Organisations—to ensure that international aid reaches the needy regardless of their political views. There is credible evidence however that other sources of food, controlled by the ZANU PF regime, are being used in support of its political objectives. We deplore this, as well as the obstruction of the work of certain Non-Governmental Organisations, which also appears to be politically motivated.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the prospects for foreign investment in Zimbabwe. [79329]

Mr. Rammell: The prospects for foreign investment in Zimbabwe are poor. Figures show that it has declined by 99 per cent. since 1998. The reasons are obvious. Zimbabwe is one of the world's fastest shrinking economies. It has lost the support of major donors and international financial institutions. Its skilled labour force, faced with over 70 per cent. unemployment, food shortages and 140 per cent. inflation, is leaving the country. On top of this, the current regime in Harare has undermined the rule of law and the right to hold private property.

Conflict Prevention

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list by country the projects funded by his Department under the Global Conflict Prevention Pool and the amount given to each. [79560]

Mr. Rammell: The Global Conflict Prevention Pool is run jointly by FCO, MOD and DFID. The Pool is divided into strategies, some of which cover regions or themes and some cover specific countries as listed below.

In Financial Year 2002–3 the geographical strategies and allocations are:

Afghanistan—£18,070,000

Balkans—£8,550,000

Belize/Guatemala—£2,101,990

Central & Eastern Europe—£10,940,000

Indonesia/East Timor—£2,053,761

Kashmir—£1,628,000

Middle East—£5,850,000

Nepal—£6,781,548

Russia/FSU—£8,160,000

Sri Lanka —£668,973

In Financial Year 2002–3 the thematic strategies and allocations are:

EU Civilian Crisis Management—£450,000

OSCE/CoE—£1,630,000

Security Sector Reform—£2,830,395

Small Arms & Light Weapons—£11,150,000

United Nations (capacity building for peacekeeping and conflict prevention)—£14,529,673

Within these strategies there is a wide range of projects. A report on the operation of the Global Conflict Prevention Pool will be published after the end of its first two years of operation in May 2003.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the criteria are for the disbursement of funds from the Global Conflict Prevention Pool to (a) Macedonia, (b) Kosovo, (c) Bosnia, (d) Indonesia and (e) East Timor; how much was allocated from the pool for the purchase of equipment to each in (i) 2001 and (ii) 2002; and if he will make a statement. [79558]

Mr. Rammell: The criteria for all projects funded by the Global Conflict Prevention Pool, wherever they take place, are drawn from the Public Service Agreement target:

"Improved effectiveness of the UK contribution to conflict prevention and management as demonstrated by a reduction in the number of people whose lives are affected by violent conflict and a reduction in potential sources of conflict, where the UK can make a significant contribution."

This is a joint target for the three departments involved in the Pool, FCO, MOD and DFID.

The GCPP's programme funds are disbursed to strategies agreed by the Ministerial committee responsible for managing the Pool. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave her today (UIN 79560) which provides a full list of the current strategies and their allocations.

Activity in Macedonia, Kosovo and Bosnia is funded from the Balkans strategy. This strategy has four strands: Access to Justice, Strengthening Democracy and Inter-Ethnic relations, Security Sector Reform and Countering Organised Crime.

Activity in Indonesia and East Timor is covered by the Indonesia/East Timor strategy. This strategy is divided into three strands: Security Sector Reform in Indonesia, Conflict Reduction in Indonesia and Conflict Prevention in East Timor.

The specific information about equipment purchase will take some time to confirm. I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what equipment will be purchased with the money (a) allocated to logistical equipment, (b) allocated to communications equipment and (c) for equipment in support of military intelligence for Nepal under the Global Conflict Prevention Pool. [79559]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The total for military support under the Global Conflict Prevention Pool for this financial year is £3,669,000. This can be broken down as follows.

1. £250,000 on bomb disposal equipment and training for the Nepalese security forces

2. £149,000 on support and training for the newly formed Military Intelligence Support Group (MISG) within the Royal Nepalese Army, including tactical radios and night-vision telescopes and binoculars

3. £2,600,000 on two transport helicopters

4. £460,000 to provide training in human rights awareness, peace support operations and in civil-military co-operation.

5. £210,000 towards infrastructure costs for the regional UN peacekeeping centre at Panchkal.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Baton Rounds

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, if he will make a statement on the use of the L21A1 baton round at a range of less than 20 metres. [80353]

Mr. Denham: At the request of the Association of Chief Police Officers, which believes that the improved accuracy of the L21A1 baton round means it is suitable for use in serious public disorder and also in dealing with individuals posing an immediate threat to life in circumstances where use of a conventional firearm may otherwise be necessary, we have sought and received a medical statement from the Defence Scientific Advisory Council on the use of the L21A1 baton round at ranges from 1 to 19 metres. This supplements their earlier assessment of the injury potential over longer ranges published on 2 April 2001.

The statement confirms that the probability of unintentional impact to the most vulnerable parts of the body remains low when the round is discharged at ranges of less than 20 metres and that there is no significant change in the probability of rounds striking the potentially vulnerable chest area. This means that the likelihood of serious injury or death occurring as the result of the impact of an L21A1 baton round is no greater at ranges between 1 and 19 metres than at the longer ranges which were the subject of the earlier statement by the Defence Scientific Advisory Council.

I will today be placing a copy of the statement in the Library. The Association of Chief Police Officers is considering, in consultation with the Government, what, if any revision to its existing guidelines on the use of baton rounds may be appropriate in the light of this statement.

Nationality Instructions

Ms Christine Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, if he will place copies of the instructions to Immigration and Nationality Directorate staff dealing with applications for British citizenship in the Library. [80354]

Beverley Hughes: The Nationality Instructions contain guidance to staff on the handling of applications for British nationality and related matters. A version of these Instructions has now been added to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate's website and hard copies are being placed in the Library. The Instructions are being made available in accordance with the principles of openness in the Freedom of Information Act 2000 and in the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. A small amount of material cannot be disclosed, either on the grounds of national security or because disclosure would impede the effective administration of the legislation. The material is subject to periodic review and revision.

Passports

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what representations he has received concerning children under 18 holding BNOCO BDTC passport; and if he will make a statement. [78873]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have been asked to reply.

None.

Stalking

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what measures the Government have taken to reduce the number of women being stalked; [78821]

(2) if he will make a statement on the Government's policy towards stalking, with particular reference to younger women. [78822]

Hilary Benn: The Protection from Harassment Act 1997 provides the legal framework for the prevention of offending, and punishment of those pursuing a course of conduct which is alarming or distressing to another, or in the worst cases causes another to fear violence. The Government are committed to reducing this type of crime, as with all violent crime, particularly when it is perpetrated against vulnerable individuals.

Following the 1997 legislation we commissioned the guide "Stalking and other forms of harassment: An investigator's guide", written by Hamish Brown from the Metropolitan Police. This provides advice in the main for police officers about how to use various pieces of legislation to deal with those causing harassment but it also contains advice for victims.

We have also conducted a number of research studies into various types of behaviour related to harassment. Research suggests that a substantial proportional of harassment is carried out by ex-partners. Domestic violence is a key priority across government. A cross-departmental Ministerial Group is currently looking at five areas for action: increasing safe accommodation choices for women and children; developing early and effective healthcare intervention; Improving the link between criminal and civil law; ensuring a consistent and appropriate response from the police and Crown Prosecution Service (CPS); and promoting education and awareness raising.

Data Protection

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what guidance he has issued to public authorities about the procedures for the collection of communications data under the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 with regard to industrial action; and if he will make a statement. [77240]

Mr. Blunkett: The access to communications data provisions in the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act (RIPA) have not yet been implemented. I will be bringing forward new proposals in relation to any additional public authorities under Chapter II of Part I of RIPA following detailed public consultation. However, the RIPA does not provide for access to communications data for purposes relating to industrial action. A strict test of "necessity" must be met before any communications data is obtained under RIPA. An authorising officer must not only consider the communications data to be necessary but must also consider the conduct involved in obtaining the communications data to be "proportionate" to what it seeks to achieve. The grounds on which it is necessary, for example, include: in the interests of national security; for the purpose of preventing or detecting crime or of preventing disorder.

Fire Safety

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, when he expects to receive the conclusions and recommendations of the review that he has commissioned into fire safety precautions and the use of sprinklers in young offender institutions, adult prisons and detention centres. [45746]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 28 March 2002]: The report is in its final stages of preparation and I would expect to receive it soon.

Criminal Record Checks

Matthew Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what plans he has to suspend the checking of applicants from voluntary organisations by the Criminal Records Bureau; and what alternative arrangements he will put in place. [76016]

Hilary Benn: There are no plans to suspend checks of applicants from voluntary organisations. Due to current operational difficulties being experienced by the Criminal Records Bureau (CRB), it has been necessary to announce proposals to postpone mandatory checks under certain regulations arising from the Care Standards Act 2000. These would apply to voluntary organisations and to any other bodies which are subject to there regulations. The Government remain committed to introducing mandatory checks in these areas at the earliest possible opportunity. For the time being, even without the CRB check, the regulations and national minimum standards will help to improve standards and protect service users.

Fire Service Cover

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what preparations he has made to ensure the safety and continuity of service to the public in the event of a firefighters' strike. [77666]

Mr. Blunkett: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Local Government and the Regions on 28 October 2002, Official Report, column 527W.

Security Operation (Barrow-in-Furness)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for how many (a) police officers and (b) anti-terrorist officers were involved in the security operation at Barrow-in-Furness for the docking of the Pacific Pintail and Pacific Teal vessels in September, and if he will make a statement. [77771]

Mr. Wilson: I have been asked to reply.

Security for the transportation of nuclear material is regulated by the Office for Civil Nuclear Security (OCNS), the security regulator. It is not Government policy to disclose details of security measures taken in connection with nuclear material.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Ghana

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assistance her Department has given to expanding access to clean and affordable water for the people of Ghana; and if she will make a statement. [77698]

Clare Short: The Government of Ghana decided some years ago to invite tenders from the private sector to improve the delivery of publicly owned water services in Accra. This policy was agreed by the previous government and supported by the government elected in December 2000.

Ghana has faced a barrage of misleading campaigning suggesting that this is a privatisation—which it is not and that the poor will suffer. In fact the urban poor currently receive no water services and pay very high prices for water they purchase by the bucket.

My Department has provided £10 million to support this reform which was put in place by Ghana's democratic elected government and will improve water services for the poor.

HIV Vaccine

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what assessment she has made of the contribution the UK can make towards the development of a vaccine against HIV for use in the developing world. [77699]

Ms Keeble: The UK is making a significant contribution to work on developing AIDS vaccines. For example, the Medical Research Council in partnership with Oxford and Nairobi Universities are making very good progress on vaccines designed specifically for use in Africa. These trials are due to take place in the next few years. My Department has contributed £14 million to this work over the last 5 years.

Malawi

Vernon Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what assessment she has made of the humanitarian situation in Malawi. [77700]

Clare Short: A recent assessment concluded that 2.2 million people will be in need of food assistance between September and December 2002, and that this will rise to 3¼ million—or one third of the population in early 2003.

My Department is playing a leading role in a partnership with the Government of Malawi, and other donors to try to cope with the crisis. DFID has so far provided £30 million emergency assistance to Malawi.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what proposals her Department has to meet the targets and outcomes agreed at the recent World Summit on Sustainable Development. [77701]

Clare Short: The World Summit strengthened the international community's commitment to the Millennium Development Goals and added an important new target on access to sanitation. The international summits of the last two years have established a clear international consensus on the action needed to reduce poverty and achieve sustainable development. We now need a period of intensive implementation. The world community must deliver on the promises it has made. My Department will play its full part in making this happen.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what plans there are by members of her Department to visit Sri Lanka to discuss possible assistance for redevelopment; and if she will make a statement. [77702]

Clare Short: My Department maintains an office within the British High Commission in Colombo. Staff in this office are working to develop a range of programmes to support the peace process, rehabilitation and reconciliation.

We are providing £2.6 million through the United Nations, to help returning Internally Displaced Persons re-establish their livelihoods. Assistance has also been provided to the Government of Sri Lanka to help direct and co-ordinate international assistance. Further support will be considered in the light of needs assessments currently being completed.

Sanitation Target

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what her Department will be doing to make sure the target of halving the number of people without access to adequate sanitation by 2015 is met. [77703]

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what steps her Department is taking to ensure that the target for halving the number of people without access to adequate sanitation by 2015 is met [77711]

Clare Short: We worked very hard to win international agreement to the sanitation target. Diarrhoeal disease accounts for over 2 million child deaths each year and this can be reduced by better hygiene practices, safer water supplies and provision of sanitation. Provision of access to safer water, basic sanitation and improved hygiene must be driven forward together to have the greatest impact in the health and livelihoods of the poor—more than half the world's population have no access to sanitation. My Department's bilateral expenditure on sanitation, hygiene promotion and clean water in the past three years is:

2000–2001	90.6 million
2001–2002	87.2 million

UNRWA

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will make a statement on Britain's contribution to UNRWA. [77704]

Clare Short: The UK is UNRWA's second largest bilateral donor. Our contributions to UNRWA's General Fund, emergency appeals, and technical co-operation, have risen from £8.5 million in 1999 to planned expenditure in 2002 of about £22 million. This reflects the rising numbers of refugees, our increased confidence in UNRWA's operations, and the emergency situation in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what additional support she will make available to UNWRA to deal with the humanitarian situation in the West Bank and Gaza. [77706]

Clare Short: Over the last two years, in response to the rapidly deteriorating humanitarian situation, we have contributed a total of £20 million to UNRWA's emergency appeals. This includes an additional contribution of £2 million this year which I confirmed to Commissioner-General Hansen in October. Emergency funding is in addition to our contributions to UNRWA's regular schooling, healthcare and social services programmes.

Afghanistan

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what her policy is on humanitarian assistance in Afghanistan. [77705]

Clare Short: The latest UN assessment shows that 4.2 million people are still dependent on food aid. Very large numbers of people are also vulnerable to the effects of winter. It is important that the international community works with the Afghan authorities to ensure that basic humanitarian needs are met, whilst seeking to avoid creating a dependency culture. This means, where feasible, shifting to a more sustainable form of assistance (cash for work rather than food for work).

I have recently approved additional allocations of £11 million for the provision of humanitarian assistance during the coming winter, through the relevant UN agencies.

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what plans she has to increase aid to Afghanistan [77712]

Clare Short: At the Tokyo donor conference in January this year I pledged £200 million over five years to support humanitarian and reconstruction needs in Afghanistan. In 2002–03, we originally planned to spend £40 million through UN agencies, NGOs and the Afghanistan Reconstruction Trust Fund. I have since increased this amount by £25 million, to help meet the increased humanitarian needs over the coming winter, and to help clear Afghanistan's arrears to the International Financial Institutions so that they can receive new concessional credits from the World Bank and Asian Development Bank. In addition, we have earmarked £1.8 million of our annual contribution to the UN Mines Advisory Service for Afghanistan.

Joyce Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will make a further statement on progress towards reconstruction in Afghanistan. [77714]

Clare Short: Much has been achieved in Afghanistan over the last 10 months. There is peace and security in Kabul, a legitimate transitional Government, a new national currency, nearly 2 million refugees have returned home and 3 million children are in school.

But the situation remains fragile. Afghanistan is a desperately poor country and the south is facing its fifth year of drought and between 4 million and 6 million people are still dependent on food aid. The situation outside Kabul remains insecure, warlords control large militias and large parts of the economy are dependent on narcotics.

Further progress requires the establishment of security outside Kabul and an increase in the capacity of the Government to deliver services across the country. The UK will remain engaged to support continuing progress and development.

EuroMed Process

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions her Department has had with other Government Departments about support for the EuroMed process [77707]

Clare Short: My Department has regular dialogue across Whitehall on issues relating to the EuroMed process. We work closely with the FCO and other Government Departments—and the European Commission, member states and EuroMed partner countries—to support the goals of the Barcelona Declaration that are relevant to my Department's work, including respect for human rights, creating an area of shared prosperity and developing human resources. This includes contributing to improved efficiency and quality of the EC's MEDA programme in working to benefit the poorest and most vulnerable people in the region.

Public Interest Organisation

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps she is taking to encourage the growth of non-profit and voluntary public interest organisations in developing countries [77708]

Clare Short: Our commitment to strengthen the voices of civil society in developing countries was set out in the 1997 white paper "Eliminating World Poverty—Challenge for the 21st Century" and the 2000 White Paper "Making Globalisation work for the poor". We are now engaging directly with a wide range of civil society organisations in developing countries, to strengthen and build their capacity to help poor and excluded people to organise and get their voices heard.

A significant number of DfID country programmes have developed programmes to help civil society to fulfil their role. Examples of larger programmes include:

Programme	Country	Value
Poorest area civil society programme PACS	India	£27 M
Human rights & governance programme HUGO	Bangladesh	£16.5 M
Civil Society and Poverty Programme	Tanzania	£6.84 M
Strengthening capacities for transformation SCAPE	South Africa	£4.15 M
Through rights to needs for marginalised Malawians TRANSFORM	Malawi	£3.5 M

There is also an important role for UK civil society in strengthening civil society capacity within developing countries. The main channel of support to UK groups is through the Civil Society Challenge Fund which spends some £10 million a year. The aim is to support initiatives, implemented through an effective partnership with a developing country civil society organisation, which strengthens the capacity of that organisation to engage in local, national and international decision-making processes.

Heroin (Afghanistan)

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action she is taking to combat the planting of the 2003 heroin crop in Afghanistan by promoting and supporting alternative employment possibilities. [77709]

Clare Short: During 2002 it is estimated that between 20–30 per cent. of the opium poppy crop was destroyed through a UK led eradication and compensation scheme. However a more permanent solution to the problem of poppy crop production will only come about once alternative livelihood opportunities have been identified for poor people, and the law is enforced against opium traders and other criminal elements. My department is working closely with the Afghan authorities to strengthen law enforcement, interdiction and eradication capabilities, and supporting a number of initiatives to improve security and the overall environment for the generation of alternative livelihoods. I also recently approved £1 million of support to a UNDP administered National Area Based Programme that is expected to generate thousands of jobs in rural areas, and £1 million of support to the Aga Khan Foundation for a rural support programme in Badakhshan, a major poppy producing province in Afghanistan.

Africa

Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what assessment she has made of (a) trends in spending on international development aid to Africa by the UK since 1997 and (b) that of other member states of the European Union [77710]

Clare Short: Over the period 1997–2000 (the latest year for which comparable data are available) the level of UK bilateral official development assistance (oda) to Africa has increased by 43 per cent. Over the same period, oda to Africa from all EU members has fallen by 21 per cent. Excluding the UK, this fall becomes 36 per cent. Within this total, Germany's oda has fallen by 60 per cent., France's by 55 per cent. and Italy's by 23 per cent.

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what the outcomes were of the World Bank annual meeting in connection with the alleviation of poverty in Africa. [77715]

Clare Short: At the Annual Meetings Ministers recognised the special challenges faced by Africa in meeting the Millennium Development Goals. They urged the World Bank and the IMF to scale up assistance to these countries, and to build on the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) initiative as a unique opportunity to make significant and quick progress working with African leadership. They recognised that aid will be more effective where is it well co-ordinated and aligned with country-owned strategies. Further pledges to the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Trust Fund would benefit the 32 countries in Sub-Saharan Africa that receive debt relief under the Enhanced HIPC Initiative.

Human Rights Training (South Africa)

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will make a statement about UK funding for police training on human rights in the Southern African Development Community. [77713]

Clare Short: My Department supports human rights training in Malawi through a course involving the Police, the Anti-Corruption Bureau, Human Rights Commission and the Office of the Ombudsman. We have also supported human rights police training in South Africa's Eastern Cape province. In Lesotho and South Africa we are supporting the creation of community police fora to help foster trust between the police and those that they serve. These activities fall within broader justice sector programmes that seek to ensure that the poor, who are often the most vulnerable to crime and exploitation, can access proper and impartial justice.

Palestine

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what measures the Government have taken in respect of the relief of poverty in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. [77716]

Clare Short: We support a wide range of initiatives to help meet both the urgent short term needs of the Palestinian people as economic and social conditions decline dramatically, and their longer term aspirations of a viable and sustainable state. As part of a wider international effort we work directly with the Palestinian Authority and other Palestinian organisations, and through the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestinian refugees. In the financial year 2001–02 originally planned programme expenditure of £18 million was increased to nearly £40 million. This financial year the original planning framework of £25 million has been increased to £32 million. We also contribute significantly through our share of EC funding.

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what assistance her Department has provided to help water tankers reach the rural Palestinian population in areas without a networked water system; and if she will make a statement. [77697]

Ms Keeble: In conjunction with our international partners we have made repeated representations to the Israeli authorities to ease access restrictions for water, and other humanitarian supplies. We are also working closely with a number of rural communities to help improve their ability to harvest and store rainwater, and reduce their dependency on imported water.

EC Aid Programme

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will make a statement on progress reforming the European Commission Aid Programme. [77717]

Clare Short: My Department is focusing its efforts on two broad objectives: improving the overall effectiveness of European Community development assistance and increasing its poverty focus.

We welcome the positive steps that have been taken to reform EC development assistance in the past few years. These are beginning to show results in some areas, but significant improvements are still needed. We are pressing the EC to pursue its reform efforts vigorously in order to implement the November 2000 EC Development Policy, which for the first time makes poverty reduction the central objective of EC development programmes. Reform needs to produce speedier delivery, better impact and more capacity for policy dialogue in the field. Harmonising and simplifying the EC's cumbersome administrative and financial procedures is also a priority, along with work to establish a more coherent policy framework for EC aid.

My Department is also working for agreement that a much greater share of EC aid should be allocated to low income countries where it will have the greatest impact on poverty reduction. In 2000, only 38 per cent. of EC aid was spent in low-income countries compared to 70 per cent. in 1990. This is far too low and indicates that EC aid is having a much less impact than it should on reducing poverty and contributing to building stability and prosperity worldwide.

Latin America

Mr. Bryant: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will make a statement on the work of her Department in Latin America. [77718]

Clare Short: We are working with the EU, Inter-American Development Bank and other donors to reduce poverty in the region through the promotion of pro-poor growth, the reduction of inequality and improving governance, mainly in Brazil, Honduras, Nicaragua, El Salvador, Guatemala, Peru and Bolivia.

We provide support to improve the effectiveness of national development programmes in middle-income countries with major inequality and poverty problems such as Brazil and Peru. In Nicaragua, Honduras and Bolivia, which are Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC), we are working with the Governments, civil society and other donors to help with the implementation of national poverty reduction strategies. In Guatemala and El Salvador we are working on health sector reform with the United Nations.

Zimbabwe

Adrian Flook: Asked the Secretary of State for International Development, what is she doing to ensure free and fair distribution of food aid in Zimbabwe. [77719]

Clare Short: DFID, the UN, and other donors in Zimbabwe work in close unison, and share the fundamental principle that humanitarian assistance should be provided on the basis of need alone. Donor funded programmes are closely monitored, and where problems are found or reported, the UN and donors are working together to seek to resolve them through mediation and complaints procedures. In a few cases, food distribution has been suspended until agreements have been reached that allow programmes to resume according to plan. The UN's view is that so far, very little food has been lost or diverted from its intended beneficiaries. We have not had any problems of this nature in our bilateral programme.

There is credible evidence however that food is being distributed or sold by the Government of Zimbabwe through the national Grain Marketing Board in support of political objectives. We deplore this, as well as the obstruction of work of some non-governmental organisations which also appears to be politically motivated.

Kosovo

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will make a statement on the progress made in offering assistance to Kosovo [77720]

Clare Short: UK assistance to Kosovo began in June 1999, immediately after the NATO intervention. We delivered a £110 million programme of humanitarian assistance that included food supply, shelter, health care, mine clearance, support to the energy and water sectors, small and medium enterprise development and funding for international agencies. We also provided budgetary support.

From 2000, we started to develop a longer term programme to help build the local capacity and institutions to tackle Kosovo's development and transition needs. Our Kosovo Strategy Paper, published in August 2001 covered support for civil and political rights, justice systems, economic restructuring, health care, social policy, public administration and minorities. We spent £12.5 million in 2000–01 and £11.7 million in 2001–02 on technical assistance and budget support; planning figures are £6.5 million in 2002–03 and £8 million in 2003–04 (figures are for Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, including Kosovo).

Our main funding contribution to Kosovo is through our approximately 20 per cent. share of European Community programmes. This amounted to £170 million for 1999–2001 and is estimated at £110 million for 2002–03. We work closely with the EC to improve the effectiveness and impact of its programmes.

We have just completed our first review of the Kosovo strategy. This highlighted that while international aid had been successful so far in meeting humanitarian and reconstruction needs, new challenges were to help the elected provisional institutions of self-government to take on their full responsibilities under the framework agreement agreed with the UN, to create the right environment for growth and reform as levels of international aid decline and to establish mechanisms for Kosovo to access loans from the international financial institutions.

Indonesia

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will make a statement on levels of UK aid to Indonesia. [77721]

Clare Short: This year my Department will provide some £19.3 million for Indonesia. Of this amount £10 million is grant assistance, supporting governance reform, conflict prevention and reduction, the development of poverty reduction policies and the sustainable management of forest resources. The latter explicitly seeks to protect the interests of poor forest dwellers.

A further £9.1m of concessional loans will be disbursed to meet residual commitments under the now defunct Aid and Trade Provision. In addition £0.2m will be provided to support peace building initiatives by NGOs in strife torn Maluku. My Department will also provide assistance to Indonesians whose livelihoods have been damaged by the Bali bombing.

Democratic Republic of Congo

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what discussions her Department has had with the Governments of (a) Democratic Republic of Congo, (b) Rwanda and (c) Uganda regarding the situation in the DRC; and if she will make a statement. [77642]

Clare Short: We maintain a regular and frank dialogue with each of the Governments of DRC, Uganda and Rwanda on the situation in DRC.

We have particularly welcomed the signing of the Pretoria Agreement between DRC and Rwanda and the Luanda Agreement between DRC and Uganda. They are major steps towards peace in the region. The Rwandans have withdrawn their troops from DRC. The Ugandans have completed their withdrawal except for some troops the UN has asked to stay in the troubled town of Bunia. The DRC has taken some steps to arrest leading genocidaires and suggest to that political leadership of the genocidaires that they are no longer welcome in Kinshahsa but are dragging their feet on agreement to a transitional government including representatives of the armed and unarmed opposition.

The Congo has suffered long enough from kleptocracy and more recently from war. We want to work with all parties in the region and the international community to start to rebuild the DRC so that its people and all those of the region can start to enjoy the benefits of peace.

European Council

Mrs. Spelman: To the Secretary of State for International Development, what discussions she has had with the Prime Minister's office regarding the impact on poor countries of the recent meeting of the European Council. [78668]

Clare Short: None, but the impact of the Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) and enlargement on poor countries has been discussed extensively by relevant Government departments for many months. In July, my department took an initiative to invite representatives from all EU governments to discuss "The impact of CAP reform on Developing Countries". These discussions are continuing with the next meeting in The Hague in January.

It remains clear that without CAP reform, we cannot deliver on the promise we made at Doha to improve trading opportunities for the developing world. The UK will continue to press for a Mid-Term Review (MTR) of the CAP, which should lead to a farming policy which promotes sustainable development, protects and enhances the environment, encourages high standards, guarantees safe food and enables us to fulfil our international commitments.

CDC Capital Partners

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will make a statement on her role in the recruitment of a new chief executive of CDC Capital Partners. [78666]

Clare Short: The Chief Executive of CDC Group plc is appointed by the Board in accordance with normal company practice. The Chairman of the Board is keeping me informed during the process.

UNHCR

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what her Department's response is to the recent appeal by the UNHCR for funds; and what structures are in place in the event that the UNHCR does not receive the money following its appeal for funds and has to halt some of its aid programmes. [78675]

Clare Short: My Department provides both core, unearmarked, multi-annual funding to UNHCR and responds to specific appeals for particular situations that arise in countries on the basis of an assessment of humanitarian need. We are monitoring the situation closely but have not yet seen fit to provide extra funding to UNHCR, beyond that which is already committed, in response to their recent appeal.

On becoming High Commissioner, Ruud Lubbers initiated a review to reestablish a focus on UNHCR's core protection activities, increase efficiency and address donor concerns about performance. In line with recent improvements in UNHCR's management, my Department has recently concluded negotiations on a four year Institutional Strategy Paper (ISP) with UNHCR. The ISP provides unearmarked funding of $US85m over four years. This is a significant achievement by both sides.

I understand that further funding from other donors has been forthcoming in direct response to the appeal. It is too early to ascertain whether this funding will meet the needs of UNHCR in the short-term. We will continue to monitor developments closely.

Recruitment (Over-50s)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what percentage of new recruits to her Department in the past two years were aged 50 and over. [79309]

Clare Short: 10.5 per cent. of all new permanent recruits to DFID in the two years to 31 March 2002 were aged 50 or over.

Sudanese Refugees

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what assistance her Department is providing to Sudanese refugees who have recently fled the Biringi refugee settlement from north-eastern Democratic Republic of Congo. [79146]

Clare Short: It is our understanding that these refugees have become entangled in the recent fighting in Ituri province, but are not themselves directly targeted. But the security situation in Ituri is a serious obstacle to effective relief operations as current insecurity severely restricts access. Most operational relief agencies are restricted to the town of Bunia. The nearest UNHCR staff are in Aru, 80km away. Local NGOs have been attempting to access the area in the past few days.

We have not provided direct assistance to this group of people. This year my Department is providing over £10 million in DRC, and £7 million in Sudan, to address humanitarian needs. We also provide core funding to UNHCR.

We continue to press all sides in the conflict to allow access to humanitarian agencies. We are also doing our utmost to help resolve the conflicts in DRC and Sudan that result in these displacements within and across borders.

A press statement issued on 31 October by the Security Council expresses grave concern about the situation in Ituri, and appeals to all parties to show restraint.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what assessment her Department has made of the safety of Sudanese refugees in the Democratic Republic of Congo. [79147]

Clare Short: We have not made any specific assessment of the vulnerability of Sudanese refugees in the Democratic Republic of Congo. Many are in Ituri Province in the troubled North East of DRC, and are at risk in the current fighting as are the resident Congolese population. The fighting has a strong ethnic component, but we do not believe that for the time being the Sudanese are being specifically targeted.

UNHCR estimate about 75000 Sudanese refugees in DRC. They are vulnerable, and suffer the same levels of abuse, deprivation, and lack of basic services, as the Congolese residents and other refugee groups.

An estimated 17000 Refugees were scattered after an attacks on their camp at Beringi in Ituri province. The UN Security Council on 31/10 called on all parties involved in the fighting in the area to show restraint.

European Bank for Reconstruction and Development

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, when she last met Jean Lemierre, President of the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development; and when she next intends to do so. [79148]

Clare Short: I last met the President of the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development at the DFID on Monday 21 October. Our next currently planned meeting is the EBRD's Annual Meeting in May 2003.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what meetings of the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development she has attended; and what meetings of the bank she plans to attend. [79150]

Clare Short: I attended EBRD's Annual Board of Governors meeting in April 1999 and April 2001. I plan to attend the next Annual Meeting in Tashkent in May 2003, when the UK will Chair the Board of Governors. The 2003 Annual Meeting will be an important opportunity to emphasise the need for growth, stability, regional cooperation and essential reforms in Central Asia.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what permanent representation her Department has with the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development. [79149]

Clare Short: The UK Executive Director at the EBRD is a DFID official.

Global Conflict Prevention

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what the criteria are for the disbursement of funds from the Global Conflict Prevention Pool to (a) Sierra Leone, (b) Uganda, (c) Rwanda, (d) DRC, (e) Ethiopia, (f) Sudan, (g) Nigeria and (h) Angola; how much was allocated from the pool for the purchase of equipment to each in (i) 2001 and (ii) 2002; and if she will make a statement. [79557]

Clare Short: (1) The Africa Conflict Prevention Pool covers priority countries/regions in sub-Saharan Africa and the Global Conflict Pool covers the Rest of the World. The Africa Pool combines a UN peacekeeping budget with a £50 million programme budget in FY 2001–2 and 2002–3. Funds are allocated to support inter-departmentally agreed geographic and thematic priorities, where a joint approach between Departments adds value to the UK's conflict prevention effectiveness.

(2) The Africa Pool's priority areas are: geographic; Sierra Leone, Great Lakes (DRC, Uganda, Rwanda, Burundi), Sudan, Angola, Nigeria South Africa and Thematic; Building African Peace Support Capacity, Tackling the Economic and Financial Causes of Conflict and Security Sector Reform.

(3) The table summarises Programme Spend in 2001–2 and initial Allocations in 2002–3, equipment purchases would fall within programme budgets.

	2001–2 Programme Spend	2002–3 Initial Programme Allocations
Country/Regional
1. Sierra Leone	36,139,047	26,529,789
2. Uganda	758,843	753,000
3. Rwanda and Great Lakes	622,520	7,182,700
4. Burundi	1,500,000	690,491
5. Sudan	223,000	399,509
6. Nigeria	514,840	1,028,000
7. Angola	0	239,000
8. South Africa	1,200,000	1,632,000

Note:

* Please note table excludes peacekeeping budget and regional thematic work. IMATT Sierra Leone is included in the Sierra Leone allocation

ENVIRONMENT

Primates

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her Answer of 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 286W, on primate imports, if she will define the categories of breeding, personal, commercial and zoological collections with reference to non-human primates. [79119]

Mr. Morley: The EC CITES Regulations require import permit applicants to state the purpose for which the application is being made using one of the purpose codes given on the reverse of the application form. The Regulation does not offer formal definitions of these codes. However the UK considers that in the case of live primates:

Code B (Breeding) means breeding in captivity primarily for non-commercial purposes.

Code P (Personal) means a long-term personal pet.

Code T (Commercial) means primarily for commercial purposes, including the pet trade.

Code Z (Zoological collections) means scientific / breeding / educational / conservation purposes.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many captive-bred non-human primates were imported into the United Kingdom in the last five years; for what purposes; and if she will make a statement. [79118]

Mr. Morley: Our records show that between 1 January 1997 and 31 October 2002 a total of 25095 captive bred non-human primates were imported into the UK for the following purposes:

Breeding: 76

Personal: 0

Commercial: 448

Bio-medical research: 21113

Zoological collections: 3458

Imports of non-human primates are controlled under EC Regulations implementing the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES). The Convention allows CITES parties to adopt stricter domestic measures Under this provision the UK decided from 22 May 2001 no longer to issue import permits for commercial trade in live primates.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many primates are owned under a Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976 Licence; and for what purposes these animals are owned; [79120]

(2) how many animals are owned under a Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976 Licence, broken down by species; [79121]

(3) if she plans to amend the 1984 Schedule to the Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976 to remove animals that have been shown to pose no serious danger to the public. [79122]

Mr. Morley: As local authorities administer the Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976, details of licensed animals are not held centrally. However, as part of a review to examine the effectiveness of the Act, consultants reported in 2001 that on the basis of a 95 per cent. response from local authorities, 655 primates were then licensed. They did not seek the reason for keeping these animals.

The consultants found a total of 11,878 animals were licensed, categorised as follows:

Category	Number
Primates	655
Rodents	14
Carnivores	269
Pinnipeds	3
Elephants	1
Odd-toed Ungulates	20
Even-toed Ungulates	5339
Birds	5232
Reptiles	334
Invertebrates	11

The Even-toed ungulates and birds comprise, for the most part, farmed wild boar and ostrich. A copy of the consultants report can be downloaded by visiting www.defra.gov.uk/wildlife-countryside/consult/dwaa/index.htm.

The consultants' report has recommended changes to the 1984 Schedule to the Act. We have sought views from the public on all their recommendations, including those on the schedule, and shall be drawing up our own proposals to address the shortcomings identified. Our proposals will be the subject of a further public consultation exercise in due course, as a result of which decisions will be taken as to whether or not the Schedule needs to be altered.

Environmental Information

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on what date she expects increased access to environmental information will be available under the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and which (a) minister and (b) official in her Department has lead responsibility for this matter [79029]

Mr. Meacher: I have just completed public consultation on draft Environmental Information Regulations. Officials are now analysing the comments received. Before preparing a Statutory Instrument of the Regulations to place before Parliament we will also need to take into account developments in Brussels on the negotiations for a Draft Directive on Public Access to Environmental Information. The Regulations will not come into force until 2003 at the earliest.

In answer to the specific questions, I can confirm that (a) I am the lead Minister and (b) the lead policy Division is Defra Sustainable Development Unit who can be contacted via the Defra website at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/pubaccess/index.htm

Bear Bile

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to discourage the international trade in bear bile. [79045]

Mr. Morley: The CITES Convention imposes strict controls on trade in bears and bear parts but does allow trade in captive bred species. Because of our concerns that this trade could lead to abuses in respect of bear bile, from last year, the UK banned all commercial trade in bear (Ursidae) bile or gall bladders (irrespective of whether or not they come from captive bred specimens), on the grounds that this trade is likely to be detrimental to the species.

Exotic Birds

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of exotic birds imported into the UK for the last year for which figures are available were dead on arrival. [79033]

Mr. Morley: Records of imported CITES listed birds found dead on arrival are taken from copies of used import permits submitted to the UK CITES Management Authority by HM Customs & Excise. Our records show that during 2001 (the last full year for which records are available) a total of 62 birds (0.92 per cent.) were noted as dead on arrival.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many exotic birds were imported into the UK in the past 12 months; for what purposes they were imported; and from which countries they were imported. [79030]

Mr. Morley: Our records show that from November 2001 to November 2002 a total of 10983 birds listed under the CITES Convention were imported into the UK from 37 different countries for the following purposes:

Breeding: 167

Educational: 18

Personal: 84

Circus & travelling exhibition: 1

Scientific: 47

Commercial: 10662

Zoos: 4

The exporting countries were:

Alderney, Austria, Bahrain, Cameroon, Canada, China, Cyprus, Egypt, Ethiopia, Guernsey, Guinea, Guyana, Iceland, Isle of Man, Ivory Coast, Jersey, Kenya, Madagascar, Mali, Mexico, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, South Africa, Suriname, Switzerland, Tanzania, UAE, US and Zimbabwe.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many exotic birds were imported into the UK for each year from 1997 to date, broken down into (a) wild-caught and (b) captive-bred. [79031]

Mr. Morley: There is no CITES definition of the term "exotic bird" but imports of CITES listed birds from outside the EU are controlled under EC CITES Regulations. Our records show that between 1 January 1997 and 31 October 2002 a total of 32346 wild taken and 4901 captive bred CITES listed birds were imported into the UK. The year by year breakdown is:

Year	Wild taken	Captive bred	Total
1997	4800	357	5157
1998	4845	422	5267
1999	4826	411	5237
2000	3995	1551	5546
2001	5565	1114	6679
2002	8315	1046	9361

Imported Birds

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the controls relating to the sale of imported birds in pet shops. [79032]

Mr. Morley: Any bird which is listed on Annex A of the EU regulations relating to the Control of International Trade in Endangered Species of wild fauna and flora (The CITES regulations) would require a permit for sale from Defra. This would apply whether or not the bird was imported or captive bred within the EU.

The Pet Animals Act 1951 (as amended in 1983) controls the sale of all animals as pets from licensed premises. The 1951 Act requires any person selling pet animals to be licensed by the local authority. Before granting a licence, the authority must satisfy itself that the animals are kept in accommodation that is suitable and clean; that they are supplied with the appropriate food and drink, and are protected from disease and fire. The maximum penalty under the 1951 Act is a fine of £500 and/or three months imprisonment.

The Pet Animals Act 1951 is one of 21 Acts relating to the welfare of domestic and captive animals that are currently reviewing with a view to consolidation and modernisation as part of the proposed Animal Welfare Bill.

Energy Efficiency

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she intends to publish her Department's review of local authority energy efficiency activity. [77452]

Mr. Morley: Our original intention was to publish the results of this review earlier this year. However, with the publication of the Performance and Innovation Unit's Energy Review in February and the Home Energy Conservation Bill that dealt with many of the key issues for the review, we decided to delay publication until we were able to take account of these.

The Government are now working on its Energy White Paper. This will be a statement of Government energy policy, including energy efficiency. We have decided that the review findings should contribute to the White Paper, which will be published around the turn of the year.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the outcomes to date of the Energy Efficiency Commitment Scheme; what further steps are planned; and what (a) consultation on and (b) assessment of the scheme (i) has taken place and (ii) is planned. [77593]

Mr. Morley: The Regulator, Ofgem, is responsible for operating the Energy Efficiency Commitment 2002–2005 (EEC) and for providing information to the Secretary of State on progress. Suppliers have been submitting energy efficiency schemes to Ofgem since February 2002 and measures equating to 5.9 TWh in energy savings had been installed or delivered by the end of September. Suppliers will continue to work on these and further schemes to deliver their energy efficiency targets by March 2005.

We consulted widely on the EEC, culminating in the issue of statutory consultation proposals in August 2001. We will consult on any changes to the scheme that may be proposed.

Each supplier is required to report to Ofgem on a quarterly basis and Ofgem must report annually to the Secretary of State on progress with the EEC. Ofgem's first report, on the year ending in March 2003, must be submitted to the Secretary of State by 31 July 2003.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make it her policy to ensure that (a) registered social landlords, (b) utility companies and (c) Government-run energy efficiency or fuel poverty schemes provide information to energy conservation authorities on the energy efficiency improvements carried out in their area; and if she will make a statement. [77459]

Mr. Meacher: The Government fully support the need for energy conservation authorities to be given information on the improvements made in domestic energy efficiency in their area by other agencies, to assist their reporting under the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995.

During the Home Energy Conservation Bill 2001, the Government proposed that registered social landlords should provide information to energy conservation authorities on energy efficiency improvements they had carried out. This proposal came to nothing when my hon. Friend the Member for Brighton Kemptown withdrew this Bill. However, registered social landlords are already required by the Housing Corporation to report on progress against the Decent Homes target, which includes energy efficiency, on a voluntary basis for 2002. The provision of this information will be compulsory from 2003.

Discussions are continuing between gas and electricity suppliers and the Energy Saving Trust to provide this information on a voluntary basis. We hope that these will lead to a voluntary agreement but this is a difficult area, raising complex legal issues. Should no agreement be reached, we will consider using existing legislation to make this a requirement on these companies. But this would not be our preferred route.

The private sector companies managing the Government's energy efficiency scheme are already contractually required to provide this information to authorities on an annual basis.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many local authorities are on course to meet the targets contained in their strategies under the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995; what measures she proposes to ensure that these targets are met; and if she will make a statement. [77473]

Mr. Meacher: Energy conservation authorities have identified their own targets, based on the measures in their energy conservation reports. The reports show measures that, if implemented, have the potential to achieve an overall improvement of 30 per cent. over twelve years from 1996. These targets are not statutory and it is for authorities, working in partnership with others, to implement the measures in order to meet them.

Authorities report progress towards their targets each year. A list of the latest progress by authorities was placed in the Libraries of the House following my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Vernon Coaker) on 19 June 2002, Official Report, column 371W.

The overall average reported improvement in the first five years was 8 per cent. It is therefore clear that authorities are not going to make the improvements they originally hoped for. Decisions about the future role of local authorities in local energy efficiency are expected to be covered in the Energy White Paper, which the Government aims to publish early in the new year.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what targets are in force to reduce the consumption of energy within buildings occupied by central Government; and if she will make a statement. [77448]

Mr. Meacher: The Government plan to use benchmarking of individual buildings against national standards in order to set a new energy consumption target for 2010. This target will require the central Government estate to be performing better than the national average. The analysis required to set a specific target is still underway but it is hoped that it will be in place in the coming year. In the meantime, the estate has an interim target of reducing carbon emissions by an additional 1 per cent. each year relative to 1999–2000.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the local authorities she has contacted regarding underperformance on their targets under the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995, and indicate how these authorities were identified. [77455]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not contacted any local authorities regarding underperformance against their targets under the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to require local authorities to appoint an officer to work on strategies they have drawn up under the Home Conservation Act 1995: and if she will make a statement. [77472]

Mr. Morley: The Government have no plans to require this. It is for local authorities to determine their staffing structure to meet their statutory responsibilities and other priorities.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations her Department has received concerning the need for statutory targets for local government to be applied to energy conservation in the home. [77417]

Mr. Meacher: The Local Government Association has expressed concern about applying statutory domestic energy efficiency targets to local authorities.

As well as a large amount of correspondence from individuals, we have received the following representations from organisations in support of having statutory targets in the Home Energy Conservation Bill 2001.

Association for the Conservation of Energy
British Energy Efficiency Federation
Blaby Constituency Labour Party
Cavity Insulation Guarantee Agency
Daventry District Council
Derbyshire County Council
The Green Party

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will make her next report to Parliament under sections 3(4) of the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995. [77474]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no immediate plans to make such a report to Parliament.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what representations her Department has received concerning the progress of energy conservation authorities towards meeting the 30 per cent. target in improvement in energy conservation by 2010; [77419]

(2) what representations she has received from (a) local authorities and (b) others on the ability of local authorities to meet their targets under the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995. [77468]

Mr. Meacher: There are no statutory requirements for energy conservation authorities to make a 30 per cent. improvement in domestic energy conservation by 2010. However, authorities have prepared reports which show measures that, if implemented, have the potential to achieve an overall improvement of 30 per cent. over twelve years from 1996.

We have not received any representations regarding authorities' progress towards meeting these targets, other than the reports that energy conservation authorities submit each year under the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995. A summary of these reports is in the House Library.

During the course of the Home Energy Conservation Bill 2001, we received representations from Chichester District Council and the Local Government Association expressing the view that local authorities could not guarantee they would achieve their energy efficiency targets in the domestic housing sector as they had limited powers to ensure savings were made. We also received a number letters from individuals suggesting that making targets statutory would enhance local authorities' ability to achieve their HECA targets.

Gregory Barker (Bexhill & Battle): To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, if she will list the home energy conservation programmes which have (a) been delayed and (b) failed since 1997. [77413]

Mr. Morley: There have been a large number of home energy conservation projects since 1997, the large majority of which are outside the Government's direct control. These include projects by local authorities, gas and electricity suppliers, the Energy Saving Trust and voluntary organisations.

The Government's main programme in England for tackling fuel poverty through improving energy efficiency is the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme, now marketed as the Warm Front Team. The scheme is funded by the Department for Environment Food and Rural Affairs. Warm Front was launched in June 2000 and provides packages of insulation and heating measures up to £2,500 to private sector households, on certain benefits.

For the period June 2000 to June 2002, Warm Front assisted over 400,000 households and spent over £200 million on installing measures. The programme remains on target to reach our PSA requirement of assisting 600,000 vulnerable homes by 2004.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make it her policy to ensure that the performance figures collected to show local authorities' progress on strategies drawn up under the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995 can be compared between authorities. [77458]

Mr. Morley: It would be helpful to be able to make better comparisons between comparable authorities' performance. But this could only be achieved by having a single monitoring method. Defra has provided software to all authorities in England, free of charge, to help them monitor improvements in domestic energy efficiency. This is just one of a number of energy efficiency monitoring tools available. We believe that authorities should have the choice of which software package or monitoring method they use. They do, however, have to provide evidence as part of their annual progress reporting that they are using a robust monitoring method.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make it her policy to meet the target of reducing energy used in the domestic sector by 12.5 per cent. by 2010; and if she will make a statement. [77464]

Mr. Morley: Decisions about targets and policies for reducing energy use in the domestic sector will be covered in the Energy White Paper, which the Government aim to publish around the turn of the year.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to strengthen the powers, duties and funding of local authorities to enable them to play an enhanced role in local energy efficiency activities. [77441]

Mr. Morley: Decisions about the future role of local authorities in local energy efficiency are expected to be covered in the Energy White Paper, which the Government aim to publish around the turn of the year.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what representations her Department received from (a) the Treasury and (b) other Government Departments (i) prior to and (ii) following the withdrawal of the Home Energy Conservation Bill; [77405]

(2) what representations her Department received from the Treasury concerning the saving to that Department as a result of the withdrawal of the Home Energy Conservation Bill; [77408]

(3) what representations her Department has received from the Treasury prior to the withdrawal of the Home Energy Conservation Bill concerning the cost of a statutory target of 30 per cent. in domestic energy improvement by 2010. [77406]

Mr. Morley: Other Government Departments have been consulted at each stage of the Home Energy Conservation Bill's progress. We have discussed the implications, including those for Government and local authorities, of having a 30 per cent. improvement in domestic energy efficiency as a principal aim in this Bill.

However, it is established practice under exemption two of Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information not to disclose information relating to internal opinion and advice or confidential communications between departments.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations her Department received from (a) pensioner groups (b) Greenpeace, (c) the Association for the Conservation of Energy, (d) Friends of the Earth, (e) Help the Aged and (f) Age Concern, (i) prior to and (ii) following the withdrawal of the Home Energy Conservation Bill. [77402]

Mr. Meacher: The Department has received the following representations regarding the Home Energy Conservation Bill, prior to and following it's withdrawal;

(a) (i) North West Pensioners Association, Warrington Branch have expressed support for the Bill.

(ii) None.

(b) No representations have been received from Greenpeace

(c) (i) The Association for the Conservation of Energy (ACE) have expressed their opposition to the Government's amendments at Committee Stage of the Bill.

(ii) ACE have written to say that the Department's failure to endorse targets in the Bill has sent worrying signals regarding long term commitments in their industry.

(d) (i) Friends of the Earth have expressed support for the Bill and amendment 11a in particular as well as opposing the Government amendments at Committee Stage.

(ii) None

(e) No representations have been received from Help the Aged

(f) No representations have been received from Age Concern.

The Department has also received representations from the HECA Partnership for 30 per cent. (which includes ACE, Friends of the Earth and Help the Aged) expressing opposition to Government amendments at committee stage, urging Ministers to support the Bill, supporting statutory targets in the Bill, discussing the costs of implementing targets and appointing designated HECA officers.

We have also received the minutes of their steering group meeting on October 15, 2001, which record unanimous support for the Bill.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment she has made of the adequacy of local authorities' progress towards meeting their targets under the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995; and if she will make a statement; [77453]

(2) if she will list the energy conservation authorities that are on target to meet the requirements of a 30 per cent. improvement in energy conservation by 2010. [77420]

Mr. Morley: There are no statutory requirements for energy conservation authorities to make a 30 per cent. improvement in domestic energy conservation. However, authorities have prepared reports which show measures that, if implemented, have the potential to achieve an overall improvement of 30 per cent. over twelve years from 1996.

Authorities report progress towards their targets each year. A list of the latest progress by authorities was placed in the Libraries of the House following my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Mr. Coaker) on 19 June 2002, Official Report, column 370–371W.

The overall average reported improvement in the first five years was 8 per cent. It is therefore clear that authorities are not going to make the improvements they originally hoped for.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the saving in carbon dioxide emissions would be if energy efficency in the domestic sector was improved by (a) five per cent., (b) 10 per cent., (c) 15 per cent., (d) 20 per cent., (e) 25 per cent. and (f) 30 per cent. by 2010 based upon current levels. [77465]

Mr. Meacher: The estimated reduction in carbon dioxide emissions that would result from the various improvements in domestic energy efficiency by 2010 are set out below.

Energy Efficiency Improvement Relative To 2000 Level	Projected CO_2 Emissions Reduction In 2010 (Million Tonnes Of Carbon Per Year)
5%	−1.8
10%	0.4
15%	2.5
20%	4.7
25%	6.9
30%	9.1

Note:
Estimates based on demand growth scenario compatible with DTI Energy Paper 68 projections of energy demand and carbon dioxide emissions, and using underlying rate of improvement in energy efficiency derived from BRE analysis of insulation ownership, and trends in heating efficiency.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the robustness of the targets under the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995; what plans she has to strengthen them; and if she will make a statement. [77469]

Mr. Meacher: Energy conservation authorities were required to submit their energy conservation reports to the Secretary of State by 30 November 1996. All reports received were evaluated against the requirements of the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995 and each authority given feedback. It was for authorities to determine their own targets, based on local circumstances. The Secretary of State was not in a position to assess whether these targets were realistic.

If the Home Energy Conservation Bill 2001 had become law, then the Secretary of State would have had a new power to set statutory targets for authorities. We understand that Dr. Turner plans to re-introduce his Bill next session.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations her Department has received from the Association for Public Health (a) prior to and (b) following the withdrawal of the Home Energy Conservation Bill. [77410]

Mr. Morley: The Department has not received any representations on the subject of the Home Energy Conservation Bill from the Association for Public Health either prior to or following the withdrawal of that Bill.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representation her Department has received concerning the future of the Home Energy Conservation Bill. [77449]

Mr. Meacher: We have not received any representations concerning the future of the Home Energy Conservation Bill since that Bill was withdrawn.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the representations submitted to her Department from hon. Members (a) in support of and (b) against statutory targets prior to the withdrawal of the Home Energy Conservation Bill. [77404]

Mr. Meacher: The Department has received 25 letters from hon. Members expressing their personal support for targets in the Home Energy Conservation Bill. This is in addition to a large number of letters from MPs covering those from constituents who were in favour of targets in the Bill. We have not received any representations from hon. Members expressing the view that the Bill should not contain targets or forwarding letters from constituents with that view.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what procedures are in place to measure progress made in energy conservation in the home since the implementation of the Warm Homes and Energy Conservation Act 2000. [77418]

Mr. Meacher: The Home Energy Conservation Act 1995 requires energy conservation authorities to prepare reports setting out progress with implementing their energy conservation reports. In 1999–00, authorities were asked, as part of the HECA progress report, whether they had prepared a fuel poverty report. Each year since then, they have been asked to report on progress with its implementation.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations her Department has received concerning the re-introduction of a Bill aimed at improving domestic energy efficiency. [77409]

Mr. Meacher: Blaby Labour Party has expressed support for the idea of future home energy efficiency legislation. Defra also received a number of letters from individuals which broadly express support for future legislation in this area.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the rules for assessing energy savings of appliances under the Energy Efficiency Commitment Scheme. [77592]

Mr. Morley: The Regulator, Ofgem, is responsible for administering the Energy Efficiency Commitment 2002–2005, including determining what improvement in energy efficiency should be attributed to energy efficiency measures proposed by electricity and gas suppliers. Its procedures for doing so are set our in its "Energy Efficiency Commitment Administration Procedures" published in December 2001 and available at www.ofgem.gov.uk.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations her Department has received from the Centre for Policy on Ageing (a) prior to and (b) following the withdrawal of the Home Energy Conservation Bill. [77411]

Mr. Morley: The Department has not received any representations on the subject of the Home Energy Conservation Bill from the Centre for Policy on Ageing either prior to or following the withdrawal of that Bill.

UNEP Report

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether her Department has received a copy of UNEP's Report, Global Environment Outlook 3, and if she will make a statement. [79082]

Mr. Meacher: My Friend, the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, gave a keynote speech at the global launch of the third UNEP Global Environment Outlook (GEO3) Report in London on 22 May. The Secretary of State, and the Defra officials that attended the launch, were given copies of the Report.

The GEO3 Report provides an authoritative assessment that informs our thinking on global sustainable development. Although it does not single out individual countries, it makes clear that action is required by all countries to tackle environmental degradation. The UK Government take the problems identified by the report extremely seriously and are taking appropriate action in key areas, including biodiversity, climate change, forests and oceans.

For information, the Secretary of State's speech can be found at: http://defraweb/corporate/ministers/speeches/mb230502.htm.

Departmental Review

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what recent discussions she has had with (a) the Prime Minister and (b) Lord Haskins regarding the review of her Department; and if she will make a statement. [78613]

Margaret Beckett: Lord Haskins has agreed, at my request, to review delivery arrangements and structures to Defra's countryside responsibilities. Lord Haskins will consult widely with Defra stakeholders and those who deliver rural policy. We expect the review to be completed by the summer of 2003.

GM Crops

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 26 September 20002, Official Report, column 247W, on GM crops, how many tests for unauthorised genetically modified organisms have been undertaken by the GM Inspectorate; and what proportion of them showed a presence of unauthorised genetically modified organisms. [75838]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 21 October 2002]: The GM Inspectorate has the authority to carry out testing for the presence of GMOs in two contexts: first, as part of inspection of authorised releases of GMOs into the environment, and, secondly, in support of the audit of seed importers and producers to ensure that non-GM seed stocks are free from unauthorised GM events.

Testing as part of the inspection of authorised releases of GMOs is carried out whenever there is reason to believe that material in addition to that for which consent is held has been released or to confirm the GM status of volunteer plants and bolters. However, the issue of testing of released GMOs is being considered as part of the proposed review inspection and enforcement activities. Since June 2000, there have been 3 tests (comprised of 41 analytical tests) of seed prior to sowing to confirm its purity and 32 tests of volunteers and bolters. None of these tests showed the presence of unauthorised GMOs.

Since June 2000 the GM Inspectorate has carried out a total of 86 audits of seed companies. These audits have monitored the precautions that seed companies have taken as regards the adventitious presence of GM events in seeds. As part of this process a series of tests (18) have been carried out to clarify results presented by seed companies. In no case was the presence of an unauthorised GMO detected.

World Summit

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department (a) has taken and (b) is planning to take to consult on the (i) outcomes of the recent World Summit on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg and (ii) what steps planned by the UK Government to take forward implementation of the outcomes and which individuals or organisations have been or will be consulted as part of the process. [77574]

Mr. Meacher: The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Defra) has continued to work closely with a wide range of stakeholder groups and my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State and I met with stakeholders in October to discuss the outcomes of the World Summit on Sustainable Development. Officials have subsequently met with stakeholders, in a meeting organised by the BOND Network (British Overseas NGOs for Development).

Ministers are in the process of considering how to take forward the UK's commitments from WSSD at the local, national and international level, building on existing work. We will be launching a major review of the UK Sustainable Development Strategy in the new year, which will take into account WSSD commitments. Stakeholders will be consulted in this exercise.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps were taken by her Department to promote the use of the precautionary principle in discussions at the recent World Summit on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg; and if she will make a statement on the outcomes of these discussions in taking forward its use in documentation and agreements emerging as a result of the Summit. [77575]

Mr. Meacher: The Plan of Implementation (paragraph 103*(f)*) reaffirms the importance for policy and decision-making of "the precautionary approach set out in principle 15 of the Rio Declaration on Environment and Development".

It also underlines the importance of principle 15 for the sound management of chemicals and of hazard wastes for the protection of human health and the environment (paragraph 22).

A copy of the Plan of Implementation will be placed in the House Library and can be found at http://www/johannesburgsummit.org/ , along with a copy of the Political Declaration made at Johannesburg.

The United Kingdom and the European Union would also have liked the Plan of Implementation to refer explicitly to the development of the precautionary principle in a number of international legal instruments since Rio. The United Kingdom and the European Union will continue to promote the precautionary principle, as set out in the Rio Declaration and subsequently developed in international law, in taking forward the outcomes of the Johannesburg Summit and related work on international sustainable development and policies which impact on health and the environment.

SF6

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment her Department has made of banning the use of SF6 in car tyres and double glazing. [77566]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 28 October 2002]: At this point in time, the Government have not made an assessment of the impact of banning the use of SF6 in car tyres and insulating glazing in the UK. We expect the European Commission to make a proposal for EU legislation on fluorinated gases in spring 2003. If it transpires that this proposal will include such controls, then we will make an assessment of their impact in the UK.

Correspondence

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Westmoreland and Lonsdale of 18 July, regarding Mr. Clifford Kendal. [79285]

Mr. Morley: My Noble Friend Lord Whitty responded to the hon. Member on 22 October.

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Westmoreland and Lonsdale of 17 September, regarding Mr.Trevor Wilson of Cark-in-Cartmel. [79284]

Alun Michael: A response was sent to the hon. Member on 2 November.

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Government will respond to the foot and mouth inquiries. [77304]

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she plans to announce to Parliament her Department's response to the Anderson and Follett Reports. [77134]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 28 October 2002]: I expect to publish the Government's response to the reports of the Foot and Mouth Disease inquiries before the House prorogues.

Retail Banks

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, when she last met the head of agricultural departments of the retail banks and what was discussed; how often she has met the head of the agricultural departments of retail banks in the last 12 months; and how often her predecessor met the head of the agricultural departments of the retail banks. [78487]

Margaret Beckett: I met the heads of the agricultural departments of the retail banks in November 2001.

Public Bodies

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what recent discussions she has had with her Department's non departmental public bodies; and if she will make a statement. [79730]

Margaret Beckett: I have regular discussions with the heads and officials of Defra's non-departmental public bodies.

European Agriculture

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what meetings she had with her French and German counterparts to discuss European agriculture in the run-up to the EU meeting in Brussels from 24 to 25 October; and what was discussed. [78409]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 31 October 2002]: I have regular contact with my French and German counterparts, through monthly Agriculture Councils and other meetings. These meetings address the issues facing European agriculture of most interest to the UK, France and Germany, current at the time of the meeting. I last met Frau Kuenast, the German Agriculture Minister on 24 October and subsequently spoke to her on 31 October. I hope to meet my French colleague in the near future.

Bovine TB

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what timetable her Department has set for the future publication of (a) DEFRA and (b) DEFRA-commissioned research into the epidemiology of bovine TB. [77395]

Mr. Morley: Final reports of Defra-commissioned research into the epidemiology of bovine TB are published on the Defra website once individual projects are complete. Some of the current projects are not scheduled to end until 2005.

In addition the results of the badger culling trial, overseen by the Independent Scientific Group on Cattle TB, are expected to be available in 2005.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she has taken to ensure that (a) NGOs and (b) the public may have access to all up to date bovine TB research funded and programmed by her Department. [77389]

Mr. Morley: Defra's annual Research Requirements Document includes a complete list of all Defra's current research projects, including those on bovine TB. It is available to all on the Defra website. Annual reports of the Independent Scientific Group on Cattle TB also include summary updates of Defra-funded TB research. These are available on the Defra website at www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/tb

Non-Governmental Organisations (NGOs) are represented on the TB Forum and are made aware of the content of the TB research programme on a regular basis.

A review of the research on bovine TB over the last 5 years will take place in early November. Following the review an output document will be made available to members of the TB Forum and will be available to members of the public via the Defra website.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with her Irish counterpart about measures to control bovine tuberculosis. [74862]

Margaret Beckett: In 2001, Defra officials, Defra's independent animal vaccine programme adviser and members of the Independent Scientific Group on Cattle TB (ISG) visited the Irish Government's veterinary department and met with researchers to discuss TB control and progress on the Four Area Badger Study. Since the meeting a collaborative research project on badger vaccination has been set up by the Veterinary Laboratories Agency and the University of Dublin.

Dairy Farming

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on dairy farming in Lancashire. [77602]

Mr. Morley: In Lancashire, in common with the rest of the country, the sustainability of many dairy farming enterprises has been adversely affected by low farmgate milk prices. The reasons for these low prices are complex, but include high levels of production earlier in the year combined with the effects of low world prices for dairy commodities. The average farmgate price of milk has recovered from its seasonal low in May, but it is still too low for many dairy farmers to be able to maintain the level of investment required to sustain their businesses.

The prices negotiated between farmers and purchasers, or indeed processors and retailers, are private commercial matters in which the Government cannot get involved. Nevertheless, I do welcome the recent price rises announced by major retailers and dairy processors and hope that these will help alleviate some of the difficulties faced by dairy farmers. The Government can influence the environment in which price negotiations take place through the mechanisms of the dairy CAP and, during the period of lowest prices, we actively supported measures taken in Brussels to support Community markets and encourage exports.

Water Framework Directive

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the basis is of her policy on not participating in river basin pilot studies proposed under the implementation strategy of the Water Framework Directive. [77827]

Mr. Morley: [holding answer 29 October 2002]: The Department, the devolved administrations and the UK Environment Agencies have been, and continue to participate very actively in the development of the Common Implementation Strategy (CIS) of the Water Framework Directive.

This involvement has included leading or co-leading on development of guidance on estuarial and coastal waters, heavily modified water bodies and impact of human activity on surface and groundwater. In addition the UK has participated in all the working groups of the CIS, including the working group on integrated testing in pilot river basins. The UK is also actively involved with current discussions at Community level on the future development of the CIS and aims to play a full part in future work.

Defra and the Environment Agency have not so far proposed any pilot river basin projects for England as part of the CIS. The Environment Agency intends to focus it's efforts on the actual implementation of the Water Framework Directive to ensure initial legal obligations are complied with relating to all river basins. Pilot studies are being undertaken or planned, including in England, to answer specific issues. The experience gained will be fed back to the integrated testing project.

Ageism

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what strategies her Department has to ensure that there is no ageism in recruitment and retention processes. [79297]

Alun Michael: The Department has integrated age into its equal opportunities policies.

In addition, from 1 January 2003 subject to continued organisational need and their continued efficiency staff in Defra will have the opportunity to stay in service beyond age 60 and up to age 65. We are looking to mirror that change in our recruitment procedures.

Municipal Waste

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the percentage of municipal waste that will be recovered in (a) 2005, (b) 2010 and (c) 2015. [77322]

Margaret Beckett: Waste Strategy 2000 sets targets for the recovery of municipal waste of at least 40 per cent. by 2005, 45 per cent. by 2010 and 67 per cent. by 2015. The last Municipal Waste Management Survey shows that in the year 2000–2001, 21 per cent. of municipal waste in England had value recovered from it. Of this, 12 per cent. is recycling and composting, and 9 per cent. energy recovery through incineration.

Local authorities in England already have best value targets for recovery, and statutory targets for recycling and composting; as well as additional funding under the Environmental, Protective and Cultural Services block, which includes waste management. Defra's £140 million waste minimisation, recycling and composting fund will also boost local authority performance.

As part of their review of the waste strategy, the Strategy Unit have been considering what additional measures may be needed to achieve these targets. They are expected to publish their report in November.

Mobile Plant Licences

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many mobile plant licences have been issued by the Environment Agency; and how many applications for such licenses are pending; [77325]

(2) what estimate she has made of the average cost to a business of (a) obtaining and (b) maintaining a mobile plant licence for land remediation; [77327]

(3) what the average time taken to process an application for a mobile plant licence for land remediation is. [77326]

Mr. Meacher: As at September 2002, the Environment Agency had issued 85 mobile plant licences. There are 11 applications pending.

The costs of obtaining a mobile plant licence vary depending on the type of mobile plant licence and the information required. The costs of obtaining the licence can be in the region of £15,000 per licence. These costs include the costs of obtaining the required certificate of technical competence, the administrative costs involved in putting together the required information for the application, and a charge of £1,775 made by the Environment Agency as an application charge for an intermediate capacity mobile plant licence.

Maintenance of the licence can cost in the region of £13,000 per annum. These costs include the Environment Agency's annual subsistence charge of £3,200, and the preparation of risk assessments and working plans for the sites where the mobile plant operates.

The average time taken to process mobile plant applications is 7 months.

Suckler Cow Premium

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of 2001 suckler cow premium payments were outstanding (a) nationally and (b) in each region on (i) 31 August and (ii) 30 September; and if she will make a statement. [77320]

Margaret Beckett: (a) (i) proportion of 2001 Suckler Cow Premium payments outstanding nationally at 31 August was 34.11 per cent.

(b) (i) proportion of 2001 Suckler Cow Premium payments outstanding in each region at 31 August was (see table below.)

Region	% Of Claims Outstanding At 31 August	% Of Claims Outstanding At 30 September
Bristol	61.79	40.93
Cambridge	37.49	27.35
Carlisle	36.87	20.72
Crewe	12.81	3.83
Exeter	58.45	36.12
Northallerton	18.98	5.32
Nottingham	26.00	18.97
Reading	29.35	13.24
Worcester	20.07	6.35

(a) (ii) proportion of 2001 Suckler Cow Premium payments outstanding nationally at 30 September was 19.20 per cent.

(b) (ii) proportion of 2001 Suckler Cow Premium payments outstanding in each region at 30 September (see table above.)

Member States are required under European legislation to cross-check all animals subject to bovine subsidy against their cattle tracing databases. The Rural Payments Agency (RPA) has accordingly cross-checked claimed animals against the British Cattle Movement Service (BCMS Cattle Tracing System (CTS)). All cross checks have been completed and RPA has discovered a large number of discrepancies. Many of these arise because of the failure by cattle keepers to notify the CTS when animals are born, die or are moved. This has resulted in RPA being unable to meet the statutory payment deadlines in all cases on bovine schemes, although it is making every effort to ensure all outstanding payments are made as soon as possible. The RPA regrets the delays and the impact on farmer's cash flow, but cannot ignore the discrepancies discovered.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total value was of 2001 Suckler Cow Premiums outstanding at (a) 31 August and (b) 30 September. [77319]

Margaret Beckett: (a) total value of 2001 suckler cow premium 2001 outstanding at 31 August was £5,476,365 compared to payments of £72,834,635.

(b) total value of 2001 suckler cow premium 2001 outstanding at 30 September was £3,290,897 compared to £75,020,103.

Beef Special Premium

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total monetary value is of the claims under (a) the beef special premium scheme 2001 and (b) the suckler cow premium scheme 2001 that have been refused by the Rural Payments Agency. [77323]

Margaret Beckett: (a) estimated total monetary value of claims under the beef special premium scheme 2001 that has been refused by the Rural Payments Agency is £2,020,916 compared to total value of payments due of £107,891,000.

(b) estimated total monetary value of claims under the suckler cow premium scheme 2001 that has been refused by the Rural Payments Agency is £2,232,001 compared to total value of payments due of £78,311,000.

When applicants disagree with the refusal decision it is open to them to provide the RPA with additional information, which they feel, should be taken into account.

Food Waste

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the volume of food waste previously sold to swill feeders which goes to landfill. [77318]

Margaret Beckett: The Animal By-products Order 1999 was amended on 24 May 2001 to introduce a ban on the use of catering waste in swill feeding. It is estimated that approximately 80,000 tonnes per annum of catering waste was being sold to swill feeders at the time the ban came into effect. Following a risk assessment, my Department hopes to consult shortly on amendments to the Order which would allow catering waste to be composted and used on land as a soil conditioner rather than going to landfill.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what her policy is on the development of alternatives to landfill for the disposal of catering food waste; [77230]

(2) what assessment she has made of the risks to (a) human and (b) animal health of disposing untreated catering food waste in landfill. [77317]

Margaret Beckett: In June, my Department issued the results of a risk assessment on the use of composting to dispose of catering waste and animal by-products. The objective of this study was to determine the risks to public and animal health from the land-spreading of the catering wastes after treatment by composting or in a biogas plant and to compare these with the risks from existing disposal routes.

In summary, the project determined whether current composting processes give a sufficient degree of pathogen destruction such that the risks to humans and animals are acceptably low and the material may be safely spread to land. The composting route for catering waste potentially presents lower risks to grazing animals than disposal through land-fill. This is because composting offers extra control points. First, the raw catering waste could be delivered to enclosed receptions where birds and animals cannot gain access. Second, a no-grazing period could be enforced after application of the compost to land. Following the risk assessment, we hope to consult shortly on amendments to the Animal By-Products Order which would allow catering waste to be composted and used on land as a soil conditioner rather than going to landfill.

Waste

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects waste acceptance criteria to be (a) discussed and (b) agreed by the EU Council of Ministers. [77321]

Margaret Beckett: The Danish Presidency is expected to put this issue on the agenda for the Environment Council meeting on 9–10 December. If agreement is not reached at that meeting, the issue will revert to the Commission for a decision.

TSE Tests

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reason the United Kingdom has not submitted to the European Commission its programme for TSE tests; and when she intends to submit it. [78363]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 31 October 2002]: The TSE programme was not submitted as a result of an oversight and a subsequent misunderstanding with the Commission. The programme was submitted on 22 October when we asked the Commission to reconsider making an EU contribution.

Badgers

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her reasons for issuing a licence for the removal and slaughter of badgers at Saltdean, East Sussex. [74909]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 21 October 2002]: Defra received an application for a licence under Section 10 of the Protection of Badgers Act 1992, to prevent badgers causing serious damage to property.

We investigated the case extremely carefully, and considered the full range of options for addressing the problem. In addition to this, we sought to involve groups associated with animal welfare issues, even though the Act does not oblige us to do so.

The decision to grant a licence for the humane dispatch of the badgers was taken with great reluctance, only after it appeared that all other avenues had been exhausted and in the exceptional circumstances of this case. In dealing with any licence applications we always seek to avoid the need to harm badgers. This was an extreme case where no other option had been identified.

On October 14 trapping work was suspended to allow local interest groups and residents to have a further opportunity to come to a suitable arrangement.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the Four Area Badger Study carried out by the Republic of Ireland. [74865]

Margaret Beckett: The Independent Scientific Group on Cattle TB (ISG) is monitoring the Four Area Badger Study. Members of the ISG, Defra officials and Defra's independent animal vaccine programme adviser visited some of the Four Area Badger Study sites during their visit to Ireland in 2001.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the East Offaly Badger Removal Project. [74866]

Margaret Beckett: The East Offaly badger removal project was assessed in the "Krebs" Report on Bovine Tuberculosis in Cattle and Badgers, published in 1997. Based on many of the recommendations in the Krebs report, the Government have put in place a wide-ranging research programme into cattle TB. The Independent Scientific Group on Cattle TB (ISG), has advised on this research programme and in so doing considered previous badger removal operations including the East Offaly project.

Illegal Meat Imports

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to receive the report of the Risk Assessment Group which she established to study illegal meat imports. [77356]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 28 October 2002]: The risk assessment is being carried out by the Veterinary Laboratories Agency (VLA). The work commenced in March 2002 and we expect the report to be published later this year.

Preliminary results are currently being subjected to peer review and quality assurance procedures. The full results and final report will be published when this process is complete.

Countryside Agency

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to amend the financial provision for the Countryside Agency. [78912]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 4 November 2002]: The budget for the Countryside Agency is agreed as part of the corporate planning process, which is currently underway.

Bio-fuels

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the consequences for the Government's policy on bio-fuels of the collapse of ARBRE Energy. [76842]

Margaret Beckett: The Government take the future of energy from biomass very seriously and considers that energy crops have the potential to make a significant contribution to renewable energy and climate change targets. We are providing support to develop the sector through the Bio-energy Capital Grants Scheme and the Energy Crops Scheme. The funding available from the Bio-energy Capital Grants Scheme could deliver about 100MW of generating capacity. Discussions are continuing on the future of ARBRE and there are a number of lessons from the project that can be applied to future high efficiency biomass plants. The project has shown that short rotation coppice can be established and grown at the scale required to form an important element of the fuel supply. Useful information has been learned on improving yields, the use of varieties to minimise pest and disease impact and on harvesting technology.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer about increasing the tax incentives offered to producers of bio-fuels; and if she will make a statement. [79235]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 4 November 2002]: I am in regular contact with Treasury Ministers to discuss a whole range of matters related to energy and environmental policy. In addition, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State meets regularly with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on a wide range of matters that affect the business of the Department. As with all tax matters, decisions on tax incentives rest with the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

ARBRE Energy

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much money is owed to her Department by ARBRE Energy. [76846]

Margaret Beckett: No money is owed to my Department by ARBRE Energy.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of (a) the number of farmers who were assigned grants made by her Department to ARBRE Energy in respect of the Eggborough Power Station and (b) the impact on those farm businesses of moves by her Department to recover grants paid. [76845]

Margaret Beckett: Under the Energy Crops Scheme and the Woodland Grant Scheme planting grants are payable to growers. In the case of crops to provide fuel for the ARBRE power station growers assigned the payments to ARBRE Energy and this Department and the Forestry Commission were asked to make the payments to the third party. 12 growers qualified for grants to plant crops to provide fuel for ARBRE under the Energy Crops Scheme. A further 46 growers qualified for grants under the Woodland Grants Scheme. The Energy Crops Scheme requires that crops are used for the production of energy but it is too early to consider any recovery of grant as discussions are continuing on the future of ARBRE. Should it become necessary the Department will work closely with growers to access one of the alternative energy markets.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much money her Department has paid in grants, and under which schemes, to ARBRE Energy in respect of the wood-burning power station at Eggborough, Selby. [76843]

Margaret Beckett: Grants to plant crops to provide fuel supply for the ARBRE project have been paid to ARBRE Energy as follows:

Energy Crops Scheme per cent. £184,580
Woodland Grant Scheme per cent. £980,994

Of the £184,580 two payable orders totalling £31,290 have yet to be cashed.

A further £97,090 remains payable to Arbre Energy under assignments made by growers. Following the liquidation, we were asked to delay these two payments until the growers in question had opportunity to discuss cancellation of the assignments with the liquidator. I hope that this will be resolved shortly.

Fly Tipping

Mr. Love: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what evidence has been collected into the difficulties faced by local authorities in dealing with fly tipping; and if he will make a statement; [78083]

(2) what representation he has received to strengthen the legal powers available in local authorities to deal with fly tipping; and if he will make a statement. [78085]

Mr. Meacher: I have been asked to reply.

The Local Government Association produced a report which was presented to the fly tipping forum at the beginning of 2002. This paper was based on a survey of local authorities and provided information on levels of fly tipping within each local authority and the enforcement action taken.

The paper also outlined a number of suggestions for increasing local authorities' powers in relation to waste management and fly tipping. As a result, the Government will be amending shortly the duty of care legislation to allow local authorities to be able to serve notice on businesses which will require them to supply that authority with their waste transfer notes. Waste transfer notes are required to be kept under Section 34 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

A404

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 24 May 2002, Official Report, column 644W, on the A404, if she will place in the Library copies of the advice received from lawyers; and if she will make a statement on the footpath Bisham 9. [79718]

Alun Michael: We have been continuing correspondence with Windsor and Maidenhead Borough Council and the Ramblers Association about the proposed diversion of footpath Bisham No. 9. On the information now before me, I am satisfied that the drafting of the necessary orders are justified. These orders will be published shortly.

Feta Cheese

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will press for a review of the Protected Designation of Origin procedure affecting non-generic products; and if she will make a statement on the recent decision in respect of feta cheese. [77832]

Mr. Morley: The UK has consistently opposed the registration of feta cheese as an EU protected food name on the grounds that we believed that the name "feta" had become a generic product and so not eligible for protection. However, in the absence of a contrary decision by the Council, feta was registered by the Commission as a protected food name on 15 October. While disappointed with this particular outcome, we are satisfied in general with the protected food name scheme and the procedures for registration of products. The scheme was highlighted by the Curry Commission Report on the Future of Farming Food as being a useful opportunity for UK producers to protect the character of their product and secure a premium price for it.

Agri-environment Schemes

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs in terms of how much paperwork is involved in the agri-scheme; how easy it will be to access, what account the scheme will take of work already done; how it will be funded; and how it will be policed. [79245]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 4 November 2002]: Defra is working with stakeholders on a fundamental review of agri-environment schemes. A first round of public consultation was held earlier this year and a second round of consultation will begin shortly. A key objective of the review is to streamline the administration of the schemes, making full use of modern technology.

One strand of the review is based on the recommendation by the Policy Commission on the Future of Food and Farming that the current schemes should be complemented by a new, simple entry-level scheme, open to as many farms in England as possible. Defra is designing a pilot for such a scheme which will be launched in four areas next year. The scheme would reward positive management of existing features as well as enhancement. Subject to success of the pilot, it is hoped that the new scheme could be rolled out nationally in 2005.

Like the existing schemes, it would be co-financed from EU and national funds and would include compliance checks on a percentage of applicants in accordance with EU requirements.

Modulation

Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with EU farm Ministers about the equalization of farm modulation across the EU; and if she will make a statement. [79232]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 4 November 2002]: The government support the European Commission's proposal to introduce compulsory modulation across the European Union, although our support will depend on the detail of its implementation. This issue was discussed at the October 2002 Agriculture Council and I have raised it in various meetings with European Agriculture Ministers and with Commissioner Fischler.

Sellafield

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will place full versions of the two DEFRA reports into the economic viability of Sellafield in the Library. [77547]

Margaret Beckett: Two reports about the economic case for the Sellafield MOX plant, by PA Consulting and AD Little, were published by Ministers for consultation in 1999 and 2001. The published versions omitted some commercially confidential information.

In an arbitration under the terms of the OSPAR Convention, which was heard in The Hague from 21 to 25 October, Ireland is seeking full versions of the reports. The Government maintains that it is entitled to withhold commercially confidential information from the published versions of the two reports and that this did not significantly affect the ability of consultees to comment on the economic case for the plant.

The arbitral tribunal will deliver its award in due course.

GM Crops

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will add the six figure grid references for the 2001–02 National Seed Listing Trials planted under 00/R33/6 to the public register. [79736]

Mr. Meacher: The full 6 figure grid references for these sites will be available on the public register by the 8 November.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which of the National Seed Listing trials for GM crops planted between Autumn 2001 and Spring 2002 were completed. [79738]

Mr. Meacher: National List tests and trials for GM crops sown at four sites between Autumn 2001 and Spring 2002 were completed satisfactorily. These are shown in the table:

Type of Test or Trial	Location
Distinctness Uniformity and Stability	Sand Hutton, Yorkshire
Value for Cultivation and Use	Thorganby, Lincolnshire
	Hinton Waldrist, Oxfordshire
	Udny, Aberdeenshire

Ministerial Meetings (US)

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on what dates Ministers in her Department have held meetings with members and officials of the United States Administration since 8 June 2001; where each meeting was held; which Ministers were involved in each meeting; which United States Administration department attended each meeting; and which members and officials from the United States Administration attended each of these meetings. [78151]

Margaret Beckett: Defra Ministers have met the following US Administration members and officials since 8 June 2001:

Margaret Beckett: Thursday 1 November 2001, London

Governor Christine Todd-Whitman, Environmental Protection Agency

Tuesday 4 December 2001, Washington DC

Ambassador Bob Zoellick, USTR;

Senator Joseph Lieberman, Senate Environment & Public Works Committee;

Paula Dobrianski, Under Secretary, State Department;

Senator Jeff Bingaman, Chair Senate Energy & national Resources Committee;

Senator James Jeffords, Chair Senate Environment & Public Works Committee;

Senator Chuck Hagel, Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Wednesday 5 December 2001, Washington DC

Gary Edson, National Economic Council;

Governor Christine Todd-Whitman, Environmental Protection Agency;

Ann Veneman, Agriculture Secretary, US Department of Agriculture;

Senator Tom Harkin, Chair Senate Agriculture Committee;

Senator Richard Luger, Senate Agriculture Committee;

Jim Connaughton, Chair White House Council for Environment Quality;

Andrew Natsios, USAID;

Thursday 11 April 2002, Washington DC

Ian Johnson, Environmental & Social Sustainable Development Department;

Ann Veneman, Agriculture Secretary, US Department of Agriculture;

Al Larson, Under Secretary for Economic, Business & Agriculture Affairs, US State Department;

Michael Meacher: Thursday 1 November 2001, London

Governor Christine Todd-Whitman, Environmental Protection Agency

Lord Whitty: Wednesday 19 June 2001, London

Dr. J B Penn, Under Secretary, US Department of Agriculture

Alun Michael and Elliott Morley have not held any meetings with members or officials of the United States Administration.

In addition, Defra Ministers engage with US Administration members in numerous international fora.

Export Refunds

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the expenditure within the EU on the subsidising of exports of surplus agricultural production for which figures are available in the last year; and how much of the total comes from (a) EU and (b) national funding. [79258]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 4 November 2002]: The European Union spent 3.4 billion euro on export refunds in its 2001 financial year. So far as we are aware, no member state uses national funds for this purpose.

Food Costs

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the additional weekly expenditure for the average family in purchasing food in consequence of the difference between EU and world prices in the most recent annual period for which figures are available. [79259]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 4 November 2002]: In 2000 the CAP is estimated to have increased the cost of food for a notional UK family of four by £4–5 per week. Taking account of the additional cost borne by taxpayers the figure rises to £8–9 per week.

Brazilian Mahogany

Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action the Government are taking to stop imports of Brazilian mahogany. [79000]

Mr. Morley: International trade in Brazilian mahogany is controlled under the terms of the Convention of International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES) to which the UK is a party. Brazilian big leaf mahogany is listed in Appendix III of the Convention which requires that mahogany exported must have been acquired in accordance with the national laws for the protection of fauna and flora. Where importers of mahogany present an export permit issued by the Management Authority in Brazil confirming that the mahogany has been legally acquired, imports are allowed.

However, we are concerned about the current position with relation to mahogany imports from Brazil. A proposal is currently under discussion at the Conference of the CITES Parties to list Brazilian big leaf mahogany on Appendix II. The UK along with the rest of the European Union is supporting this proposal which would allow importing states to reach their own scientific judgement as to the sustainability of the trade.

Flood Insurance

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs in which areas of the country flood insurance cover is not available; and if she will make a statement. [76281]

Mr. Morley: The Association of British Insurers have stated that all properties defended to at least a standard of 1.3 per cent. (1 in 75) annual probability, should be able to obtain cover. Properties currently protected to a lesser extent, but where defences to meet the above standard are planned for the next 5 years, should also be able to get cover. The ABI have assured us that undefended properties or "exceptional cases" will be assessed on an individual basis and consideration given as to whether some form of insurance cover can be given. Many of the properties which the ABI estimate will not be able to obtain cover, have never have been able to get flood insurance.

The decision to move away from the existing agreement means that, in the majority of cases, people can and should shop around for the best deal. However, it must be recognised that insurance companies need to take a commercial decision as to what risk they will cover and on what terms. It is impossible to make a generalisation about areas where flood cover will be unavailable as in a competitive market as what is unacceptable to one company may well be acceptable to another.

Measuring the Quality of Life Report

Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Government will publish their response to the Environmental Audit Committee's Fourth Report of Session 2001–02, Measuring the Quality of Life: The 2001 Sustainable Development Headline Indicators. [80314]

Mr. Meacher: I am pleased to announce that I have today, laid in the libraries of both Houses, copies of the Government's response to the Environmental Audit Committee's Fourth Report of the 2001–2002 session, "Measuring the Quality of Life: The 2001 Sustainable Development Headline Indicators".

The Government's response reinforces our commitment to reporting progress towards sustainable development, particularly through a set of headline indicators. In our sustainable development strategy "A better quality of life", published in 1999, we envisaged a full review of both the strategy and all the indicators after five years, which we will aim to complete by the end of 2004.

GM Maize

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what opinions the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment has received from the Advisory Committee on Feedingstuffs (ACAF) on the dossier of evidence presented by Aventis in support of its application for marketing consent for T25 GM maize, with particular reference to their opinion on the chicken feeding study; and if she will place a copy of ACAF's opinion in respect of (a) the whole dossier and (b) the chicken feeding study in the Library. [4932]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 19 July 2002]: At the request of the department, The Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment (ACRE) has, since November 2000, been considering the criticisms of the safety of Aventis' (formerly AgrEvo and now Bayer Cropscience) GM maize, T25, which has been raised at the hearing into the addition of CHARDON LL (a variety of T25) to the national list of seeds. ACRE subsequently requested advice from ACAF on the animal feed aspects of the criticisms.

AgrEvo applied in 1995 through the French authorities for approval under EU directive 90/220 to place its GM T25 maize on the European market for cultivation and use as animal feed. In June 1995 France circulated the dossier to the other member states with the recommendation that T25 maize be given approval. After due consideration European Union member states approved the marketing of T25 maize in 1998. As part of this process ACRE considered the French opinion and dossier supporting the application and gave its advice to the government in June 1996. This was prior to the formation of ACAF. The chicken feeding study was not part of the original dossier submitted in 1996 and so was not considered by ACRE. A summary of the study was circulated by the French in 1997 as supplementary information on the nutritional qualities of the maize. The French authorities were of the view that the study did not add any significant new information to the dossier. Officials in MAFF considered the study, but as it was a nutritional rather than a safety study, it was not sent to ACRE.

In reconsidering aspects of the T25 maize dossier ACRE has asked ACAF to look at the available data and advise on the substance of the criticisms raised at the CHARDONLL hearing in relation to animal feed and in particular the mortality rate in the chicken study. The growth rates in the two groups were broadly equivalent, but of the 140 fed T25 maize grain, 10 chicks (7 per cent.) died, whereas only 5 of the 140 (3.5 per cent.) died in the control group. In this type of experiment up to 8 per cent. would be expected to die. So the mortality rate is within the expected range. The question raised in the CHARDONLL is whether this is of concern and worthy of further investigation.

A copy of the letter of 5 September 2001 from ACAF to ACRE setting out the committee's views on the whole dossier and the chicken feeding study has been placed in the Library. A copy is also on the public register held by my Department in Ashdown House

In summary, ACAF is satisfied that, on the basis of the information presented by AgroEvo, there is nothing to indicate that T25 maize grain or its products pose any more risk to animals or humans than non-GM maize varieties if used in animal feed. I have asked ACAF for their reasons for this conclusion. However, ACAF advised ACRE that the data in the dossier are not sufficient to conclude at this stage, that T25 silage (rather than grain) is substantially equivalent to other maize varieties. Although it is unlikely that T25 maize silage is unsafe to feed to animals, its equivalence should be confirmed. The UK regulatory authority has subsequently written to Aventis to request further data on the composition of T25 silage.

ACRE has given preliminary advice that nothing has been raised that warrants taking immediate action under the directive to withdraw T25 maize from the market. ACRE will shortly be issuing its advice on concerns raised during the CHARDON LL hearing, including criticisms of the chicken feeding study. This advice will also include ACRE's response to points raised at its T25 maize open hearing held in February 2002. At their hearing the Committee, in conjunction with ACAF, invited a number of witnesses and experts including Dr. Kestin and Dr. Knowles. Guided by the evidence taken at this meeting, any subsequent comments on the evidence from the public and the background information that is already available, ACRE will advise Ministers further on the validity of the T25 risk assessment.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) shelters, (b) bedsits and (c) houses in multiple occupation were registered as unfit for habitation in each year since 1997. [77421]

Mr. McNulty: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not held centrally, and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent representations she has received concerning the adequacy of (a) safety standards, (b) energy efficiency standards and (c) furnishing and fixture standard regulations applied to homes of multiple occupancy; and if she will make a statement [77414]

Mr. McNulty: I have been asked to reply

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister receives regular correspondence from Members of Parliament, the public, local authorities, landlords, tenants, professional and other interested bodies about the adequacy of the current standards applying to houses in multiple occupation (HMOs), including those relating to safety standards, energy efficiency standards and furnishings and fixtures. The Government is committed to raising standards in such properties, which is why we will introduce legislation, as soon as parliamentary time permits, to require local authorities to licence HMOs which pose the greatest risk to the health and safety of their occupiers in their areas.

ADVOCATE-GENERAL

Devolution Cases

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Advocate General, how many devolution cases have proceeded up to the Privy Council; and in what percentage of those she has intervened. [77258]

The Advocate-General [holding answer 28 October 2002]: Eleven cases have proceeded to the Privy Council and I have intervened in seven.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Advocate General, what is the total sum of court expenses incurred as result of her intervention in devolution cases since the inception of her Office. [77259]

The Advocate-General [holding answer 28 October 2002]: The question of expenses in a court action is a matter for the discretion of the court and any expenses awarded to or against a party may be referred to the auditor of court. Since the inception of my Office, no expenses have been awarded to or against the Advocate-General in devolution cases in which I have intervened.

Budgetary Provision

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Advocate General, what the (a) total cost and (b) budget provision for her Office has been each year since its inception. [77260]

Advocate-General [holding answer 28 October 2002]: I refer to the answer I previously gave to the hon. Member for Orkney and Shetland (Mr. Carmichael) for the period from the inception of my Office until 2000–01, in Official Report, 25 January 2002, column 1127W The figure for 2001–02, in respect of identifiable costs of staff and related administration for my Office, was £1,431,426. Approximately half of the costs of the Office relates to work on litigation and advisory work, including the preparation of Bills, carried out by lawyers from the Office of the Solicitor to the Advocate-General on behalf of Government Departments other than the Advocate-General. These costs were met from within the overall budget of the Scotland Office.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Advocate-General, how many devolution cases have been intimated to her since the inception of her Office. [77257]

The Advocate-General [holding answer 28 October 2002]: Devolution issues are intimated to me in accordance with the Scotland Act 1998 as devolution minutes. There may be more than one minute intimated in the course of a case. As at 6 November 2002, approximately 1746 minutes were intimated to me in connection with a total of 1575 cases.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Advocate General, in how many devolution cases she has intervened since the inception of her Office. [77256]

The Advocate-General [holding answer 28 October 2002]: I have intervened in 24 cases since the creation of my office in May 1999.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Websites

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, if she will list the website links associated with her Department, including sites now dormant or closed, and indicating whether they are live, dormant or closed; what the start-up costs were for each site listed; what the operating costs were in each year since start up for each site; which company hosted each site; what assessment takes place for each site; which company does the assessment; if she will place the assessment reports in the Library; and if she will make a statement. [75592]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office website is www.scottishsecretary.gov.uk and was set up by departmental staff. Identifiable costs for the Scotland Office were £2,700. Operating costs for the site are currently estimated at £2,000 per year. The site is hosted by Scotland On-Line.

My department is also responsible for the Friends of Scotland website (www.friendsofscotland.gov.uk), which was established on 23 July 2002. Start-up costs were £62,623. Details of annual operating costs are not yet available but maintenance and development costs to date are £4,711. The site is hosted by Ed Net.

Both of these sites are live. My department also set up an initial Friends of Scotland website (www.friendsofscotland.org.uk) earlier this year. This site was set up within the department and the start-up and operating costs were minimal. The site was hosted by Scotland On-Line and is now closed.

No external companies have been commissioned to provide an assessment of the department's websites. The content and use of the sites is kept under review within the department.

Friends of Scotland

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, if she will list the members of the Friends of Scotland initiative, broken down by their country of residence. [79561]

Mrs. Liddell: I refer the hon. Member to my answers of 29 October. Up to 6 November 2002, the Scotland Office had recruited a total of 142 Friends of Scotland (this figure is updated on a monthly basis).

The names of individual Friends cannot be disclosed without their permission.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Electricity

Mr. Bacon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what discussions she has had with Ofgem about the state of preparedness of (a) electricity generation and (b) electricity distribution companies to cope with emergencies arising from severe weather conditions. [78554]

Mr. Wilson: The Department is in regular contact with Ofgem regarding aspects of the resilience of the electricity generation, transmission and distribution system. In particular Ofgem participated in the steering group for a study of the emergency preparedness of the transmission and distribution systems which we published in May. Following Sunday's storms I announced that we would be testing the conclusions of this study, which were generally positive, against the actual response in difficult conditions. I have asked for a review of how companies performed and for recommendations to help them ensure that future supplies to consumers are not affected to the same extent. Ofgem will be fully involved in the review.

Council for Science and Technology

Geraint Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what arrangements have been made for carrying out a quinquennial review of the Council for Science and Technology. [80316]

Ms Hewitt: The quinquennial review of the Council for Science and Technology was launched on 19 August. The Science and Technology Select Committee was informed in advance and sent copies of a consultation letter which was sent out to learned societies and other stakeholders such as Universities UK, the CBI and the Engineering Employers Federation. The consultation letter was also placed on the web (http://www.ost.gov.uk/policy/q—review.htm).

The first stage of the review, which addressed whether the CST is still needed, has recommended that it should continue in being, but that steps must be taken to make it more effective. The Government have accepted this recommendation. The second stage of the review will look at how the CST might best be used in future.

The consultation will continue until 17 November.

Petroleum Industry

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what figures she collates on how many UK-based petroleum geologists and geophysicists are working in (a) the UK and (b) abroad. [79162]

Mr. Wilson: My Department does not collate such figures. However, under a recent Government/industry PILOT initiative, a questionnaire on UK Continental Shelf exploration activity is being circulated to all UKCS exploration managers. Within this, companies are being asked how many geoscientists are currently working for their organisation on the UKCS and how this compares with 3 years ago. The survey will conclude by December 2002, and the results will then be analysed and presented to PILOT in due course.

South East England Development Agency

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what the planned expenditure for the South East England Development Agency on (a) corporate entertainment and (b) conferences was during the financial year 2002–03. [77858]

Alan Johnson: (a) As part of SEEDA's marketing budget for 2002–03, £12,000 is provided for events hosted by the Chairman and / or the Board and £13,000 for other open consultation and communication events.

(b) SEEDA itself does not host conferences, but may contribute to cost of holding events which relate to economic development and other related purposes. The budget for SEEDA staff attending conferences and events is £49,000.

Motor Sport

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what progress she has made in promoting energy efficiency of motor vehicles through environmentally friendly motor sport; [79854]

(2) what action she has taken to encourage development of an environmentally friendly specification or formula for motor sport. [79853]

Mr. Wilson: I am pleased to say that the Department and four Regional Development Agencies (East Midlands, South East England, East of England, and West Midlands) jointly funded a major industry-led initiative called Energy Efficient MotorSport (EEMS). An EEMS working group was established, consisting of a number of companies and individuals with relevant interest and expertise which resulted in a feasibility study published in August 2002, which was commissioned through the Motorsport Industry Association (MIA).

The aim of the study was to assess the role that motorsport could play in the promotion and development of energy efficiency automotive technologies. A follow up EEMS presentation was recently made by the MIA to the world governing body of motorsport to explore how the proposals of the study could be demonstrated in a motor racing context. DTI, RDAs and other involved in the EEMS initiative are planning an industry showcase event and other activities to encourage industry to implement its findings.

In addition, the DTI led Foresight Vehicle programme, the UK's national automotive R & D programme, continue to support collaborative R & D in range of areas including environmental performance (e.g. fuel efficiency, emissions, light weight materials).

Motor Industry (Licensing)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what plans she has to introduce a system of licensing for (a) independent motor vehicle garages and (b) franchised motor dealers; and if she will make a statement. [78589]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have no plans at present to introduce a system of licensing for garages or motor dealers. Car buyers have the same rights as all consumers to expect that the goods they buy are of satisfactory quality and as described. With regard to car servicing and repair, my Department is working closely with the industry and other stakeholders to develop an independent national voluntary scheme to enable consumers to identify garages across the sector which are committed to delivering consistent minimum standards of customer service.

Trading Standards

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, how many successful prosecutions have been made by local authority trading standards departments against licensees or landlords for delivering short measures in each of the last five years. [77570]

Miss Melanie Johnson: As a general rule, local authorities do not currently initiate prosecutions for short measure draught beer unless the deficiency exceeds 10 per cent. The Department is aware of 13 successful prosecutions over the last five tax years:

Year	1997–8	1998–9	1999–2000	2000–1	2001–2
Prosecutions	9	2	1	1	0

Mining (Compensation)

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, when her Department and the Claimant Solicitor's Steering Group expect to agree a dust figure for the occupation of Strata Engineer in respect of relevant mining compensation claims. [78507]

Mr. Wilson: Dust factors for jobs not explicitly covered in the Claims Handling Agreement (CHA), like that of Strata Engineer, are decided by the Dust Reference Panel, experts who are jointly instructed by the DTI and the Solicitors' Co-ordinating Group (CG).

The Department's claims handlers, IRISC, have only one claim that is currently outstanding for a Strata Engineer. This case will become the subject of an individual referral to the Dust Reference Panel (DRP).

The DRP are currently working with the Department and the Solicitors' Co-ordinating Group to produce guidance that will aid the referral of individual cases to the DRP. This will be issued shortly and individual cases can then be referred when the claimants' solicitor and IRISC have assembled the necessary evidence, in accordance with the guidance.

Patents (Biotechnology Inventions)

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what assessment he has made of whether the patents system as it applies to biotechnology inventions continues to operate in the public interest; and if he will make a statement. [77876]

Miss Melanie Johnson: It is important to ensure that the patent system in this rapidly developing area continues to operate in the public interest. The Department is commissioning a study on the impact which current patenting practice in the field of genetics has on research and competitiveness in the UK. The Department of Health is conducting a study on Intellectual Property generally and the NHS. In addition, the report published in September of the independent Commission on Intellectual Property Rights, set up by right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development, makes recommendations in this area in terms of the impact on developing countries. The Government are currently considering these recommendations.

Coal Industry

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what proposals her Department has for investment aid for the UK coal industry. [78451]

Mr. Wilson: We are currently consulting on the case for an investment aid scheme for the UK coal industry. The consultation document is available via the DTI website at http://www2.dti.gov.uk/support/coal/.

The deadline for comments is 15 November 2002.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what the criteria are for applying the temporary operating aid scheme for the UK coal industry. [78452]

Mr. Wilson: The general criteria for the UK Coal Operating Aid Scheme, as approved by the European Commission in November 2000, are available on the DTI website at www.dti.gov.uk/support/coal

We are also seeking Commission's approval for a targeted extension of the Scheme to the end of this year. The criteria for this extension can be found at http://www2.dti.gov.uk/support/coal/ukcoas ext.pdf

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what plans she has to aid the UK coal industry when the temporary operating aid scheme ends. [78453]

Mr. Wilson: The new European coal State aid regulation which came into force on 24 July 2002 provides us with the flexibility to pay investment aid for pits that have a viable future. This would allow us to pay up to 30 per cent. of the total costs of the relevant investment project. We are currently consulting on the case for introducing a scheme in the UK to make use of this flexibility.

Photovoltaics

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what incentives are available to encourage the installation of photovoltaic cells in (a) domestic and (b) non-domestic premises. [78175]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 29 October 2002]: The £20 million First Phase of the Major Photovoltaic Demonstration Programme offers grants of 50 per cent. on small scale domestic solar panel arrays installed by accredited companies. Grants are also available for larger scale non-domestic systems. The programme has been running now for 6 months and has had 78 successful applications accounting for around £2 million in grants.

By the end of the three year first phase we hope to have installed PV systems on 3000 domestic roofs and 140 medium and large public and commercial buildings.

VAT reductions are also available for professionally installed solar panels.

Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, if she will introduce (a) fixed net metering, (b) a feed in tariff and (c) loans for those wanting to install a solar photovoltaic system. [78141]

Mr. Wilson: (a) Fixed net metering is a matter for individual suppliers, as its introduction involves them incurring costs. However, initiatives to promote its uptake are under consideration within DTI, e.g. under the Distributed Generation Co-ordinating Group.

(b) The Renewables Obligation came into force in April of this year. This is considered a more market-driven approach than a feed-in tariff, and so compatible with a liberalised, competitive market.

(c) Feed-in tariffs and low interest loans are features of the German Government's PV support programme, whereas we have chosen the capital grant route, which is more akin to the Japanese approach. The £20 million first phase of the Major Photovoltaic Demonstration programme, launched in March this year, offers grants averaging 50 per cent. for small and large-scale PV installations. It has been running now for 6 months and has had 78 successful applications accounting for around £2 million in grants. By the end of the three year first phase we hope to have installed PV systems on 3000 domestic roofs and 140 medium and large public and commercial buildings.

Manufacturing (North–West)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, how many people were employed in the manufacturing sector in the north-west in each of the last five years. [79576]

Alan Johnson: The numbers of people employed in manufacturing in the north-west during each of the last five years for which data is available from the Office of National Statistics are as follows:

Year
1996	529,351
1997	532,200
1998	529,604
1999	514,114
2000	499,020

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what support and assistance she is providing to the manufacturing sector in the north-west. [79575]

Alan Johnson: Much of the work undertaken in the north-west is underpinned by our recently published Manufacturing Strategy in which we have identified several key pillars to assist manufacturing companies in fulfilling their potential in the UK.

The North West Development Agency (NWDA) together with regional partners are charged with taking forward Government support and assistance in the north-west. The NWDA is promoting and sharing best practice through industry cluster programmes for the aerospace, food & drink and chemicals sectors and others. NWDA delivers the supply chain programme which helps and encourages north-west businesses to use north-west suppliers as well as assisting small businesses devise recovery plans should their main customer reduce production or move from the area.

We have established the UK's first Regional Centre for Manufacturing Excellence in Manchester. The Centre provides the DTI's Manufacturing Advisory Service—the practical, hands-on support manufacturers need. Two Innovative Manufacturing Research Centres are based in the University of Liverpool, making a significant contribution to the global competitiveness of UK manufacturing.

Skills and Employment issues are recognised amongst other issues as an important factor in improving productivity and the NWDA has led on the coordination of a Framework for Regional Employment and Skills action (FRESA).

Electricity Supply

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, (1) if she will make a statement about complaints from members of the public relating to information provided by electricity supply companies about reconnections of supply following the storm on 27th October; [78847]

(2) what her Department will do to analyse the response of the electricity industry to supply problems experienced as a result of the storms of 27th October; what plans she has to meet representatives of the electricity industry and discuss what lessons can be learnt as a result of supply problems following the storms of 27th October; and if she will make a statement on the performance of electricity companies in handling power supply problems in Norfolk following the storms of 27th October. [78846]

Mr. Wilson [holding answers 4 November 2002]: Following the storms I asked for a review of how the electricity distribution companies performed and for recommendations to help them ensure that future supplies to consumers are not affected to the same extent. This review will cover the supply problems experienced, including in the Norfolk area, and the quality of information provided to the public by the companies. I hope to publish it during December. Our follow-up plan will certainly include discussions with the industry about what lessons can be learnt.

KPNQwest

Mr. Stephen O'Brian: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade Industry, what representations her Department has received regarding regulatory issues and the bankruptcy of KPNQwest. [79107]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 4 November 2002]: I have been asked to reply.

My Department has not received any representations specifically regarding KPNQwest. There have however been a number of representations on regulatory issues and the risk to continuity of supply in the event of telecoms company failures.

Company Activities

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, in what ways she has encouraged companies to report on the social and environmental implications of their activities. [79055]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Government have undertaken a wide range of activity to encourage companies to report on their environmental and social performance. This includes the Prime Minister's challenge to the top 350 companies to publish annual environmental reports, the work of the Pioneers group on Sectoral Sustainability Strategies and practical assistance such as the General Guidelines on Environmental Reporting produced by DEFRA and DTI and published in collaboration with the CBI.

In the Modernising Company Law White Paper, the Government proposed that economically significant companies be required to prepare an operating and financial review. The proposals would require information on the company's impact on the environment and wider community, where relevant to an understanding of the company's business, to be covered in the narrative report.

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, if she plans that subclauses 75(2)(d)–(e) of the Draft Clauses contained in Modernising Company Law (Cm. 5553) would require the reporting on all significant environmental, social and community impacts of a company covered by this section, were these clauses to be enacted. [79171]

Miss Melanie Johnson: If enacted as presently drafted, clause 75 would require the directors of a company to which it applied to consider whether certain information should be included in its Operating and Financial Review in order to permit the members to make an informed assessment of the company.

While subsections 75(2)(d) and (e) refer to a company's policies on environmental issues, and on social and community issues, relevant to the company's business, subsection (f) relates to the company's performance against those policies.

Further detail on the draft clauses on the Operating and Financial Review is at Annex D of "Modernising Company Law, Cm 5553-I".

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, if she will use the Company Law Review to ensure that companies assess the impact of social and environmental issues on their businesses. [79051]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Government's response to the Company Law Review is set out in the White Paper "Modernising Company Law (Cm 5553)". It contains proposals for a statutory statement of duties that would require all directors to recognise so far as is practical in the circumstances social and environmental issues in deciding how best to promote the success of the company for the benefit of its members. It also proposes that the most economically significant companies should report on their policies on these issues, where they are necessary for an informed assessment of the business, as part of a statutory Operating and Financial Review.

Postal Targets

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what the maximum time is that Consignia can take to deliver a parcel to an address within the United Kingdom without being in breach of its targets. [79528]

Mr. Timms: Targets for scheduled services and standards are set in the licence issued by the Postal Services Commission and agreed between Royal Mail Group plc and the Consumer Council for Postal Services.

I understand from Royal Mail that the current target for delivery of standard parcels under the terms of their licence is 90 per cent. within 3 working days after posting, including Saturday. 99.9 per cent. of parcels are targeted to be delivered within 7 working days and 100 per cent. within 15 days of posting.

I also understand from the company that parcels of unlimited weight may be sent first class and parcels of up to 750g in weight, second class. The targets for these are 92.5 per cent. within 1 day of posting for first class, 98.5 per cent. for second class and 99.9 per cent. within 3 days and 100 per cent. within 15 days for both first and second class postage.

Electricity Supply (Gloucestershire)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what investigations she has made into the fluctuations in power in homes in Gloucestershire following the restored supplies; and if she will make a statement. [79352]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 4 November 2002]: In view of the scale of the disruptions to the electricity network operated by Aquila Network Services (which supplies the Midlands area including Gloucestershire) the company has been seeking to restore supply to all customers before addressing any outstanding voltage problems, such as voltage fluctuations or low volts.

All supplies to Gloucestershire were restored by midnight on 31 October 2002. As of midday on 1 November 2002 only a few isolated customers supplied by Aquila remained off supply. Outstanding voltage problems in Gloucestershire will be resolved soon.

On 29 October 2002, I announced that a study will be commissioned to review how the electricity companies handled the emergency commencing on 27 October 2002. The response of Aquila Network Services, including resolution of follow-up problems such as voltage complaints, will be included in the study.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, if she will make a statement about the time taken to restore power to houses in Gloucestershire. [79350]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 4 November 2002]: I have been advised that 130,000 customers in Aquila's network (formerly Midlands Electricity's network) were affected by interruptions caused by the storm. By midday on 30 October 2002 supplies had been restored to 97.3 per cent. of these customers. Supplies to all customers in Gloucestershire were restored by midnight on 31 October 2002. I advised that Aquila recruited 200 linesmen and craftsmen from other electricity companies to assist with restoration of supplies.

On 29 October 2002 I announced that a study will be commissioned to review how the electricity companies handled the emergency commencing on 27 October 2002. The response of Aquila Network Services to the widespread disruption caused by the storm will be included in the study.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what assessment she has made of the preparations which were made to counter the potential problem of cuts in power supply to homes in Gloucestershire, following gale warnings; and if she will make a statement. [79351]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 4 November 2002]: Earlier this year I commissioned a study into the resilience of the electricity transmission and distribution systems in Great Britain. The study focussed on the measures that are in place to reduce the risk of an emergency from major supply interruptions and the ability to manage the restoration of supplies in the event of widespread disruption. One conclusion arising from the report was that the electricity companies are generally better prepared and equipped to handle emergencies than was the case a decade ago.

On 29 October 2002 I announced that another study will be commissioned to review how the electricity companies handled the emergency commencing on 27 October 2002. The preparation for the storm and response of Aquila Network Services, which distributes electricity to homes in Gloucestershire, will be included in the study.

Street Markets

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what assessment she has made of the contribution street markets make to the United Kingdom economy; how many people are (a) directly and (b) indirectly employed in such markets in the United Kingdom; and what assistance she gives to help protect and expand street markets in the United Kingdom. [77552]

Miss Melanie Johnson: There are 6,215 enterprises with employees in the retail sales not in stores sector, which includes stalls and markets as well as mail order houses and other non-store retail. Total employment in these enterprises is around 100,000 and total turnover is around £11,000 million.

These enterprises account for 4 per cent. of all retail sales employers and employment and 5 per cent. of turnover. They account for half a per cent. of all employers, turnover and employment in the UK.

Recruitment Consultants (Ofgem)

Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, which recruitment consultants her Department uses for assistance in recruiting people to the Board of Ofgem; and if she will make a statement. [77386]

Mr. Wilson: My Department has operated a call-off contract with five companies to assist when appropriate in the making of public appointments. We have used Saxton Bampfylde Hever plc in the making of appointments to the Gas and Electricity Markets Authority.

Future Vehicles

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what steps she is taking to encourage the development of (a) combined electric and petrol engine and (b) hydrogen fuel cell-powered vehicles. [79408]

Mr. Wilson: My Department, together with DfT, DEFRA and HMT, published the Powering Future Vehicles Strategy on 31 July. This declares Government targets for the introduction of low-carbon vehicles. The strategy not only seeks to achieve environmental improvements, but to engage UK industry in the development of new technologies and products such as hybrid and fuel cell vehicles. As part of the process, my department is supporting the creation of the Low Carbon Vehicles Partnership (LowCVP), with Professor Jim Skea of the Policy Studies Institute as Launch Director.

One of the first tasks of the LowCVP will be to advise on the role and remit of a new Centre of Excellence for "Low Carbon and Fuel Cell Technologies", to implement one of the recommendations of the Automotive Innovation and Growth Team, which reported earlier this year. My Department has announced £15 million support over 5 years for this and the other proposed Centre of Excellence on transport telematics. In addition the Department's Foresight Vehicle and Advanced Fuel Cells Programmes support the development of enabling technologies for alternative fuel vehicles.

Yemen

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what the level of bilateral trade with Yemen is. [79934]

Nigel Griffiths: In 2001, UK imports of goods from Yemen were worth £4.8 million. UK exports of goods were valued at £73.5 million.

Wind-powered Electricity

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, if she will list the sites identified by her Department for the construction of wind-powered electricity generators. [78068]

Mr. Wilson: The Government do not have a list of sites suitable for the construction of wind powered electricity generators. It is for developers to bring proposals forward. Government information that may assist developers in considering potential locations includes the UK Windspeed Database and the document "Assessing the Potential of Wind Energy Projects: Notes for Developers," both available on the DTI website.

Liquid Petroleum Gas

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, how many petrol stations in Scotland sell liquid petroleum gas, broken down by local authority area. [74968]

Mr. Wilson: The Liquid Petroleum Gas Association (LPGA) inform the Department that there is currently a total of 108 Scottish Autogas public refuelling stations, of which 52 are located at petrol stations.

On basis of data on the LPGA website these petrol stations with local Authority location, are as follows:

Glasgow	— 10	Western Isles	— 1
Aberdeenshire	— 8	Moray	— 1
Highland Region	— 5	East Lothian	— 1
Dumfries & Galloway	— 3	Stirling	— 1
Fife	— 3	Dundee City	— 1
Lanarkshire	— 3	East Ayrshire	— 1
West Lothian	— 3	Dunbartonshire	— 1
Falkirk	— 2	North Ayrshire	— 1
City of Edinburgh	— 2	Argyll & Bute	— 1
Scottish Borders	— 2
Angus	— 2

Electricity Supply (Hertfordshire)

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, if she will take steps to assist the homes in Herefordshire that have been without electricity for more than five days. [79981]

Mr. Wilson: I understand that all those who were cut off from electricity supply as a result of the storms have now been re-connected. Customers who have been cut off may apply to their suppliers for compensation.

Initially, it will be for the companies themselves to decide whether compensation should be offered. However, consumers can challenge non-payment through Energywatch and Ofgem. In the determination of such disputes, Ofgem would apply three tests:

whether severe weather occurred and whether it resulted in the interruption of the customers' supply;

whether the company took reasonable steps to prevent the severe weather causing an interruption to the customer's supply; and whether the restoration process undertaken by the company was reasonable given the circumstances.

Sudanese Oil

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what plans her Department has to promote the suspension of (a) oil extraction and (b) the trading of Sudanese oil pending the signing of a sustainable peace agreement in the Sudan. [79445]

Mr. Wilson: The Department do not have any policy to halt commercial interests in Sudan. In general this Government believe that multilateral action is more effective than unilateral sanctions.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what advice is being given to UK companies involved in the (a) extraction and (b) trading of Sudanese oil. [79444]

Mr. Wilson: The Department gives full and frank advice to UK companies involved in the (a) extraction and (b) trading of Sudanese oil based on the current security situation in Sudan. We have no ongoing campaign promoting investment in the Sudanese oil industry, nor do we have any policy to halt commercial interests.

Sellafield

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which counties of the UK have been most affected by radiological leaks from Sellafield. [77545]

Margaret Beckett: I have been asked to reply.

There have been a small number of radiological leaks from Sellafield. Although these have not been radiologically significant, the Environment Agency monitors such events closely and takes appropriate regulatory action. The areas affected are close to Sellafield in Cumbria. No other counties have been affected.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which recent representation she has had from Nordic countries on radiological pollution from Sellafield. [77543]

Margaret Beckett: I have been asked to reply.

Over the past 18 months, the Government have received a number of representations from Nordic countries about discharges of technetium-99 from Sellafield. My Department, jointly with the Department of Health, has responsibility for the regulatory regime under which such discharges are controlled.

Representations have been received from both the Governments of Norway, Finland, Denmark and Sweden and organisations representing fisheries industries in Scandinavia. The representations have centred on concerns that technetium-99, which does not occur naturally but is discharged from Sellafield, can be detected at very low levels, in marine organisms off the coasts of Scandinavian countries. All radioactive discharges from a site such as Sellafield have to be made within the limits of discharge authorizations set by the Environment Agency. The current levels of discharge of technetium-99 are well within the relevant discharge limit. At Ministers' request, the Environment Agency has recently reviewed the discharges of technetium-99 and made recommendations about how its discharge limit could be further reduced. The Government is currently considering its response to the Agency's recommendations.

DEFENCE

Military Commissions

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment he has made of the compatability of the United States President's proposed special military commissions with international human rights standards as provided in the statute of the International Criminal Court; and what procedures will be adopted by these bodies to reflect international standards in respect to protection of the right to a fair trial; [17755]

(2) what international rules govern the handover of prisoners of war to the jurisdiction of (a) state parties and (b) to non-state parties that (i) are not party to international rules governing use of torture, inhuman or degrading treatment and (ii) may subject individuals to the death penalty. [17754]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

MoD Estate

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel are working for private companies working on contract on the MoD estate; what the cost to these companies is of employing these officers; what his Department charges for the service personnel per hour; and if he will make a statement. [26708]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Parliamentary Questions

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many written parliamentary questions regarding private finance initiatives have been tabled since 1 January 2000; and in how many of these information has not been provided on the grounds of commercial confidentiality. [31856]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contracts his Department has had since 1997 with (a) Arthur Andersen and (b) Accenture for (i) accountancy, (ii) audit and (iii) consultancy work; and what staff have been seconded (A) to his Department and (B) from her Department to these firms. [32425]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations which previously held contracts with his Department (a) won new contracts at the culmination of the existing contracts and (b) won new contracts after a period of inactivity with his Department in each of the past five years; [38757]

(2) for which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations have won new contracts with (a) his Department and (b) executive agencies in each of the past five years; [38756]

(3) if he will list the 30 largest contracts awarded by his Department from (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999, (c) May 1999 to April 2000, (d) May 2000 to April 2001 and (e) May 2001 to the latest date, indicating in each case the values of the contracts and the companies with which the contracts were placed. [38758]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 28 February 2002]: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Simon Hughes MP: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, if she will publish the responses he receives to the consultation on the Criminal Justice White Paper, and place them in the Library. [79622]

Yvette Cooper: The responses will be published in due course.

CABINET OFFICE

Art Loans

David Davis: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office, to how many Ministers paintings are loaned from (a) the National Gallery of England, (b) the National Gallery of Scotland (c) the National Portrait Gallery. (d) the Royal Academy and (e) the National Maritime Museum. [78644]

Mr. Alexander: Decisions on works of art in Ministerial Private Offices are made between Ministers and the Government Art Collection based in the Department of Culture Media and Sport which holds a central list.

None of the works of art hanging in my office and that of my right honourable and noble Friend the Minister for Cabinet Office and Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster are on loan from any of the institutions listed.

Honours

Andrew George: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office, what categories of gallantry honour are awarded by the United Kingdom. [79547]

The Prime Minister: I am replying to this question as it relates to matters for which I am responsible.

In addition to the various categories of gallantry honour available to the Services and the Armed Forces, there are four levels of award for civilian gallantry:

Level 1	The George Cross[1] This award is granted only for actions of gallantry of the greatest heroism or for the most conspicuous courage in circumstances of extreme danger. It may be granted posthumously but is restricted to British subjects.
Level 2	The George Medal This award is granted for gallantry of an extremely high order. It may be granted posthumously and is not restricted to British subjects.
Level 3	The Queen's Gallantry Medal This award is granted for gallantry of a high order. It may be granted posthumously and is not restricted to British subjects.
Level 4	The Queen's Commendation for Bravery and The Queen's Commendation for Bravery in the Air These awards are granted for gallantry not up to the foregoing standard but entailing risk to life and meriting national recognition. Both awards may be granted posthumously and are not restricted to British subjects.

Note:
[1] The Victoria Cross is the first level military award for gallantry, and the standard set for the GC should reflect a similar degree of heroism. (The military Conspicuous Gallantry Cross is the military equivalent to the GM; the DSC, Military Cross and DFC to the QGM; and Mention-in-despatches to the Queen's Commendation.)

Andrew George: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office, how many gallantry honours have been awarded and how many of those awarded posthumously, in each of the past 10 years for which records are available. [79548]

The Prime Minister: I am replying to this question as it relates to matters for which I am responsible.

Figures for gallantry awards during the years 1992–2002 are as follows:

	George Cross	George Medal[1]	Queen's Gallantry Medal[1]	Queen's Commendation for Bravery[1]
1992	Nil	2	2	36
1993	Nil	2(1)	13(1)	41
1994	Nil	1(1)	7(1)	58
1995	Nil	2(1)	14(1)	57(2)
1996	Nil	2(2)	17(2)	56(1)
1997	Nil	2(1)	9(3)	20(1)
1998	Nil	1	6(2)	18
1999	Nil	Nil	Nil	7
2000	Nil	2(2)	1	22
2001	Nil	1	1(1)	11
2002	Nil	Nil	1	4(1)
	Nil	15(8)	71(11)	330(5)

Note:
[1] Figures in brackets indicate the number of these awards that were made posthumously.

Andrew George: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many posthumous gallantry honours have been awarded to (a) non-UK citizens, (b) UK citizens for acts of gallantry outside the UK and (c) non-UK citizens who had previously been citizens of the UK in the last 10 years. [79546]

The Prime Minister: I am replying to this question as it relates to matters for which I am responsible.

Statistical records do not indicate the nationality of the recipients of honours, nor are they kept in a form which indicate the country in which the acts of gallantry took place.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Childcare

Ms Munn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, when the Inter Departmental Childcare Review will publish its findings. [79785]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The report from the Inter Departmental Childcare Review led by my noble friend Baroness Ashton, the Under Secretary of State with responsibility for sure start, early years and childcare, is being published today. The key conclusions of the report build on the announcement by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Spending Review statement on 15 July. The increased spending for childcare will lead to: the creation of at least 250,000 new childcare places by 2005–06, on top of the earlier target of new places for 1.6 million children by 2004; the establishment of new children's centres to provide childcare, family support and health services in one centre, reflecting the early lessons of Sure Start, to benefit up to 650,000 children in disadvantaged areas by 2006.

In addition the integration of responsibility for childcare, early years education and Sure Start within a new interdepartmental unit will ensure new services will be co-ordinated to best meet the needs of children, families and communities.

Copies of the report have been placed in the Vote Office, Printed Paper Office and the Libraries

Ms Munn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when the Inter Departmental Childcare Review will publish its findings. [79785]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The report from the Inter Departmental Childcare Review led by my noble friend the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Sure Start, Early Years and Childcare is being published today. Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he will publish the report on the review of childcare by the Performance and Innovation Unit. [78594]

Ian Lucas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures are in place to assist students in full-time education to fund child care. [78792]

Margaret Hodge: Specific childcare funding of £36 million is available through the Learner Support Funds (LSF) to all post 16 Further Education Institutions (FEIs). Students in colleges can access funding of up to £4000 for each child for each year of study. Students in school and college 6th forms have access to the same level of funding through a pilot scheme which is aimed at lone parents. FEIs also have the further flexibility to use their general LSF to top up childcare funding and to meet other additional costs, such as transport to childminders.

A childcare grant was introduced in September 2001 to help full-time higher education student parents with childcare costs. The childcare grant covers the whole year, paying 85 per cent. of actual childcare costs for 40 weeks during term times and short vacations and 70 per cent. of actual costs for 12 weeks during the student's long vacation. In the academic year 2002–03, a student parent with one child may receive a childcare grant of up to £5,724 (with two or more children up to £8,480). This may be supplemented by other dependants grants and discretionary support.

Option 5

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many letters were received in support of Option 5 from (a) constituents and (b) schools in the F40 authorities. [79440]

Mr. Leslie: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have received around 55,000 letters responding to the Formula Grant Review. The majority, around 53,000, are part of the campaign run by the F40 group of authorities, who have asked for a further option to be developed for education funding. However, we do not record the details of the senders of campaign letters as a matter of course. For this reason, and since very many of those 53,000 letters are multiple copies of the same letter sent by the same people to different Ministers, it is not possible to provide a more detailed analysis except at disproportionate cost.

We are currently taking decisions on the new system to replace SSAs. As we do so we are carefully considering the full range of evidence, pressures and points that have been put to us.

School Improvement Grant

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what grants were made through the school improvement grant in each local education authority in 2001–02. [79470]

Mr. Miliband: A total of £213 million was available through the Standards Fund School Improvement Grant in the 2001–02 Financial Year. Individual allocations, including the contributions from local education authorities, are shown in the following table.

Sixty per cent. of the grant is devolved to all maintained schools to raise levels of pupil attainment by funding activities in School Development, Post-Ofsted and Raising Attainment Plans. Fifteen per cent. of the grant is targeted at schools in special measures and secondary schools facing challenging circumstances to bring about urgent improvements. Five per cent. of the grant was to support direct interventions in schools facing challenging circumstances. The remainder is designed to achieve the priorities set out in local education authorities' Educational Development Plans.

Higher Education

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to the answer of 21 October, Official Report, column 38W, what the annual cost to public funds is of each higher education access measure listed. [79971]

Margaret Hodge: The relevant figures are:

Excellence Challenge—£69.6 million (2002–03)

Access/Hardship Funds—£85.5 million (2002–03)

Loans for part-time students (excluding Open University Students)—£1.3 million (2001–02)

2001–02 costs for the childcare grant; and the travel, books and equipment grant will be available in Spring 2003.

Teachers

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of (a) the number and (b) the percentage of teachers (i) passing the threshold for performance related pay and (ii) rising up the enhanced pay spine having passed the threshold. [79471]

Mr. Miliband: Over 200,000 teachers applied and were successful in Round 1 of Performance Threshold (97 per cent. of applications) and a further 31,000 successfully achieved threshold status in Round 2 (95 per cent. of applications to date). Teachers who were placed on point 1 of the Upper Pay Scale in Round 1 were first eligible to progress to point 2 in September 2002. It is too early to compile details of the numbers who have done so at present.

Children's Fund

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which programmes are being funded by the Children's Fund; what the results have been so far; and what further evaluation is (a) underway and (b) planned. [78329]

Mr. Denham: The Children's Fund is responsible for implementation of 149 Children's Fund programmes (Annex A) across England. The Fund is being rolled out in three waves, and to date 40 plans in Wave 1 and 50 plans in Wave 2 have been approved. The remaining 59 plans in Wave 3 will be submitting proposals at the end of the year, and approved plans will begin operating from April 2003. Programmes bring together local voluntary organisations, statutory agencies, community and faith groups, children and young people and their families to deliver a range of locally co-ordinated preventive services for 5–13 year olds at risk. Examples of activities include bi-lingual home/school liaison projects, helping children with behavioural difficulties, managing the transition between primary and secondary school, tackling truancy and promoting community cohesion through developing positive perceptions about different cultures.

The Children and Young People's Unit gather information on all services supported by the Children's Fund on a quarterly basis. The most recent information available from 38 out of 40 Wave 1 partnerships shows that 584 services were supported during April–June 2002 (Annex B). No information was gathered from Wave 2 partnerships for April–June 2002 because the majority of partnerships only received approval in April 2002. The CYPU is gathering service information on all Wave 1 and 2 partnerships for the period July–September 2002, and this information should be available later this year. It is too soon for the programme to provide an accurate indication of the direct impact on children and their families, but early feedback from children, parents, teachers and other professionals is positive. Individual programmes are already making a difference in improving school attendance, tackling behavioural problems and promoting positive parenting.

The Children and Young People's Unit are in the process of selecting a contractor for a national evaluation of the Children's Fund, and work is expected to begin early in 2003. This will draw on the results of local evaluations of achievement against measurable targets which individual partnerships are required to carry out.

Schools Performance

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will rank each local education authority according to its performance on Key Stage 2 and 3 SATS results for the last three available years, including the preliminary results for 2002; and which local education authorities did not achieve 33 per cent. of pupils obtaining above average scores in each Key Stage 2 subject. [78761]

Mr. Miliband [holding answer 5 November 2002]: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

QCA

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills in respect of how many schools each year (a) complaints and (b) reports of incorrect SATS results reached the QCA; in which local education authorities those complaints and reports occurred; and how the QCA dealt with these complaints. [78772]

Mr. Miliband [holding answer 5 November 2002]: The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA) does not maintain a central log of volume or nature of correspondence. All correspondence received at QCA is responded to and dealt with by the relevant team or division. It is therefore not possible to give the figures requested without incurring disproportionate cost.

The procedures for dealing with complaints fall within QCA's Customer Service Charter and are responded to within the 5-day turn-around time described in the charter. QCA replies to any general complaints under their Customer Service Charter. Where schools have concern about the quality of marking of their pupils' scripts and consider that they may have been awarded an incorrect level, a review of marking can be requested. The arrangements for seeking a review of marking are included in QCA's Schools' Guide, sent to schools each year. An application for a review of marking is considered by a panel of senior markers led by the Lead Chief Marker for the subject. Any re-marking that occurs as part of the review procedure is undertaken by a review or senior marker.

The number of reviews of marking requested in 2002 is not yet available although early estimates have not shown any significant increase on previous years' figures. Figures for 2001 are available in the Standards Reports published by QCA and will be placed in the House of Commons Library. Figures for 2002 will also be placed in the Library when available.

SATS

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will place the guidance on procedures for the conduct and integrity of SATS tests in the Library with the arrangements for monitoring the inplementation of that guidance. [78763]

Mr. Miliband [holding answer 5 November 2002]: The guidance on procedures for the conduct and integrity of the National Curriculum tests is contained in the:

2003 Assessment and Reporting Arrangements booklets for Key Stages 1, 2 & 3;

Guidance on Administering the Years 7 and 8 Tests booklet;

Teacher Packs which accompany the actual test materials and re-state the guidance in the Assessment and Reporting Arrangement booklets; and

Key Stage 1, 2 and 3 Schools Guides.

The instruction for monitoring the implementation of the guidance is contained in the Test Security and Administration Monitoring Visits to Schools form.

We will place copies of current guidance in the House of Commons Library.

Individual Learning Allowance

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much money claimed by contractors under the ILA scheme remains unpaid. [79852]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department contracted with Capita Business Services Ltd to deliver the Individual Learning Account (ILA) programme. Since closure of the programme, Capita have worked closely with the Department on the wind down of the original programme and to assist in the development of the successor scheme. We have now agreed with Capita that, because we are undertaking a fundamental review of the funding of adult learning, their work on the successor scheme is complete and we have agreed to terminate our contract with them. The Department is discussing settlement terms with Capita.

Learning providers, who were not contracted to the Department, were required to register with Capita's ILA Centre. Currently £17.3 million is withheld from 268 learning providers.

Learning and Skills Council

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many square feet of office space are occupied by the Worcester office of the Learning and Skills Council; and how many square feet will be occupied by the Council in its new Worcester Office; [79481]

(2) how many staff are employed in the Worcester office of the Learning and Skills Council; [79485]

(3) what the cost is of the new office space to which the Worcester office of the Learning and Skills Council is moving; and when it will move. [79486]

Margaret Hodge: These are matters for the Learning and Skills Council. John Harwood, the Council's Chief Executive will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information requested and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

Student Loans

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) if the Government will raise the repayment threshold for student loans; [79544]

(2) if his Department will reintroduce targeted maintenance support for those students from the poorest backgrounds. [79532]

Margaret Hodge: In January we will publish a strategy document setting out our vision for the development and reform of higher education, including the outcome of the review of student support. It would not be right to pre-empt it here by saying what is or is not planned.

Student Assessment

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on what the OECD PISA 2000 survey is measuring. [79435]

Mr. Miliband: The main purpose of the Programme for International Student Assessment 2000 (PISA) study is to assess the knowledge and skills of 15-year-olds in three broad areas of literacy: reading, mathematics and science. It aims to assess the extent to which young people can use their knowledge and skills to meet the challenges they are likely to encounter in adult life. PISA 2000 focused on the reading literacy domain.

Top-up Fees

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1), what assessment he has made of the introduction of top-up fees for some higher education institutions in other countries; [79450]

(2) what assessment he has made of the potential impact on student access to higher education of introducing top-up fees; [79451]

(3) what evidence his Department has collated on the extent to which top-up fees for students will affect access to higher education. [79531]

Margaret Hodge: We have announced our intention to publish in January a strategy document setting out our vision for the development and reform of higher education, including the outcome of the review of student support. It would not be right to say now what evidence we have been considering or what analyses we have undertaken.

Teaching Assistants

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was spent through the Standards Fund on teaching assistants in each local education authority in 2001–02. [79469]

Mr. Miliband: Details of Standards Fund expenditure by local education authorities for 2001–02 are not held centrally. Some £197m was made available to authorities in 2001–02 through Standards Fund grant for the recruitment and training of teaching assistants, as set out below. 95 per cent. of this grant was was required to be devolved to schools. Schools have freedom to move funding between Standards Fund headings according to their own detailed needs and priorities.

School Grants

Patsy Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what (a) the formula grant and (b) the spending per head in (i) primary and (ii) secondary schools in F40 authorities is in 2002–03. [79441]

Mr. Miliband: The following tables show the Standard Spending Assessment and specific/special grants per head in f40 authorities in 2002–03. Information on actual spending will not be available until the autumn of 2003:

Golden Hello

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teachers in each local education authority were entitled to a golden hello in 2001–02. [79467]

Mr. Miliband: The information is not available in the form requested. The table shows provisional data on the number of claims for reimbursement of Golden Hello payments received by my Department in respect of the 2001–02 financial year. The payments comprise a mixture of "old-style", £2,500 Golden Hellos paid on appointment to a relevant post and "new-style", £4,000 Golden Hellos paid on successful completion of induction. The number of newly-qualified teachers who were eligible to receive an "old-style" payment in 2001–02, but exercised their right to claim a "new-style" Golden Hello later is not known.

Newly Qualified Teachers

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many newly qualified teachers in each local education authority were entitled to induction support in 2001–02. [79468]

Mr. Miliband: All Newly Qualified Teachers (NQTs) who take up a post of one term or more in a maintained school, or non-maintained special school, are entitled to induction. This includes a 10 per cent. reduced timetable, ongoing support and guidance, and an individually tailored induction programme. NQTs can also undertake induction in independent schools and sixth-form colleges, although there is no statutory obligation to do so in such institutions.

The information on the number of NQTs undertaking induction in each LEA is now held by the General Teaching Council for England (GTCE). The information for the academic year 2001–2002 will be available in the next few days and I will write to the hon. Member as soon as I have it.

Teachers (Warning Notices)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills on how many occasions in each local education authority section 15 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 has been invoked for (a) warning notices and (b) subsequent formal interventions. [79562]

Mr. Miliband: The Department does not routinely collect information on the number of formal warnings issued under section 15 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998, nor on the number of these that lead to the subsequent use of the intervention powers by local authorities.

Any decisions to issue such warnings and to use such powers are for local education authorities. Statutory guidance on the use of formal warning notices was given in Annex 2 of the Code of Practice on Local Education Authority-School Relations in February 2001. A copy of this guidance is in the Library.

Swimming Lessons

Patsy Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what steps are being taken to ensure that schools provide sufficient curriculum time for school swimming in order to meet National Curriculum targets; [79276]

(2) when she will provide further details of the increased training of PE teachers in swimming and water safety announced on 17 October; [79277]

(3) how many children fail to meet National Curriculum standards in swimming at age 11; what criteria will be used to select the areas for remedial swimming pilots as announced on 17 October; and what funding will be made available for this; [79278]

(4) what figures she collates on how many schools ask for parental contributions for curriculum swimming lessons. [79182]

Mr. Miliband: We are developing a package of measures to deliver our commitment to enhance the take up of sporting opportunities by 5 to 16-year-olds by increasing the percentage of school children who spend a minimum of 2 hours each week during term time on high-quality PE and school sport. Our Swimming Strategy was announced on 17 October. Part of that Strategy, the Swimming Charter which will be published in 2003, will provide non-statutory guidance to schools on how much time to allocate for swimming specifically as part of this commitment to enhance sporting opportunities for children. Other details of the strategy, including the criteria to be used to select the areas for remedial swimming pilots, funding to be made available and details of increased training for PE teachers in swimming and water safety, are being developed. The Department does not collect data on how many schools ask for parental contributions for curriculum swimming lessons. Some 20 per cent. of children aged 11 years old fail to meet National Curriculum standards in swimming (Swimming In Key Stage 2: An Inspection Report on Standards and Provision; OFSTED, 2000).

Higher Education

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skill what definition of higher education is used in the context of his Department's target of increasing participation in higher education towards an entry rate of 50 per cent. of 18 to 30-year-olds by 2010. [78381]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 31 October 2002]: Progress towards the target is measured by the number of first time entrants to higher education aged 18–30, as a proportion of the relevant population. The target covers all courses of one year or more above A level and its equivalents that lead to a recognised higher education qualification.

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what projections he has made of the proportion of 18 to 30-year-olds who will experience higher education courses in each year until 2010. [78382]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 31 October 2002]: A wide range of alternative scenarios, based on different assumptions about the future impact of current policies on demand for higher education are being considered. At this stage we are confident that there will be sufficient growth in demand from young people with the appropriate entry qualifications for higher education to enable us to reach the 50 per cent. target. Provisional figures suggesting a 2 per cent. increase in the number of home domiciled UCAS accepted applications this autumn to UK higher education institutions, shows we are continuing to make progress.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what evidence the Government collated on the impact of introducing top-up fees for students on access to higher education, with special reference to foreign examples; [78693]

(2) how she plans to consult students on the review of higher education. [78694]

Margaret Hodge: We will publish a strategy document in January setting out our vision for the development and reform of higher education, including the outcome of the student support review. As part of the review we are considering a wide range of evidence but we clearly cannot pre-empt the strategy document at this stage. Information on how interested parties can respond to the document will be made available when it is published.

Schools (Essex)

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, if he will adopt policies to ensure that no schools in Essex suffer a cash budget cut in the next financial year. [78477]

Mr. Miliband: In introducing the new system of LEA funding for 2003–04, we will implement the pledge that no local education authority will lose out in real terms in 2003–04. The Education Act 2002 incorporates a reserve power that allows the Secretary of State for Education and Skills to set a minimum budget for an authority's schools, if the budget proposed by an authority is seriously inadequate. Changes in the funding of individual schools depend very largely on changes in their pupil numbers. It is open to LEAs, if they wish, to include factors in their school funding formulae which have the effect of protecting individual schools from excessive year-to year reductions in their budget shares.

Pupil Spending

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what (a) the actual revenue spending per child at (i) primary and (ii) secondary level and (b) the standard spending assessments were in each local education authority in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [79334]

Mr. Miliband: Net current expenditure per child is available for years up to 2000–01, so the last five years' figures are from 1996–97 to 2000–01. Standard Spending Assessments are available up to 2002–03, so figures are provided from 1996–97 to 2002–03. This information is contained in tables which have been placed in the Library. The figures are shown by local education authority area and are in cash and real terms.

Pupil Referral Units

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils were educated in pupil referral units, and for how many hours on average per week, in (a) the London Borough of Enfield, (b) Greater London and (c) England and Wales in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [78080]

Mr. Miliband: The available information is shown in the following table.

Annual Schools Census

Information is collected on the average amount of contact time which is spent by pupils of different ages in Pupil Referral Units (PRUs) in a typical week. As the contact times are recorded in bands, the data cannot be readily averaged or aggregated. Nevertheless, the figures indicate that between 40–45 per cent. of the 312 PRUs nationally reported average contact time for solely registered pupils of 20 hours or more per week. Of the 47 PRUs in London, over 50 per cent. had average contact times with pupils of 20 hours or more per week. The 2 PRUs in Enfield LEA generally had average contact time with pupils of between 13 and 19 hours per week.

Equivalent contact times for dually registered pupils will generally be less than those for solely registered pupils.

The pupils in PRUs have varying needs and are enrolled there for a variety of reasons and this will include pupils who have been permanently excluded. From September 2002 all LEAs are required to provide full time education for all permanently excluded pupils.

I refer the hon. Member to the Welsh Assembly for information on pupils in Wales.

PRIME MINISTER

Focus Group Research

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister what use he and his Department has made of focus group research since June 2001; if he will identify for each research project the topics covered, the person or organisation carrying out the research, and the total cost; and if he will publish the research on his Department's website. [74996]

The Prime Minister: My office has not commissioned any focus group research since June 2001.

E-Mail

Sue Doughty: To ask the Prime Minister what e-mail address members of the public may use to contact him. [79661]

The Prime Minister: At present there is no e-mail address by which members of the public can contact me. However an address will be made available in the new year.

Policy Advisers

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he will make a statement on the protocols covering discussions between policy advisers in 10 Downing Street and ministers; [79047]

(2) Under what circumstances policy advisers within 10 Downing Street are able to direct (a) Ministers and (b) officials within other Departments. [79046]

The Prime Minister: Discussions between policy advisers in 10 Downing Street and Ministers and civil servants in other Departments are conducted in accordance with the Ministerial Code, the Civil Service Code and the Code of Conduct for Special Advisers.

Policy advisers do not have powers of direction.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what recent discussions he has had with President Chirac and Chancellor Schroeder on military invasion of Iraq without fresh UN authorisation. [79563]

The Prime Minister: I regularly discuss Iraq with my EU colleagues, most recently during the European Council at Brussels on 24–25 October. I reported the outcome to the House in my statement of 28 October 2002.

Deaths (Soldiers)

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Prime Minister, if he will call an independent public inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the deaths of soldiers in army barracks in the UK since 1990. [79129]

The Prime Minister: It would be inappropriate to undertake any such inquiry whilst the current police investigations into the deaths at Deepcut continue. In the meantime, I am fully aware of the concerns that have been raised about the circumstances surrounding the deaths of soldiers in Army barracks in the United Kingdom.

There are a number of issues being taken forward by the Ministry of Defence in response to the concerns that have been raised about deaths of soldiers in army barracks in the UK. This work includes an appraisal of initial training of non-Officer recruits in all three services. The Defence Committee has also indicated its intention to conduct an inquiry into the general conditions at Deepcut. Following the conclusion of the police investigations into the deaths at Deepcut, the Army will also convene internal Boards of Inquiry into the deaths of Privates Geoff Gray and James Collinson.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Fire Services

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many fire appliances dedicated for training purposes there are in England and Wales, broken down by (a) fire brigade area and (b) local authority. [79675]

Mr. Leslie: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not hold information centrally on the number of fire appliances dedicated for training purposes; however, this information is published by The Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy (CIPFA) who provide a statistical information service. The information can be found broken down by fire authority, but not fire brigade, at page 10 of their publication entitled Fire Service Statistics 2001 (SIS reference 01.02). A copy is available in the Libraries of the House.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many fire stations there are in North East London; how many fire engines are located in them; how many Green Goddesses would be expected to cover the area in the event of these fire engines not being deemed to be available due to a national strike of firefighters; and if he will make a statement. [78463]

Mr. Raynsford: The London Fire Brigade has forty-one fire engines at twenty-six fire stations in the London Boroughs of Havering, Hackney, Waltham Forest, Newham, Barking & Dagenham, Redbridge and Tower Hamlets.

Emergency cover in Greater London is currently planned to consist of a number of elements including 90 Green Goddess crews, 20 breathing apparatus teams (BARTs), a rescue team equipped with specialist equipment (a REST) and the police. Of these, sixteen Green Goddesses and four BARTs would be located in the above boroughs, with a further seven Green Goddesses and two BARTs located just outside those boundaries.

The provision of MoD emergency fire cover has been planned in consultation with the Chief Fire Officer to minimise call-out times and maximise the availability of a range of firefighting capabilities.

The command and operational structure for emergency fire cover has been designed to enable maximum flexibility and use of available resources, whether from within a county or from assets deployed nearby in neighbouring counties. The deployment of firefighters will be based on the assessment of how best to respond to an emergency in the quickest time possible. The deployment will be kept under review.

Housing

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the level of empty (a) housing association and (b) council housing was in each local authority in England in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2001; and if he will make a statement on the Government's plans to reduce the level of empty housing association and council housing. [79677]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested has been placed in the Library. The table presents data showing the vacancy rates of local authority and Registered Social Landlord stock (respectively) in each local authority in England at 1 April 1997 and 2001. Note that council stock owned by an authority, which is outside their local authority area, is not included in these figures.

Day to day management, including the letting of empty properties, is a matter for individual housing associations and councils. We expect those with high levels of vacant housing to set challenging targets for reductions through improved management performance or action to improve or dispose of unpopular stock.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what evidence his Department has collated on the use of repeated applications for planning permission by companies and individuals in a specified location; [78998]

(2) what consideration has been given to the setting of time limits between applications for planning permission by companies and individuals in a specified location. [78999]

Mr. McNulty: Local planning authorities already have the power to decline to determine a planning application which is the same or substantially the same as an application which, within the previous two years, the Secretary of State has called in and refused, or has dismissed on appeal.

As announced in our Statement "Sustainable Communities: Delivering through planning" we intend to extend this power so that a local planning authority can also decline to determine an application which is the same or substantially the same as an application which has either been refused by the authority within the last two years and there has been no appeal to the Secretary of State, or has not been finally determined. The two year time limit was chosen since this is the same as that which applies to a local planning authority's existing powers to decline to determine repeated applications.

The Planning Green Paper said that some developers use repeated applications to wear down opposition to undesirable development. This is damaging to people's confidence in the planning process and inefficient. Of those who responded to our proposal to extend local planning authorities' powers to decline to determine repeat applications, 97 per cent. were in favour.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many units of affordable housing have been built in the Portsmouth South constituency in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [78967]

Mr. McNulty: The only information available is for the local authority area of Portsmouth and for the last four years. The numbers of houses built by registered social landlords in Portsmouth were 279 in 1998–99, 37 in 1999–00, 95 in 2000–01 and 151 in 2001–02. There were no houses built by the local authority during this period.

Right to Buy

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what discussions Ministers and officials of his Department have held with members of the review team evaluating the Right to Buy scheme; what was discussed; when they were; and who the participants were; [79590]

(2) when the review of the right to buy scheme will be published; [79602]

(3) what the estimated cost is of the evaluation of the right to buy scheme being undertaken by the review team; [79604]

(4) if he will publish the (a) names and (b) qualifications of the review team undertaking the evaluation of the right to buy scheme. [79603]

Mr. McNulty: Researchers at Heriot-Watt University have been commissioned to investigate the scale, nature and impact of exploitation of the Right to Buy rules.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister research contracts are awarded through a standard procurement process, by competitive tender. The experience and skills of tenderers are assessed carefully as part of this process. This research project is subject to normal project management procedures and disciplines operated by professional and policy officials. It is subject to review by a stakeholder group drawn from housing practitioners and representatives of lending institutions and local government.

The cost of the project is £92,650, excluding VAT.

The results are expected by the end of this year, and will be published thereafter. It is standard practice for all Office of the Deputy Prime Minister research publications to include the names of the authors, and for any other researchers to be acknowledged.

Urban Summit

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, how many (a) Ministers, (b) Members of the other House taking the Labour Whip and (c) elected Labour councillors are (i) speaking and (ii) chairing themed discussions at the Urban Summit. [79342]

Mr. McNulty: In total about 150 people contributed to the Urban Summit as speakers, chairs or pannellists. There were 13 Ministers (including 3 members of the other House), 7 elected Labour Councillors (including one member of the other House) and one further member of the other House taking the Labour Whip speaking at the Urban Summit, either at plenary sessions or in themed sessions. One Minister chaired a themed session, another was chaired by a member from the other House taking the Labour whip and a third by an elected Labour Councillor.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many of the advertised (a) speakers and (b) chairmen of the themed sessions of the Urban Summit come from the private sector and are not members of Government-appointed public bodies. [79341]

Mr. McNulty: More than 23 speakers, including plenary session speakers and panellists, and 3 chairs of the themed sessions came from the private sector. Information on how many of these are members of any Government appointed bodies is not readily available.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he plans to take to disseminate the results of the Urban Summit to (a) hon. Members, (b) councillors and (c) Members of the other House belonging to the (i) Conservative and (ii) Liberal Democrat parties. [79345]

Mr. McNulty: The results of the Urban Summit will be disseminated in a variety of ways. In particular, the messages and ideas coming from the Summit are to be fed into the development of the long term plan for sustainable communities which the Deputy Prime Minister will be presenting to the House in January 2003. A report of the proceedings of the Summit will be deposited in the House of Commons library. More generally, information on the outcomes from the debate and discussion at the Summit will be posted on the Urban Summit website, www.urbansummit.gov.uk.

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the SSA is, for each local authority in England (a) by service block and (b) in total for 2002–03; what these figures would be if 2001 census data had been substituted for mid-year 2000 population estimates; and what the difference is between the two sets of figures expressed (i) in £s and (ii) as a percentage of 2002–03 SSAs (A) for the relevant service block and (B) in total. [79873]

Mr. Raynsford: The information requested has been placed in the Library of the House. The 2001 census population data have been used, as requested, rather than the mid-2001 population estimates which we intend to use to calculate the 2003–04 Formula Spending Shares (FSSs).

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, how many of the speakers and chairmen of the themed seminars of the Urban Summit are members of the (a) Conservative, (b) Liberal Democrat and (c) Labour parties. [79340]

Mr. McNulty: Speakers and chairs were invited to take part in the summit on the basis of the contribution they could make. The choice of speakers for each themed session was made in consultation with the chair of that session. We hold no information—other than for those where it is clear eg MPs, Councillors—about their membership of any political parties.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many of the advertised (a) speakers and (b) chairmen of the themed sessions are (i) Conservatives and (ii) Liberal Democrat local councillors. [79343]

Mr. McNulty: One of the speakers at a themed session was a Conservative Councillor. From the information available none of the speakers were Liberal Democrat Councillors. None of the chairs of the themed sessions were Conservative or Liberal Democrat Councillors.

Transport

Mrs. May: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Transport on the transport implications of his oral statement of 18 July. [72112]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I made clear in my statement on 18 July that the strategy I announced for sustainable communities would link policies on housing, planning, transport, education, health and regeneration. I will be having discussions with all relevant colleagues as I prepare the Communities plan.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 28 October 2002, Official Report, column 522W, on renewable energy, what discussions he has had with the Scottish Parliament about its revised planning guidance on renewable energy; and if he will make a statement. [79075]

Mr. McNulty: We are currently preparing the revised draft planning guidance on renewable energy (PPS 22). In doing so, we have been in discussion with a number of interested parties including the Scottish Executive. There will be further consultation, and discussions will continue ahead of issuing the draft guidance at the turn of the year for public consultation.

Green Belt

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many applications have been (a) received and (b) approved for development on Green Belt land since 1997, broken down by region; and if he will make a statement. [79681]

Mr. McNulty: Applications for planning permission are considered by local planning authorities in the first instance. The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Llew Smith: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Castle Point (Bob Spink) of 17 October 2002, Official Report, column 926, on the green belt, if he will list the locations and number of hectares respectively of new green belt land earmarked since June 1997. [77381]

Mr. McNulty: Since June 1997 new Green Belt has been earmarked in Development Plans in the following locations:

	Hectares
Stockport	8
Basildon	340
North Hertfordshire	3600
Dacorum	1000
North Tyneside	1672
Blyth Valley	2800
Tynedale	7300
Castle Morpeth	200
Gateshead	1500
Sunderland	520
Co Durham	12000
	30940

	Hectares
Removals from the Green Belt are:
Newcastle	543
Bradford	90
	633
Total addition	30307

Planning Guidance

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, what advice he gives local authorities and planning inspectors on how they should define whether a proposed development close to the edge of an existing conurbation is (a) an urban extension or (b) a new settlement. [77864]

Mr. McNulty: The Government's planning policies for housing are set out in PPG3 (Planning Policy Guidance note 3, Housing). PPG3 explains that planned extensions to existing urban areas are likely to prove the next most sustainable option for new housing development after building on appropriate sites within urban areas, and that new settlements can be large-scale additions to existing settlements or freestanding. PPG3 does not define urban extension or new settlement in any further detail.

The characteristics of alternative forms of new development are discussed in the 1993 Department of Environment research report Alternative Development Patterns: new settlements. Urban extensions are described as development that takes place at the edges of existing urban areas, and new settlements as urban growth that is accommodated by a new focus for development that is freestanding.

Seller's Pack

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the introduction of the Seller's Pack. [79680]

Mr. McNulty: We are committed to making it easier for people buying and selling homes through the introduction of a seller's pack, and the necessary legislation will be introduced as soon as Parliamentary time allows. The seller's pack will make the home buying and selling process more transparent and certain, and so reduce the stress and wasted costs suffered by hundreds of thousands of consumers each year when transactions fail or are delayed.

Right to Buy

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will publish the evidence on which he based his statement that the right-to-buy scheme is being abused; and if he will make a statement. [79601]

Mr. McNulty: Anecdotal evidence from various sources, including local authorities and media advertisements, strongly suggested that the right to buy rules were being exploited in some areas. Researchers at Heriot-Watt University have been commissioned to investigate the scale, nature and impact of such exploitation. The results are expected by the end of this year, and will be published thereafter. The difficulties experienced on the Ocean Estate in Stepney, East London, are well documented.

Council House Stock

Mr. Steen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the local housing authorities who have transferred council house stock amounting to fewer than 499 properties to a single alternative social landlord since 1988, and state in each case (a) the grant from Government to write off debt, (b) the total cost to the local authority in professional fees, (c) other relevant costs of the transfer and (d) the capital receipt. [78917]

Mr. McNulty: No payments have been made by the Office of Deputy Prime Minister, or its predecessor Departments, since arrangements were put in place in 1999 toward repaying local authority housing attributable debt on transfers of fewer than 499 dwellings. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not keep a record of local authorities who have transferred fewer than 499 properties to registered social landlords, the cost to the local authority of professional fees, other relevant transfer costs or capital receipts in such transfers.

Housing Authorities

Mr. Steen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, how many local housing authorities have applied for a place on the LSVT programme for each year since 1993; and how many were successful. [78915]

Mr. McNulty: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister record the number of local housing authorities who are accepted onto the Large Scale Voluntary Transfers disposals programme each year. The information for the years in question is set out in the table below.

Year of Programme	Number of Local Authorities Successfully Gaining a Place
1993	13
1994	12
1995	11
1996	5
1997	17
1998	23
1999	25
2000	22
2001	27[1]
2002	20[2]

Notes:
[1]Between 1993 and 2000 the duration of each transfer programme was one year. This period was extended to 2 years from 2001.
[2]There are 5 more authorities who have a place on the disposals programme held open for them while their schemes are further developed.

Valuation Tribunals

Mr. Swire: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to increase the powers of authority of the tribunal chairman and clerk to obtain facts and information in order to increase the parity between the appellant and the Valuation Office Agency in disputes. [79253]

Mr. Leslie: There are no plans to increase the powers of authority of valuation tribunal chairmen and clerks. Tribunals already have wide ranging powers to conduct hearings in such a manner as to ensure just handling and to adjourn hearings to enable relevant information or facts to be provided.

Government Office for London

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the annual expenditure of the Government Office for London was; how many full time employees or equivalent there were in each year since its establishment; and if he will make a statement. [79597]

Mrs. Roche: Government Office for London (GOL) Running Costs expenditure is as follows (£m):

1996–97	14.1
1997–98	13.5
1998–99	16.0
1999–2000	16.0
2000–01	13.2
2001–02	13.2

No staffing figures are available prior to 1999. Approximate full time equivalent posts from April 1999 are as follows:

April 1999	390
April 2000	370
April 2001	240
April 2002	260

The number has subsequently risen to approximately 295, chiefly due to the transfer to GOL from the Home Office of 19 crime reduction staff (in June 2002) and 10 Drug Prevention Advisory Service staff (on 1 October).

"Your Region, Your Choice"

Mr. Evans: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total cost to the taxpayer was of producing the North West Regional Assembly publication, "Your Region, Your Choice-Revitalising English Regions"; and how many copies were printed. [79706]

Mr. Raynsford: This document was produced by the North West Regional Assembly as a response to the Government's White Paper, Your Region, Your Choice; Revitalising the English Regions. The publication and its content and costs are a matter for the Assembly.

HEALTH

Faith Communities

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list projects involving faith communities which are supported by his Department. [71847]

Ms Blears: The Department recognises the diverse health needs within communities and the key role played by faith organisations, supporting National Health Service and social care organisations, to improve the health and well-being of local people. The Department's central funding should be viewed as complimentary to additional funding by local NHS and social care organisations working with local faith communities.

The Department's main funding support to voluntary / not for profit organisations is the Section 64 General Scheme under the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968.

Additionally there are smaller budgets managed by policy teams within the Department which are used to develop initiatives to improve access to healthcare, for example working through faith communities with black and minority ethnic groups on priority areas such as coronary heart disease, mental illness and cancer.

Grants Awarded, in the information provided, represents the amount of funding made available from 2002–3 onwards. The grant awarded will reflect, in some cases, the final year of a funding phase a three year funding ending in 2002–3.

Grants Awarded through Section 64 General Grants Scheme

Growth Hormone Deficiency

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what plans he has to deal with medical problems associated with growth hormone deficiency. [73351]

Jacqui Smith: Clinicians are currently able to prescribe growth hormone, also known as somatropin, to patients with growth hormone deficiency.

The National Institute of Clinical Excellence did recommend the use of growth hormone in children earlier this year. It is currently appraising the clinical effectiveness and cost effectiveness of human growth hormone in adults. There was an appeal against their 20 August 2002 final appraisal determination. This appeal has been partially upheld. Further work will be done in this area with a final decision expected early in the new year.

Oxygen Therapy

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many users of oxygen therapy there are in Huntingdonshire. [74231]

Ms Blears: The number of users of oxygen therapy is not available centrally.

Breast Cancer

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent representations he has received on the availability of taxanes; and if he will make a statement; [74214]

(2) how much was spent on taxanes for breast cancer for the most recent financial year available, broken down by (a) health authority and (b) health trusts; and if he will make a statement; [74212]

(3) what estimate he has made of the number of women benefiting from treatment for breast cancer (a) before and (b) after publication of the most recent NICE guidance; and if he will make a statement. [74213]

Ms Blears: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) published its review of taxanes (docetaxel and paclitaxel) for the treatment of breast cancer in September 2001.

There have been no recent representations on the availability of taxanes.

All health authorities have confirmed that they are implementing the NICE appraisals. However, the Department does not hold central data on the number of patients treated with a particular drug or on the amount spent on individual drugs. NICE estimate the additional cost to the National Health Service of implementing the guidance on taxanes to be around £16 million per annum for England and Wales and that around 5,000 women are likely to benefit from the guidance.

Hospital Staffing Levels

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if he will make a statement on staffing levels at Oldchurch Hospital, Romford. [75106]

Mr. Hutton: The annual workforce censuses do not provide information for individual trusts. Oldchurch hospital is part of Barking, Havering and Redbridge National Health Service Trust, which was formed in April 2001. There is therefore no comparable historical information.

The Department's vacancy survey collected information for the whole trust as at 30 March 2002. The trust has been ensuring that the impact of vacancies on the quality of care provided to its patients is minimised by being one of the first trusts in London to use the NHS Professionals service. NHS Professionals is a NHS temporary staffing service aimed at reducing reliance on expensive nursing agencies. The trust is also very active in pursuing the Improving Working Lives initiative. A steering group, with cross-trust representation, including staff-side, has been meeting since April to take forward the Improving Working Lives action plan, aimed at achieving practice status early in 2003.

Criminal Records Bureau Checks

Annette Brooke: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, what provision is being made for local authorities incurring additional costs from hiring agency staff whilst waiting for checks to be completed by the Criminal Records Bureau on permanent care workers. [77088]

Jacqui Smith: I have been asked to reply.

The National Care Standards Commission has issued guidance about taking on staff while a Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) check is being undertaken.

Before they could work in a care setting, agency staff would themselves need to undergo CRB checks. For example, under the Care Standards Act, there is an obligation to ensure a criminal records check has been obtained from the CRB in relation to all people beginning work at a care home for adults who have regular contact with the residents of the home. This includes volunteers and agency staff.

GP Training

Mr. Roger Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what plans his Department has to improve the training provision for GPs in relation to audiology and other ear, nose and throat services. [77109]

Mr. Hutton: The Government are investing significantly in training provision in the National Health Service for all staff including general practitioners (GPs). The Department and the Royal College of General Practitioners are working together to develop guidelines for the appointment of GPs with special interests. A specific guideline for the appointment of a GPs with special interests in ear, nose & throat will be published shortly. Any training implications of this will be determined locally and will depend on local service needs, national priorities and the needs of individual GPs.

Placements (Vulnerable Children)

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what proportion of the cost of specialist residential placements for vulnerable children was contributed by health authorities in (a) Dorset, (b) Somerset and (c) Hampshire in (i) 2000–01 and (ii) 2001–02; [77086]

(2) what guidance the Department gives to health authorities in England on the criteria to use when deciding how much to contribute towards the cost of specialist residential placements for vulnerable children. [77380]

Jacqui Smith: The Department has not issued guidance to the National Health Service on the cost of specialist residential placements for vulnerable children. Such funding is a matter for local determination.

The information requested for Dorset, Somerset and Hampshire is not held centrally.

Splints

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if he will make a statement on the prevalence of the free supply of splints to disabled people on the NHS (a) nationally and (b) in Gloucestershire. [76960]

Jacqui Smith: Figures are not collected centrally on the numbers of orthotic devices which are supplied through the National Health Service.

Child Protection

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what the recommended thresholds for (a) providing child protection services, (b) instigating child protection inquiries and (c) convening initial child protection conferences are. [78041]

Jacqui Smith: Where a child is suspected to be suffering, or likely to suffer significant harm, local authority social services departments are required by section 47 of the Children Act 1989 to make enquiries, to enable the local authority to decide whether it should take any action to safeguard or promote the child's welfare.

Where, following the outcome of section 47 enquiries, the agencies most involved judge that a child may continue to suffer, or to be at risk of suffering significant harm, the social services department should convene an initial child protection conference. The aim of the conference is to enable those professionals most involved with the child and family to assess all relevant information; to make judgements about the likelihood of a child suffering significant harm in future; and to decide what future action is needed to safeguard the child and promote his or her welfare, how that action will be taken forward, and with what intended outcomes.

If a decision is taken that the child is at continuing risk of significant harm, his or her name will be placed on the child protection register, and it will therefore be the case that safeguarding the child requires inter-agency help and intervention delivered through a formal child protection plan. It is also the role of the conference to formulate the outline child protection plan, in as much detail as possible.

A child's name may not be placed on the register, but he or she may nonetheless be in need of help to promote his or her health or development. In these circumstances, the conference should ensure that arrangements are in place to consider with the family, what further help and support might be offered.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reason the Chief Inspector of Social Services does not publish an annual report into how well children are being protected from harm. [78019]

Jacqui Smith: The Chief Inspector of Social Services produces an annual report to my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State on the general state of social services. This report includes a section on children's services.

The Chief Inspector also produces national reports, covering a five yearly rolling programme of in depth inspections of councils' children's services.

In addition, last Winter the social services inspectorate (SSI) led the first of an ongoing series of three yearly major inter-agency inspections of safeguards for children. The SSI designed and co-ordinated this inspection, which took place in eight local authority areas, working with the seven other statutory inspectorates who are involved with services to children and families—OFSTED, the HM Inspectorates for Prisons, Probation, Constabulary, Magistrates' Courts Services and the Crown Prosecution Service, and the Commission for Health Improvement—to look at how well local services ensure the safeguarding of children and how well they work in partnership to address child welfare concerns. The SSI drafted the report of the inspection and published it on 14 October 2002.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what proportion of children on child protection registers do not have allocated social workers. [78026]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not held centrally. However, it is of interest that all children on the child protection register in the councils visited during last winter's children's safeguards inspections had an allocated social worker.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, how many children at residential and boarding schools are on child protection registers. [78040]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to (a) establish multi-agency safeguarding teams including social workers, health professionals, police and other child professionals, (b) strengthen area child protection committees by increasing their resources and (c) establish a child safeguarding board to provide greater protection for children. [79688]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 5 November 2002]: Area child protection committee (ACPC) expenditure and administrative policy support is a matter for local agreement. As a multi-agency forum, the ACPC should be supported in its work by its main constituent agencies, reflecting the investment of each agency in activities which are of benefit to all, in particular inter-agency training.

The Joint Chief Inspectors' report Safeguarding Children, published on 14 October 2002, contains a recommendation that the Department should review the current arrangements for ACPCs to determine whether they should be established on a statutory basis to ensure adequate accountability, authority and funding.

The Government has welcomed the publication of this report. The Government recognises that there is still more to be done to ensure that the high standards of child protection are applied in every case. That is why it commissioned the Joint Chief Inspectors' report. It is also why my right hon. Friends, the Secretary of State for Health and the Home Secretary set up the statutory Inquiry, chaired by Lord Laming, into the circumstances leading up to, and surrounding, the death of Victoria Climbié. The issues raised by Victoria's case are wide-ranging, in terms of both policy and practice, and it is therefore important that we do not do anything that would pre-empt the outcome of the Inquiry. The recommendations of the Joint Chief Inspectors' report and those of the Victoria Climbié Inquiry will provide us with an authoritative basis for any reforms to child protection that may need to be made, and if radical reform is necessary we will implement it. The Government will respond to both reports after it has carefully considered them.

Suicides

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, how many suicides have occurred in accident and emergency departments in each of the past five years. [78002]

Jacqui Smith: Information is not collected centrally on the number of suicides in accident and emergency departments.

Children's Rights

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, who the Children's Rights Director is. [78042]

Jacqui Smith: The first ever Children's Rights Director for England is Dr. Roger Morgan.

The role of the Children's Rights Director, located within the National Care Standards Commission, was established by the Care Standards Act 2000. The primary role is to safeguard those children who are in receipt of a range of regulated services. These services include those provided by children's homes, independent fostering agencies, local authority fostering services, the welfare aspects of boarding schools and, in due course, residential family centres, voluntary adoption agencies and local authority adoption services.

Regulations specifying the Children's Rights Director's functions commenced on 24 May 2002 and were debated in Standing Committee on Thursday 4 July 2002.

Suicide Reduction

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what progress has been made in meeting the Saving Lives: Our Healthier Nation target on suicide reduction. [78050]

Jacqui Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Worthing, West on 18 June 2002, Official Report, column 148–149.

Child and Adolescent Mental Health

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, how many children were waiting to be referred to Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services in each quarter in the last two years. [78030]

Jacqui Smith: Information is not collected centrally in this form.

Social Services

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reason social services departments are not always contactable by accident and emergency departments during the evenings. [78025]

Jacqui Smith: It is the responsibility of local authorities to make sure that they have proper systems for responding to emergencies when they arise.

The White Paper, Modernising Social Services, reminded local authorities of the need to "provide reliable and sufficient out of hours services". In October 1999 the social services inspectorate published a report of its inspection of social services out of hours services entitled Open All Hours. The report encouraged social services managers to review their out of hours provision and contained guidance on providing out of hours services.

Spanish Nurses

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many Spanish nurses have worked in the NHS in each of the last three years in (a) the UK, (b) Lancashire and (c) the Lancashire Teaching Hospitals Trust; [77606]

(2) how many Spanish nurses are working in the NHS in (a) the UK, (b) Lancashire and (c) the Lancashire Teaching Hospitals Trust. [77605]

Mr. Hutton: Over the last two years, the Department has been working closely with the Ministrio de Sanidad y Consumo—the Spanish Ministry of Health—to give Spanish nurses the opportunity to come and work in England.

Between January 2001 and October 2002, 508 Spanish nurses have taken up positions as a result of this government to government initiative. We do not routinely collect information about overall numbers of international recruits into the National Health Service, including those from Spain

Lancashire organisations that have participated in the recruitment are Trafford General Hospital NHS Trust, Stockport NHS Trust and Trafford Acute NHS Trust. The Department does not have information on numbers currently working in NHS hospitals.

NHS Running Costs

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total running costs of NHS organisations serving (a) the Vale of York constituency and (b) North Yorkshire were in 1997; and what the total is now. [77835]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is shown in the table:

NHS Organisation	1997 (£m)	2002–2003 (£m)
North Yorkshire Health Authority	5.9	N/A
North & East Yorkshire & Northern Lincolnshire Health Authority	N/A	4.0
Harrogate Health Care NHS Trust	3.164	3.558
Scarborough and North East Yorkshire Healthcare NHS Trust	3.441	3.816
York Health Services NHS Trust	5.273	5.0
Hambleton and Richmondshire Primary Care Trust	N/A	1.890
Craven, Harrogate and Rural District Primary Care Trust	N/A	1.980
Selby and York Primary Care Trust	N/A	4.320
Scarborough, Whitby and Ryedale Primary Care Trust	N/A	2.225
Total	17.778	26.789

Sources:
North & East Yorkshire & Northern Lincolnshire Heath Authority.
The 2002–2003 costs relate to anticipated expenditure at 31 March.
Any comparisons between 1997 and 2002 would be influenced by inflation and the transfer of Trust management costs into PCTs where services have transferred, e.g. community and mental health services.

In addition, following the changes resulting from shifting the balance of power, the North & East Yorkshire & Northern Lincolnshire Health Authority (HA) covers a much wider geographic area than the former North Yorkshire HA. Many of its functions have been devolved from the former regional office of the Department.

EU Working Time Directive

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the implications of extending the Working Time Directive to junior doctors (a) for medical workforce planning and (b) on their training; and if he will make a statement. [77505]

Mr. Hutton: The impact of the European Working Time Directive (EWTD) has been taken into account with the planned expansion in the consultant workforce. The NHS Plan makes a commitment to 1,000 more specialist registrars by 2004. In addition, we have introduced a "floors and ceilings" flexibility to allow the National Health Service with an initial ceiling of an additional 540 posts for the period of 2002–2004 and this will reviewed later this year.

Many solutions to achieve EWTD compliance for junior doctors will involve other professions. Large increases in the nursing workforce and allied health professions have already been achieved and there is a commitment to maintain these levels of growth. These increases in the non-medical workforce will support the development of the non-medical practitioner roles required. The main impact of these practitioners will be in reducing the need to cover at senior house officer level.

It will be inevitable that the changes needed to achieve EWTD compliance will significantly affect the working patterns of doctors in training and also change the traditional one-to-one relationship between a training grade doctor and their consultant.

The Department is currently undertaking a consultation exercise on the Chief Medical Officer's report Unfinished Business: Proposals for reform of the Senior House Officer grade. The report provides proposals for reform of postgraduate medical training, taking into account that proposed reform would be introduced at the same time as implementation of the EWTD. The report argues that the EWTD and training reform are mutually dependent—the EWTD will require reform in training, which in turn can support implementation of the Directive.

A key proposal in Unfinished Business is that new and shorter higher specialist training programmes should be introduced which would lead to the award of an earlier certificate of completion of specialist training (CCST) for those satisfactorily completing training in the "generalist" elements of a specialty. This would have the effect increasing the flow of trained doctors.

The Department will be working with the Deans and the Royal Colleges to ensure that NHS trusts are supported in delivering training with good advice on training models and as a first step the Conference of Postgraduate Medical Deans (COPMED) has produced a document Liberating Learning. This sets out approaches to providing training in the EWTD context.

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions his Department has had with representatives of the British Medical Association concerning derogations for junior doctors from the Working Time Directive; and if he will make a statement. [77507]

Mr. Hutton: The Department of Health and the health departments of the devolved administrations have, on several occasions over the past year, held discussions with the British Medical Association junior doctors' committee about derogations for junior doctors from the European Working Time Directive (EWTD). Discussions came to a halt in July as the two sides did not reach a collective agreement on derogation. The Government intends to derogate for junior doctors from the EWTD by amending the 1998 Working Time Regulations.

Care Homes

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, how many care home places are available in the London Borough of Hillingdon; what percentage change this represents on figures for each of the last three years; and what the forecast is for care home places for the coming year. [77959]

Jacqui Smith: The number of residential and nursing care home places in Hillingdon is shown in the table at 31 March for the years 1999 to 2001. Data for 2002 is not yet available.

Forecasts of the number of care home places are not made.

Number of Residential and Nursing Care Home Places in Hillingdon at 31 March, 1999 to 2001

As at 31 March	Residential	Nursing	Total	Change Over Previous Year (%)
1999	820	460	1,270	—
2000	960	410	1,360	7%
2001	920	490	1,400	3%

Note:
1. Residential data refer to Hillingdon Local Authority; nursing data refer to Hillingdon Health Authority.

GP Recruitment

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to increase the number of GPs in the NHS. [77511]

Mr. Hutton: A range of recruitment and retention initiatives are currently in place or being developed to help increase the number of general practitioners (GPs), including: international recruitment, promoting improving working lives initiative in primary care, the delayed retirement scheme, more flexible employment arrangements through personal medical services, the recently announced extension to the flexible careers scheme to include GPs and the golden hello scheme which will shortly be extended to include qualified doctors who are not currently working in National Health Service general practice who return to take up a NHS post.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if he will make a statement on progress made in GP recruitment in the last 12 months. [77144]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 4 November 2002]: Between 30 September 2000 and 30 September 2001, the number of general practitioners (GPs), including unrestricted principals and equivalents, restricted principals, assistants, GP registrars, salaried doctors (para. 52 SFA), personal medical services others and GP retainers working in the National Health Service increased by 466. A spring census was carried out on 31 March 2002, which shows a further increase of 176.

The government has introduced and is developing a significant number of initiatives to boost the recruitment and retention of GPs. These include golden hellos to new and returning GPs, delayed retirement payments, flexible career scheme, extension of the improving working lives initiative to primary care and international recruitment.

Competition Commission

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the long-term implications of public spending of the recent judgment on Bettercare by the Competition Commission. [78416]

Jacqui Smith: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply which I gave to the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam (Mr. Burstow) on 30 October 2002.

Learning Difficulties

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, how many children in Surrey aged (a) 0 to five, (b) five to 11, (c) 11 to 16 and (d) 16 to 18 years have been diagnosed as having (i) severe learning difficulties and (ii) moderate learning difficulties at the latest date for which figures are available. [78370]

Jacqui Smith: This information is not collected centrally.

Fragile-X Syndrome

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children aged (a) 0 to five, (b) five to 11, (c) 11 to 16 and (d) 16 to 18 years have been diagnosed with fragile-X syndrome at the latest date for which figures are available. [78368]

Jacqui Smith: This information is not collected centrally. Studies have indicated that fragile-X syndrome has an incidence of about 1:4,500 in males and 1:8,000 in females.

Community Equipment Services

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what additional resources have been allocated in this financial year for community equipment services; and how this has been allocated. [78572]

Jacqui Smith: In this financial year £28 million was allocated to health authorities to help them to meet the NHS Plan targets for community equipment services. That funding has now been distributed to primary care trusts. In addition, funding was allocated to local councils for the same purpose via the personal social services settlement. For both sets of organisations the funding was apportioned and distributed as part of their baseline funding allocations.

Nurse Retention

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what determinants of job satisfaction are employed in assessing nurse retention policies. [78928]

Mr. Hutton: The Human Resources in the NHS Plan underpins all staff retention policies. It sets out how the National Health Service should become a model employer, that values its staff and improves the working life and how it should offer a model career that gives greater access to personal development underpinned by a fairer pay system. All of the measures contained in the Human Resources in the NHS Plan will help to improve the job satisfaction and morale of all of the staff employed in the NHS.

Asthma Deaths

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if his Department will ask primary care trusts to introduce enquiries into asthma deaths as a matter of course; [78624]

(2) what plans his Department has to introduce confidential enquiries into asthma deaths as a means of research into prevention and cure of this condition. [78623]

Jacqui Smith: There are currently no plans to require primary care trusts to introduce enquiries into asthma deaths or to extend the range of confidential enquiries to include asthma deaths.

Management of asthma mainly takes place in primary care. The chronic disease management programme, introduced in July 1993, provides arrangements for health promotion under the general medical services national contract for general practitioners. People with asthma will also benefit from the emerging expert patients programme which will—via the National Health Service—provide training in self-management skills for people with long term chronic conditions.

The Medical Research Council, which is funded by the Department of Trade and Industry, funds medical research as part of the Government's funding of the research base. The Department of Health spend on directly commissioned research projects on asthma since 1997 is an estimated £7.24 million.

The number of deaths from asthma is gradually declining. The Office of National Statistics report that the International Classification of Disease, ICD9 493 (Asthma) recorded for England and Wales that in 1998 there were 1366 deaths caused by asthma and by 2000 that had fallen to 1272 deaths.

Barnet Hospital

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress on visiting times for accident and emergency services at Barnet Hospital. [78901]

Mr. Hutton: Improving patients experience of emergency care is essential. In light of this, Reforming Emergency Care was launched in October 2001, supported by a £118 million investment. It sets a long term programme of reform supported by extra investment and new capacity to address one of the public's key concerns about the National Health Service—waiting in accident and emergency (A&E).

A&E waiting times at Barnet General Hospital have improved steadily through the year from an average of only 45 per cent. of patients being seen within four hours in the quarter ending 30 June 2002 to over 70 per cent. being seen within four hours during October 2002.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans there are to discontinue services provided at Barnet Hospital; and if he will make a statement. [78899]

Mr. Hutton: There are no plans to discontinue services provided at Barnet hospital.

Quality Protects Programme

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress of the Quality Protects Programme. [78974]

Jacqui Smith: Quality Protects is the Government's five-year programme to ensure that children in need, including looked after children, receive the care, safety, security and chances in life that all children deserve. We are currently in the fourth year of the programme. It has been popular—with local government, with the voluntary sector and with children and young people themselves—and has led to new and improved services for children across the country.

There is real evidence that it is beginning to improve children's lives. For example, since Quality Protects began we have seen:

More corporate working across councils and greater understanding of councils' and councillors' role as "corporate parents";

More partnership working with voluntary organisations;

An increase in the proportion of children looked after placed for adoption—3,100 looked after children were adopted in England in the year to 31 March 2001, 12 per cent. more than in the previous year and 39 per cent. more than in 1998–99;

Children in care experiencing fewer placements—16 per cent. of children now experience three or more placements in one year as opposed to 19 per cent. in 1997–98;

A reduction in the number of re-registrations on the child protection register from 20 per cent. in 1997–98 to 14per cent. in 2000–2001;

More support being given to care leavers;

More councils listening to children and young people in their care;

Improvements in the collecting and use of management information.

We shall shortly be publishing an overview report of councils' fourth annual management action plans, which set out their progress in and future plans for implementing Quality Protects.

Social Workers

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 21 October 2002, Official Report, column 128W, on social workers, if he will provide the provisional recruitment and departure figures referred to. [78832]

Jacqui Smith: The number of individual applicants for social work training was 4703 in 2001. The provisional figure for 2002 is 5093.

The 2002 figure is adjusted to an estimated full year figure based on the very small number of additional applications made after October in 2001.

We do not collect centrally figures on retirements.

NHS Targets

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, how many NHS staff are armed services reservists; and what (a) assessment he has made of the impact of call up connected to the war on terrorism on NHS services and (b) adjustments will be made to current year targets in the NHS. [78713]

Mr. Hutton: The Department does not hold information centrally on the number of National Health Service staff who are armed service reservists. The Department reviews constantly its readiness to deal with demand on NHS services of this nature. The Department does not plan to make any adjustments to current year targets in the NHS.

Operations Costs

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average cost of an in-patient operation on (a) the NHS and (b) a private hospital was in the last 12 months. [78695]

Mr. Hutton: Information on the average cost of a wide range of treatments and procedures carried out in the National Health Service is included in the national schedule of reference costs. Reference costs for 2001–2002 were published on 1 November. They may be found at www.doh.gov.uk/nhsexec/refcosts.htm and a copy has been placed in the Library. The Department does not collect information on the average cost of operations carried out in private hospitals.

Bed Occupancy

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average bed occupancy rate was at Eastbourne District General Hospital in each of the last 24 months. [78700]

Ms Blears: Figures on the average daily number of available and occupied beds for each National Health Service trust are published annually on the Department's website at http://www.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity. Data is not available on a monthly basis.

Asylum Seekers

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, whether local authorities will be given further provision to their social services budgets relating to asylum seekers' residential accommodation following the ruling on Westminster City Council v. National Asylum Support Service on 17th October. [78647]

Jacqui Smith: I have been asked to reply.

The Law Lords judgment on the Westminster City Council v. National Asylum Support Service appeal of 17 October 2002 upholds the decision of the Court of Appeal given on 10 April 2001. There are no plans to provide local councils with additional funding as a result of the judgement.

Abuse of Parents

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the numbers of children who physically abuse their parent or parents. [78823]

Jacqui Smith: Data on the number of incidences of adults abuse is not collected centrally.

Lifeline Equipment

Candy Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1), what assessment has been made of the cost of free provision of lifelines through the NHS; [78994]

(2) what financial assistance is available to older people for the purchase of lifelines through the NHS. [79050]

Jacqui Smith: Lifeline alarm systems are not normally purchased or provided by the National Health Service and no assessment has been made of the cost of doing so. "Lifelines" are 24-hour alarm services usually triggered by a call button in the room or worn around the neck. The equipment that supports them is frequently installed in residential or sheltered housing provided by local councils or registered social landlords. Depending on local eligibility criteria some landlords make a charge to residents to cover the ongoing cost of the equipment and specialist call centre.

Care Homes Staff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many applications for care homes staff have been (a) received and (b) processed by the National Care Standards Commission in each month since April. [79410]

Jacqui Smith: The National Care Standards Commission exists to regulate and inspect social care and independent health care services. It has strong powers of enforcement to ensure that services meet the required standards. The Commission does not receive applications from care home staff.

The processing by the Criminal Records Bureau of criminal records checks for staff in care homes is a matter for the Home Office.

Dentists

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to assist refugees with dental qualifications to practise in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [79003]

Mr. Hutton: We are committed to enabling refugee dentists to access the training opportunities they need to succeed in the National Health Service. Over the last two years £1 million has been made available to various projects designed to help refugee health professionals, including dentists, prepare for work in the NHS, by providing English language and clinical skills training, along with guidance on gaining employment in the NHS.

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1), how many people are waiting to sit each part of the international qualifying exams to practise dentistry in the UK; and if he will make a statement; [79002]

(2) what measures he is taking to assist those with overseas dental qualifications who are not refugees qualify to practise dentistry in the United Kingdom. [79001]

Mr. Hutton: The General Dental Council (GDC) regulates dentistry in the United Kingdom and all practitioners must be registered with the Council.

Dental qualifications obtained in the European Economic Area (EEA) that reach minimum training standards are mutually recognised throughout the EEA.

The GDC recognises certain overseas dental qualifications as being eligible for registration. Dentists qualifying in Australia, Hong Kong, Malaysia, Malta—only up to 1978, New Zealand, Singapore and at most South African dental schools before 1 January 2001 are eligible for registration with the GDC. Dentists qualifying in other countries or in any other non-EEA country after 1 January 2001 are required to take the GDC international qualifying examination or Bachelor of Dental Surgery before becoming eligible for registration.

Details of individuals waiting to sit each part of the IQE are as follows:

Part A

53 Candidates have been invited to sit exams in November 2002. There are currently 95 candidates on the waiting list and a capacity for 100 in March 2003.

Part B

45 candidates will sit exams in November and January 2003. This leaves 59 candidates on the waiting list and a capacity of 92 during the period March to July 2003.

Part C

77 Candidates will sit exams in November 2002, January and February 2003. This would leave 34 candidates on the waiting list and a capacity of 32 places in April-May 2003. Further examination dates are to be confirmed.

Undergraduate Training

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the Government's policy is on the training of medical undergraduates in prescribing practices for antibiotics; and if he will make a statement. [79698]

Mr. Hutton: Individual university medical schools determine their own undergraduate medical curriculum in the light of recommendations from the General Medical Council's education committee, which has the statutory responsibility to determine the extent and knowledge and skill required for the granting of primary medical qualifications in the United Kingdom.

The education committee's most recent recommendations on undergraduate medical education are contained in Tomorrow's Doctors which was published in July 2002. It states that graduates must know about and understand the effective and safe use of medicines as a basis for prescribing. This includes side effects, harmful interactions, antibiotic resistance and genetic indicators of the appropriateness of drugs.

Microbiologists

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 22 October 2002, Official Report, column 259W, on microbiologists, what information his Department collates on the number of microbiologists working in the NHS. [78527]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 31 October 2002]: Healthcare scientists and doctors work as microbiologists within the National Health Service. The Department's workforce censuses collect detailed information to specialty level for the medical workforce but do not record the number of healthcare scientists working as microbiologists.

As at September 2001 there were 570 doctors (400 consultants) working in the medical microbiology and virology specialty, increases of 60 and 40 respectively on the numbers employed in 1997. The information currently collected by the Department does not differentiate between microbiologists and virologists.

The Department's vacancy survey collected information on the medical microbiology and virology specialty for the first time this year. Nationally as at 30 March 2002 there were ten consultant vacancies in this specialty.

Ministerial Visits

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, when he next plans to visit a hospital in Europe. [73920]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 15 October 2002]: There are currently no plans for any Ministerial visits to any hospitals in Europe.

Lancashire Air Ambulance Service

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what support he (a) gives and (b) intends to give the Lancashire Air Ambulance Service. [77893]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 30 October 2002]: The Lancashire Air Ambulance received £239,000 in 2002–2003 and will be provided with further support in the next financial year. Discussions for further funding is still to be finalised on the extent of the support required by air ambulance services nationally.

Care of the Elderly

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many (a) reviews are being undertaken and (b) action plans are being developed to correct shortcomings reflected in the Better Care Higher Standards Charter, as set out on page 172 of the milestones of the National Service Framework for Older People; [78423]

(2) what steps his Department has taken to ensure that the Better Care Higher Standards charter is working, as set out on page 172 of the milestones of the National Service Framework for Older People. [78422]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 31 October 2002]: We plan to carry out a review of the effectiveness of the charter by March 2003. This will include an analysis of local charters for 2002–03.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what estimates his Department has made of the change in the number of the elderly in England over the next 30 years; and how this will affect the requirement for residential and nursing care. [77149]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 4 November 2002]: The personal social services research unit (PSSRU) long-term care model was developed by the PSSRU at the London School of Economics as part of its research programme funded by the Department. This model projects that the total number of number of people aged 65 and over will increase by 60 per cent. between 2000 and 2031.

In the recently published Improvement, Expansion and Reform: The next 3 years, we set the target of an increase of 6,000 in the number of people in care homes supported by councils over the three years to 2006. This is in acknowledgement of the increasing population of older people.

Gosport War Memorial Hospital

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the investigation into the suspicious deaths at the Gosport War Memorial Hospital. [78426]

Ms Blears [holding answer 31 October 2002]: Following publication of the Commission for Health Improvement report into the care of elderly patients at the hospital, the Chief Medical Officer commissioned Professor Richard Baker to undertake a clinical audit. As the hon. Member is aware there is also an ongoing police investigation. It would be inappropriate for me to comment further until the results of both investigations are clear.

Health Authority Planning

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what procedures he is putting in place to ensure StHAs have designed their planning processes before the next financial year, as set out in paragraph 6.7 of the document Improvement, Expansion & Reform: The Next Three Years [78420]

Ms Blears [holding answer 31 October 2002]: The document Improvement, Expansion and Reform sets out the vision for services over the next three years, describing how national commitments translate into targets for the National Health Service and social services. The process and timetable for developing plans at a local level were also contained in this document.

The new planning process involves streamlining current arrangements into a planning system based on a single three year local delivery plan. This process will be reinforced by the announcement of three year financial allocations to primary care trusts, giving the NHS locally the ability to plan for the medium term more effectively than in the past.

Child Obesity

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set out his definition of obesity in children. [78429]

Ms Blears [holding answer 31 October]: The simple classification of body mass index (BMI) for obesity in adults is not applicable to children. This is because the ratio of the rate of weight gain to height gain changes during normal growth, especially around puberty. Therefore, age and sex-specific reference data—centile cut-off points—are necessary to interpret the BMI measurement.

There is on going debate as to the most appropriate cut-off point to define obesity in childhood. Two different approaches are commonly used and both demonstrate that the prevalence of obesity is increasing in children in England.

Diabetes

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people, broken down by (a) age, (b) sex and (c) ethnicity were affected with Type II diabetes in each of the last three years. [78430]

Jacqui Smith: An estimated 1.3 million people in England have diagnosed diabetes, of whom around 85 per cent. have Type 2 diabetes. A break down in the form requested is not available. However, the frequency of diabetes is higher in men than in women. Prevalence rises steeply with age. Type 2 diabetes is up to six times more common in people of South Asian descent and up to three times more common in those of African and African-Caribbean descent, compared with the white population. It is also more common in people of Chinese descent and other non-white groups.

Overseas Nurses

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 16 October 2002, Official Report, column 869W, on ethical foreign nurse recruitment, if he will estimate the number of nursing agencies in the UK that recruit nurses from overseas. [78528]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 31 October 2002]: The Department does not collect statistics on the number of nursing agencies in the United Kingdom recruiting from overseas. The information contained in the code of practice website is monitored and updated routinely.

NHS Staff

Mr. Lyons: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what progress has been made in reducing the use of bank staff within the NHS. [59185]

Mr. Hutton [pursuant to his reply, 12 June 2002, c. 1315W]: I regret my previous answer contained a numerical error.

The data on the overall the NHS workforce should read that it has "increased by 4.3 per cent. to 1,166,600.", and not, as my original answer suggested "1,1666,000".

Hospital Admissions

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if he will make a statement on the number of (a) admissions to hospital, (b) visits to a GP and (c) other interfaces with the National Health Service that were alcohol related and their combined cost in each of the last five years. [67020]

Ms Blears [pursuant to her reply 12 July 2002, c. 1267W]: I regret my previous answer was incorrect. This was a mathematical error.

In table 1, National Health Service hospital admissions where there was a primary diagnosis of selected alcohol related disease, the total figure for 1997–98 should read, 45,800.

In table 2, Estimated cost of alcohol misuse to the NHS, England and Wales, 1999, the total cost to NHS should read, £208 million.

Asthma-related Deaths

Mrs. Annette L. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many asthma-related deaths there were in each of the last five years, broken down by age group. [78622]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mrs. Annette Brooke, dated 6 November 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question concerning how many asthma-related deaths there were in each of the last five years, broken down by age group. [78622]

The figures requested are given in the table below:

Number[1] of asthma-related[2] deaths in England and Wales by age group, 1997–2001

CABINET OFFICE

Correspondence

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when he will reply to the hon. Member for New Forest West's letter of 24 September regarding Mr. Douglas Alexander. [80218]

Mr. Alexander: My officials wrote to the hon. Member on the 7 October 2002, explaining that the subject matter raised was better suited to the Department for Works and Pensions and had been transferred. I understand that they will be responding shortly.

Public Consultations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what public consultations have been commenced by his Department in each month since 10 July; and what the (a) start date, (b) closing date and (c) website address of each were. [80263]

Mr. Alexander: The information for formal national public written consultations by the Cabinet Office is as follows:

PRIME MINISTER

Honours Scrutiny Committee

Ms Bridget Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister, what the responsibilities are of the Honours Scrutiny Committee. [80386]

The Prime Minister: The membership of the Honours Scrutiny Committee and its responsibilities are set out in an Order of Council dated 18 October 2002. I am placing copies of the Order in the Libraries of both Houses.

Royal Prerogative

Mr. Graham Allen: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his Answer of 17 October, Official Report, column 78W, on royal prerogative, if he will make a fuller statement of the reasons for his statement that the House is already given the opportunity to debate such decisions. [78884]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the statement I gave to the House on Tuesday 24 September, Official Report, column 7.

Prime Ministerial Visits

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the towns in the UK he has visited in his official capacity during this Parliament. [79025]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 6 November 2002]: Records of my official visits are not categorised in this way. My visits cover a range of matters including health, education, and tourism. I also travel regularly to my constituency.

I travel making the most efficient and cost-effective arrangements. My travel arrangements are in accordance with the arrangements for official travel set out in chapter 7 of the Ministerial Code, and the accompanying guidance document, Travel by Ministers.

My Office's records show that I have undertaken the following visits in the UK since June 2001:

European Council

Keith Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he has had with the German Chancellor on proposals for reform of the European Council; and whether it is his policy to pursue a joint position on these matters. [80043]

The Prime Minister: I wrote a joint letter with Chancellor Schröder in February on proposals for Council reform. These ideas were taken forward in the agreement reached at the Seville European Council.

We are now further developing these ideas with all our European partners.

India

Keith Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his recent meeting at Chequers with the Prime Minister of India; and when he next plans to visit India. [79930]

The Prime Minister: I met the Indian Prime Minister on 12 October 2002. We had a wide-ranging discussion of international and bilateral issues. I stressed the importance of the bilateral relationship and welcomed the progress made on implementing the New Delhi Declaration signed during my visit to India in January this year. I also reiterated the UK's support for India's permanent membership of the UN Security Council. I congratulated Mr. Vajpayee on the successful Jammu and Kashmir elections. We discussed next steps in the region. I also raised the consular cases of Ian Stillman, Peter Bleach and the British citizens killed in Gujarat earlier this year.

I also refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Llew Smith) on 28 October 2002, Official Report, column 604W.

I currently have no plans to visit India.

London Mayor

Keith Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister when he last met the Mayor of London in an official capacity. [79926]

The Prime Minister: I have meetings with a wide range of organisations and individuals, including the Mayor of London. As with previous Administrations it is not my practice to provide details of all such meetings, under exemption 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

European Convention on the Future of Europe

Keith Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the European Convention on the Future of Europe. [79929]

The Prime Minister: The convention is making good progress. President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's outline constitutional treaty, published last week, provides a useful framework for the next stage in the discussions. The convention is expected to conclude in June 2003.

Swaminarayan Hindu Mission

Keith Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has received from the Swaminarayan Hindu Mission concerning their dispute with Brent Council. [80053]

The Prime Minister: As far as I am aware I have received two letters from the Swaminarayan Hindu Mission on this issue.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Prime Minister how many (a) Parliamentary Questions and (b) letters to him from hon. Members in this session remain unanswered, broken down by those which are (i) one month old, (ii) two months old, (iii) three months old, (iv) four months old and (v) over six months old. [79948]

The Prime Minister: No parliamentary questions remain unanswered.

Since June 2001 I have received approximately 3,638 letters from Members of Parliament including invitations and requests concerning constituency matters which were dealt with as appropriate.

I have received about 800,000 items of post since June 2001, and my office has worked hard to deal with them as efficiently as possible.

Missile Defence Programme

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions took place during his most recent meeting with President Bush about the United Nations national missile defence programme; what agreements were reached; and if he will make a statement. [79653]

The Prime Minister: President Bush and I did not discuss missile defence when we met on 7 September. It remains the case that there has been no formal US request for the use of UK facilities for missile defence purposes. If a request is received, the Government will consider it. But the Government would only agree to the use of UK facilities if satisfied that the overall security of the UK and NATO would be enhanced.

House of Lords Appointment Commission

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Prime Minister what consideration the House of Lords Appointment Commission has been asked to give to increasing the representation of Sikhs in the House of Lords. [80368]

The Prime Minister: The criteria for assessing nominations for the House of Lords are set by the House of Lords Appointment Commission. These include outstanding records of personal success and achievement in their own chosen fields; independence and integrity; commitment to the highest standards of public life and the ability to contribute effectively to the work of the House of Lords. While the Appointment Commission has not been asked to consider increasing the representation of any faith group, clearly individuals from the different faith groups who meet the criteria will be considered in the usual way.

Sikh Community

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Prime Minister, which Government Departments have put in place mechanisms to monitor the provision of public services to the British Sikh community. [80371]

The Prime Minister: As I have indicated in reply to earlier questions, as part of the Government's commitment to diversity a number of Departments employ diversity and equality advisers. These liaise with various communities on policy, operational and employment matters. Some of these, for example in the Department for Work and Pensions and the Ministry of Defence, focus specifically on issues relevant to the Sikh community.

The Government are committed to the provision of public services for all. Areas of specific concern to the Sikh community can be raised in a range of fora, including Race Equality Councils and with the appropriate Minister.

Ministerial Assessment

David Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the procedures under which he receives reports from civil servants on the performance of junior ministers. [79904]

The Prime Minister: Section 1 of the Ministerial Code sets out the procedures relating to the accountability of Ministers. Civil servants do not provide me with performance reports on junior Ministers although there is provision for issues to be raised with me through the Cabinet Secretary.

TRANSPORT

Aviation Fuel

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 22 October 2002, Official Report, column 158W, on aviation fuel, if he will estimate the total United Kingdom air passenger demand in 2030 if agreement is reached in ICAO to impose an international tax on aviation fuel equivalent to the current rate of duty on unleaded petrol and to impose a sales tax of 17.5 per cent on all airline tickets. [78548]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 31 October 2002]: Imposing a tax on aviation equivalent to the current rate of duty on unleaded fuel in the UK has not been considered in ICAO and the Government has given an undertaking not to remove existing zero rating for VAT purposes of air transport. Imposing such tax increases on aviation would go well beyond what is justified on the basis of evidence of its environmental costs.

Cliffe Airport

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reason residents of South Essex with homes falling under the Cliffe Airport 5th runway, were not consulted on the Cliffe Airway proposal. [78590]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government are consulting very widely across the UK on the future of air transport.

The consultation documents published in July are available to everyone at no cost. They can be found on a special website, www.airconsult.gov.uk, or by contacting our distribution centre either by writing to DfT Free Literature, PO Box No 236, Wetherby LS23 7NB or by telephoning 0845 100 5554. In addition, my department sent complementary copies of the summary consultation papers to those local residents who would be most directly affected by any of the possible options.

We want to receive as many responses as possible from the public. We will take all views into account before any decisions are taken and announced in the air transport White Paper next year.

The White Paper will set out a framework for proposed airport development. Before any development could proceed it would be subject to the land use planning system and all interested parties would have a further opportunity to represent their views as part of that process.

Car Sharing

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with agencies of Local Agenda 21 on the subject of car sharing. [79336]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 5 November 2002]: The review of the UK Sustainable Development Strategy, which involves Departments across Whitehall, will include consultation with key stakeholders including Agenda 21 groups.

Potters Bar Rail Accident

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, what progress has been made in addressing the findings and recommendations of the Health and Safety Executive concerning the Potters Bar derailment; what steps have been taken in respect of nuts on the adjustable stretcher bars of points in the Potters Bar area; and if he will make a statement. [79918]

Mr. Jamieson: The progress report published by the Health and Safety Executive's (HSE's) Potters Bar Investigation Board on 4 July 2002 made a number of recommendations to improve the safety of railway points on Railtrack (now Network Rail), its maintenance contractors and HSE's HM Railway Inspectorate (HMRI).

The Investigation Board was informed by Railtrack of measures it was taking to improve safety, including the provision of guidance on good practice for safely setting up and maintaining adjustable stretcher bars.

Network Rail has also promised to complete by next month an in-depth design review of railway points using adjustable stretcher bars as recommended by the Investigation Board. It has also given a commitment to lead a workshop with its contractors to promote a determined and consistent approach to progressing the Investigation Board's recommendations.

The Investigation Board has considered the initial responses from Railtrack and its contractors and will consider the more detailed responses once Network Rail has completed the in-depth design review.

HMRI inspectors will be carrying out further spot checks on a sample of points as a follow-up exercise to the one carried out in June.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, when he expects to receive the next interim report from the Health and Safety Executive on the Potters Bar rail accident. [79472]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 5 November 2002]: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) have advised that, subject to the completion of all necessary technical inquiries, the Potters Bar Investigation Board expects to publish its next progress report in the first quarter of 2003. However, consistent with its published terms of reference, the Board will consider putting into the public domain beforehand any information it judges to be in the interests of furthering the cause of improved rail safety. The Board meets regularly and reviews this question very carefully.

Air Transport

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, how many copies of the (a) main document and (b) summary of the (i) National and (ii) regional consultation documents on Future Development of Air Transport in the United Kingdom have been issued in hard copy as a result of each exhibition which has taken place to promote the consultation. [78810]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department has issued to date, in total, around 111,000 copies of the main consultation documents and 156,000 copies of the summary documents for the seven areas of the UK. These figures include the documents distributed at the exhibitions across the country. We do not have a breakdown for the number of documents issued at individual exhibitions.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, what the cost to his Department has been of (a) the exhibitions promoting the consultation documents on the Future Development of Air Transport in the United Kingdom and (b) the printing costs relating to the publication of the consultation documents. [78811]

Mr. Jamieson: The cost of the exhibitions which have taken place at the major airport sites across the UK during the consultation period is around £1.1 million to date. The programme of exhibitions is not yet complete, due to high public demand. The printing costs relating to the publication of the consultation documents are around £480,000.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, how many responses had been received by 28 October in response to (a) the consultation document, Future Development of Air Transport in the United Kingdom: A National Consultation (b) each of the regional consultation documents on the Future Development of Air Transport in the United Kingdom, for each region (i) in total and (ii) for each region. [78812]

Mr. Jamieson: To date we have received over 7000 responses to the NOP questionnaire and over 23,000 letters in total across the UK. This is set out by region in the table.

Region	NOP Responses	Letters received
Scotland	464	29
South East	3949	8700
Midlands	1786	15000
North of England	983	39
South West	546	24
Wales	29	7
Northern Ireland	51	8
Total	7808	23801

Tom Blake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many copies of the (a) main document and (b) summary of the consultation documents (i) Future Development of Air Transport in the United Kingdom: A National Consultation, (ii) Future Development of Air Transport in the United Kingdom: North of England, (iii) Future Development of Air Transport in the United Kingdom: South West, (iv) Future Development of Air Transport in the United Kingdom: Midlands, (v) Future Development of Air Transport in the United Kingdom: Wales and (vi) Future Development of Air Transport in the United Kingdom: South East have been (A) issued in hard copy and (B) downloaded from the website. [78813]

Mr. Jamieson: We have so far distributed around 105,750 main consultation documents and 145,700 summary consultation documents. The figures by region for distribution and website downloads are shown in the table.

Region	Hard copy		Website downloads
	Main	Summary	Main	Summary
North of England	11,500	27,500	11,000	5,800
South West	5,150	13,700	7,100	7,000
Midlands	33,400	42,600	31,100	25,300
Wales	4,000	5,200	2,000	1,500
South East	47,600	48,000	54,500	56,600
Northern Ireland	4,100	8,700	2,400	1,700
Total	105,750	145,700	108,100	97,900

Dual-use Pathogens

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what mechanisms there are to allow the Government to monitor, regulate and ensure the security of the transport of dual-use pathogens (a) within the UK, (b) within the EU and (c) from the UK to third countries. [79197]

Mr. Spellar: The land transport of infectious substances within Great Britain is regulated by the Carriage of Dangerous Goods by Rail Regulations 1996 (SI 1996 No 2089) (as amended), the Carriage of Dangerous Goods by Road Regulations 1996 (SI 1996 No 2095) (as amended) and the Carriage of Dangerous Goods (Classification, Packaging and Labelling) and Use of Transportable Pressure Receptacles Regulations 1996 (SI 1996 No 2092) (as amended). These regulations are made under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 and enforced by the Health and Safety Executive, with support from the police and the Vehicle Inspectorate. Mirror arrangements apply in Northern Ireland. Council Directives 96/49/EC (for rail transport) and 94/55/EC (for road transport) apply to transport between EU Member States, respectively, the provisions of the RID and ADR Agreements governing the international transport of dangerous goods, including infectious substances. Transport between the UK and third countries who are contracting parties to RID or ADR is governed by the detailed requirements set out in those Agreements. The Agreements are reviewed biennially in response to technical progress. Similar provisions apply in air and sea transport through application of the ICAO Technical Instructions and the IMO IMDG Code respectively.

The United Kingdom is at the forefront of an international initiative to draft provisions to enhance the security of dangerous goods in transport, which will apply particularly to the more dangerous infectious substances. We hope that by the end of the year we will see these provisions adopted in the UN's global multi-modal Model Regulations on the Transport of Dangerous Goods and by the European Commission, and included in due course in the provisions of the aforementioned Directives.

Congestion Charging

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, what information is collated by his Department on average traffic speed in central London between 07.00 and 18.30 in each of the past five years; and what estimates he plans to make on the impact of congestion charging from February 2003. [79637]

Mr. Jamieson: Surveys of average traffic speeds were carried out in London until the year 2000 by the Department for Transport. Central, Inner and Outer London were surveyed in turn, and Central London was covered in 1997 and 2000. Figures are not held specifically for the period 07:00 to 18:30. However, in Central London the average morning peak (07:45 to 09:15) speed during 1997 was 10.0 mph and in 2000 it was 9.9 mph.

Since 3 July 2000, Transport for London have taken over responsibility for running the London speed surveys, as well as estimating the impact of congestion charging on traffic speeds in London from February 2003.

Matlock-Buxton Railway Line

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to re-open the railway line from Matlock to Buxton; and if he will make a statement. [79632]

Mr. Jamieson: A feasibility study, funded by Derbyshire County Council, the East Midlands Development Agency, the Countryside Agency and the Strategic Rail Authority, is currently considering the potential for re-opening the line. No decisions have yet been made.

Bletchley-Bicester Railway Line

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to bring into use the railway line from Bletchley to Bicester; and if he will make a statement. [79631]

Mr. Jamieson: The East-West Consortium has submitted a Rail Passenger Partnership bid to the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) for the re-opening of this section of line. The SRA is currently evaluating this bid and anticipates that a decision will be made shortly.

Cycling (London)

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimates he has made of the (a) number of regular cyclists and (b) number of cycle miles travelled in Greater London in each year since 1997. [79633]

Mr. Jamieson: In our National Travel Survey over the period 1999–2001, about 10 per cent. (700,000) residents of Greater London said they cycled at least once a week and about a further 7 per cent. (500,000) said they cycled at least once a month. Figures are not available for single years.

Estimates for pedal cycle traffic in London for the years 1999 to 2001 are estimated to be 340, 320 and 320 million vehicle kilometres respectively. Estimates for 1997 and 1998 will be available by mid-2003.

Rail Franchises

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what plans he has to change the number of trains operating companies in the South West; [80313]

(2) if he will make a statement on the status of the Wessex franchise, with particular reference to its interaction with the Great Western franchise; [80311]

(3) what discussions he has had with members of the South Western Assembly on the subject of (a) the Wessex franchise and (b) the Great Western franchise. [80312]

Mr. Jamieson: The Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) announced on 6 November its intention to create a new Greater Western rail franchise by no later than 2006. The new franchise will combine the current Great Western Trains, Thames Trains and Wessex Trains franchises into a single franchise. This decision follows extensive consultation with key stakeholders including the South Western Assembly. The SRA also announced a way forward to 2007 for the South West Trains franchise.

Central Railways

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to (a) complete and (b) publish his response to the Central Railways proposed freight line. [79823]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 23 October 2002, Official Report, column 304W, to the hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham (Mrs. Gillan).

Better Public Buildings Initiative

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will name the projects the departmental design champion has sponsored as part of the Better Public Buildings initiative; and if he will make a statement on the extent of his personal input in respect of each. [80334]

Mr. Jamieson: The sponsored projects are the New Government Building, Leeds and the Highways Agency's Stonehenge Improvement Project.

Motorway Accidents

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, what data is collated by his Department on the incidence of motorway traffic accidents involving left-hand drive heavy goods vehicles; and what proportion of accidents involved the vehicle changing lanes. [80210]

Mr. Jamieson: This information is not available.

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, if he will commission research on safety aspects of the use of left-hand drive heavy goods vehicles on motorways, with particular reference to resolving problems resulting from their blind spots. [80209]

Mr. Jamieson: UK research into heavy goods vehicle visibility was used in preparing an amendment to the EU Directive on Rear View Mirrors. This will require new heavy goods vehicles over 7.5 tonnes registered within the EU to be fitted with a "close proximity" blind spot mirror on the passenger side. We believe that this will go a long way towards addressing safety concerns over blind spots with left-hand-drive HGVs operating on UK roads.

Uckfield Railway Line

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, if he will place in the Library a copy of the B003 Allen Report on the electrification of the Uckfield line through Edenbridge. [79910]

Mr. Spellar: A summary of this report has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, on how many occasions between 31 March 2001 and 31 March 2002 (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental special advisers have travelled abroad in an official capacity; what places were visited; and how much each visit cost. [80360]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department for Transport was only set up on 29 May 2002.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for ransport, how many (a) parliamentary questions and (b) letters to him from hon. Members in this Session remain unanswered, broken down by those which are (i) one month old, (ii) two months old, (iii) three months old, (iv) four months old and (v) over six months old. [79946]

Mr. Jamieson: The information provided is in respect of the period since the formation of my Department on 29 May 2002.

No parliamentary questions remain unanswered.

The Cabinet Office publishes a report to Parliament on an annual basis, setting out the volume of Members' correspondence received by Departments. The Report for 2001 was published on 24 May 2002, Official Report, column 677W. Copies of previous reports are available in the Library of the House.

At 6 November 2002, my Department had received 3,649 letters from hon. Members, of which 23 remain unanswered after one month from date of receipt, where (i) 12 were between 1 and 2 months old from the date of receipt and (ii) 11 were between 2 and 3 months old from the date of receipt.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, what public consultations have been commenced by his Department in each month since 20 July; and what the (a) start date, (b) closing date and (c) website address of each were. [80276]

Mr. Jamieson: A list of the public consultations by the Department since 20 July 2002 is listed below, including the closing dates for responses and the website address of each document. The list is based on central records and reflects the public consultations undertaken within the areas for which the Department is currently responsible.

DEFENCE

Nato Deployments

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what UK facilities have been made available to NATO forces for out of area activities during the past year. [79646]

Mr. Hoon: No United Kingdom facilities have been made available to NATO forces for out of area activities during the past year.

Nuclear Tests

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of pensions offered to service personnel of other states who participated in UK nuclear tests. [80287]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of financial support from the New Zealand Government for the nuclear test veterans of that country to support research into the health impact of UK nuclear tests. [80286]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has made no assessment of financial support provided by the New Zealand Government to New Zealand test veterans to support research into the health impact of British nuclear tests. Such funding is a matter for the New Zealand Government.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) parliamentary questions and (b) letters to him from hon. Members in this Session remain unanswered, broken down by those which are (i) one month old, (ii) two months old, (iii) three months old, (iv) four months old and (v) over six months old. [79940]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

A400M

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his French counterpart about the future of the A400M programme. [80016]

Mr. Hoon: I last met my French counterpart on 4 October when we discussed a number of issues including the A400M programme. We agreed on the importance of that programme and the need to launch it as soon as possible.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what indications he has received that Germany will order fewer than (a) 73 and (b) 60 A400M aircraft; [80014]

(2) what assessment he has made of the increasing costs of the A400M programme, based on a reduced number of German orders; and if he will make a statement; [80015]

(3) when he last met the Defence Minister of Germany to discuss the A440M programme; and if he will make a statement; [80017]

(4) what the minimum number is of A400M aircraft that Germany must order, for the UK to continue supporting the A400M programme; and how long he is prepared to wait for the minimum number of German orders. [80013]

Mr. Hoon: I had a meeting with my German counterpart on 5 November when we discussed a range of defence topics, including the A400M programme. We both recognised the importance of the A400M programme and the need to launch it as soon as possible.

The German government has made no final decision on whether it will need to change its previously stated requirement for 73 aircraft. It would therefore be premature to speculate on the impact of a reduced German order on the cost of the programme.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if she will make a statement on what progress is being made on the delivery of the A400M; and what discussions she has had with the German Government to discuss the contractual situation. [41127]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Ballistic Missile Defence

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his statement in the debate on defence in the world on 17 October 2062, Official Report, columns 503–04W, how he plans to facilitate (a) public and (b) parliamentary discussion of ballistic missile defence and the future uses of RAF Fylingdales. [80366]

Mr. Hoon: As I said in the debate on 17 October, I intend to make available to Parliament and the public in the coming months some analytical and discussion material. We will be ready to discuss the issues in Parliament at the appropriate time.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his Department spent on technological and other appraisals of ballistic missile defence options, in each year since 1997. [80356]

Mr. Hoon: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 26 March 2002, Official Report, columns 849W–50W to the hon. Member for North Essex (Mr. Jenkin).

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will answer the question of 22 July from the hon. Member for Lewisham, Deptford. [79868]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is still being collated. Once this is available, I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Gulf War

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many requests by service personnel for access to their medical records there have been since the Gulf War; and if he will make a statement; [78280]

(2) how many requests by service personnel for access to their medical records since the Gulf War have been granted; what reasons have been given for refusing service personnel access to their military medical records; and if he will make a statement. [78281]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the incidence of reduced blood levels of the paraoxenase enzyme in Gulf War veterans. [78606]

Mr. Ingram MP: A non-Ministry of Defence funded study published in September 2000 showed that when compared to a control group of some selected civilians who were well, self-selected ill United Kingdom Gulf veterans had: (a) a lower concentration of paraoxonase and (b) its activity was less than 50 per cent. of that found in the control group. The level of paraoxonase found showed little variation among the Gulf veterans studied and no link to the severity of symptoms or to genetic composition was identified. The Ministry of Defence has since part-funded a study to confirm, or otherwise, the earlier findings which includes United Kingdom Gulf veterans, Bosnia veterans and non-deployed veterans. The study is complete and it is expected that the results will be published in a peer-reviewed scientific journal.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the use of magnetic resonance spectroscopy brain scanning as applied to UK Gulf War veterans. [78605]

Mr. Ingram: Magnetic Resonance Spectroscopy (MRS) is a non-invasive radiological technique. It measures intracellular concentrations of specific abundant chemicals in small areas of the brain and is used to examine brain activity patterns and to identify very localised areas of damage within the brain.

MRS has not been used in Gulf veterans' illnesses research funded by the Ministry of Defence. Some patients who attended the Gulf Veterans' Medical Assessment Programme have been referred to specialist neurologists who may have used this procedure. Gulf veterans also may have had MRS scans during investigations carried out during their health care under the National Health Service or Defence Medical Services.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the rate of death of (a) UK Gulf War veterans and (b) other members of the public by motor vehicle accidents was in each year since 1992. [78604]

Dr. Moonie: The mortality rates per 10,000 personnel to Gulf veterans due to motor vehicle accidents during the ten-year period 1992–2001 are given below. For comparison purposes the data for a similar sized cohort randomly sampled from United Kingdom armed forces personnel in Service on 1 January 1991 who were not deployed to the Gulf, stratified according to age, gender, Service, Officer status, regular/reservist status and a proxy marker for fitness are also given. Data from the Office for National Statistics for the general population of England and Wales with the same age and gender profile, taking into account the ageing of the Gulf cohort, is also provided.

Year	Gulf	Era	England and Wales
1992	3.4	1.9	1.7
1993	2.1	1.1	1.3
1994	1.5	1.9	1.2
1995	2.4	0.6	1.1
1996	3.2	1.5	1.1
1997	1.3	2.2	1.1
1998	1.5	1.7	1.0
1999	1.5	1.5	1.0
2000	0.9	1.3	1.0
2001	1.3	0.4	0.9
Ten-year mean	1.9	1.4	1.2

A number of possible explanations have been put forward to explain the excess mortality rate above for Gulf veterans. These include that the veterans may have had some sort of neurological impairment caused by an exposure in the Gulf, that their perception of risk may have been altered by the experience of conflict or that this may have been a disguised form of suicide. We are discussing with the scientific community how best to conduct an analysis of the factors underlying the figures.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the armed forces have retired from their employment on medical grounds in each year since their service in the Gulf war; and what the average annual rate of medical retirements has been in the last 10 years. [79530]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Army Regiments

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many Army regiments are running at more than five per cent. below their recommended complement of enlisted men; and if he will make a statement; [78275]

(2) how many Army regiments are running at more than 10 per cent. below their recommended complement of enlisted men; and if he will make a statement. [78283]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is not held by Regiment, but by Arms/Corps. Those Arms/Corps running at more than five per cent below their recommended compliment of enlisted men are shown in the table below:

	Percentage
Queen Alexandra's Royal Army Nursing Corps	−37.79
Army Air Corps	−15.81
Royal Army Veterinary Corps	−13.99
Royal Electrical Mechanical Engineers	−11.99
Army Physical Training Corps	−10.72
Royal Logistic Corps	−10.06
Royal Army Medical Corps	−8.50
Corps of Army Music	−7.87
Royal Engineers	−7.62
Adjutant General's Corps (Staff and Personnel Support)	−6.47
Royal Signals	−6.12

Those Arms/Corps running at more than ten per cent. below their recommended compliment of enlisted men are shown in the table below:

	Percentage
Queen Alexandra's Royal Army Nursing Corps	−37.79
Army Air Corps	−15.81
Royal Army Veterinary Corps	−13.99
Royal Electrical Mechanical Engineers	−11.99
Army Physical Training Corps	−10.72
Royal Logistic Corps	−10.06

Enlisted men are taken to be all other ranks. All figures are as at 1 September 2002 and for trained personnel only.

Medical Reservists

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many medical specialists, and in which specialisations, there are in the Reserves. [78319]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to include medical staff in a call up of reservists in respect of planned military action against terrorism. [78577]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 31 October 2002]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 4 November 2002, Official Report, column 5W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Leyton and Wanstead (Mr. Cohen). A decision to call-out medical reservists for any future military operations would be made at that time.

UK-owned Equipment

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions his Department has had with the governments of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Qatar, Bahrain, United Arab Emirates and the Sultanate of Oman concerning the operation of UK-owned and operated equipment of Israeli origin from their territories. [78465]

Dr. Moonie: No such discussions have taken place.

Armed Forces' Equipment

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by country the manufacturing supply source of (a) boots and (b) berets used by United Kingdom armed forces; and if he will make a statement. [78574]

Dr. Moonie: There are currently 12 companies manufacturing boots (ranging from safety boots to combat boots and uniform dress boots) of which ten are United Kingdom based, one Spanish and the other Italian. Our existing stocks of berets were procured from two United Kingdom based companies. We are currently evaluating tenders from a number of UK and overseas-based companies for a new contract to supply berets for UK Armed Forces.

Warships

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when each of the Type 42 destroyers will decommission. [78657]

Dr. Moonie: On current plans the operational decommissioning dates of each Type 42 Destroyer in the Royal Navy are as follows:

Type 42 Destroyer	HMS	Planned Operational Decommissioning date
Batch 1	Cardiff	2008
	Newcastle	2007
	Glasgow	2010
Batch 2	Exeter	2011
	Southampton	2012
	Nottingham	2012
	Liverpool	2010
Batch 3	Manchester	2013
	Gloucester	2013
	Edinburgh	2014
	York	2014

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost of HMS Portland, HMS Kent and HMS St. Albans was. [78662]

Dr. Moonie: The costs of HMS Portland, HMS Kent and HMS St. Albans, including construction and installation of on-board systems, such as weapons and communications are shown in the table below:

Ships	£ million
HMS Kent	128.062
HMS Portland	124.918
HMS St. Albans	125.659

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to make a decision on the Warship Modernisation Project; how the announcement will be made; and if he will make a statement. [44735]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Joint Strike Fighter

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the new STOVL Joint Strike Fighter aircraft. [78973]

Dr. Moonie: We announced on 30 September 2002 that the Short Take-Off/Vertical Landing (STOVL) variant of the Joint Strike Fighter (JSF) has been selected to meet our Future Joint Combat Aircraft (FJCA) requirement. This decision represents a major step forward for the United Kingdom's future expeditionary air power capability, and builds on our unique and valuable knowledge of STOVL aircraft acquired during nearly four decades of operations with Harrier on land and at sea.

The announcement has also been welcomed by British industry, which is playing a key role in the JSF programme and will help ensure that the UK retains its leading position in a major area of aerospace technology. Indeed, industry estimates that its involvement could be worth up to £27 billion over the whole life of the programme, creating or securing some 8,500 jobs.

Future Integrated Soldier Technology

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress on the Future Integrated Soldier Technology programme. [78979]

Dr. Moonie: The final stage of a competition to choose a Prime Contractor for the Assessment Phase of the Future Integrated Soldier Technology programme is currently underway, involving BAE SYSTEMS Ltd and Thales Optronics Ltd. Selection of a single Prime Contractor is planned for early 2003.

Rotorcraft

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Royal Navy's Surface Combatant Maritime Rotorcraft requirement. [78978]

Dr. Moonie: The Surface Combatant Maritime Rotorcraft (SCMR) requirement is to deliver a surveillance and attack capability in open ocean and littoral areas in support of maritime, joint or combined operations using a maritime helicopter operating from assigned frigates and destroyers. The requirement will include targeting, Anti-Surface and Anti-Submarine weapon delivery, and battle damage assessment. In addition, it will provide Search and Rescue (SAR), humanitarian support and constabulary capabilities.

SCMR will succeed and enhance the capability currently provided by the Maritime Lynx Mk3 and Mk8 helicopters. These have, for decades, provided excellent service on our frigates and destroyers, but are nearing the end of their useful life. SCMR will be capable of operating from Type 23 frigates, the Future Surface Combatant, and Type 45 destroyers. SCMR is currently in its Assessment Phase and is planned to be phased into service during the second half of the decade.

Harassment

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how many members of the Army indicated when last questioned that they believe that (a) harassment, (b) discrimination and (c) bullying are problems in (i) their immediate area of work and (ii) the Army as a whole; what percentage of those responding this represents; what percentage of actual strength this represents; and if he will make a statement. [78634]

Mr. Ingram: In response to the latest Army Continuous Attitude Survey, 197 members of those surveyed indicated they believed that harassment, discrimination or bullying are problems within their immediate work area; this represents 11 per cent. of those who responded and 5 per cent. of those surveyed. In addition, 878 members of the Army indicated, in the same survey, that they believed harassment, discrimination and bullying are problems within the British Army; this represents 43 per cent. of those who responded and some 22 per cent. of those surveyed.

The latest survey was undertaken in March–April 2002 and sent to a 4 per cent. random sample of the trained Army (excluding Gurkhas and Full Time Reserve Service); 3,978 questionnaires were sent out and 2,037 were returned.

Future Aircraft Carrier Programme

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when an announcement will be made as to the successful tender for the Future Aircraft Carrier programme. [79271]

Dr. Moonie: Stage 2 of the CVF Assessment phase completes on 20 November. We then intend to select a preferred contractor not on the basis of a traditional bid analysis but through an assessment of the contractors' performance and output since the start of the Assessment phase in November 1999. An announcement on the preferred contractor is scheduled for early next year.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Future Aircraft Carrier programme. [79268]

Dr. Moonie: The Future Aircraft Carrier (CVF) programme is progressing well and the recent announcement of the innovative adaptable design is evidence of this. Risk reduction and design work is continuing and we remain on course to select our preferred contractor early next year and approve investment in the build programme at the end of 2003. The In Service Dates of the two ships remain 2012 and 2015 respectively.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many jobs he estimates will be created through the design and manufacture of the Future Aircraft Carriers in the UK. [79270]

Dr. Moonie: It is still too early in the Future Aircraft Carrier (CVF) programme to make an accurate forecast of the number of jobs that will be created or sustained by the CVF programme. Much will depend on the shipbuild strategy adopted by the preferred prime contractor and the split of work between the participating construction and final assembly facilities. However, taking into account the supply chain, the programme may involve around 10,000 jobs throughout the United Kingdom.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what aircraft will be for the Future Aircraft Carrier programme. [79269]

Dr. Moonie: The primary aircraft for the Future Aircraft Carrier (CVF) will be the Joint Combat Aircraft. The Lockheed Martin Joint Strike Fighter has been identified as the aircraft with the best potential to fulfil that role and this was reinforced by the announcement on 30 September that we had selected the Short Take Off Vertical Landing variant to operate from CVF. The ships will also carry Maritime Airborne Surveillance and Control aircraft and helicopters from all three services in a variety of roles.

Ageism

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what strategies his Department has to ensure that there is no ageism in recruitment and retention processes. [79289]

Dr. Moonie: Equality of opportunity for all staff is a key feature of Civil Service employment. The Ministry of Defence's personnel and employment policies and procedures have been subject to equality-proofing, including the removal of any unfair discrimination on the basis of age. To underpin this, the MOD has a programme of action on equality and diversity involving the training and development of line and personnel managers, and the monitoring of recruitment, selection and performance management statistics. Training in equal opportunities is mandatory for all recruitment panel members.

In addition, the MOD, like other Departments, has conducted a thorough review of its age retirement policy in light of the Government's commitment to tackle ageism in the workplace as set out in the Code of Practice for Age Diversity in Employment published in 1999.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of new recruits to his Department in the past two years were aged 50 and over. [79301]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 4 November 2002]: The information requested is shown in the tables:

		Under 50	50 and over	Total	% Over 50
Financial Year 2001–2002	Ministry of Defence	4,443	1,289	5,732	22.5
	Trading Funds	1,141	223	1,374	16.2
	Total	5,584	1,512	7,106	21.3

		Under 50	50 and over	Total	% Over 50
Financial Year 2000–2001	Ministry of Defence	5,200	1,348	6,548	20.6
	Trading Funds	1,134	116	1,251	9.3
	Total	6,334	1,464	7,799	18.8

Notes:
1. Figures exclude casual and Royal Fleet Auxiliary staff.
2. The following methods of recruitment have been included recruitment by CSC, by Department, Re-instatement/Re-employment and unknown.
3. Where the parts do not equal the sum a number of staff with "unknown" age were identified.
4. Financial years run from 1 April to the 31 March.

Invincible Class Carriers

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the steps being taken by the Government to ensure that bids to build the replacement for the Invincible Class Carriers take account of UK dry dock facilities; and if he will make a statement. [78989]

Dr. Moonie: In line with Government policy on warship construction the Royal Navy's two new Future Aircraft Carriers (CVFs) will be built in the United Kingdom. This is clearly understood by both of the candidate prime contractors for CVF—BAE SYSTEMS and Thales—and as part of their work to date they have assessed the capabilities of a number of sites throughout the United Kingdom that have the potential to participate in the build (construction and outfitting of modules or blocks of the vessel) and assembly (the joining together of the blocks into a whole ship in a suitable dry dock). No final decisions have yet been made.

Recruitment

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent in recruiting staff to his Department in (a) London and (b) the south east in each year since 1997. [78562]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 4 November 2002]: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Aircraft Landings

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many civilian aircraft landings and take-offs were recorded at RAF Machrihanish during each of the last five years. [78734]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence does not hold records of civilian aircraft movements. The Highlands and Islands Airports Ltd lease part of the RAF Machrihanish site, known as Campbeltown Airport, and are not able to provide the information sought.

Research Projects

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list research projects his Department (a) has funded in the last five years and (b) is funding into the health outcomes of (i) service personnel who participated in UK nuclear tests and (ii) their offspring. [79188]

Dr. Moonie: In the last five years the Ministry of Defence has funded a study by the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) into the incidence of multiple myeloma, other cancers and other causes of death amongst nuclear test veterans. This study follows on from two earlier studies, the results of which were published in 1988 and 1993. The results of this third study are expected to be published early next year. Funding is also provided to the NRPB for the maintenance of a database that has been used during the compilation of these studies.

No funding has been provided for health studies of the offspring of nuclear test veterans. Current information on radiation health effects suggests that studies of cancer among people exposed to radiation are likely to prove a more sensitive means of detecting such effects than studies of their children. There is no scientific or medical evidence that shows that the health or other physical problems suffered by the offspring of nuclear test veterans can be attributed to their father's or grandfather's participation in the test programme.

Afghanistan

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total cost to date is of maintaining British troops in Afghanistan. [79985]

Mr. Ingram: The cost of Operations in Afghanistan for 2001–2002 was estimated to be £261 million and this was published in Spring Supplementary Estimates.

I will write to my hon. Friend shortly concerning expenditure in 2001–2002 and 2002–2003 and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost of UK operations in Afghanistan has been since 11 September; and if he will make a statement. [57603]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 21 May 2002]: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Diversification Council

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Defence Diversification Council has been established; and if he will make a statement. [79874]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Diversification Council is currently being set-up. It will be chaired by my hon. Friend, the Under Secretary of State for Defence, and will include representation from the Department of Trade and Industry, the Regional Assemblies, Trade Unions and Industry.

Defence Export Services

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, when Mr. Tony Edwards resigned as Head of Defence Export Services. [79875]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Gates of Remembrance

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with representatives of the Gates of Remembrance Appeal; and what discussions he has had with the (a) Royal British Legion, (b) Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen and Families Association, (c) Army Benevolent Fund, (d) RAF Association, (e) Royal Navy Association and (f) War Widows Association of Great Britain about that appeal. [79839]

Mr. Ingram: Although no specific discussions have taken place with representatives from the Gates of Remembrance Appeal numerous wide ranging discussions have taken place with those other bodies mentioned. In accordance with the long established policy of successive Governments, the cost of erecting war memorials or their subsequent maintenance is not met from public funds but from private donations or public subscription.

Scientific Advisory Council

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the members of the Defence Scientific Advisory Council, and in each case his or her employer. [79829]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Scientific Advisory Council is a Non-Departmental Public Body; it consists of an Independent chairman and eight other independents. In addition a number of senior Ministry of Defence officials are members of the Council.

PFI Projects

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) start and (b) end dates are of the
(i) material handling equipment, (ii) TAFMIS, (iii) defence fixed telecommunications service, (iv) hawk simulator, (v) attack helicopters training-Apache simulator, (vi) defence intelligence system, (vii) Tornado GR4 simulator, (viii) naval communications, (ix) RAF Sentry E3D aircrew, (x) ASTUTE training service,
(xi) heavy equipment transporters, (xii) strategic sealift (ro-ro ferries) and (xiii) field electrical power supplies PFI projects and contracts. [78361]

Mr. Ingram: The start and end dates for the specified PFI projects are shown below:

	Project Name	Contract signed	Service start date	Contract end year
i	Materials Handling Equipment	May 2002	August 2002	2010
Ii	TAFMIS	August 1996	August 1996	2006
Iii	Defence Fixed Telecommunications Service (DFTS)	July 1997	June 1998[1]	2007
Iv	Hawk Simulator	December 1997	December 1999	2015
V	Attack Helicopters Training-Apache Simulator	July 1998	January 2002	2028
Vi	Defence Intelligence System	June 1999	October 1999	2006

Deepcut Barracks

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what professional mental health assistance is given to recruits at the Deepcut barracks; and if he will make a statement. [79995]

Mr. Ingram: The medical centre at Deepcut barracks provides recruits with primary health care. The medical centre's establishment comprises a Civilian Medical Practitioner and full time practice nurse who look after patients' medical problems, both physical and mental. Should further referral for diagnosis and/or management of a mental health problem be considered necessary, referral would normally be to the Community Psychiatric Department in Aldershot, where Consultant Psychiatrist and Community Psychiatric Nursing services are available. At weekends, urgent cases would be referred to the Duchess of Kent Psychiatric Hospital at Catterick.

Nuclear Weapons Tests

Mr. Llewellyn Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what papers have been published (a) in referred journals and (b) as departmental monographs on the health impact on observers of British atmospheric nuclear weapons tests since 1990; and if he will place copies of each in the Library. [79967]

Dr. Moonie: In December 1993 the report was published of a study carried out by the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) on behalf of the Ministry of Defence entitled Mortality and Cancer Incidence 1952–1990 in UK Participants in the UK Atmospheric Nuclear Weapon Tests and Experimental Programmes. Findings from the study were published after peer review in the British Medical Journal, Volume 307, pages 1530–5, dated December 1993. A copy of the NRPB report is already available in the Library of the House.

The MOD has not published any monographs on this subject.

European Rapid Reaction Force

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assistance his Department has provided foreign countries to develop tank ammunition and weaponry composed of depleted uranium, and depleted uranium components; and if he will make a statement. [65043]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent progress has been made toward the establishment of a European Rapid Reaction Force; and what recent discussions he has had with his European counterparts regarding the issue. [79972]

Mr. Hoon: There is no standing European Rapid Reaction Force. Under the European Security and Defence Policy (ESDP), the EU will undertake crisis management operations where NATO as a whole is not engaged. Forces for these operations will be provided voluntarily by Member States, and in some cases by others. (The same arrangement applies for NATO and UN crisis management operations.)

I discuss ESDP with European counterparts frequently. EU Defence Ministers last met collectively to discuss ESDP and other matters on 4–5 October.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how much depleted uranium was used in bombing campaigns by UK forces in (a) Kosovo during the recent conflict, (b) Serbia during the conflict over Kosovo and (c) Afghanistan in 2001–02. [79695]

Mr. Ingram: None.

Depleted Uranium

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what stocks of weapons containing depleted uranium are held in (a) United Kingdom bases and (b) by United Kingdom forces operating in Iraq. [79654]

Mr. Ingram: I am withholding details in accordance with Exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much depleted uranium was used in bombing campaigns by United Kingdom forces in (a) the 1990–91 Gulf War and (b) bombing campaigns over Iraq since 1991. [79741]

Mr. Ingram: No depleted uranium was used in bombing campaigns by United Kingdom forces in the 1990–1991 Gulf Conflict or in bombing campaigns over Iraq since 1991.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has collated on the effects of depleted uranium exposure on the (a) military personnel and (b) civilian population in Iraq since 1991; and if he will make a statement. [79655]

Mr. Ingram: Many independent reports have been produced that consider the battlefield effects of using depleted uranium (DU) munitions, but none has found widespread DU contamination sufficient to affect the health of the general population or deployed personnel.

The Ministry of Defence has no information on exposure of Iraqi military personnel or civilians to DU. We support proposals by the World Health Organisation to carry out studies to address public health issues in Iraq, including a proposal to explore health effects of environmental risk factors, including DU. The proposals were sent to the Iraq Ministry of Public Health in October 2001 but there has been no response.

3,339 United Kingdom military personnel who served in the Gulf Conflict have now been seen by the Gulf Veterans' Medical Assessment Programme (GVMAP). Physicians at the GVMAP examine all those attending for signs of ill health that could be attributed to exposure to DU, but no such evidence has been found to date.

Under the auspices of the independent Depleted Uranium Oversight Board a test for DU in urine is currently being developed and we hope to be able to make it available to all those who wish to be tested in the first half of next year. In parallel with this, we will also carry out an epidemiological study which will examine the link between exposure to DU and health.

No UK troops who served in the Gulf experienced the highest level of DU. However, 33 United States soldiers were exposed to DU when their vehicles were accidentally hit by DU rounds of whom 17 have embedded DU shrapnel. Their health is closely monitored by the US Government and so far has shown no signs of health problems attributable to DU.

Nuclear Test Veterans

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what negotiations have been undertaken with the representatives of nuclear test veterans; what compensation has been offered; what agreement has been reached; and if he will make a statement. [79656]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has had no recent negotiations with representatives of nuclear test veterans. There are no grounds for general compensation for those who participated in the British atmospheric nuclear tests in the 1950s. Veterans who believe that their health has been affected by participation in the tests may apply for a War Pension.

Volunteer Reservists

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many volunteer reservists have enlisted as sponsored reserves since the programme's inspection; and what the recruitment targets were for sponsored reserves when the programme was introduced. [80293]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Nuclear Installations

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the meaning of the phrase "strengthen the arrangements for consequence management," in paragraph 27 of the Government response to the Defence Select Committee report on Defence and Security in the UK, HC 1230, Session 2001–02, in respect of the vulnerability of nuclear installations to terrorist attack. [80365]

Mr. Ingram: Discussions have taken place involving several Government Departments, the Office for Civil Nuclear Security, the Health and Safety Executive, local authorities, the police and other emergency services, to review the roles and capabilities of those authorities likely to be required to respond to a nuclear incident. Specific importance has been attached to improving co-ordination, communication and the provision of specialist capabilities.

Missile Defence

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimates have been made of the cost of United Kingdom participation in national missile defence; and if he will make a statement. [79652]

Mr. Hoon: No precise estimates can be made at this stage. The United States itself has made no decision on the final shape of its overall missile defence architecture and its final costs have yet to be determined. There are no specific options for the deployment of missile defences for the United Kingdom to assess, and no decision has been made on the acquisition of missile defences.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations have been received from research bodies on peace campaigns concerning national missile defence; and if they will be published by his Department. [79657]

Mr. Hoon: The Ministry of Defence has received numerous representations from various bodies and individuals concerning missile defence; publication of their letters is a matter for them.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions have been held with other NATO member states on the cost, timescale and purpose of national missile defence. [79658]

Mr. Hoon: NATO is studying the options for missile defence specifically for the protection of deployed forces, in addition to discussions on a wider range of missile defence issues. The United Kingdom participates in these NATO discussions, and also engages NATO allies bilaterally on missile defence issues as part of our regular contacts.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what expenditure has been incurred at (a) RAF Fylingdales and (b) Menwith Hill in connection with National Missile Defence; and if he will make a statement. [79694]

Mr. Hoon: We have not received a request from the United States to site elements of missile defence in the United Kingdom, and have not incurred expenditure on any works at RAF Fylingdales or RAF Menwith Hill in preparation for, or anticipation of, any such request.

Iraq

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total cost to date is of maintaining the British force in support of the no-fly zone in Iraq. [79986]

Mr. Ingram: Our records do not separately identify expenditure incurred in maintaining the no fly zones. However, the table below sets out the overall additional expenditure incurred by the Ministry of Defence as a direct result of operations in the Gulf from 1992–1993 onwards.

Year	£ Million
1992–93	551
1993–94	179
1994–95	58
1995–96	14
1996–97	6
1997–98	16
1998–99	35
1999–2000	28
2000–01	25
2001–02 (estimate)	22[1]
2002–03 (estimate)	26[1]

Note:
[1] denotes figure calculated on a resource basis; all previous figures are cash-based.

I will write to my hon. Friend concerning expenditure in 2001–2002 and 2002–2003 and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations have been received from the government of Cyprus or members of the Cypriot public concerning the use of United Kingdom sovereign bases in Cyprus in preparation for a future conflict with Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [79650]

Mr. Hoon: No decision regarding the commitment of United Kingdom Armed Forces to any potential conflict in Iraq has yet been taken. Military action is neither imminent nor inevitable.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many RAF sorties over Iraq there have been (a) north of 30th parallel and (b) south of 30th parallel not covered by the no-fly zone in the last year and what the total volume of explosives dropped in each area was. [79649]

Mr. Hoon: The northern no-fly zone covers the area of Iraq lying north of the 36th parallel. The southern no-fly zone covers the area lying south of the 33rd.

The RAF takes part in Coalition patrols within the no-fly zones. There have been no sorties by the RAF in the free-fly area between the two zones in the last year.

Enron

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what meetings (a) he and (b) his senior departmental officials have had with Enron and its subsidiaries in the last two years. [32431]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Volunteers

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of his staff in each of the past two years have been granted a day's paid leave to work as a volunteer; and if he will make a statement. [39741]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Television Sets

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) analogue and (b) integrated digital television sets his Department has purchased in each of the last 24 months; and if he will make a statement. [38173]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Capita

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how many contracts the Department has with Capita. [38393]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Criminal Damage

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what the cost has been of criminal damage to his Department's buildings in each of the last four years. [44849]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Thematic Networks Programme

Mr. Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures are taken to ensure that EU funding provided to Israel under the Thematic networks programme is not used for projects which could have military applications. [45186]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Saville Inquiry

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what costs have been incurred since 19th December 2001 by his Department in connection with the Saville Inquiry; and what his estimate is of the final cost to his Department. [46027]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Radio Spectrum

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 16 November 2001, Official Report, column 917W, on the radio spectrum, if the review has reported to Ministers; if he will publish the review and any conclusions he has made as a result; and what discussions he has had with (a) the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry and (b) the Chancellor of the Exchequer regarding his findings. [47739]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Entertainment

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent by Ministers in his Department on food, alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks for entertainment purposes in each of the last five years. [47052]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what the cost was of the Department's 2001 staff Christmas Party; and how many people attended. [61667]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Special Advisers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many times special advisers have accompanied Ministers on overseas visits in each of the last five years; which countries were visited; and what the total cost of each individual visit was. [47142]

Dr. Moonie: [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent by departmental special advisers on food, alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks for entertainment purposes in each of the last five years. [46838]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many special advisers were employed by him (a) between 1 May and 31 December 1997 and (b) in each year from 1998 to 2001 inclusive; and what the total amount spent on special advisers by the Department was for each of those years. [41248]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number and expected cost to his Department of special advisers in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [43283]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) on how many occasions between 31 March 2001 and 31 March 2002 (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental special advisers have travelled abroad in an official capacity; what places were visited; and how much each visit cost; [58730]

(2) when he will answer the question from the hon. Member for Chichester, tabled on 22 May, on the official travel of departmental and non-departmental special advisers; [58732]

(3) on how many occasions between 31 March 2001 and 31 March 2002 (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental special advisers have travelled abroad in an official capacity; what places were visited; and how much each visit cost. [80363]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Accommodation

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel are paying (a) nothing or (b) a discounted rate for accommodation on the ground of its being below standard; and if he will provide the information for each service. [80330]

Dr. Moonie: [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) service family accommodation and (b) single living accommodation units were of (i) grade one, (ii) grade two, (iii) grade three and (iv) grade four standard in each year between 1997 and 2001; and if he will make a statement. [80283]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Reserves

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the latest figures are for both establishment and strength for each service and their respective reserve forces. [48326]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what the cost in 2001–02 was of the pay increase to staff in his Department, agencies and the non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible; and what the cost of the forthcoming increase will be in 2002–03; [50412]

(2) how many staff have been employed by his Department in each of the last 10 years; [42463]

(3) how many and what proportion of the staff of his Department are (a) job sharing, (b) term working and (c) engaged in another form of flexible working. [42414]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of his departmental budget he estimates is spent on staff pay; and if he will make a statement. [66366]

Mr. Ingram: [holding answer 4 July 2002]: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Armed Forces (Health Care)

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many armed forces personnel have been treated in the private sector under (a) the ATRA secondary health care initiative, (b) the Waiting List Initiative, (c) the Rapid Treatment Initiative and (d) psychiatric care in each month in 2002; and what the total cost was of that treatment; [80296]

(2) how many (a) officers and (b) personnel from other ranks received medical treatment in the private sector in (i) 2000, (ii) 2001 and (iii) 2002. [80297]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

32 (The Royal) Squadron

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much per hour the RAF charges other Government departments for flying with 32 (The Royal) Squadron; and what proportion of this charge represents the operational costs of the Squadron at Northolt. [79464]

Dr. Moonie: The hourly charge for 32 (The Royal) Squadron aircraft for the current financial year is:

BAe 146	£1,574 (VAT not applicable)
BAe 125	£740 (plus VAT for United Kingdom internal flights)
Twin Squirrel	£988 (plus VAT for United Kingdom internal flights)

It has been assumed that by "operational costs" the hon. Member is referring to the operating cost of 32 (The Royal) Squadron. As such I can confirm that the charges quoted comprise entirely of the variable cost of operating the aircraft and no fixed operating costs of the Squadron are included. The charges include engineering and airframe support costs, costs incurred for handling and landing at civil airports, fuel and travel and subsistence. Unlike the BAe 125 and 146, the Twin Squirrel is a wholly leased aircraft and the charge applied represents the contracted cost of the aircraft.

I also refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him yesterday by my hon. Friend the Member for Paisley, South (Mr. Alexander).

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many flight hours Government ministers have flown during each year since 1997–98 using the jets of 32 (The Royal) Squadron based at Northolt; and how many flight hours each Government department has utilised each year with the jets of 32 (The Royal) Squadron since 1997–98. [79465]

Mr. Ingram: For information relating to Ministerial use of RAF aircraft, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him yesterday by my hon. Friend the Member for Paisley, South (Mr. Alexander).

The information requested regarding flight hours is set out in the table.

Departments	1997–1998	1998–1999	1999–2000	2000–2001	2001–2002	*2002–2003

Total	2,319	1,998	1,624	1,877	2,041	885

Notes:
1. Government Department figures do not include Ministers travel.
2. Ministry of Defence use reflects the fact that MOD personnel of all ranks/grades (as necessary) utilise these aircraft in times of crisis and war for operational purposes. Additionally, in peacetime, when not engaged in these tasks, MOD personnel use the resultant irreducible spare capacity for other communication flying tasks.
* Figures to 30 September.

Defence Exports

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the financial and organisational support provided by the Defence Export Services Organisation to UK industry attending the (a) Aid and Trade International, Switzerland, (b) Pacific 2002, Australia, (c) Asian Air, Singapore, (d) DEFEXPOL, India, (e) FIDEA, Chile, (f) DSA Malaysia, Malaysia, (g) Eurosatory, France, (h) Africa Aerodef, South Africa, (i) Defendory, Greece, (j) Sofex, Jordan, (k) Euronaval, France and (l) Euronaval, Chile arms fairs. [76531]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Combat Helmets

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to provide a combat helmet of the same standard of ballistics protection as the rest of NATO forces. [78462]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

C-17 Aircraft

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many C-17 aircraft are being leased; what plans he has to alter that number; and if he will make a statement. [80295]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Nimrod MRA 4

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the compensation due from BAE Systems for the slippage in the in-service date of the Nimrod MRA4. [80294]

Missiles

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many missiles were fired out to sea in the UK in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [41875]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Coalfield Constituencies

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many and what proportion of his Department's establishments are located in coalfield constituencies. [41801]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Accountancy Contracts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the contracts agreed by his Department with the five largest accountancy firms since May 1997; and what was the total value of contracts with each. [42103]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Public Appointments

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many appointments to public bodies have been made through his Department (a) from April 2000 to March 2001 and (b) since 31 March 2001; and how many of these were (i) men and (ii) women. [42161]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Market Testing

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the functions of his Department that have been (a) market tested and (b) outsourced in each of the last five years, specifying the (i) money saving and (ii) percentage saving in each case. [43004]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Timber

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the companies from which his Department have obtained timber and wood products and the total spent with each firm over the last five years. [43413]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Departmental Contracts

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the 30 largest contracts awarded by his Department from (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999, (c) May 1999 to April 2000, (d) May 2000 to April 2001 and (e) May 2001 to the latest date for which figures are available, stating in each case the values of the contracts and the companies with which the contracts were placed. [43672]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Royal Irish Regiment

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what differential there is between the statutory employment rights enjoyed by (a) personnel serving with the Royal Irish Regiment and civilian staff employed by his Department and (b) other employees in the United Kingdom. [43566]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Army Utilities Management

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what savings have accrued from the improvements to the Army's utilities management in Germany. [44221]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 18 March 2002]: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Justices of the Peace

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of staff at his Department are justices of the peace; and if he has a strategy for his Department to encourage members of staff to become justices of the peace. [44548]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Private Finance Initiative projects have been subject to refinancing after the contracts have been signed; and what has been the financial effect in each case. [50286]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the products of PFI projects will be used by private companies and hired out to the armed services when they are needed; and what arrangements will exist for control by the armed forces of such projects. [72915]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what have been the total salary costs of each of the non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible in each of the last five years. [50301]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the target has been in each of the last five years for efficiency savings as a percentage of total running costs for each of the non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible; and if the target was met. [49632]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

UN Peacekeeping

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his written answer of 20 March 2002, Official Report, column 558W, on UN peacekeeping, how many students have to date attended the Army's 10-day international peace support briefing programmes; and from what countries. [50596]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Smart Cards

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the use of smart card technology in his Department and in the areas for which it is responsible; and what discussions he has had with private companies about the use of smart card technology within his Department. [50486]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Water Coolants

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Anglo-Italian Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions in the last six months (a) he and (b) his officials have met their Italian counterparts; and what subjects were discussed. [56887]

Dr. Moonie: [holding answer 16 May 2002]: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent by his Department on paying pensions to retired employees of his Department in 2001–02; if he will estimate the corresponding amounts to be spent in (a) five years' time, (b) 10 years' time, (c) 20 years' time and (d) 30 years' time; if he will estimate in each case the proportion of such liabilities which will arise from (i) unfunded pension schemes and (ii) pre-funded pension schemes; and in the case of pre-funded schemes, if he will estimate the value of the corresponding pre-funded funds in each of these years. [57366]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 20 May 2002]: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much money was spent by the relevant pension fund on paying pensions to retired members of the armed forces in 2001–02; if he will estimate the corresponding amounts to be spent in (a) five years' time, (b) 10 years' time, (c) 20 years' time and (d) 30 years' time; if he will estimate in each case the proportion of such liabilities which will arise from (i) unfunded pension schemes and (ii) pre-funded pension schemes; and in the case of pre-funded schemes, if he will estimate the value of the corresponding pre-funded funds in each of these years. [66562]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Gorden Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how many applications for war disablement pensions were made by (a) members of the Mercantile Marine and (b) other eligible branches of the armed forces in respect of skin cancer and other associated conditions have been (i) upheld and (ii) rejected by tribunals in each of the past 20 years, for which figures are available. [79491]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Work-related Illness

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many claims for work-related illness were settled by his Department in the last year for which records are available; and what the cost was in compensation; [56081]

(2) how many employees of his Department retired through work-related ill-health in the last year for which records are available; and what the cost was to the Department; [56082]

(3) how many days of sick leave were taken by employees in his Department in the last year for which records are available; what proportion of those were due to work-related illness or injury; and what the cost was to the Department. [56083]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 20 May 2002]: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Redundant Nuclear Warheads

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what opportunities exist for United Kingdom defence companies and research bodies to assist Russia in (a) the dismantling of its redundant nuclear warheads and (b) immobilization of surplus plutonium from dismantled warheads, arising from the new nuclear weapons reduction agreement between Russia and the United States; [57989]

(2) what opportunities exist for British technology and defence companies to assist the United States in the immobilization of surplus plutonium from dismantled redundant nuclear warheads arising from the new nuclear weapons reduction agreement between Russia and the United States. [57988]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Luton, South

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what monies have been provided (a) directly and (b) via agencies for which the Department has responsibility to the Luton, South constituency since 1997. [58587]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Tax Refunds

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence why calculations of tax refunds being made to individuals identified as having been taxed incorrectly on retired pay awarded since 1952 does not take into account negative Treasury interest rates applied throughout the 1970s; and if he will make a statement. [59288]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reason calculations of tax refunds being made to individuals identified as having been taxed incorrectly on retired pay awarded since 1952 have been based on simple interest; and if he will make a statement. [59289]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Written Questions

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of ordinary written Questions for his Department were answered within a week of tabling in each month since June 2001; and what proportion of questions for named day received a substantive answer on that day in each month since June 2001. [58986]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Staff Training

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how much the Department has spent on staff training and development in each of the last five years. [61070]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what has been the (a) cost and (b) saving from the pursuit of the Department's Public Service Agreement targets in each year since they were introduced; [60890]

(2) what the (a) cost and (b) saving has been from the Department's pursuit of Service Delivery Agreement targets in each year since they were introduced. [61630]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Grants

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, which organisations which were in receipt of a grant from him in 1997–98 no longer are; what the annual saving is; which organisations which were not in receipt of a grant in 1997–98 now are; and what the annual cost is. [61396]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Ministerial Meetings

Mrs. Claire Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Ministers and officials had meetings with representatives of (a) the Confederation of British Industry, (b) the Engineering Employees Federation, and (c) the Engineering Marine Training Authority during the last year; who they met; and what the subjects and outcomes of their discussions were. [62211]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Official Photographers

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, on how many occasions during the last 12 months an official photographer has accompanied (a) him and (b) other Ministers in his Department on official visits (i) overseas and (ii) within the UK; what (A) travel expenses, (B) costs of equipment and processing, (C) staff payment and (D) other costs were incurred; what publications official photographs have appeared in during the last 12 months and what terms and conditions were attached to the publication of such photographs; and whether photographs taken on official visits are available for use in non-governmental literature. [62831]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Competitive Tendering

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions in the last 12 months the requirement to engage in a competitive tendering process has been waived by his Department due to national security obligations under paragraph 6(h) of the supply regulations. [62815]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how many statutory instruments have been (a) introduced, (b) removed and (c) amended by his Department since 1st January; and what the (i) cost and (ii) saving has been in each case. [64612]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Energy Costs

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the estimated (a) level and (b) cost of energy use in his Department and associated agencies was in each year since 1997; what proportion of energy was generated from renewable sources; and if he will make a statement. [65950]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Public Inquiries (Phone Lines)

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is on using 0870 telephone numbers for inquiries by the public to the Department and its agencies. [66199]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Buildings Insurance

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost of buildings insurance to his Department was (a) before and (b) after 11 September 2001. [66923]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many and what proportion of the public service agreements of his Department set out in the document Public Services for the Future 1998 have been met; and if he will make a statement. [68711]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 10 July 2002]: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Empty Properties

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the empty residential properties in each London borough in the ownership of his Department and its agencies, giving (a) the type of accommodation, (b) how long each property has been vacant and (c) what the intended future use is of the property. [69494]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Aircraft Carriers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many jobs will be created in Portsmouth by making it the home for new aircraft carriers; and if he will make a statement. [70758]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Sustainable Development

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the interdepartmental discussions on Criterion 8 of the Consolidated Criteria relating to sustainable development. [71539]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Education and Training

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the annual cost of education and training in each service in each year since 1997. [71662]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Employment Costs

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the employment costs, including benefits, of (a) all ministers representing his Department and (b) special advisers and their support staff retained by his Department. [80159]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Anglo-French Discussions

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what recent discussions ministers and officials have had with the French Government about French participation in the United Kingdom aircraft carrier programme; [76568]

(2) whether the possibility of France joining in the United Kingdom aircraft carrier programme will be a factor to be taken into account in the decision to award the contract to Thales or BAe Systems. [76567]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

SA80 Rifles

Mr. Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if SA80 rifles have been withdrawn from his Department's stocks for export. [77371]

Mr. Ingram: No. However, we are currently considering options for dealing with the expected excess of SA80 A1 weapons that do not require upgrading to the A2 version.

HMS Albion

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what technical difficulties have been encountered in the construction of HMS Albion; and if he will make a statement. [78660]

Dr. Moonie: HMS Albion is the first of a new class of Landing Platform Dock vessels. She is being constructed by BAE Systems Marine Ltd at their Barrow in Furness shipyard. Technical difficulties encountered during her construction have been largely due to the use of a computer aided design tool that was new to the shipyard, immature design information being released for production, the use of modern build techniques and some novel warship design features such as the diesel/electric propulsion system. It is not unusual for technical issues to arise during the design and construction of the first of such a complex warship class and BAE Systems are working hard to overcome each of the issues. A revised programme for Albion has been agreed with BAE Systems Marine and she is expected to enter service in July 2003. The company is making stringent efforts to recover up to seven weeks of that slippage.

Bullying

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the Army indicated when last questioned that they believe that (a) harassment, (b) discrimination and (c) bullying are problems in (i) their immediate area of work and (ii) the Army as a whole; what percentage of those responding this represents; what percentage of actual strength this represents; and if he will make a statement. [78634]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Medical Specialists

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many medical specialists, and in which specialisations, there are in the Reserves; [78319]

(2) what plans he has to (a) call up and (b) put on notice members of the defence medical services reserve forces; whether this will include former TA field hospitals; which specialities are being put on notice for call up in order to supplement regular defence medical services field hospitals and other facilities; and if he will make a statement. [78638]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Military Equipment (Gifts)

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what items of military equipment have been given as a gift to another state, and when, since June 1997; and what the estimated value of the gift was in each case. [78650]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Eurofighter

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many orders have been received for the Eurofighter (Typhoon). [79272]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mercantile Marine

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many applications for war disablement pensions were made by members of the Mercantile Marine, in each of the last 20 years for which figures are available; and how many of these were (a) accepted and (b) rejected; [79462]

(2) how many applications were made for war disablement pensions by members of the eligible branches of the armed forces, other than members of the Mercantile Marine, in each of the past 20 years for which figures are available; and of these, how many were (a) accepted and (b) rejected. [79492]

Dr. Moonie: The tables set out the figures available relating to applications for war disablement pension, from members of the Mercantile Marine and eligible members of the Armed Forces. A separate figure for rejected claims is not available. Information on applications before 1996 is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Note:
[1] May include claims uncleared from the previous year.

Mr. Gorden Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many applications for war disablement pensions were made by (a) members of the Mercantile Marine and (b) other eligible branches of the armed forces in respect of skin cancer and other associated conditions have been (i) upheld and (ii) rejected by tribunals in each of the past 20 years, for which figures are available. [79491]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Unexploded Ordnance

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what changes there have been to the British Army's practice in clearing unexploded ordnance in foreign training grounds used by our forces since his Department's payment of compensation to the victims of British munitions in Kenya; [80291]

(2) whether his Department has adopted guidelines to ensure that all unexploded munitions are cleared from foreign military training grounds used by British forces. [80289]

Mr. Ingram: The British Army employs the same robust procedures for clearing unexploded ordnance overseas as it does in the United Kingdom. In Kenya there has been an increase in Explosive Ordnance Clearance (EOC) in the last two years, in order to minimise the risk to local civilians. This work includes the location and destruction of unexploded munitions irrespective of which nation's armed forces have fired them. No change in practice have been made subsequent to compensation payments.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to contract clearance of unexploded ordnance at foreign military training sites used by British forces to specialist firms with appropriate expertise. [80290]

Mr. Ingram: There are currently no plans for the Ministry of Defence to contract out ordnance clearance on foreign military training sites.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Kenyan nationals are locally employed in assisting the British Army to clear unexploded ordnance at the Archer's Post training ground in Kenya; and how much of the training ground has been cleared. [80219]

Mr. Ingram: The British Army employs two Locally Employed Civilians (LECs) as Range Officers on behalf of the Kenyan Department of Defence (DoD). These LECs do not participate in the destruction of munitions, as this is the responsibility of Army personnel. The British Army conducts clearance operations on all areas of ranges that it uses for live firing.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what provision the British Army has made to educate Kenyan civilians who live and work near the military training ground at Archer's Post about associated dangers. [80292]

Mr. Ingram: Each year, the British Army conducts an education programme for the local civilians regarding the hazards of unexploded munitions. This informs people in the Archer's Post area, including the nomadic farmers, of the different types of Kenyan and other munitions that they might find in the area.

John Bredenkamp

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contacts his Department's officials have had in the last three years with (a) John Bredenkamp and (b) companies controlled by or associated with John Bredenkamp. [80331]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence has extensive contact with industry and individuals. It would therefore entail disproportionate costs to establish what contacts the Department's officials have had with particular individuals or companies in the last three years. The Government is aware of the allegations made against the named individual in the UN Panel Report, and the appropriate authorities are looking into them.

State Opening of Parliament

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many armed forces personnel took part in the ceremony for the State Opening of Parliament in 2001; and how many he estimates will take part in 2002. [79842]

Mr. Ingram: The number of Armed Forces personnel who took part in the ceremony for the State Opening of Parliament in 2001 was 1,121. Five hundred and twenty personnel will participate in 2002. This reduction is the result of preparatory deployments against the contingency of industrial action by the Fire Brigade Union.

Servicemen (Absenteeism)

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many servicemen are absent without leave from their units; and what the figure was on 1 October 2001. [76667]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 24 October 2002]: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what public consultations have been commenced by his Department in each month since 10 October; and what the (a) start date, (b) closing date and (c) website address of each were. [80265]

Mr. Ingram: None.

Eurofighter Typhoon

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Eurofighter Typhoons will be ordered by the armed forces; and when the armed forces will take delivery of the Eurofighter Typhoon. [78632]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave on 10 July 2002, Official Report, column 878W to the right hon. Member for Fylde (Mr. Jack). There has been no change in the Government's commitment to the Eurofighter Typhoon. The Royal Air Force expects to take delivery of its total fleet of aircraft during the next 12 years.

Parliamentary Questions

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will answer the question of 22 July from the hon. Member for Lewisham, Deptford. [79868]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is still being collated. Once this is available, I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Public Consultations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what public consultations have been commenced by his Department in each month since 10 October; and what the (a) start date, (b) closing date and (c) website address of each were. [80265]

Mr. Ingram: None.

Royal Ordnance (Bishopton)

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the NAO report on the Royal Ordnance factory at Bishopton will be published. [46425]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

HEALTH

GP Lists

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average general practitioner list in Worthing West. [74766]

Ms Blears: The information requested is not available centrally.

NHS Staff (Confidentiality)

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to publish his Department's new code of practice on confidentiality and consent for people working in the National Health Service. [73753]

Mr. Hutton: "Confidentiality: A Code of Practice for NHS Staff" is expected to be published in spring 2003 following a public consultation exercise running from 22 October 2002 to 31 January 2003.

Obesity

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations he has received in the past 12 months about obesity matters from (a) hon. and right hon. Members, (b) organisations and (c) members of the public. [74463]

Ms Blears: Over the past year the Department has received 31 Parliamentary Questions, 34 letters from hon. and right hon. Members, and 15 letters from organisations and the general public directly concerning obesity matters.

NHS Lists

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average NHS patient list size for (a) general practitioners and (b) dental practitioners, broken down by each primary care trust in England. [74257]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Correspondence

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his Department is doing to improve its performance in providing replies to (a) letters and (b) questions from hon. Members. [74867]

Ms Blears: Following the events and review of procedures described in the reply that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave my hon. Friend the Member for Ellesmere Port and Neston (Mr. Miller) on 25 March 2002 Official Report, column 751W, we have made many improvements to our parliamentary unit, including additional staff, better accommodation, setting up a new electronic tracking system, and enhanced monitoring and oversight of work flows and working practices. We envisage that these measures will lead to faster response times in the Department's handling of Members' questions.

Change programmes are being established in all Government Departments, designed to build capacity for high performance. The expectation is that departments will achieve a step change in performance in line with the four principles set out in Reforming Our Public Services: Principles into Practice, published in March 2002.

In terms of correspondence, a customer service project has been set up under the Department's change programme with the following objectives:

To improve significantly the Department's performance in handling telephone, written and e-mail enquiries from members of the public and their representatives; and,

To maximise the potential of the Department's website and other forms of communication media as a source of information to the public.

This project will give further impetus to improving performance in the timeliness and quality of responses to correspondence.

PSA Testing

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what processes are in place to inform men that they can ask their general practitioner about the PSA test and the issues that surround it. [75745]

Ms Blears: Evidence-based primary care resource packs were sent to all general practitioners (GPs) in England in September 2002, meeting a National Health Service Cancer Plan commitment to ensure that all men considering a prostate specific antigen (PSA) test are given information concerning the benefits, limitations and risks associated with receiving a test.

The packs are primarily aimed at GPs and practice nurses to use in counselling men with no symptoms who are worried about prostate cancer. A leaflet is available for men to take home to read in their own time, to enable them to make an informed choice on whether or not to have a PSA test. If they do decide to go ahead with the test, they can have it free on the NHS.

Nuclear Installations

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations his Department has received concerning the health implications of working and living in the vicinity of a nuclear power station. [75793]

Ms Blears: Since the mid 1980s the Department has received many representations about the possible health effects of nuclear installations in the United Kingdom.

The committee on medical aspects of radiation in the environment (COMARE) was established in November 1985 in response to the final recommendation of the report of the independent advisory group chaired by Sir Douglas Black. Its remit is to look at the possible health effects of all source of radiation whether natural or man made, including radioactive materials discharged from nuclear installations. The committee's terms of reference are "to assess and advise Government and the Devolved Administrations on the health effects of natural and man-made radiation in the environment and to assess the adequacy of the available data and the need for further research". COMARE has now published seven reports and has also published several statements into allegations of health effects around nuclear installations. The committee has also made many recommendations for further investigations and examines these studies as they become available. Details of the committee's reports can be found on its web site at www.open.gov.uk/doh/comare.htm.

Cancer Care

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what steps his Department is taking to ensure that every cancer patient within the NHS receives treatment from surgeons and physicians who are specialists in their field; and by when he expects this target to be met. [75774]

Ms Blears: All doctors must work within the limits of their professional competence, as required by General Medical Council (GMC) guidance, Good Medical Practice. Doctors should not therefore be given or take on responsibility for patients if they are not competent to do so. This is to ensure that patients receive the highest quality of care and have the best chances of making a full recovery.

The National Health Service in England employs doctors in training grades who are not yet qualified to work independently and staff grade doctors, some of whom are trained specialists. NHS Consultants supervise the work of all of these doctors and are responsible for the care patients receive. Consultants are all trained specialists included on the Specialist Register held by the GMC.

The Department and more recently the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE), has produced Improving Outcomes Guidance (IOG) on how services should be organised for specific types of cancer. The guidance includes recommendations on areas including the establishment of specialist multidisciplinary teams. Targets for the implementation of IOG form part of the priorities and planning framework.

The NHS Cancer Plan set out a target of providing nearly 1,000 extra cancer specialists by 2006. The NHS is on track to meet this target with an extra 500 cancer consultants between 1999 and 2002.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations his Department has received concerning delays in obtaining NICE guidance on cancer treatments. [75799]

Ms Blears: The Department has received numerous letters and other representations regarding delays in obtaining guidance from the National Institute of Clinical Excellence (NICE) on cancer treatments.

The appraisal process, from referral to completion, has been designed to allow the full participation of patients, clinicians, companies and stakeholders. NICE is fully aware of the need to ensure that the process is as streamlined as possible, without losing any of the important safeguards it contains, in order to publish guidance soon after the treatments are launched.

It is not acceptable for funding authorities to refuse to fund a newly licensed treatment just because it is awaiting appraisal by NICE. Decisions on funding should be based on local consideration of the available evidence when NICE appraisals are awaited.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of non-listed cancer patients require (a) diagnostic X-ray examinations, (b) ultrasound investigations for gynaecological and obstetric problems, (c) mammograms for breast cancer and (d) CT scans; and what plans he has to introduce these patients to the national cancer waiting lists published by his Department. [75766]

Ms Blears: Data are not collected centrally on diagnostic tests for cancer patients. The National Health Service Cancer Plan set out waiting time targets for cancer. These targets aim to reduce the amount of time patients have to wait from urgent referral to beginning treatment, which will include the diagnostic phase, and from diagnosis of cancer to first treatment. We have no plans to include waiting times for individual diagnostic tests in cancer waiting times monitoring.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are in place to ensure uniform reporting standards in cancer care; and if he will make a statement on cancer care data reporting standards. [78929]

Ms Blears: Centrally collected information on cancer services is limited to the collection of data to monitor the waiting times targets in the NHS Cancer Plan and the collection of data on coverage for the National Health Service screening services.

All of the definitions relating to these processes are nationally standardised and are made available in advance to enable local organisations to ensure that all data are formatted to the required standard.

The Manual of Cancer Service Standards, published 2 January 2001, provides a framework to enable local cancer networks to assess the quality of services they provide.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what mechanisms he has in place to ensure the efficacy of cancer care data gathering measures. [78927]

Ms Blears: Data on the diagnosis and treatment of patients with cancer are gathered locally, in accordance with data definitions which have been widely consulted on and agreed. The data definitions are published on the NHS Information Authority website, in dataset change notices (DSCNs). The National Health Service is responsible for ensuring the efficacy of the data.

NHS Trust Land

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each NHS trust, the value of land and buildings disposed of in the last three years; what targets he has set for the next three years; and what proposals he has to amend the guidance on disposals so that more affordable housing can be provided for low paid employees in the NHS. [76389]

Ms Blears: A list of National Health Service trust disposals by value during the last three years has been placed in the Library.

The Department does not set targets for NHS trust disposals of land and buildings. Guidance on the disposals of surplus NHS property is contained in Estatecode which is continually kept under review.

All NHS trusts have to prepare an estates strategy. As part of that strategy the need for residential accommodation for NHS staff has to be assessed before any assets are declared surplus. However, in some instances it may be more appropriate for the land or asset to be developed in a wider context of sustainable communities of which a component could be housing for NHS staff.

The Department is keen to ensure that an adequate provision of affordable housing for NHS employees is available. Since publication of the NHS Plan agreements have been reached and/or accommodation made available for over 2,000 additional residential units in London. Fifty per cent, of the £250 million starter homes initiative has been allocated to nurses and health care workers.

Health Professions Council

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to allow more representatives from the professional advisory committees onto the Health Professionals Council; and if he will make a statement. [76795]

Mr. Hutton: The membership of the Health Professions Council is set out by statute in the Health Professions Order 2002 and the Government has no plans to change that. The Health Professions Council has power to establish professional advisory committees to obtain advice on professional matters for the council and its statutory committees. The size, format and composition of any such committees are a matter for the Health Professions Council to determine.

Out-Patient Consultations

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many out-patient consultations with private patients were held in NHS hospitals in each NHS region in each of the last six years. [76608]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested will be placed in the Library.

Seroxat

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what investigation he has made into the (a) side effects associated with and (b) general safety of Seroxat; [76966]

(2) what representations he has received regarding the safety of the antidepressant drug Seroxat; and if he will make a statement. [76965]

Ms Blears: The Medicines Control Agency (MCA) has received a range of representations including parliamentary questions, letters from hon. and right hon. Members, patients and health care professionals about the safety of Seroxat.

Seroxat (paroxetine) is a member of a group of drugs known as selective serotonin reuptake inhibitors (SSRIs). Before a product is granted a licence for use in the UK it must meet appropriate standards of safety, quality and efficacy. After licensing the safety of all medicines including SSRIs is continually monitored by the MCA and the independent expert advisory body, the committee on safety of medicines (CSM) and any new evidence which emerges is carefully reviewed.

The MCA/CSM carried out a major review of all side effects associated with SSRIs, which was completed in 2000 and resulted in product information for all SSRIs including Seroxat being updated and harmonised to reflect the common safety profiles of these medicines. An article in "Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance" in 2000 informed prescribers about this review and reminded them about the risk of withdrawal reactions.

Withdrawal reactions are an important and well-recognised side effect of Seroxat and also occur with the other SSRIs. The MCA/CSM warned prescribers about the possibility of withdrawal reactions associated with Seroxat via an article in the bulletin "Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance" in 1993. The CSM re-reviewed the issue of withdrawal reactions and possible dependence with Seroxat and the other SSRIs in 1998–99. From detailed review of all available data, the CSM concluded that all SSRIs may be associated with withdrawal reactions on stopping but on current evidence they are not associated with dependence. As a result of this review product information for all SSRIs was updated in relation to withdrawal reactions. This issue was also reviewed at a European level by the committee on proprietary medicinal products which reached similar conclusions.

The product information for Seroxat which includes the summary of product characteristics for prescribers and the patient information leaflet, contains full details of side effects and warnings about withdrawal reactions. Doctors are advised to consider gradual tapering of dose when Seroxat is discontinued rather than abruptly stopping to avoid withdrawal symptoms.

Teenage Pregnancy Strategy

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many abortions have been performed on girls (a) under the age of 16 and (b) under the age of 18 since commencement of the Teenage Pregnancy Strategy; and what these figures are, expressed as a percentage of (i) those girls to whom contraception, including emergency contraception, has been provided through the strategy and (ii) the total number of girls in each age range. [78065]

Ms Blears: The Government's teenage pregnancy strategy was launched in June 1999.

The following table provides abortion numbers and rates for resident women of England and Wales, aged under 16 and 16–19, for the years 1999, 2000 and 2001. Rates for under 16s are based on the population of women aged 13–15. The information requested is not available for under 18s.

	Under 16s Number	Under 16s Rate	16–19 Number	16–19 Rate
1999	3600	3.8	32800	26.0
2000	3700	3.8	33200	26.7
2001	3600	3.7	33400	26.1

Information on abortion data as a percentage of those girls to whom contraception, including emergency contraception, has been provided through the strategy, is not available as requested.

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many sexually transmitted infections have been recorded in girls (a) under the age of 16 and (b) under the age of 18 since commencement of the Teenage Pregnancy Strategy; and what these figures are, expressed as a percentage of (i) those girls to whom contraception including emergency contraception, has been provided through the strategy and (ii) the total number of girls in each age range. [78066]

Ms Blears: The Government's teenage pregnancy strategy was launched in June 1999. The table shows numbers of females diagnosed with the following sexually transmitted infections: infectious syphilis, uncomplicated gonorrhoea, uncomplicated chlamydial infection, first attack genital herpes simplex virus and first attack genital warts, for the years 1999, 2000 and 2001. Rates per 100,000 13–15 year olds and 16–19 year olds in the population are in brackets. Data for the under 18 age band is not collected.

Condition	(All)	1999	2000	2001
Region	England
Sex	Female
Age group	Under 16	1404 (156)	1510 (164)	1765 (192)

Information on sexually transmitted infections data as a percentage of those young women to whom contraception, including emergency contraception has been provided through the strategy, is not available as requested.

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which (a) pharmacies and (b) supermarkets in England and Wales are authorised to provide emergency contraception, including the so-called morning after pill, to teenagers under the age of 16 years; since when each business has been authorised to do so; and on what terms the provision of emergency contraception is authorised. [78070]

Ms Blears: Information on independent, chain or supermarket pharmacies providing emergency contraception is not collected centrally. The involvement of pharmacies in the National Health Service provision of emergency contraception is a local decision taken by the primary care trusts in liaison with local pharmacies.

Pharmacists providing emergency contraception under NHS arrangements do so under patient group directions (PGD). A PGD is a written instruction for the supply or administration of medicines to groups of patients without an individualised doctor's prescription. The supply of medicines under PGDs remains under medical supervision.

PGDs are drawn up locally under regulations and guidance issued in August 2000. They apply to pharmacists, nurses and other designated health professionals and are authorised by the clinical governance lead in the primary care trust or community NHS trust.

Pharmacists providing emergency contraception to under 16s do so under the established legal framework for all health professionals. This involves assessing the young person's competence to understand the choices they are making and encouraging them to talk to their parents. Pharmacists are trained to ensure that young women are informed about and encouraged to visit local services that provide regular forms of contraception and condoms to protect against sexually transmitted infections.

All health professionals, including pharmacists, are bound by their professional code of confidentiality. A young person's request for confidentiality is respected unless there are serious child protection issues.

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many conceptions have been recorded in girls (a) under the age of 16 and (b) under the age of 18 since the commencement of the Teenage Pregnancy Strategy; and what these figures are expressed as (i) a percentage of those girls to whom contraception, including emergency contraception, has been provided through the strategy and (ii) a percentage of the total number of girls in each age range. [78005]

Ms Blears: The Government's teenage pregnancy strategy was launched in June 1999.

The table shows conception numbers and rates by age of woman at conception for residents of England for 1999 and 2000. Rates for under 16s and under 18s are based on the population of women aged 13–15 and 15–17 respectively. The data for 2000 remains provisional.

	1999 Number	1999 Rate	2000 Number	2000 Rate
Under 16	7408	8.2	7617	8.3
Under 18	39,247	44.7	38,690	43.6

Information on conception data as a percentage of those girls to whom contraception, including emergency contraception, has been provided through the strategy, is not available as requested.

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which schools in England and Wales are authorised to provide (a) contraception and (b) emergency contraception to their pupils; since when each school has been authorised to do so; and in which schools and on what terms (i) contraception and (ii) emergency contraception is available to girls and boys under the age of 16 in these schools. [78067]

Ms Blears: Information on the number of schools providing contraception as part of a school based health service is not collected centrally.

The provision of school based health services is a decision for the governing body of the individual school, where the governing body and school community identify a need. Services should be developed in consultation with parents and information clearly provided as part of the school's sex and relationship education policy.

Within a school based service, contraception, including emergency contraception, is only provided to young people under 16 by health professionals under medical supervision. This includes the supply by school nurses, working to patient group directions. A patient group direction is a written instruction for the supply or administration of medicines to groups of patients without an individualised doctor's prescription. There are no circumstances where teachers provide contraception.

Health professionals can provide contraception to young people under 16 provided they are satisfied that the young person is competent to understand fully the implications of any treatment and to make a choice of the treatment involved. Health professionals work within an established legal framework which involves assessing the young person's competence to understand the choices they are making and encouraging them to talk to their parents. All professionals are bound by their professional code of confidentiality. A young person's request for confidentiality is respected unless there are serious child protection issues.

School based health services provide advice on a wide range of health and emotional issues. The benefits of providing pupils with easy access to one to one advice from a health professional are recognised in a recent OFSTED report "Sex and Relationships" (2002), which cites a school based clinic as an example of best practice.

Hospital Chaplain

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 15 October 2002, Official Report, column 795W, what access to information on a patient's religious affiliation a hospital chaplain will have in the event of needing to administer the last rites to an unconscious persion in extremis. [78301]

Ms Blears: Where a patient is incapable of providing consent, perhaps through serious or terminal illness, it is possible for hospital staff to disclose their religious affiliation to a hospital chaplain, as this may in the circumstances be in the best interests of the patient concerned.

Ghana

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what meetings Ministers have had with representatives of the Ghanaian Government in 2002. [77994]

Ms Blears: There have been no meetings between Ministers and representatives of the Ghanaian Government in 2002.

NHS Direct

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if nurses operating on NHS Direct are able to give only pre-set answers to queries. [77604]

Ms Blears: NHS Direct nurse advisors use their experience and expertise alongside a computerised decision support system (algorithms), as part of the National Health Service clinical assessment system (CAS) to enable them to identify the nature of the call and assess the needs of the caller.

NHS Direct defines what it requires of its nurses through a set of competency statements. Nurses can be recruited from any specialty provided they meet these competencies, although they must have between three to five years post-qualification experience.

There is a need to maintain a balance between using CAS to support the clinical decision whilst allowing scope for professional judgement by the nurse.

Jams Regulations

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the organisations being consulted by the Food Standards Agency about the revision of the Jams Regulations. [77821]

Ms Blears: On 1 August this year, the Food Standards Agency wrote to approximately one hundred interested parties to seek preliminary views on the drafting of new Jams and Similar Products Regulations. This letter was also placed on the Agency's website. A copy of the letter, together with a list of recipients, has been placed in the Library.

The draft Regulations will be the subject of a further full public consultation in the new year.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons the Government did not secure reserved descriptions in the EC Jams Directive (2001/113/EC) for (a) curd, (b) flavour curd, (c) lemon cheese and (d) mincemeat. [77822]

Ms Blears: The purpose of the EC Jams Directive is to harmonise Community provisions relating to Jams and similar products.

Since fruit curd and mincemeat products are not produced in any significant quantities in other Member States, it is more appropriate for the composition of these products to be controlled in national, rather than European Union, legislation.

Poultry Meat

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the incidence and the levels of nitrofurans detected in poultry meat imported from Brazil. [77823]

Ms Blears: Between 1 January 2002 and 14 October 2002, the United Kingdom is aware that 19 rapid alerts, sent via the EU's rapid alert system for food and feed, have been issued regarding the detection of nitrofurans in 28 samples of Brazilian poultry meat. The average level of nitrofuran metabolites in the samples was 26µg/kg. Five samples exceeded 50µg/kg with the highest level being 120µg/kg for the nitrofuran metabolite AMOZ. Residues of nitrofurans should not be present at any level in food. No conclusion can be drawn regarding the frequency of contamination, as there is no data on how many samples of Brazilian poultry meat have been the subject of testing.

PET Scanners

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many PET scanners there are in England and at which hospitals; [77945]

(2) What the cost is of a PET scanner to the National Health Service. [77946]

Ms Blears: There are five positron emission tomography (PET) scanners in National Health Service hospitals in England used for routine clinical assessments. They are situated at Guys, St. Thomas', Middlesex, Mount Vernon and Hammersmith Hospitals. An additional private scanner is situated in Harley Street. Four other PET scanners are used primarily for research and are located in dedicated research facilities in London, Cambridge and Manchester.

The initial capital outlay for a fully equipped PET Scanner and associated facilities is approximately £4.2 million, with annual running costs of approximately £1.02 million.

Hospital Visits

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals (a) he and (b) his Ministers visited since June 2001. [77964]

Ms Blears: Since 1 June 2001, Ministers in this Department have visited 117 hospitals. Fifteen of these visits were made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State.

Hormone Replacement Therapy

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effect of taking HRT long term on (a) the incidence of (i) breast cancer and (ii) osteoporosis and (b) the quality of life of women. [78570]

Ms Blears: The Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM) and its Expert Working Group on Hormone Replacement Therapy (HRT) have reviewed the long-term safety of HRT as new information has become available. In 2001, the United Kingdom was actively involved in a European-wide review of all available evidence relating to HRT use in order to provide consistent core product information throughout Europe. Following the publication of further studies relating to the long-term effects of HRT earlier this year, the CSM re-convened its Expert Working Group (EWG) on HRT to examine in detail all the latest evidence. In light of the findings of its EWG, CSM has made further recommendations for product information to ensure that the advice for women and doctors accurately reflects current knowledge.

A very small increase in the risk of developing breast cancer in women on long-term HRT was first recognised in 1997. Women and health professionals were warned of this risk through an article in the drug safety bulletin "Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance" and product information was updated. Among women aged 50 who do not use HRT, approximately 45 in every 1000 will develop breast cancer by the age of 70. Recently published studies have confirmed that this number will increase to about 47 per 1000 women who take HRT for 5 years, about 51 per 1000 women who take HRT for 10 years, and about 57 per 1000 women who take HRT for 15 years.

In the UK, HRT products are indicated for the treatment of menopausal symptoms, and some products are also licensed for the prevention of osteoporosis. Data relating to the effectiveness of HRT in preventing bone fractures were reviewed by CSM at the time of licensing and were judged to support "the prevention of osteoporosis" as an indication for HRT. Further evidence was provided in studies published earlier this year for a significant reduction in the number of hip fractures with long-term HRT use.

A recent trial in women with pre-existing heart disease examined cardiovascular effects of long-term HRT and also considered "quality of life" indicators. Although the findings of this trial were mixed, the women suffering from post-menopausal symptoms experienced an overall improvement in "quality of life". Based on all currently available evidence, the benefits of short-term use of HRT for the relief of menopausal symptoms are judged to outweigh the risks. The decision to use HRT should be discussed by a woman with her doctor on an individual basis and the risks and benefits regularly reappraised with continued HRT use.

Prescription Dispensary Systems

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on developing a national specification for automated prescription dispensary systems. [78958]

Ms Blears: Automated dispensing systems are seen as part of the Integrated Care Record Service (ICRS). The ICRS implementation will run up to 2008 by which time a unified patient record system will exist for all National Health Service patients. This will include the functionality of electronic prescribing, pharmacy systems and, where appropriate, robotic dispensing systems. Funding for this programme over the next three years will be announced in the autumn.

In this context the Department is considering the recommendation from the Audit Commission that a national specification for automated dispensary systems should be commissioned and that earmarked funds should also be considered for the introduction of these systems.

Reporting Rates

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the reporting rates are to the Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre by (a) public health laboratories and (b) NHS microbiology laboratories. [78788]

Ms Blears: Information on reporting rates from Public Health Laboratory Service and National Health Service laboratories is not available. However, information available from the communicable disease surveillance centre shows that a total of 157,499 reports were received from NHS laboratories in 2001 and 180,503 reports from PHLS laboratories. It is estimated that the PHLS carries out over 40 per cent. of the NHS microbiology testing requirements.

Public Health Laboratory Service

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the preparedness of systems to replace the Public Health Laboratory Service. [78783]

Ms Blears: In the Chief Medical Officer's strategy for combating infectious diseases, Getting ahead of the Curve, he proposed subsuming the Public Health Laboratory Service (PHLS), the centre for applied microbiology and research, the national radiological protection board and the national focus for chemical incidents into a single new body, the Health Protection Agency (HPA).

The specialist and reference functions of the PHLS, mostly the Central Public Health Laboratory, and the communicable disease surveillance centre are to enter the HPA in their entirety, retaining their existing systems.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what assessment he has made of the impact on the existing effectiveness of the National Network of Microbiology Laboratories of the proposed changes to the Public Health Laboratory Service. [78785]

Ms Blears: We are aware of the informal microbiology networking arrangements currently managed by the Public Health Laboratory Service (PHLS). We intend to strengthen and enhance the current PHLS arrangements in the process of transferring the routine microbiology laboratories to National Health Service trusts and to build on their example of good practice.

The Chief Executive of the NHS has written to the chief executives of the receiving NHS trusts emphasising the need for the transfer process to be as smooth and efficient as possible. Maintenance and enhancement of the he existing functional arrangements between laboratories currently in the PHLS is clearly an important part of the efficiency of the transfer process.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when new replacement managed pathology networks are proposed to be established and effective to replace the Public Health Laboratory Service. [78784]

Ms Blears: As outlined in the recently published document, Future arrangements for microbiology laboratory services, all Public Health Laboratory Service (PHLS) laboratories, except for those designated as Health Protection Agency (HPA) laboratories, will transfer into the management of National Health Service trusts on 1 April 2003.

The Department of Health document, Pathology—The Essential Service, Draft guidance on modernising pathology services, supported the development of managed pathology networks as an effective means of delivering improved pathology services.

The consultation period for this document ended on 30 September 2002. The results of the consultation are currently being considered. It is anticipated that new guidance will be released to the NHS in the new year.

Phsyical Activity Pilot Projects

Patsy Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish further details of the physical activity pilot projects announced in May; and when the £2.5m funding for the projects is to be made available. [79184]

Ms Blears: Primary care trusts based in neighbourhood renewal fund areas were invited to submit expressions of interest by their regional directors of Public Health last month. These are currently being sifted by regional panels. The short-listed applicants will be asked to submit full applications by 20 December 2002. Awards will be announced in Spring 2003.

Alcohol Abuse

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to reduce the waiting time for treatment for alcohol abuse; and if he will make a statement. [79375]

Ms Blears: Data on waiting times for alcohol treatment are not collected centrally as a matter of routine.

The Cabinet Office Strategy Unit and the Department of Health are currently conducting a joint consultation exercise on the national alcohol harm reduction strategy. The consultation exercise will run until 15 January 2003 and the strategy itself is due to be published in Summer 2003. The consultation exercise will seek the views of a wide range of stakeholders on a broad spectrum of alcohol misuse issues, including alcohol treatment. Copies are available in the Library or at: www.strategy.gov.uk/2002/alcohol/consultationdoc.shtml or, www.doh.gov.uk/alcohol/alcoholstrategy.htm

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths from alcohol abuse of (a) women and (b) men there were in each year from 1997 to 2001. [79376]

Ms Blears: Information collected centrally about the cause of deaths does not systematically record whether a death is attributable to alcohol misuse. A number of health and lifestyle factors can contribute to diseases such as cancer, stroke and coronary heart disease, and it can be difficult to isolate alcohol consumption as the most important of these factors.

A research review commissioned by the Department in 1997 concluded that between 5,000 and 40,000 deaths are attributable to alcohol misuse each year in England and Wales.

Drug and Alcohol Abuse

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the results of the separation of support for drug and alcohol reduction strategies; and if he will make a statement. [79374]

Ms Blears: In 1998 the United Kingdom Anti-Drug Co-ordination Unit (UKADCU) developed the national drug strategy. The focus of this strategy was illegal drugs, crime reduction and enforcement. Key planks of the strategy centred upon availability and supply issues that would clearly not have been applicable to legal substances. As alcohol is not illegal it was decided it would be inappropriate to include it in this strategy.

The Government are committed to implementing the national alcohol harm reduction strategy by 2004, and work on developing the strategy is currently being taken forward by the Cabinet Office Strategy Unit, the Department of Health and other Government Departments. The strategy is due to be published in Summer 2003, and it will contain recommendations on the most effective ways of implementation across Government, including any links to be made with the implementation of the drugs strategy.

Hospices

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase funds to hospices (a) in the UK and (b) in Lancashire. [79577]

Ms Blears: The NHS Cancer Plan, published in September 2000, pledged that the National Health Service contribution to the costs of specialist palliative care (including hospices) would increase by £50 million by 2004.

Progress to date has been slow. We have therefore asked Professor Mike Richards, the National Cancer Director, to work with the NHS and the voluntary sector to develop proposals for a new approach to specialist palliative care funding that will ensure delivery of the £50 million increase and develop a mechanism to secure long term investment. Professor Richards has been asked to report to Ministers later this Autumn.

To support this initiative, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health announced on 2 October that we are making available an extra £10 million for specialist palliative care services in 2002–03. It will be for local health communities, with their voluntary sector partners, to decide how this funding should be deployed in support of the Cancer Plan objectives.

Funding for specialist palliative care services in Scotland and Wales is the responsibility of the devolved administrations, and whilst the institutions in Northern Ireland are dissolved, responsibility rests with Ministers in the Northern Ireland Office.

Emergency Care

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to implement the recommendations of the Reforming Emergency Care document in respect of addressing the recruitment and retention difficulties in accident and emergency departments. [79266]

Ms Blears: Reforming Emergency Care recommended breaking down over rigid demarcation barriers to enable more flexible ways of working throughout National Health Service emergency care provision. This included separating patients into "streams" according to need and enabling nurse practitioners to take a much greater role in dealing with patients. Central investment of £40 million has already enabled the recruitment of 600 additional accident and emergency (A&E) nurses to support the separation of services for patients with minor injuries or illness from those with more serious conditions.

The access care group workforce team has been set up to take forward the recommendations of Reforming Emergency Care on workforce planning and development to help ensure for the longer term we have the right number of staff, with the right skills, in the right place.

Infection Risk Assessment

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to adopt similar proposals to those introduced in Scotland on the development of training packages for NHS staff groups on healthcare-associated infection risk assessment and management; and if he will make a statement. [79697]

Mr. Hutton: The National Health Service University (NHSU), the organisation set-up by the Department to establish a university for the National Health Service, is leading a pilot project to deliver training programmes in cleaning, at NVQ Level One, and infection control, leading to a college certificate. It is expected that at least 4,000 NHS staff will have benefited from this initiative by the end of the pilot project in May 2003. The project will be evaluated and if successful, these or similar programmes will form part of NHSU's ongoing portfolio of courses.

Our strategy to combat infectious disease, Getting Ahead of the Curve, aims to reassert control over serious infectious disease problems and identified healthcare associated infection (HCAI) as a priority area. A new targeted action plan to address HCAI is being developed and this will consider training. The plan should be ready around the end of the year.

Nursing Courses

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information his Department collates on how many applications for pre-registration nursing courses are rejected on the ground that the supply of places cannot keep up with demand; and if he will make a statement. [79712]

Mr. Hutton: The Department does not collect or collate information on the number of applications to nursing programmes that are rejected. Applications for entry to nurse education are processed by the nursing and midwifery admissions service who operate a clearing system for those individuals who are not immediately placed with a university. The number of undergraduate pre-registration training places available each year are determined through work force planning processes led locally by work force development confederations.

Beef Assurance Scheme

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list abattoirs in the South West and South East of England which will slaughter animals over the age of 30 months but less than 42 months under the Government's Beef Assurance Scheme; and if he will make a statement on the Government's support of organic farming; [78919]

(2) what legislation prevents abattoirs from slaughtering cattle over the age of 30 months under the Beef Assurance Scheme. [78920]

Ms Blears [holding answers 5 November 2002]: I am advised by the Food Standards Agency that licensed abattoirs are free to slaughter animals reared under the beef assurance scheme, but only a number choose to do so. There is no legislation to prevent abattoirs from slaughtering such cattle, but there are controls in place relating to the removal of vertebral column from animals over 30 months of age.

Organic farming is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs.

Community Health Councils

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, when he expects community health councils to be abolished. [79892]

Ms Blears: Community Health Councils (CHCs) will be abolished once the new arrangements for patient and public involvement are functioning. There is no abolition date for CHCs as yet, but we will make an announcement as soon as a date is set.

Heart Operations

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 23 October to the hon. Member for East Worthing and Shoreham, column 400W, whether NHS patients will have a choice of all the listed hospitals for their heart operations. [79964]

Ms Blears: Each referring hospital has identified a number of core options which are most likely to meet the individual needs of local patients.

If a patient would prefer to go to a local hospital that is not included in these options for the treatment their patient care advisor will have up to date information on all the hospitals in this country or elsewhere in Europe that are suitable for the patient and should seek to arrange their treatment according to their wishes.

The choices will depend on the nature of the patient's illness. For some patients who are very ill or who have other illnesses as well, it may be that some of the options on offer do not have the facilities or expertise needed to treat them.

Abortion

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) NHS and (b) private clinics are licensed to perform abortions up to birth; and if he will list them. [79815]

Ms Blears: Abortions undertaken after 24 weeks gestation can only be performed in a National Health Service hospital.

Under Section 1(3) of the Abortion Act 1967, as amended, NHS hospitals do not need the Secretary of State for Health's approval to perform abortion, at any gestation. However, a pregnancy may only be terminated if two registered medical practitioners are of the opinion, formed in good faith that an abortion is justified within the terms of the Act, in the light of their clinical judgement of all the particular circumstances of the individual case.

Beyond 24 weeks gestation, an abortion can only be performed when:

the termination is necessary to prevent grave permanent injury to the physical or mental health of the pregnant woman; or the continuance of the pregnancy would involve risk to the life of the pregnant woman, greater than if the pregnancy were terminated; or there is a substantial risk that if the child were born it would suffer from such physical or mental abnormalities as to be seriously handicapped; or to save the life or to prevent grave permanent injury to the physical or mental health of the pregnant woman.

General Practitioners

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many GPs were practising in England and Wales in each of the last five years, broken down by region. [75525]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 21 October 2002]: The information requested for England is shown in the table. The information relating to Wales is a matter for the devolved Administration.

The numbers of general practitioners (GPs) and trainee GPs continue to grow, with GP registrar numbers at their highest ever level. In March 2002 there were 1,910 GP registrars. These are the GPs of the future.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many salaried (a) general practitioners and (b) dentists are employed in the Camden and Islington area. [79643]

Mr. Hutton: These figures are on a headcount basis rather than whole time equivalent (wte) and take no account of part-time working. Dentists working in more than one dental service are included in each service.

These figures exclude self employed principal dentists working in the general dental service (GDS) and their assistants.

Nurses

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of nurses starting work in the NHS in the last year were trained overseas. [75527]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 21 October]: The Department does not collect information on the number of nurses working in the National Health Service who were trained overseas.

Foundation Trusts

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department has established a foundation trust consultative group. [76864]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 24 October 2002]: The Department has not established a foundation trust consultative group. However, the initial framework for policy on National Health Service foundation trusts was developed through consultation with the first cohort of three-star NHS trusts as part of a series of national events on earned autonomy. In addition, Departmental officials have been seeking views from a number of chief executives from several different NHS trusts, primary care trusts, strategic health authorities and from other sources. These discussions have provided an important sounding board for our proposals.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his formulation of foundation status for hospitals has involved consideration of a voucher system for patients or GPs. [79246]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 4 November 2002]: We have not considered any form of voucher system for patients or general practitioners in developing our proposals for the creation of National Health Service foundation trusts. NHS foundation trusts will provide free care for NHS patients according to NHS principles, based on clinical need and not ability to pay.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many three star trusts have indicated an interest in becoming foundation trusts. [79247]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 4 November 2002]: Thirty-one of the acute National Health Service trusts that were awarded three stars in the previous NHS performance ratings announced in 2001 submitted expressions of interest in becoming NHS foundation trusts. We have not however asked for expressions of interest since publication of the new NHS performance ratings in July 2002.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to announce which 12 NHS trusts have been chosen to be foundation trusts. [79248]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 4 November 2002]: We expect to announce a list of trusts that have been successful in their applications to become first-wave National Health Service foundation trusts later next year.

Angiograms

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals (a) include and (b) exclude angiograms from (i) inpatient and (ii) outpatient waiting lists; and if he will make a statement. [75993]

Ms Blears [holding answer 24 October 2002]: This information is not centrally available at present as waiting times are collected by specialty not procedure. We are investing £65 million New Opportunities Fund money and £15 million Treasury Capital Modernisation Fund money to expand angiography facilities. When completed, this should allow an extra 14,000 angiograms to take place each year. The planning and priorities framework for 2003–06 sets the National Health Service a target to reduce waiting times for angiography and we plan to monitor progress against this target.

Job Vacancies

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many job vacancies there were at (a) administrative assistant or equivalent, (b) administrative officer or equivalent, (c) administrative executive officer, (d) higher executive officer, (e) senior executive officer, (f) grade 7 principal and (g) all positions above grade 7 level in his Department for jobs located in (h) London and (i) the South East between 1st April 2001 and 31st March; and what is the total employment for each Civil Service grade. [76550]

Ms Blears [holding answer 28 October 2002]: The information requested is contained in the table below.

Table Showing Position as at 1 April 2001

Responsibility Level	London Region		South East Region
	*Vacancies	Total Staff	*Vacancies	Total Staff

Waiting List Targets

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to extend waiting list targets to psychologists, physiotherapists and occupational therapists. [77841]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 29 October 2002]: The NHS Plan outlined that the maximum inpatient wait will be reduced in stages from 18 months to six months by the end of 2005. The maximum wait for a first outpatient appointment with a consultant will be three months by the end of 2005.

Sheep Meat

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to ban from the food chain meat from the breeds of sheep that are susceptible to scrapie. [78362]

Ms Blears [holding answer 31 October 2002]: Scrapie is not known to be transmissible to humans. Nonetheless there is a theoretical risk that the occurrence of apparent scrapie cases may be concealing BSE in sheep. The question of appropriate precautionary and advisory action to protect and inform consumers about this risk has been extensively considered and publicised by the Food Standards Agency in recent times.

The European Commission has meanwhile issued proposals for action amongst other things to prevent certain susceptible sheep from entering the food chain. These proposals relate only to those holdings where scrapie has been confirmed as present.

Ambulance Response Times

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of ambulance response times to category A calls by the East Midlands Ambulance Trust in (a) the county of Rutland and (b) the Melton Borough Council area were achieved within eight minutes in the last period for which figures are available; for those responses which took longer than eight minutes, how long it took for the ambulance to respond; and if he will make a statement. [78752]

Ms Blears [holding answer 4 November 2002]: Information on Category A 999 response times for the County of Rutland or the Melton Borough Council area is not available. The activities for these two areas are monitored as part of the East Midlands Ambulance Service.

The latest information about the proportion of emergency calls resulting in an ambulance arriving at the scene of the reported incident within the Government's target response times for the East Midlands Ambulance NHS Trust, and all other ambulance trusts, is contained in the Department of Health Statistical Bulletin "Ambulance Services, England 2001-02".

During that period, East Midlands Ambulance Service responded to 73.1 per cent. of Category A 999 calls within the East Midlands area within 8 minutes.

I understand that since 1 September 2002, ambulance service cover has been increased in Melton, Oakham and Market Harborough by an additional 81 vehicle hours per day.

Vitamin B6

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the strength of Vitamin B6 when used for (a) countering heart disease and (b) female hormone control, in the light of the Food Standards Agency's report on safe maximum dosages; and if he will make a statement. [79330]

Ms Blears [holding answer 4 November 2002]: There is epidemiological evidence that homocysteine is an independent risk factor for cardiovascular disease (CVD) and increasing levels of some B vitamins, including B6, may reduce blood levels of homocysteine. However, there is not yet conclusive evidence that reducing blood homocysteine—through increased intake of B vitamins—has a direct impact on the incidence of CVD. There are on-going randomised controlled trials assessing the impact of lowering homocysteine levels on the incidence of heart disease.

The evidence to date suggests that B6 may have a positive effect on pre-menstrual symptoms, but this is based on limited information from poor quality trials. Further trials are required to confirm an association.

The expert group on vitamins and minerals (EVM) was asked to advise on the safety of intakes of vitamins and minerals in food supplements and fortified foods. The EVM was not asked to consider the beneficial effects of the vitamins and minerals under consideration, although nutritional need was taken into account to ensure that safe upper levels were not set at a level below dietary requirements.

The EVM draft report is the work of an independent advisory group, currently out to public consultation and available on the Food Standards Agency website.

Over-30-Months Scheme

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review the Over-30-Months Scheme; and if he will make a statement. [79239]

Ms Blears [holding answer 4 November 2002]: I am advised by the Food Standards Agency that it is currently undertaking a review of the over thirty months rule, under which the sale for human consumption of meat from cattle aged over thirty months at slaughter is prohibited. The Agency is being assisted in the review by a joint Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee/FSA risk assessment group and a stakeholder group, and will issue regular information about the review as it proceeds. The Agency is expecting to report its findings from the review in the first half of next year.

Health Care Assistants

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if he will estimate how many health care assistants work in the NHS and list the titles they work under; and if he will make a statement. [79732]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 6 November 2002]: Healthcare assistants and other health care support workers work across the range of clinical National Health Service services. The Department and the NHS have developed titles used to identify them over a period of time. Groups identified in the table comprise the total group of clinical health care support staff working in the NHS.

NHS Hospital and Community Health Services (HCHS): "Healthcare Assistants" by area of work in England as at 30 September 2001

Imported Meats

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of the Food Standards Agency in terms of assessing the safety of imported meat. [79279]

Ms Blears [holding answer 4 November 2002]: Department of Health Ministers have regular discussions with the Food Standards Agency (FSA). I am satisfied that the FSA is making use of the best available science in assessing the safety of imported meat, and is applying proportionate controls on declared meat imports. The Meat Hygiene Service, which is an executive agency of the FSA, has been particularly effective in checking consignments of imported carcass beef for the presence of specified risk material. The FSA is also playing a full part in the Government's programme of action against illegally smuggled meat.

Professional Qualifications

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the proposal for a Directive on the recognition of professional qualifications, with reference to its impact on (a) the regulation of health professionals and (b) patient safety. [79731]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 6 November 2002]: The draft Directive has been the subject of consultation and continuing negotiation. A number of specific concerns have been expressed about the need to ensure patient safety and service quality, which we will take into account as discussions progress.

Birthweight

Mr. Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if he will list the incidence of low birthweight by county in descending order, for the most recent year for which available figures exist. [76155]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Mr. Len Cook to Chris Ruane, dated 7 November 2001

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on incidence of low birthweight babies by county in descending order, for the most recent year for which available figures exist. [76155]

The number and percentage of low birthweight live births that occurred in 2001 are given in the table below, for each county in England, and for the whole of Wales, in descending order.

Number and percentage of low birthweight[1] live births by English counties[2] and Wales in descending order, 2001

Area of usual residence	Number	Percentage[3]
West Midlands (Metropolitan County)	3,137	9.5
West Yorkshire (Metropolitan County)	2,254	8.8
Lancashire, former county of	1,349	8.6
Tees Valley less Darlington	513	8.5
Greater Manchester (Metropolitan County)	2,491	8.3
Bedfordshire, former county of	608	8.3
Staffordshire, former county of	884	8.2
Greater London (Metropolitan County)	8,425	8.1
South Yorkshire (Metropolitan County)	1,104	8.0

Essex, former county of	1,101	6.2
Northumberland	176	6.1
North Yorkshire, former county of	425	5.9

Notes:

1. Low birthweight babies are defined as those weighing under 2,500 grams
2. Data are presented for English counties, and former counties, based on boundaries as at 1 April 2002.
3. Low birthweight babies as a percentage of all livebirths with a stated birthweight.

Office for National Statistics

Mr. Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what the percentage incidence was of low birth weight babies, by local authority; for each of the last 20 years. [75881]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Mr. Len Cook to Chris Ruane, dated 7 November 2001

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question on what the percentage incidence was of low birthweight babies, by local authority; for each of the last 20 years. [75881]

The percentages for local authorities from 1990 to 2001 have been tabulated and I am placing copies in the House of Commons Library. Figures for comparable areas prior to 1990 are not readily available because of local government reorganisation.

Epilepsy

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many neurologists and paediatric neurologists with a specialism in epilepsy there are in the UK. [74051]

Mr. Hutton: The Department's workforce censuses do not collect information on the number of neurologists or paediatric neurologists with a specialism in the treatment of epilepsy.

As at 31 March 2002, the numbers of consultants working in neurology was 372 and the number of paediatric neurologists was 30. This represents increases in consultant numbers of 34 per cent. and 30 per cent. respectively since 1997.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) neurologists, (b) paediatric neurologists and (c) nurses with a specialism in epilepsy there are in the UK. [72659]

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many neurologists and paediatric neurologists with a specialism in epilepsy there are in the UK; [72764]

(2) what plans there are to increase the number of neurologists and paediatric neurologists with a specialism in epilepsy. [72765]

Mr. Hutton: pursuant to his reply, 24 July 2002, column 1415W and 1408W: I regret my previous answers were incorrect.

The second paragraph should read,

"As at 31 March 2002, the numbers of consultants working in Neurology was 372 and the number of paediatric neurologists was 30. This represents increases in consultant numbers of 34 per cent. and 30 per cent. respectively since 1997."

Diagnostic Testing

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations his Department has received concerning the cost of repeating diagnostic tests unnecessarily. [75752]

Ms Blears: We have not received any representations about the costs of repeating diagnostic tests for cancer patients. The cancer services collaborative is working in every cancer network to modernise cancer care by streamlining and redesigning the care pathway ensuring patients receive speedy diagnosis and treatment.

Cancer Care

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to (a) adopt on-call arrangements, (b) extend working hours during the week and (c) operate a 24-hour service for cancer services within the NHS; [75754]

(2) what representations his Department has received concerning cancer departments (a) adopting on-call arrangements, (b) extending working hours during the week and (c) operating a 24-hour service. [75753]

Ms Blears: Commissioners and providers need to consider the needs of their population when planning services. This may involve access to some services out of normal working hours, such as general practitioner and community nurse advice, palliative care support and for some patients, access to other specialist advice.

To date, the Department has received no representations concerning cancer departments adopting on-call arrangements, extending working hours during the week and operating a 24 hour service for cancer services within the National Health Service.

Travel Assistance

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what assistance is made available by each health authority to patients travelling for treatment. [75200]

Jaqui Smith: Where a patient has a medical need for transport as determined by the clinician in charge of their case, then transport should be provided free of charge, as part of National Health Service treatment. Where patients need financial assistance the hospital travel cost scheme has been established as part of the NHS low income scheme. This provides financial assistance to the patients who do not have a medical need for ambulance transport, but who nevertheless, require assistance in meeting the cost of travel to hospital for transport.

Spinal and Orthopaedic Surgeons

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of additional spinal and orthopaedic surgeons that will be needed within the next 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [77225]

Mr. Hutton: As at March 2002, there were 1,303 consultants in trauma and orthopaedic surgery. This represents an increase of 23 per cent. since September 1997.

The NHS Plan workforce numbers targets identify the staff needed to meet overall needs up until 2008. By this time, the latest forecasts for growth expect the National Health Service to have net increases over a 2001 baseline, of at least 15,000 doctors—consultants and GPs. This expectation is for total numbers of doctors and is not specialty-specific.

The NHS is currently working on local delivery plans for a three-year period, which will identify the demand for additional trauma and orthopaedic consultants up until 2005–06. The NHS will continue to plan, for three-year periods, its future workforce requirements and steps will be taken to address the identified need.

We continually review future requirements for trained specialists as part of the NHS's new multi-disciplinary workforce planning processes. These will look at the requirements for doctors alongside other staff focusing on the potential for new ways of working and developing new roles.

Breast Cancer

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of the patents on breast cancer genes owned by Myriad Inc on testing for hereditary breast cancer; and what negotiations his Department is involved in with Myriad on this issue. [77878]

Ms Blears: The Department is still in discussion with Myriad and the discussion is confidential at this stage.

Dr. Gibson: To k the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is on objections made to the European patent office to the patents on breast cancer genes owned by Myriad Inc. [77877]

Ms Blears: A number of European genetics research institutes have filed objections in the European Patents Office (EPO). We await the outcome of the hearings before the EPO with interest.

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the target population for breast cancer screening was changed; and what percentage of the target population was screened in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02 in (i) England, (ii) each NHS region and (iii) each health authority. [79799]

Ms Blears: The National Health Service breast screening programme has been inviting women aged 50–64 to be screened every three years. The NHS Plan, published in July 2000, announced the extension of the programme to women aged 65 to 70. This extension is being rolled out over the three year period from 2001–2004.

Data for 2000–01 are in the Department's statistical bulletin which is available in the Library. Data on the number of women screened between the age of 65 and 70 are not yet available as the extension began in 2001–02. Data for 2001–02 will be available in the Department's next statistical bulletin, which is due to be published early 2003.

MRI Scanner (Pembury Hospital)

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to announce whether to site a replacement permanent MRI scanner at Pembury hospital. [77559]

Ms Blears: At this time I cannot give the hon. Member any information on an announcement. I will write to him on this matter as soon as possible.

Dental Services

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what further steps he plans to take to increase provision of NHS dental services in Lancashire; and if he will make a statement. [77937]

Jacqui Smith: In East Lancashire the Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale Personal Dental Service has brought five whole time National Health Service dentists into the area together with a part-time dental therapist. The personal dental service (PDS) pilot provides NHS dental care for non-registered patients and for people finding difficulty in registering with a general dental practitioner. PDS pilots in the Preston, Blackpool and Chorley areas are also exploring new ways of providing NHS dentistry in their localities. A new NHS dental access centre will also open in Lancaster next year.

Three bids have also been made against the "Options for Change" funding to try and improve dental access and waiting times in Lancashire. A decision on these bids as well as other bids will be made in the near future.

Speech Therapy

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many children with severe learning difficulties received help from a speech therapist in each year from 1997 to 2001; [78369]

(2) how much money was allocated from health to education services to provide speech therapy to children with (a) moderate learning difficulties and (b) severe learning difficulties in each year from 1997 to 2001; and if he will make a statement. [78371]

Jacqui Smith: Information on the number of children with severe learning difficulties who receive help from speech and language therapists (SLTs) is not collected centrally.

It is very important that children with speech and language difficulties access appropriate intervention as soon as a problem is identified. The majority of SLTs are employed by the National Health Service and deliver services relating to children's health need. They are often based in the community and may work in health, education or local authority settings.

No money was transferred from the Department of Health to the Department for Education and Skills (DfES) specifically to provide speech therapy to children with learning difficulties. For the two years between 1999 and 2001, DfES made grant support available under the standards fund to a number of local education authorities for speech and language pilots.

This support was extended to all English local education authorities in 2001–02 to help them enhance speech and language therapy services for children in conjunction with the NHS and the voluntary sector. It is one of a number of sub heads on which LEAs can spend their special educational needs allocation.

Meningitis

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the measures to increase awareness of meningitis and their allocated funding have been for each year since 1997; [78945]

(2) what measures are in place to ensure the vaccination for meningitis of all students in state and public education and for a detailed breakdown of the cost of these measures; [78946]

(3) what representation his Department has received concerning (a) raising public awareness and (b) education in schools of meningitis. [78943]

Ms Blears: Since 1997, information about meningitis and septicaemia has been included in both the Guide to Childhood Immunisations and the Guide to Pre-school Immunisations. These leaflets are made available to all parents of every new baby and all parents of every preschool child. They are distributed largely via primary care and the Guide to Childhood Immunisations is given to all new parents by the health visitor at the ten day visit. More than one million of these leaflets are distributed, on an annual basis, in England.

The immunisation website www.immunisation.nhs.uk also contains information about meningitis and septicaemia.

A targeted campaign, Look out for your mate, has been running in all higher education establishments since 1995. The resources alert new students to the signs and symptoms or meningitis and septicaemia and suggest appropriate action. The cost of this work has been approximately £15,000 per annum. During the introduction of the MenC vaccine we worked closely with the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service to ensure that all students had this important information.

In addition the Department also works with a number of meningitis charities, for example the meningitis research foundation, that produce guidance on the diagnosis and early management of meningococcal disease. This work is published as leaflets and information packs and is also available on the charities' web-sites.

Cancer

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of cancer patients are comorbid; and (a) how many and (b) what proportion of cancer patients there were in each year since 1998. [78950]

Ms Blears: The Department does not centrally hold information on co-morbidity of cancer patients. In some instances this information will be held locally for research and/or public health purposes though it is not generally published.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what instruments have been developed to classify different comorbid diseases; and whether a comorbidity index is a cancer registry requirement. [78951]

Ms Blears: There are several methods of monitoring co-morbidity currently available: these include the Kaplan-Feinstein Index, the Cumulative Illness Rating Scale (CIRS) and the Adult Comorbidity Evaluation (ACE 27). However, not all methodologies are appropriate to all tumour types.

Due to the complexities of applying a co-morbidity standard to all cancers there are no current plans to incorporate a co-morbidity index into registry datasets.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the data reporting standards for cancer, broken down by stage. [78949]

Ms Blears: Collected information on cancer services is restricted to aggregate returns to measure performance against the waiting times targets in the NHS Cancer Plan and data collected to monitor National Health Service screening services. The Department does not collect data on cancer patients broken down by stage of disease.

Some information on stage is collected by cancer registries but not for all cancer types, although coverage for this data is incomplete and as such it is not therefore published.

Fragile X Syndrome

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultation has been undertaken with people with Fragile X syndrome and their families in connection with the Valuing People White Paper. [79373]

Jacqui Smith: The White Paper Valuing People sets out our proposals for improving services for people with learning disabilities, their families and carers. The strategy takes a cross-Government, cradle to grave, approach to a wide range of services—social care, health, education, employment, benefits, housing, transport, leisure—for people with every kind of learning disability, including Fragile X syndrome. We have made good progress in putting in place the framework for delivery promised in the White Paper.

We involved a large number of individuals and organisations, including people with learning disabilities and their carers, when developing the White Paper: we have continued that approach by including all these parties in the learning disability task force and learning disability partnership boards, which are overseeing its implementation. We have not consulted specifically on each type of learning disability or condition, but the approach we have taken makes clear that Valuing People includes everyone with a learning disability.

Nursing Care Payments

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what conditions are applied to payments of (a) attendance allowance and (b) payments towards nursing care; [79456]

(2) what right of appeal care home residents have against funding decisions taken by (a) the NHS and (b) Social Services. [79455]

Jacqui Smith: The guidance and directions on free nursing care describe the eligibility, review and appeal arrangements, copies of which are in the Library. These are also are available at www.doh.gov.uk/jointunit/nhsfundednursingcare/index.htm. The National Health Service and social services have complaint procedures that people can follow if they are dissatisfied with aspects of their care.

The eligibility of anyone in receipt of attendance allowance is not affected by NHS funding, though councils will need to take account of the receipt of this and other benefits if they carry out a financial assessment.

A and E Departments

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to ensure that funding, made available to ease the burdens in accident and emergency departments, is reaching the front-line to (a) allow innovative schemes to continue and (b) give all accident and emergency departments the opportunity to introduce new ways of working. [79267]

Jacqui Smith: The Reforming Emergency Care strategy was launched in October 2001, supported by £118 million investment, to improve the local organisation of emergency services to ensure that patients get a consistent and appropriate response based on national clinical standards. The strategy will be delivered through the formation of emergency care networks (ECNs), which will co-ordinate all aspects of local emergency care through the local leadership of emergency care leads (ECLs) appointed in all acute trusts and primary care trusts.

The Government places a very high priority on improving delivery of emergency care. The NHS Plan set challenging targets for strategic health authorities and trusts to cut waiting times in accident and emergency (A&E). The new devolved funding arrangements mean that local managers are able to target funding, in line with national guidelines, on local areas of need. Local managers and clinicians are being supported to develop and maintain innovative ways of delivering care through the Modernisation Agency emergency services collaborative, launched on 8 October 2002. The first wave of the collaborative is now underway and by September 2004, every trust with an A&E in England will have completed the programme.

Sight Loss

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what additional investment is planned for (a) prevention, (b) detection and (c) rehabilitation of sight loss. [79761]

Jacqui Smith: The National Health Service is receiving unprecedented growth for investment across health services. We have set a new target for the NHS to improve diabetic retinopathy screening. We have also invested £20 million to modernise cataract services. Furthermore, free NHS sight tests for everyone aged 60 and over were reintroduced from April 1999, at an annual cost of £50 million.

The Department is also contributing a grant of more than £120,000 over three years to a group of voluntary organisations to set up local low vision services committees. These bring together the NHS, social services, opticians and voluntary organisations to promote best practice and improve co-ordination in the commissioning and delivery of services for the blind and partially sighted.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in each of the nations of the UK have a sight problem. [79762]

Jacqui Smith: The information shown in the table relates to the number of people registered blind and partially sighted.

Number of people registered as blind and partially sighted

	No. registered blind	No. registered partially sighted
As at 31 March 2000
England	158,000	149,000
Scotland	24,839	13,287
As at 31 March 2001
Wales	9,902	9,905

This information is not currently collected in Northern Ireland.

Laming Report

Ms Debra Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons the Laming Report has not yet been published; and when and how it will be published. [79743]

Jacqui Smith: We expect to receive Lord Laming's report into the circumstances that led to the death of Victoria Climbié later this year or early next year. However, neither we nor Lord Laming have set a timetable. The report will be published by my right hon. Friends, the Secretaries of State for Health and the Home Department soon after its receipt and will be made widely available.

Waiting Times

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are waiting for assessment for (a) homecare aids, (b) adaptations and (c) equipment in each social services department area in the UK; and what the average waiting time for assessment in each area was in the last 12 months. [79976]

Jacqui Smith: This information is not available centrally and may be possible to obtain only by approaching individual social service departments.

The government is investing in services for community equipment and minor adaptations over the years 2001 to 2006. The funding will help these services reduce waiting times in line with the targets set by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health, in a statement to the House on 23 July 2002 that, as part of the single assessment process, assessments will be complete with one month of referral and equipment then delivered within seven working days.

Breast Feeding

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on Government policy on encouraging breastfeeding. [79890]

Ms Blears: The Government are fully committed to the promotion of breastfeeding, which is accepted as the best form of nutrition for infants. The National Health Service priorities and planning framework for 2003–2006 includes a challenging new target to deliver an increase of two percentage points per year in breastfeeding initiation rate, focusing especially on women from disadvantaged groups. The Infant Feeding Survey 2000 showed that the incidence of breastfeeding in England and Wales increased from 68 per cent. in 1995 to 71 per cent. in 2000, but varied between different social classes and the incidence of breastfeeding in social class v. increased from 50 per cent. in 1995 to 59 per cent. in 2000.

We have recently published for consultation proposals to replace the war-time welfare food scheme with a new programme which would provide better nutrition and greater choice for over 800,000 people in low income families. The current scheme may act as a disincentive for women to breastfeed.

The infant feeding initiative was launched in 1999 to tackle health inequalities with the aim to increase the incidence and duration of breastfeeding amongst those groups of the population where breastfeeding rates are the lowest. To date, 79 local projects have been funded to identify "best practice" to increase breastfeeding rates. The best start project is a randomised control trial looking at an intervention into midwives practice and the impact on breastfeeding duration. The results will be disseminated later this year.

The national breastfeeding awareness week (NBAW) was held in May 2002 with a theme on normalising breastfeeding. NBAW will also be held in May 2003.

Shared Financial Services

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the timing of NHS trust moving over to using shared financial services centres. [79894]

Mr. Hutton: The National Health Service is currently developing two shared financial service centres, in Leeds and Bristol. Approximately 40 NHS organisations will be moving over, in waves, to use these centres from April 2003 through October 2003.

If these pilot centres successfully deliver the proof of concept of shared financial services in the NHS consideration will be given to roll-out to the wider NHS.

Mental Health

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of health authorities have complaints procedures for mental health patients. [80000]

Jacqui Smith: The National Health Service complaints procedure exists to deal with complaints from any patient using the NHS (including users of mental health services) who wishes to make a complaint about the service or treatment they have received. The complaints procedure applies to all NHS organisations and services.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of mental health patients are delayed from hospital discharge in 2001–02 and what the reasons are for the delays; and if he will make a statement. [79997]

Jacqui Smith: The Department does not hold information on the proportion of mental health patients who were delayed from hospital discharge.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding was given to children's mental health services in each year since 1997. [79991]

Jacqui Smith: Levels of funding provided by health and local authorities (LAs) for child and adolescent mental health services are not collected centrally. In the four years ending 31 March 2003, we will have made available £105 million of targeted central funding across the National Health Service and LAs in support of the Government's strategy, introduced in 1999, for developing child and adolescent mental health services. Health authorities will have been given £50 million and LAs £55 million. The latter includes provision for extended funding in support of 24 innovation projects to develop new approaches to mental health services for children and young people.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress made to replace Shelton Hospital with a new mental health hospital. [79992]

Jacqui Smith: The specialist mental health services strategy for Shropshire County and Telford & Wrekin recommended the redevelopment of in-patient mental health services alongside the development of a range of community mental health services. Shropshire County Primary Care Trust is now recruiting a project manager to lead the redevelopment programme and is establishing a project board to oversee the project. It is expected that the formal business case procedures will be undertaken in 2003, with a provisional target date of Spring 2006 for the redevelopment of in-patient mental health services. This will be subject to public consultation.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what proportion of health authorities have a written care plan for mental health patients; [80002]

(2) what proportion of mental health patients have been given a written copy of their own care plan in the last 12 months; [79999]

(3) what proportion of mental health patients have been given written information on (a) their condition, (b) their treatment, (c) their medical rights and (d) where to get help in an emergency in the last 12 months. [79998]

Jacqui Smith: People with mental health problems whose care is co-ordinated under the care programme approach (CPA) should have information about their condition, treatment and how to get help in an emergency. Progress on achieving the target set within the 2001–2 service and financial framework for specialist mental health service users on enhanced CPA to have a written copy of their care plan continues to be monitored, although it is not broken down at strategic health authority level. Data from the first quarter of 2002, the first time such information was captured, suggest that around 85 per cent. of patients had a written care plan at the time of discharge. We expect both data quality and the rate to improve with time and further information on progress will be available in due course.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of community treatment orders on reducing the number of homicides by people diagnosed by mental health problems. [79990]

Jacqui Smith: The introduction of community treatment orders will allow people to be treated in the setting which is most appropriate to their own individual needs by breaking the automatic link between compulsory treatment for a mental disorder and detention in hospital which exists under the current Mental Health Act 1983. This will also help to ensure that there are hospital beds available for those who most need them, whether to protect their own health and safety or that of others. There has been no assessment of the effectiveness of community treatment orders on reducing the number of homicides because this is not the intended purpose of the orders as proposed in the draft Mental Health Bill.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what proportion of schizophrenics have asked for, but been refused, hospital admission in the last 12 months. [80001]

Jacqui Smith: There have been no reports of people with schizophrenia being refused hospital admission collected centrally.

The mental health national service framework explicitly states that everyone with severe mental illness should have access to the range of services they need.

Testicular Cancer

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to reduce the incidence of testicular cancer; and if he will make a statement. [79987]

Ms Blears: 91 per cent. of men with testicular cancer survive five or more years. Testicular cancer is almost always curable if found early. We have recently worked with Cancer Research UK to produce a new leaflet for men, Testicular Cancer: Spot the Symptoms Early. The leaflet aims to promote testicular awareness for men, explaining that they should know what is normal for them, know what changes to look out for and to report any changes without delay.

Nuclear Weapons Testing

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions he has had with counterparts in other countries whose nationals have participated in the monitoring of atmospheric nuclear weapons testing in respect of the impact the tests have been perceived to have had on the health of those exposed to radiation. [79966]

Ms Blears: The international forum for debate on these issues is the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation (UNSCEAR). Members of the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB), which advises the Government on radiation Risks, participate in UNSCEAR as members and use the data generated to inform NRPB's risk calculations.

Criminal Records Bureau

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate how many (a) children and (b) vulnerable adults that will be cared for by adults who had not received a Criminal Records Bureau check following the announcement of 1st November. [80022]

Jacqui Smith: The announcement of 1 November made no changes to the requirements for people working with children to have an appropriate Criminal Records Bureau check. The measures being taken will help combat the delays in the checking process. New staff in adult care homes continue to need pre-employment CRB checks. CRB checks on existing staff have been postponed to 2004 but all other safeguards remain in place in respect of these workers, which include confirming previous employment history and taking up references.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects (a) nurses supplied by agencies and (b) staff supplied by domiciliary care agencies will be required to have Criminal Records Bureau checks. [80034]

Jacqui Smith: We intend to introduce the requirement for all nurses supplied by nurses agencies and all staff supplied by domiciliary care agencies to undergo a Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) check when we are confident that the CRB are able to cope with the demand.

Asylum Seekers

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of asylum seekers in each London borough who do not have access to a general practitioner; and if he will make a statement. [79640]

Mr. Hutton: The Department has not made an estimation of the number of asylum seekers in each London Borough who do not have access to a general practitioner (GP). Asylum seekers are regarded as ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom and therefore entitled to free treatment by a GP. The use of initiatives such as local development schemes and personal medical pilots have assisted asylum seekers and other vulnerable sectors of the population accessing GPs and other primary care services.

Vulnerable Adults

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is putting in place to ensure the protection of vulnerable adults following the postponement of Criminal Records Bureau checks for people who work with vulnerable adults. [80028]

Jacqui Smith: A criminal record disclosure forms one of many checks persons caring for vulnerable adults must have in order to work with this client group. Measures are already in place to ensure the protection of vulnerable adults from abuse. Persons caring for vulnerable adults continue to be subject to rigorous pre-employment checks, including confirming previous employment history and taking up references, to ensure their suitability for the position in question. All those occupations, which were subject to a criminal record check prior to the advent of the Criminal Records Bureau, will continue to be subject to such a check.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how long he expects the postponement of the implementation of the protection of vulnerable adults lists provided for in the Care Standards Act 2000 to last as set out in the announcement on 1 November; [80021]

(2) for how long the implementation of the protection of vulnerable adults lists as part of the Care Standards Act 2000 have been postponed. [79812]

Jacqui Smith: We intend to implement the protection of vulnerable adults list when we are confident that the Criminal Records Bureau are able to cope with the demand.

Care Homes

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 15 October 2002, Official Report, column 810W, on care homes, which national providers he has written to regarding the failure to pass on free nursing care to residents. [80060]

Jacqui Smith: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 15 October 2002, Official Report, column 810W, which set out the reasons why this information could not be disclosed.

Foundation Trusts

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from hospital trusts or health bodies in the Camden and Islington area concerning the development of foundation hospitals; and if he will make a statement. [79642]

Mr. Hutton: The Department has not received any representations from hospital trusts or health bodies in the Camden and Islington area concerning the development of National Health Service foundation trusts.

Day Surgery

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 29 October 2002, Official Report, column 742 W. what steps he will take to ensure day surgery facilities remain in Lichfield following the proposed construction of a new hospital in the City of Lichfield. [79049]

Mr. Hutton: Following the South Staffordshire strategic review public consultation, it was decided that day surgery should be concentrated at Tamworth and Cannock, in order to provide the highest quality facilities for South Staffordshire patients in purpose-built environments, and to maximise the potential of day surgery usage in the county, by concentrating three sites onto two.

Day surgery at Lichfield ended in December 2001 and there are no plans to re-provide day surgery in the new hospital at Lichfield. It is, however, planned that the new hospital will benefit from, for example, an improved minor injuries unit, better x-ray services, more examining rooms in the outpatients department and modern facilities for the public.

Correspondence

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the letters of 9 July and 16 September from the right hon. Member for Tonbridge and Malling regarding MRI scanning services in West Kent. [79909]

Ms Blears: A reply was sent to the right hon. Member on 6 November.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the letters from the hon. Member for the Isle of Wight (a) dated 23 November 2001, concerning lens solutions and (b) dated 22 February, and transferred from DEFRA on 11 April. [72599]

Ms Blears: Replies to the hon. Member's letters of 23 November and 22 February were sent on 29 July and 21 August.

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will reply to the letter written to him on 18 January by the hon. Member for Solihull, on behalf of his constituent Mr. Colin Reynard, of which letter a reminder was sent to him on 9 April, joining the interest of another constituent of the hon. Member, Mr. Brian Clayton; [67583]

(2) if he will reply to the letter written to his minister of state on 30 May, by the hon. Member for Solihull on behalf of his constituent Mr. G. L. Cotton; [67584]

(3) if he will acknowledge the letter written to him by the hon. Member for Solihull dated 2nd October; and if he will cause substantive responses to be made to the cases of Graham Cotton and Brian Clayton both of Solihull (PO1013296 and PO1014870); [78759]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 4 October 2002]: The hon. Member has been invited to attend a meeting with my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Health, to discuss the issues that his constituents have raised in his correspondence.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will write to the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam regarding his answer of 14 October 2002, Official Report, column 481W, concerning the number of key targets set by his Department. [80018]

Mr. Lammy: A response to the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam has now been sent.

Smallpox Vaccine

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list (a) the meetings between (i) ministers and (ii) officials in his Department with Powderject concerning the smallpox vaccine and (b) the names of those who attended those meetings; and if he will make a statement. [54660]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 8 May 2002]: Ministers had no meetings with PowderJect concerning the placing of the smallpox vaccine contract. Officials from the Department and from the Ministry of Defence met with PowderJect on 22 January as part of the confidential discussions held with the five major pharmaceutical companies known to have smallpox vaccine manufacturing capability. The meeting was to inform the company of our requirements for smallpox vaccine and to find out whether the company was in a position to meet our requirements and, if so, to invite them to submit their written proposals for vaccine supply. Since the award of the contract to PowderJect on 11 April, there have been two ad hoc meetings between officials from the Department and the Ministry of Defence with PowderJect to resolve matters of detail concerning labelling and packaging of the vaccine. As all discussions with the company were confidential, the names of those present are not being revealed. This is in accordance with normal policy.

Overseas Nurses

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health at what intervals nurse recruitment agencies which have signed up to the ethical foreign nurse recruitment campaign will be reviewed. [74320]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 16 October 2002]: The list of agencies that have confirmed they adhere to the code of practice has been placed on the international recruitment website. The list is monitored on an ongoing basis.

Workforce development confederations will bring to the attention of the Department any agencies that are not recruiting in accordance with the code of practice.

National Clinical Director of Primary Care

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many GP surgeries have been visited by the GP tsar in that capacity since his appointment. [75511]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 21 October 2002]: Professor David Colin-Thome is a part-time practising general practitioner (GP) as well as the current National Clinical Director of Primary Care, a position which he occupies on a two day per week basis. Since his appointment in May 2001, he has visited 14 GP surgeries. He has, however, met considerably more GPs and other primary care professionals through attending conferences, seminars and other events, which average at well over one per week.

Foundation Hospitals

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the organisations which have advised him on the development of foundation hospitals; and if he will list the fees incurred by his Department in obtaining advice on the development of foundation hospitals. [76811]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 24 October 2002]: We have sought specialist advice from the New Economics Foundation, Pinsent Curtis Biddle and PricewaterhouseCoopers in developing proposals for the creation of National Health Service foundation trusts. To date, payments have been made to the New Economics Foundation and PricewaterhouseCoopers. Actual fees incurred are commercially confidential.

Organ Retention

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many organs are retained at Leicestershire hospitals from deceased persons. [77962]

Ms Blears: pursuant to her reply 4 November 2002, I regret the previous reply is incorrect. The first sentence should read:-

"There are currently 142 organs retained by the three hospitals covered by the University Hospitals of Leicester National Health Service Trust."

Devolution

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many formal and official inter-ministerial meetings his Department has held with the Scottish Executive since May 1999, broken down by (a) Scottish Executive department, (b) subject and (c) date. [72716]

Ms Blears [holding answer 24 July 2002]: Information is not available in the form requested. Ministers from my Department have frequent meetings with Ministers from the Scottish Executive, both formal and informal, covering a broad range of topics.

General Chiropractic Council

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff were employed in the General Chiropractic Council at 1st April; and what proportion of those staff have clinical contact with NHS patients. [56873]

Ms Blears: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Public Health (Yvette Cooper) on Thursday 23 May 2002, Official Report, volume 836, columns 588–89W.

Public Health Laboratories

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements will be in place to require local laboratories (a) to report to and (b) respond to requests from the Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre after reorganisation of the service to create the Health Protection Agency; and if he will make a statement. [74819]

Ms Blears: All National Health Service laboratories as well as laboratories in the proposed health protection agency will be able to report to communicable disease surveillance centre (CDSC). These arrangements will be a continuation of the current system.

As at present, the CDSC will work with laboratories in the NHS and non-departmental public bodies on the appropriate reporting to meet local, regional and national requirements.

Departmental Initiatives

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the schemes and initiatives sponsored by his Department and its agencies which are not the subject of national roll out, showing (a) the authorities or areas covered by the scheme and (b) the budget of the scheme in the last year for which information is available. [75671]

Mr. Hutton: The answer can only be provided at a disproportionate cost.

Commission for Health Improvement

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many (a) NHS trusts and (b) health authorities have failed service reviews conducted by the Commission for Health Improvement; and if he will make a statement; [76004]

(2) how many service reviews within (a) NHS trusts and (b) health authorities have been conducted by the Commission for Health Improvement; and if he will make a statement. [75995]

Mr. Hutton: The Commission for Health Improvement (CHI) has power to undertake special investigations into particular areas of concern in the delivery of health care. To date, the CHI has completed seven investigations:

Five in Acute Trusts;

One relating to matters arising from the employment of a locum doctor in a NHS Trust;

One relating to issues arising from the case of a Loughborough GP.

A further three investigations are underway.

The CHI was set up on 1 November 1999 to meet our aim of improving the quality of patient care in the National Health Service. An important aspect of this work is a rolling programme to complete a clinical governance review of 500 NHS organisations by 2004. As at 1 October 2002, CHI has completed 175 clinical governance reviews across a range of NHS bodies of which 173 are NHS trusts and two health authorities.

Asthma

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the incidence of asthma in West London is including percentage change over the last five years; and if he will make a statement on the latest information on causation. [76097]

Mr. Hutton: Prevalence data—the percentage of the population affected with asthma at a given time—is not available for specific areas such as west London, but figures for the United Kingdom are held.

An estimated 5.1 million people in the UK—1.4 million adults and 3.7 million children, one in 13 and one in eight respectively—are currently receiving treatment for asthma. An estimated eight million people in the UK have been diagnosed with asthma at some stage in their lives.

Information on admissions to hospital for asthma* in west London is detailed in the table.

Asthma has a genetic element. The predisposition to develop asthma is inherited with an increased risk if one or both parents have asthma. In addition environmental factors interact with the genetic predisposition to cause asthma to develop as a symptomatic condition.

Many different genes have been shown to be associated with allergy and asthma susceptibility, and different environmental factors are likely to influence outcomes in different ways depending on the underlying genotype.

Interaction between genes and environment in asthma is therefore a major focus of research in the asthma field. To this end, the national asthma campaign is making a large investment over the next two years funding a task force to address issues of causation. The task force will review the current evidence in this area and assess the feasibility of large scale, definitive studies to answer these questions.

Voluntary Organisations and Charities

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which voluntary organisations and charities departmental Ministers have met since the beginning of June. [78093]

Mr. Hutton: The Department's Ministers have met the following voluntary organisations and charities since the beginning of June:

Action on Smoking and Health
British Association for Adoption and Fostering Barrow Cadbury Trust
Cancer Research UK
Cystic Fybrosis Trust
Dementia Services Collaborative
Diabetes UK
Disability Rights Commission
Doctor Patient Partnership
Empower
Epilepsy Action
Epilepsy Bereaved

Isabelle
Joint Epilepsy Council
Lymphoma Association
Macmillan Cancer Relief
National Council for Hospices and Specialist Palliative Care
NTract—National Translational Cancer Research Network
Parkinsons Disease Society
Pasque Children's Hospice
Project Cure
St John Ambulance
SANE
Re Think Severe Mental Illness
Sustain
Terence Higgins Trust

Ambulance Services

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what central Government targets have been set for ambulance services; and what assessment has been made of whether they are being met. [78097]

Jacqui Smith: Ambulance National Health Service trusts are aiming to respond to 75 per cent. of category A calls within eight minutes. All other emergency calls that are not life threatening should be responded to 95 per cent. of the time within 14 minutes in urban areas and 19 minutes in rural areas.

Information about ambulance services response times to emergency calls are collected each year by the Department and published annually. The latest information is contained in the Department of Health statistical bulletin Ambulance Services, England 2001–02. A copy is available in the Library and also on the Department's website at www.doh.gov.uk/public/5b0115.htm.

Independent Sector Usage Survey

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he intends to publish the results of the Independent Sector Usage Survey. [78099]

Mr. Hutton: The Department has carried out two surveys of National Health Service use of the independent sector for acute elective care in 2000–2001. The first survey, begun last October, sought information on actual use in the first half of the year, along with planned use in the second half of that year. Information on actual use in the second half of the year was sought in a further survey begun in August this year. The results of that further survey are now being collated. We will consider the best way to make the findings publicly available once the analysis of the second survey has been completed.

Stem Cell Research

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many applications the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority has received for stem cell research; and how many have been awarded. [77490]

Ms Blears: The Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority has received nine applications for embryo research aimed at the production of embryonic stem cell lines, five of which have been granted and four are currently under consideration.

Paddington Basin Project

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions his Department has had in the last six months with the management of the Paddington Health Campus. [77958]

Mr. Hutton: The Regional Director of the Directorate of Health and Social Care—London has participated in ongoing discussions with the management of the Paddington basin project together with the North West London Strategic Health Authority.

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial recompense has been provided to Mr. Eric Sorenson the former project director of the Paddington Health Campus following his resignation on 4 October. [77957]

Mr. Hutton: Eric Sorensen, the former project director of the Paddington Health Campus is still employed by St. Mary's, The Royal Brompton and Harefield NHS Trusts and the Imperial College. As such, the terms of his employment are a matter for these employing organisations.

Drugs (Storage and Transport)

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines have been given to (a) pharmacists and (b) primary care trusts to ensure that biological drugs are kept within recognised safe temperatures during storage and transport to patients. [78491]

Ms Blears: The Medicines Control Agency (MCA), an executive agency of the Department of Health, regulates medicinal products for human use in the United Kingdom on behalf of the UK Licensing Authority.

UK legislation places an obligation on licensed manufacturers, distributors and importers of medicinal products to exercise control over the distribution chain to ensure that the medicinal products are handled, stored and distributed under the necessary conditions to avoid deterioration of the products.

The Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain's code of ethics and standards and practice guidance provides guidance to UK registered pharmacists on the storage of medicines under controlled temperatures.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to ensure that biological drugs brought into the UK by parallel importers maintain their temperature integrity during transport. [78490]

Ms Blears: United Kingdom legislation places an obligation on licensed distributors and importers of medicinal products to exercise control over the distribution chain, to ensure that the medicinal products are handled, stored and distributed under the necessary conditions to avoid deterioration of the products

Inspectors from the Medicines Control Agency (MCA) inspect parallel importers in the UK at regular intervals. The inspectors review records relating to the maintenance of temperature integrity during transportation of the imported products to ensure that they have not been exposed to unacceptable conditions.

Biological Drugs

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to compel pharmaceutical companies who manufacture biological drugs to ensure their delivery to patients maintain the drugs within recognised safe temperatures at all times. [78492]

Ms Blears: United Kingdom legislation places an obligation on licensed manufacturers and wholesale distributors of medicinal products to exercise control over the distribution chain to ensure that the medicinal products are handled, stored and distributed under the necessary conditions to avoid deterioration of the products.

Inspectors from the Medicines Control Agency (MCA) inspect manufacturers and distributors of medicines at regular intervals to ensure that they meet the statutory requirements concerning the maintenance of safe and appropriate storage and transportation temperatures of medicines.

Manufacturers and distributors who fail to comply with statutory requirements may be subject to formal action by the MCA in order to protect public health. This can include suspension or revocation of the manufacturing and/or wholesale distribution authorisations.

Patient Records

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) quantity and (b) proportion of patient records are computer-based; and what (i) quantity and (ii) proportion of cancer patient records are computer-based. [78948]

Mr. Hutton: The National Health Service has made significant strides in using information technology to support patient care. Although not individually counted as individual records, the majority of general practitioners have clinical systems containing patient specific information, hospitals have patient administration systems which hold both clinical and demographic information about patients. There are also a number of national applications that support national screening programmes, organ donation and the work of the blood authority.

It is not possible, however, to provide details of the quantity or proportion of cancer patients who have computer based records but the majority will have records in both the primary and secondary care arena which contain information about their specific diagnosis.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what training requirements are in place for new doctors to enable them to handle electronic patient records. [75508]

Mr. Hutton: [holding answer 21 October 2002] I refer the hon. Member to the response I gave him on Wednesday 23 October 2002, Official Report, column 397W.

Recruitment and Retention

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what strategies his Department has to ensure that there is no ageism in recruitment and retention processes. [79291]

Mr. Hutton: The Department is committed to ensure that older people are never unfairly discriminated and complies with the rules and requirements of the Minister's Rules for Selection, The Civil Service Order Council, Treasury and equal opportunity and employment protection legislation. Ageism is not tolerated within the Department.

Our recruitment, development, performance management and retention policies are continuously reviewed. There are no age barriers to employment.

The Department is considering how best to implement the recommendations contained in the Government's Winning the Generation Game report, which examines age-related issues such as flexible retirement beyond the normal retiring age of 60.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of new recruits to his Department in the past two years were aged 50 and over. [79303]

Mr. Hutton: The percentages anof new recruits aged over 50, who joined the Department during the past two years, are as follows:

1 April 2000 and 31 March 2001

	Total	Percentage
Total recruits	730
Total recruits aged 50 or over	66	9

1 April 2001 and 31 March 2002

	Total	Percentage
Total recruits	627
Total recruits aged 50 or over	129	21

Winter Mortality

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what research his Department has (a) carried out and (b) funded into excess winter mortality in other European Union countries. [79498]

Mr. Hutton: As a member state of the European Union (EU), the United Kingdom contributed to the funding of the EU Eurowinter project, which studied the relation of work related and culture related patterns of cold exposure to large and paradoxical differences in excess winter mortality within Europe. The project was co-ordinated by Queen Mary and Westfield College, University of London, and reports were published in Lancet on 10 May 1997 and British Medical Journal on 16 September 2000.

Biomedical Research

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 14 October 2002, Official Report, column 498W, on biotechnology research projects, what proportion of (a) the medical research council's—£362 million of research and development spending and (b) the Department of

Health's—£510 million research spending shown in Table 3 Looking Forward (Cm 5338) goes into biomedical research. [79515]

Ms Blears: All the research that the Medical Research Council (MRC) supports is biomedical research. An estimated 60 per cent. of the Department's research expenditure is used in the National Health Service to support research by the MRC, by medical research charities and by other research collaborators, a substantial part of which is to support the clinical stages of biomedical research. The Department and the NHS also directly fund health services' biomedical research; for example, through genetics knowledge parks and other programmes. Some 40 per cent. of the Department's policy research programme expenditure is on biomedical research.

CFS/ME

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent research his Department has commissioned into the causes of myalgic encephalomyelitis. [79186]

Ms Blears: The Department has asked the Medical Research Council (MRC), which receives its grant-in-aid from my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Trade And Industry, via the Office of Science and Technology, to develop a broad strategy for advancing biomedical and health services research on chronic fatigue syndrome/myalgic encephalomyelitis (CFS/ME). The MRC has appointed an independent scientific advisory group, which will draw on the report of the Chief Medical Officer's Working Group, published in January 2002, on other recent expert reviews in this field and on research reported in the peer reviewed literature. The MRC is committed to the development of a research strategy for CFS/ME that will advance understanding of the aetiology, epidemiology and biology of CFS/ME and, in the light of current knowledge, suggest what areas of further research are needed with regard to possible prevention, management (including diagnosis) and treatment.

NICE Guidance

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the total cost to the NHS of guidance issued to date by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence. [79714]

Ms Blears: The estimated full-year running costs of all National Institute for Clinical Excellence appraisal guidance issued up to and including appraisal guidance number 52, relative to previous levels of National Health Service spending where appropriate, amount to some £513 million for England. In some cases the financial impact on the NHS may build up gradually, for instance where infrastructure changes are needed to put the recommendations into full effect.

Agency Nurses

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the cost to the NHS of agency nurses was in each of the last six years in (a) England (b) each NHS region; [75637]

(2) How much was spent by the NHS on agency and bank nurses in (a) England and (b) each region, broken down by NHS trust, in each of the last six years. [79713]

Mr. Hutton: Data outlining the expenditure on non-National Health Service nursing, midwifery and health visiting staff is shown in the table. These figures include all agency staff and any other staff not directly employed by the individual NHS trusts, health authorities and primary care trusts. A regional breakdown is not available prior to 1996–1997.

Neonatal Services Review

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish the neonatal services review; and if he will place a copy of (a) the review and (b) plans to change the configuration of services in the Library. [80051]

Jacqui Smith: I am considering the report following from a review of neonatal services and expect to determine the next steps in this process shortly.

Cancelled Operations

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations were cancelled (a) on the day of admission and (b) before the day of admission at Wythenshawe Hospital in each quarter since 1997. [79879]

Jacqui Smith: Wythenshawe Hospital is part of South Manchester University Hospitals National Health Service Trust, which comprises both Wythenshawe and Withington Hospitals. Separate figures are not available for each hospital individually or earlier than 1 April 2001.

Statistics are compiled for the total number of operations cancelled for non-clinical reasons. The figures do not differentiate between those cancelled on the day of admission and prior to admission.

Mobile Decontamination

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS acute trusts do not have mobile decontamination facilities available. [79893]

Ms Blears: The Department has provided capital funding from a £5 million allocation in 2002–2003, which will enable all NHS acute trusts and ambulance service trusts to purchase mobile decontamination facilities and associated chemical personal protective clothing. The implementation programme is currently in progress and several individual trusts will still be awaiting delivery.

Vacancies

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many vacancies there were for (a) medical and dental staff, (b) qualified nursing, midwifery and health visiting staff and (c) professions allied to medicine in (i) England, (ii) each NHS region and (iii) each health authority in 2001. [79798]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Member to the response I gave him on Monday 19 November 2001, Official Report, column 117–122W.

Figures for March 2002 are now available and have been placed in the Library.

GP Access Targets

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of GP practices met the 24 and 48 hour access targets set out in the NHS Plan in (a) England, (b) each NHS region and (c) each primary care trust at the latest date for which figures are available. [79797]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested by strategic health authority and primary care trust for Quarter 1, 2002–2003 has been placed in the Library.

Hospital Transport

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, on 24 May 2002, Official Report, column 1197W, on hospital transport if he will make a statement on the contribution of voluntary providers to accident and emergency transport. [80041]

Jacqui Smith: Voluntary aided societies do occasionally convey patients to accident and emergency departments from say, sporting events and very occasionally they may provide support to statutory ambulance services.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will answer questions 76287 and 75990 from the hon. Member for Yeovil; and if he will make a statement. [80239]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 28 October 2002, Official Report, column 675W (Question 75990). I will write to the hon. Member in response to Question 76287 as soon as possible.

Age-Related Macular Degeneration

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the annual cost was in 2001–02 to the NHS to social services of supporting people who suffer vision loss as a result of wet age-related macular degeneration; what assessment he has made of the impact of patients of the delay in NICE issuing guidance on the use of photodynamic therapy for age-related macular degeneration; and if he will provide funding for a nationally co-ordinated data collection exercise on the use of photodynamic therapy for age related macular degeneration; [76241]

(2) how many patients have access through ongoing clinical trials to photodynamic therapy for age-related macular degeneration; and how many patients will have access to this therapy as part of future clinical trials being planned. [76242]

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the NICE Committee will report its recommendations for age-related macular disease. [77842]

Ms Blears [holding answer 28 October 2002]: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) is currently conducting an appraisal of photodynamic therapy. This consultation has been extended to allow further consideration of the draft guidance. We cannot anticipate what NICE'S recommendations will be or assess what, if any, patients who are untreated at present will then be eligible for treatment. The Department will consider the implications of the final NICE guidance. We expect that guidance could be available to the National Health Service in January 2003, providing there are no appeals.

In the meantime, guidance issued in August 1999 to all NHS bodies asked them to continue with local arrangements for the managed introduction of new technologies where guidance from NICE is not available at the time the technology first became available. These arrangements should involve an assessment of all the relevant factors including the available evidence on effect. The introduction of photodynamic therapy under these arrangements should be funded locally.

The Department does not collect data concerning the number of age-related macular degeneration patients currently receiving photodynamic therapy through clinical trials. We are also not in a position to estimate future access through clinical trials; the numbers involved would be a matter for the product manufacturer or others who are conducting the trial.

It is not possible to identify separately from the data collected from health and social services, the annual cost of supporting people who suffer vision loss as a result of the wet form of age-related macular degeneration.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what proportion of patients newly diagnosed with wet age related macular degeneration have access to photodynamic therapy for age-related macular degeneration through ongoing clinical trials; and what proportion of those patients will have access to this therapy as part of future clinical trials being planned; and if he will make a statement; [76336]

(2) if he will provide funding for the use of photodynamic therapy for age-related macular degeneration pending the completion of a nationally co-ordinated data collection exercise on clinical outcome, quality of life and costs associated with the treatment; and if he will make a statement. [76337]

Ms Blears [holding answer 29 October 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friends the Members for Norwich, North (Dr Gibson) and for Stroud (Mr. Drew) today.

NHS Reform

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how his Department plans to hold strategic health authorities to account for the performance of the NHS within their area as set out in paragraph 7.2 of the document, Improvement, Expansion & Reform: The Next Three Years. [75715]

Mr. Hutton: From 2003–04, strategic health authorities (StHAs) will be required to produce local delivery plans, which will set out over a three year period their contribution towards the target and capacity assumptions detailed in Improvement, Expansion & Reform: The Next Three Years. Departmental monitoring systems will be aligned with these targets and assumptions to allow for regular monitoring and hold to account StHAs.

In addition Directorates of Health and Social Care are setting in place a series of regular performance reviews to manage performance with StHAs. These arrangements will be mirrored at StHA, primary care trust and trust levels.

Social Workers

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 21 October 2002, Official Report, columns 128–9W, on social workers, what the provisional figures are for the numbers of applications for social work training; what action he is taking to make existing social workers realise that their work is valued; how he plans to inform the public about what social workers actually do; and how much funding has been allocated to this initiative. [78190]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 29 October 2002]: The national social work recruitment campaign was launched in October 2001 by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Health. It is aimed at informing the public about social work and social care and encouraging recruitment and retention. The funding for the campaign is £1.5 million in the year 2001–2002. This includes both national and local press and radio advertising and particular efforts are being made in some areas such as London and the south east that have more severe problems with recruitment and retention of social workers.

The third phase of the recruitment campaign was launched on 24 October 2002. The campaign consists of national advertising, leaflets, posters, local and national PR activity, a help line and a website. It has three aims:

To raise the number of people applying for social work training by 5000 by 2004.

To inform the public about what social workers actually do.

To make existing social workers realise that their work is valued.

Since the start of the campaign, there have been more than 40,000 callers to the telephone helpline and website. Applications have seen the first increase since 1995. The provisional figure suggests that over 5,000 have been received, which represents' a year on year increase of 8.3 per cent.

Silicone Cosmesis

Dr Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what sums were allocated for expenditure on silicone cosmesis for artificial limbs from the NHS community services budget in (a) 2001–02, (b) 2002–03 and (c) 2003–04; and what sums were identified by the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency as having been spent on silicone cosmesis for artificial limbs from that budget in (i) 2001 02 and (ii) 2002–03. [79041]

Ms Blears [holding answer 6 November 2002]: Baseline allocations of £0.5 million in 2001–02, £1.5 million in 2002–03 and £2.0 million in 2003–04 were expected to be used for the provision of silicone cosmesis for artificial limbs. Spending on silicone cosmesis through the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency was £81,858 for 2001–02, and £182,841 so far in 2002–03.

Prison Service (Mental Health)

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary for Health when he expects the Prison Service mental Health teams to have completed their review of the physical cell environment to reduce ligature points in (a) young offender institutions and (b) adult prisons. [78046]

Mr. Hilary Benn: I have been asked to reply. The Prison Service's strategy to reduce self-inflicted deaths includes changes to the physical environment, such as the re-design of cell windows and furniture to reduce ligature points. It has already produced, tested and procured a safer cell design, a number of installations of which have already been completed and are in use. Safer cell designs address the design of furniture, toilets and basin fixtures, windows, lighting and heating. The Prison Service is also developing a second stage safer cell design as well as reviewing current cell furniture designs and producing new ones, so that standard-issue cell furniture may benefit from an improved reduced-ligature design.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Sponsorships

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the schemes and initiatives sponsored by her Department and its agencies which are not the subject of national roll out, showing (a) the authorities or areas covered by the scheme and (b) the budget of the scheme in the last year for which information is available. [75667]

Dr. Howells: The following schemes and initiatives are sponsored by my Department in partnership with other funding bodies.

Space for Sports and Arts Programme (SSA)

Space for Sports and Arts Programme (SSA), is a partnership between traditional public expenditure of £75 million from the Capital Modernisation Fund and £55 million from the three Lottery distributors: New Opportunities Fund (£25 million), Sport England (£25 million) and Arts Council of England (£5 million).

The SSA programme is being rolled out in 65 local authorities in deprived areas. The budget for the programme is £130million from the beginning of 2000 to March 2004, which is the life of the programme. Approximately 297 projects are planned in the 65 local authorities. The Local Education Authorities (LEAs) invited to bid were:

Barking and Dagenham, Barnsley, Bedfordshire, Birmingham, Blackburn with Darwen, Bradford, Brent, Brighton & Hove, Bristol, City of Nottingham, Cornwall, Cumbria, Derby City, Derbyshire, Doncaster, Durham, East Sussex, Essex, Gateshead, Greenwich, Hackney, Hartlepool, Islington, Kent, Kingston-upon-Hull, Knowsley, Lambeth, Lancashire, Leeds, Leicester City, Lewisham, Liverpool, Luton, Manchester, Medway, Middlesbrough, Newcastle-Upon-Tyne, Newham, Norfolk, North Somerset, Northamptonshire, Northumberland, Nottinghamshire, Oxfordshire, Plymouth, Portsmouth, Redcar and Cleveland, Rochdale, Rotherham, Salford, Sandwell, Sheffield, Slough, Somerset, South Tyneside, Southwark, St Helens, Stockton-on-Tees, Stoke-on-Trent, Sunderland, Tower Hamlets, Trafford, Walsall, Wirral, Wolverhampton.

Portable Antiquities Scheme

The Portable Antiquities Scheme was established in 1997 to encourage members of the public to report all finds of archaeological objects. Since Autumn 1997 DCMS has been funding six pilot schemes to promote voluntary reporting of all archaeological finds. These pilots were established in Kent, Norfolk, North Lincolnshire, North West (Cheshire, Lancashire, Merseyside, Greater Manchester and Cumbria) West Midlands and Yorks. A further six pilots have been funded for three years by Heritage Lottery Fund since Spring 1999. These pilots were established in Dorset & Somerset, Hampshire, Northamptonshire, Suffolk, Wales, and in London.

A bid for a three-year funding for a national network of 41 posts at a cost of £1.5 million a year from April 2003 was approved by the Heritage Lottery Fund in May. This bid has 63 national and local partners each of whom is contributing 10 per cent. towards the cost.

In 2002–2003 the Department is providing £411,000 to support the current pilot schemes until the new funding comes on line.

The following schemes and initiatives are by public bodies sponsored by DCMS. These are not the subject of national roll out.

Splash Extra

This was a joint DCMS/Youth Justice Board programme of summer activities targeted on those 9–17 year olds identified as most at risk of offending in the areas covered across Government. A list of those areas covered will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses. Resourced by the New Opportunities Fund, and providing almost 300 estate-based schemes across England, Splash Extra established a menu of high quality sports, arts and personal development activities.

The budget was £8.5 million for the last financial year.

Sport (Social Agenda)

Patsy Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the contribution sport can make to meeting the Government's social agenda; and how much investment the Government are making in sports' governing bodies for delivering this purpose. [79183]

Mr. Caborn: A Sporting Future for All and the Government's Plan for Sport fully recognised the potential of sport and physical activity as a powerful tool for social, educational and physical well being. My right hon. Friend the Minister for Sport is therefore working very closely with colleagues in other Government departments including Education and Skills, Health, Home Office, Transport and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister which have an interest in sport representatives from whom he meets every month.

Many of the current sports funding programmes are also targeted specifically at areas of social and sporting deprivation. These include the New Opportunities Fund Sport and PE in School programme, the Spaces for Sport and the Arts programme and Sport Action Zones.

Government funding for national governing bodies of sport is largely channelled through the sports councils. This funding supports a range of their activities including their sports development plans which will in many instances have an impact on areas such as social inclusion, physical well being and crime reduction.

Sustainable Procurement

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to her answer of

2 July 2002, Official Report, columns 260–61W, on recycling, if she will make a statement on how her Department defines sustainable procurement. [79349]

Dr. Howells: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport engages in procurement considering the effective protection of the environment and prudent use of natural resources. The whole life performance and cost are considered before purchase. This includes not only purchase price but the impact on the environment and cost of operation and the impact and cost of disposal. For example the latest office furniture purchased has full Forest Stewardship Certification supplied by a World Wildlife Fund approved company and will, at the end of it's useful life, be capable of 100 per cent. recycling.

Ageism

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what strategies her Department has to ensure that there is no ageism in recruitment and retention processes. [79298]

Dr. Howells: My Department is committed to equality of opportunity for all staff and has a policy not to discriminate on the grounds of age. All policies on recruitment, development, performance management and retention are continuously reviewed to ensure that there are no age barriers to employment.

Recruitment (over 50s)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what percentage of new recruits to her Department in the past two years were aged 50 and over. [79311]

Dr. Howells: The percentage of new recruits to the Department for Culture, Media and Sport aged 50 or over in each of the last two years is shown below:

1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001–8.3 per cent.

1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002–5.3 per cent.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she intends to reply to the letter to her dated 15 October from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Tony Bowyer. [79447]

Dr. Howells: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to my right hon. Friend and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of both Houses.

Broadcasting

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what measures she is introducing to secure the future of (a) independent television broadcasters and (b) local programmes in Northern Ireland. [79429]

Dr. Howells: The Government are seeking to introduce a Communications Bill in the next Session that would include provisions intended to retain and strengthen the regional dimension to public service broadcasting. Under the new three tier structure for the regulation of broadcasting, OFCOM would have to agree targets with the public service broadcasters for regional (and where appropriate local) programming and/or regional productions. The Channel 3 service would continue to be licensed on a regional basis.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what role ITV will be required to play in sustaining local programming under the new ITV Charter for the Nations and Regions. [79430]

Dr. Howells: The Charter for Broadcasting in the Nations and Regions is an agreement between the Independent Television Commission (ITC) and the ITV Companies. The Charter sets out levels of quality and investment for a diverse range of programmes designed to reflect life within the nations and regions. Through the Charter the ITV Companies aim to secure the quality and accessibility of national and regional programmes into the future.

Extreme Sports

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with stakeholders concerning regulating extreme sports. [79748]

Dr. Howells: The Department has not had any discussions with stakeholders concerning regulating extreme sports.

Olympic Games

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with interested parties on the practicalities of a London bid for the 2012 Summer Olympic Games. [79826]

Dr. Howells: Officials from my Department have held regular meetings during this year with all the key stakeholders to discuss the implications of London bidding to host the 2012 Olympic Games. These stakeholders were the Greater London Authority, the British Olympic Association, UK Sport and Sport England. In addition all interested Government Departments have been involved in assessing the ARUP report on the Costs and Benefits of a 2012 London Olympic Bid.

My right hon. Friend, The Secretary of State has met the Mayor of London and will meet the British Olympic Association to discuss the practicalities of such a bid.

Football

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many football games Ministers in her Department have attended since 1 June 2001 in their official capacity; and where those games took place. [79734]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 6 November 2002]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State attended a football match on the 21 of April 2002 between Norwich City and Stockport County and my right hon. Friend the Minister for Sport attended the following matches:

1–09–01—England vs Germany, Munich

5–09–01—England vs Albania, Newcastle

6–10–01—England vs Greece, Manchester

10–11–01—England vs Sweden, Aston Villa

5-12-01—West Ham United vs Aston Villa, Upton Park
6-03-02—Liverpool vs Newcastle, Liverpool
22-03-02—England vs Scotland U19's, Sheffield
27-03-02—England vs Italy, Leeds
2-06-02—England vs Sweden, Saitama, World Cup
7-06-02—England vs Argentina, Sapporo, World Cup
12-06-02—England vs Nigeria, Osaka, World Cup
16-10-02—England vs Macedonia, Southampton

Racist Incidents

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with (a) European colleagues, (b) the FA and (c) other interested parties regarding recent racist incidents involving British-based players in Europe in competitions. [79827]

Dr. Howells: Neither I nor my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State have discussed with European colleagues, the FA or other interested parties the recent racist incidents involving British—based players in European in competitions. This is a matter for UEFA, who are reviewing the events.

However, the Government shares the revulsion which has been widely expressed following recent matches in Europe. The Government also supports the Europe-wide programme of anti-racism activities organised by Football Against Racism in Europe with the full support and involvement of the Kick it Out campaign.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) parliamentary questions and (b) letters to her from hon. Members in this session remain unanswered, broken down by those which are (i) one month old, (ii) two months old, (iii) three months old, (iv) four months old and (v) over six months old. [79941]

Dr Howells: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of both Houses.

Queen Alexandra Hospital Site

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what conditions on development were laid down by her Department when it gave the former Queen Alexandra hospital site in John Islip street, Westminster, to the Tate Gallery; and what the purpose was of such conditions with respect to development on the site for (a) residential housing and (b) commercial offices. [80336]

Dr Howells: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of both Houses.

Special Advisers

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to her answer of 24 May 2002, Official Report, columns 648–9W, how many visits have been conducted by each parliamentary adviser appointed by her Department and to where; and what visits have been conducted by advisers appointed subsequent to 24 May. [79975]

Dr Howells: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of both Houses.

British Board of Film Classification

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the members of the British Board of Film Classification. [80225]

Dr Howells: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of both Houses.

Sport Grants

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will announce the level of grant to (a) Sport England and (b) UK Sport for financial year 2003–2004; and if she will make a statement. [80342]

Dr Howells: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of both Houses.

Public Consultations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what public consultations have been commenced by her Department in each month since 20 July; and what the (a) start date, (b) closing date and (c) website address of each were. [80264]

Dr. Howells: One consultation has been commenced by the Department in this period. The Review of Lottery Funding consultation began on 29 July 2002 and ended on 30 October 2002. It can be found at www.culture.gov.uk.

Film Council

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps the Film Council is taking to increase the number of films that are (a) subtitled and (b) audio-described. [80339]

Dr. Howells: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of both Houses.

Alcohol Licensing

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how she estimates the removal of licensing jurisdiction from the courts to the local authorities will contribute to the Government's aims to (a) reduce crime and the fear of crime and (b) increase public confidence. [78685]

Dr. Howells: The Government are confident that the proposed transfer of responsibility for alcohol licensing from licensing justices to local authorities will assist its efforts to reduce crime and the fear of crime. Since 1998 local authorities have had a leading statutory role in preventing local crime and disorder and the link between alcohol and crime is therefore a strong argument for them taking responsibility for alcohol licensing.

The transfer of responsibility should not however be considered in isolation. The Government's proposed Alcohol and Entertainment Licensing Bill will also include a whole package of measures designed to reduce crime and the fear of crime. These will include providing the police with extended powers to close pubs, clubs and off-licences that create disorder. The Bill will strengthen the law on the sale of alcohol to under-18s and will give the police greater powers to confiscate alcohol in certain public areas. It will abolish the artificially early closing times that are the source of much of the trouble on our streets at night and there will be enhanced police powers to confiscate alcohol. Local residents will also be able to object to any premises licence application, or request a review of a licence that has been granted, if they have concerns about that licence in relation to crime.

Health and Safety

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, what plans she has to assess the safety practices of bungee jumping. [79747]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: I have been asked to reply.

Health and safety law applies to bungee jumping activities. The Health and Safety at Work etc Act 1974, the Lifting Operations Lifting Equipment Regulations 1998 and the Management of Health and Safety at Work Regulations 1999 are of direct relevance.

The Health and Safety Commission (HSC) and the industry have assessed health and safety in this activity and have issued guidance.

As a result of a recent fatal accident the Health and Safety Commission and Health and Safety Executive will review the safety practices in the light of findings of the continuing investigation.

Responsibility for enforcement of health and safety law in respect of bungee jumping activities falls to the relevant authority.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

GM Organisms

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what is her Department's position on acceptable thresholds for the adventitious presence of genetically modified organisms in seed batches of (a) oil seed rape, (b) tomatoes, (c) beet, (d) cotton, (e) chicory, (f) maize, (g) potatoes and (h) soya beans; and if she will make a statement. [75244]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 21 October 2002]: The EU Commission has proposed the following thresholds for the adventitious presence of approved GM seeds in non-GM seeds:

0.3 per cent. for swede rape

0.5 per cent. for tomato, beet, chicory, maize, cotton and potato

0.7 per cent. for soya bean

The Government is giving careful consideration to our position on these proposals. In so doing, we shall aim to preserve consumer choice by seeking adequate protection for the integrity of non-GM seeds.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, if she will set out her policy towards draft EU proposals for new seed regulations. [75243]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 21 October 2002]: The Government is giving careful consideration to the EU Commission's proposals on thresholds for the adventitious presence of approved GM seeds in non-GM seeds. In so doing, we shall aim to preserve consumer choice by seeking adequate protection for the integrity of non-GM seeds.

Organic Standards

Mr. Breed: to ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her Answers on 29 October (76252, 76253 and 76254), if she will place the correspondence to and from her Department and the United States Department of Agriculture and organic certifiers relating to UK organic standards and the US National Organic Plan in the Library. [79116]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 5 November 2002]: I have today placed in the Library the following correspondence between the Department and the US Department of Agriculture—

A letter dated 4 December 2001 from James Hughes, First Secretary (Agriculture and Trade Policy) at the British Embassy in Washington, to Mr. A J Yates acting Administrator of the USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service formally applying for recognition of the UK's approved certifiers of organic food. (The documents enclosed with this letter can be found on the Departments website at http://defraweb/farm/organic/default.htm)

A letter dated 8 January 2002 from the Richard H Mathews, Programme Manager for the National Organic Programme, acknowledging Mr. Hughes' letter,

A letter dated 21 October 2002 from Mr. Yates to Alex Dasi-Sutton acting Secretary of UKROFS confirming that the USDA has determined the UKROFS' procedures for approving organic inspection bodies to be sufficient to secure conformity with the NOP.

We are discussing with the UK organic inspection bodies how best to deal with the conditions set out in Mr. Yates letter of 21 October and will be sending a substantive reply to this letter shortly.

I have also placed in the Library letters dated 5 September and 25 September 2002 to UK importers of organic produce and UK inspection bodies confirming that sufficient assurances had been received from the principal inspection bodies in the US to enable authorisation to import produce certified by those bodies to remain in place.

Illegal Food Imports

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, how many non-statutory inspections were carried out for illegal food imports in each of the last 10 years, broken down by category. [78615]

Mr. Morley: Control of imports of products of animal origin is the responsibility of Local/Port Health Authorities. Information on the number of inspections carried out is not held centrally. During the course of checks for other products (including drugs and money), illegal food imports may also be found. Since 1 April 2001, 3899 seizures of animal products have been reported to Defra).

Animal Welfare

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, if she will support the European Commission's proposal that financial assistance should be given to farmers to help them adopt higher animal welfare systems. [77687]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 30 October 2002]: As a European leader in the animal welfare field, the UK supports the principle of encouraging adoption of higher welfare standards through financial assistance. However, we will need to be careful that any system adopted is workable and fair, and that it is compatible with World Trade Organisation rules.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, if she will support the European Commission's proposal to link the payment of Common Agricultural Policy subsidies to farmers with their compliance with animal welfare laws; and if she will make a statement. [77688]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 30 October 2002]: The Government supports the principle of the European Commission's proposal to decouple support from production and create a single income payment linked to compliance with animal welfare, environment and food and occupational safety standards. There has only been limited discussion on this aspect of the proposals so far and more clarification is needed, as the details will be important to the effectiveness of this proposal.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, if she will make a statement on the welfare of milking cows. [80040]

Mr. Morley: There is legislation in place to protect the welfare of dairy cows. The Welfare of Farmed Animals (England) Regulations 2000 sets down general welfare requirements for all farmed animals, including some detailed requirements for cattle. There is also a specific welfare code on cattle. This is currently being updated and the revised code will include a separate section devoted to the welfare of dairy cattle.

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, how many (a) live sheep and (b) live pigs have been exported from the United Kingdom to date in 2002 for (i) slaughter, (ii) further fattening and (iii) breeding; and how many (A) sheep and (B) pigs in each of these categories were exported to each individual country of destination. [77508]

Mr. Morley: The total number of live sheep and live pigs certified for export from the United Kingdom between 1 January 2002 and 1 November 2002 for slaughter, fattening and breeding are shown in the following tables.

Country of destination	Live Sheep Slaughter	Fattening	Breeding
Austria	0	0	22
Belgium	0	0	4
France	49,476	3,040	158
Germany	4,129	0	5
Isle of Man	0	0	11
Italy	29,244	0	0
Netherlands	456	0	55
Republic of Ireland	166,865	385	92
Totals	250,170	3,425	347

Country of destination	Live Pigs Slaughter	Fattening	Breeding
Belgium	0	0	3,888
Denmark	0	0	47
France	0	0	47
Germany	0	0	3,628
Greece	0	0	171
Isle of Man	0	0	71
Italy	0	0	1,194

Spain	0	0	1,607
Republic of Ireland	20,951	0	22
Totals	20,951	0	20,489

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many live sheep were exported from Dover to continental Europe on (a) 17 October, (b) 18 October, (c) 20 October and (d) 24 October; when and where health certification was carried out in respect of the sheep; how many of the sheep were rejected as unfit for the intended journey (i) during inspection for health certification purposes and (ii) at Dover docks, and to where those sheep were taken; and what the address was of the final destination on the route plan for each of the consignments; [78620]

(2) how many live sheep were exported from Dover to continental Europe on the (a) Alda-K, and (b) Caroline to Continental Europe on the 29 October; when and where health certification was carried out in respect of the sheep; how many of the sheep were rejected as unfit for the intended journey (i) during inspection for health certification purposes and (ii) at Dover docks, and to where those sheep were taken; and what the address was of the final destination on the route plan for each of the consignments. [79005]

Mr. Morley: The information requested is as follows:

Date	Total animals	Where consignments were certified	Animals rejected at certification	Animals rejected at Dover docks	Destination
17–10	3000	England, Scotland and Wales	20	0	France
18–10	3575	Wales	37	0	France and Holland
20–10	2675	England and Wales	80	0	Italy and France
24–10	2515	England and Wales	19	0	Italy and France
29–10 Alda-K	2666	England and Wales	22	0	Italy, Belgium, Germany and France
29–10 Caroline	2621	England and Wales	32	0	Italy and France

The sheep for the consignments listed above were certified within 48 hours prior to export. These consignments, apart from the sailing on 17 October which were fattening animals transported to a single holding, went to approved slaughterhouses. The animals which were rejected at certification remained in Great Britain.

Home Energy Conservation Bill

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what representation her Department has received from local authorities (a) prior to and (b) following the withdrawal of the Home Energy Conservation Bill; and if she will list these local authorities. [77403]

Mr. Meacher: We have received representations from Local Authorities regarding various aspects of the Home Energy Conservation Bill. They were all received prior to the Bill's withdrawal.

The following Local Authorities have expressed general support for the Bill;

Acaster Malbis Parish Council
Adlington Town Council
Basingstoke and Deane Borough Council
Bath and North East Somerset Council
Bedfordshire County Council
Berwick upon Tweed Borough Council
Bottesford Town Council
Broadland District Council
Carrickfergus Borough Council
Castle Morpeth Borough Council
Chelmsford Borough Council
Cinderford Town Council
City of Manchester
City of Sunderland Council
Clitheroe Town Council
Copeland Borough Council
Cumbria County Council
Cyngor Tref Nefyn Town Council
Derbyshire County Council

Stoke Gifford Parish Council
Stoke Holy Cross Parish Council
Swindon Borough Council
Trawsfynydd Community Council
Tynedale Council
Wellingborough Borough Council
West Lindsey District Council
Weymouth and Portland Borough Council
Woking Borough Council

The following Local Authorities have expressed support for the Bill "in principle";

Castle Point Borough Council
Swindon Borough Council

The following Local Authorities have expressed support for the Bill, provided that extra funding is provided;

Ashford Borough Council
Bedford Borough Council
Bradford Metropolitan District Council
Bromsgrove District Council
District of Easington
Lewes District Council
London Borough of Havering
Rochford District Council

Tewkesbury Borough Council

The following local authorities have requested that statutory targets be included in the Bill;
Daventry District Council
Derbyshire County Council
Hyndburn Borough Council
Northamptonshire County Council
Oadby and Wigston Borough Council
Oldham Council
Oxfordshire County Council
Preston Borough Council

The following local authorities have expressed support for the clauses of the Bill that relate to Fuel Poverty;
Brighton and Hove Council
Rotherham Metropolitan Borough Council

Rural Funding

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many funding commitments were launched by her Department and across the Government following the publication of the Rural White Paper in November 2000, stating which (a) require bidding and (b) are linked to a set funding formula; and what total amount is available for each commitment. [79908]

Alun Michael: There are 260 key commitments contained or referred to in the Rural White Paper, of which 29 have direct funding arrangements. The figures are set out in the table below. Further information on the progress of these schemes is available in our Rural White Paper implementation plan on www.defra.gov.uk

Funding Commitment	Bidding	Set Funding Formula	Total
Community Service Fund*	✓		£15m over 3 years
Refurbishing Post Offices	✓		£2m
Single Small Schools Fund		✓	£240m over 3 years
One stop primary care centres		✓	£100m
Sure Start	✓		£22m
Social Exclusion Projects		✓	£4.5
Police Visibility in rural areas		✓	£60m
Housing Corporation programme of affordable housing in settlements under 3000		✓	Figures currently being collated
Starter Homes Initiative		✓	£250m
Rural Housing Enablers*	✓		£2.8m
Promote flexible lettings policies by Local Authorities		✓	£13m
Rural Transport Partnership*	✓		19.5m
Parish Transport Fund*	✓		£15m
Rural Bus Subsidy		✓	£132m
Rural Bus Challenge	✓		£20m
Community Rail Partnerships*	✓		£0.2m
Rail Passenger Partnership	✓		£52m
Regeneration of 100 market towns*		✓	£37m
Leader + *	✓		£50m
Business clusters		✓	£54m
Help for small/ medium sized abattoirs*		✓	£20m
School Milk Scheme		✓	£1.5m
National School Fruit Scheme		✓	£42m
Extension of Redundant Buildings Grant scheme	✓		£4m
Local Heritage Initiative	✓		£5m
National Parks Grants*		✓	£31.5m (2002–03)
Increased funding for AONBs*		✓	£1.1m (2002–03)
National training strategy/ best practice toolkit for Parish and Town Councils*		✓	£2m
Help 1000 rural communities prepare plans*	✓		£5m

Notes:
* Programmes administered by Defra or one of its agencies
The European Rural Development Programme is an important component in the delivery of the policies set out in the Rural White Paper. This programme commits £1.6 billion in funding over 7 years.

Illegal Meat Imports

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, how many illegal meat imports were identified by Customs and Excise entering the UK in each of the last 10 years, broken down by category and where they were discovered. [78656]

Mr. Morley: The records held by Defra on the seizure of illegal food imports date back to 1 April 2001. Prior to that date, information on seizures was not held centrally.

Since 1 April 2001, HM Customs and Excise have reported a total of 2147 seizures to Defra. Of those, there have been 1473 seizures of meat, 269 of fish, 58 of dairy products, 330 multiple seizures in which more than one type of produce of animal origin was found and 17 other seizures (which included products such as honey).

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, which of the notifiable diseases mentioned in Schedule 2A of the Government's Animal Health Bill 2001 she estimates are able to enter the country by illegally imported bushmeat. [75933]

Mr. Morley: There is no precise definition of the term bushmeat, but this is generally understood to mean the meat of wild animals hunted for food, derived mainly from Central and West African countries.

As part of our Action Plan on illegal imports, we are carrying out a risk assessment to provide information on the likelihood that infected meat will enter the country undetected and infect susceptible livestock. This risk assessment is nearing completion. The risk assessment is focussing initially on the risk posed by Foot and Mouth Disease, though further work will follow on the swine diseases (Classical and African swine fever, swine vesicular disease). It would be possible to use the risk assessment model for other diseases as listed in Schedule 2A, where necessary and appropriate.

Of the diseases listed in Schedule 2A of the Animal Health Bill, Bluetongue and African horse sickness are not transmissible through meat/meat products (they are insect-borne). Other diseases are transmissible via meat, although the risks vary considerably. Generally, the viruses and bacteria present will depend on the species of meat, handling following slaughter, the processing it has undergone (for example, viruses are unlikely to survive the drying or smoking process), whether the product is on the bone, or has large quantities of offal, the temperature at which it has been kept and the length of time taken to reach the UK. The risk of infected bushmeat coming into contact with susceptible livestock is another important variable.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, how many prosecutions there have been since January 2000 of persons found to be selling illegally imported meat products. [75929]

Mr. Morley: Responsibility for enforcing the law on imported meat products at the point of sale lies with local authorities. Information on prosecutions is not held centrally.

Defra is aware that in 2001, HM Customs and Excise prosecuted three people for offences relating to the import of meat covered by the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES). Two were convicted on CITES offences and one was acquitted, but convicted under a separate Animal Health charge. This year, we are aware of one successful prosecution brought by Crawley Borough Council in July, and six cautions issued by the London Port Health Authority in October. All related to the illegal importation of animal products.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, how many extra staff have been appointed to detect illegally imported meat at ports of entry to the UK since the outbreak of foot and mouth disease; and if she will make a statement. [79283]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 4 November 2002]: An additional £1.5 million has been allocated in this financial year to fund extra checks. Discussions have been held with Local/Port Health Authorities on how best to target the resources. We expect to be able to fund between 18 and 30 extra officers this year. Sixteen officers have already started work or are just about to.

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to the Answer of 11 April 2002, Official Report, column 585W, on illegal meat imports, what progress has been made towards implementing the action plan; and if she will make a statement. [79554]

Mr. Morley: Since April, significant progress to implement the action plan has been made:

The risk assessment to provide information on the likelihood that infected meat will enter the country undetected, and infect susceptible livestock will be published later this year.

We have increased the number of targeted checks carried out this year, especially on passenger bags.

An extra £1.5 million has been allocated in this financial year for additional enforcement officers to perform checks on imports at selected ports and airports.

At European level, new rules on personal import allowances were adopted on 20 September and come in to force on 1 January 2003.

A six-month pilot using detector dogs to find illegal animal products in passenger baggage and freight commenced at Heathrow on 16 September.

The "Don't bring back more than you bargained for" public awareness campaign, launched on 8 July. Two video fillers are currently being distributed, and we have already produced and distributed a radio filler, posters and leaflets.

Biosecurity

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs; if she will list the biosecurity measures, introduced by the Government at UK air and seaports since the 2001 foot and mouth outbreak. [77541]

Mr. Morley: Biosecurity measures are in place at various points in the production chain. For example, leaflets giving advice on biosecurity have been issued to farmers. Due to the increased numbers of animals being imported to replace livestock, surveillance for certain diseases, (for example brucellosis) has been enhanced. The Government has introduced new biosecurity requirements for premises assembling live animals for intra-Community trade. These are in addition to the EU animal health rules covering assembly centres.

The Government's Action Plan on Illegal Imports, published on 28 March set out measures to reduce the risk of animal and plant diseases entering the country. Since publication of the Plan, a number of measures have been put into place specifically at air and seaports. On 22 May, enforcement officers were given additional powers to search commercial consignments and personal baggage for illegal imports. We have increased the number and improved the locations of posters explaining our import controls at the major UK airports. On 19 September, a six month pilot using detector dogs began at Heathrow. In this financial year, an extra £1.5 million has been allocated for checks to be conducted by additional enforcement officers at certain ports and airports. A risk assessment was commissioned to ascertain the amount of illegal imports, the risk that they are infected with a major animal disease, and the probability that the disease could enter the food chain, infecting our livestock and wildlife. The results of this risk assessment are due later this autumn and will help us determine the extent of the problem and the appropriate level of response.

Forest Stewardship Council

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, how much funding the Government has allocated to the Forest Stewardship Council in each year since 1997. [77582]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 28 October 2002]: We have not allocated any funding to the Forest Stewardship Council.

Electrical Appliances

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what research has been conducted by her Department on assessing the role of consumer choice in product purchase and its impact on energy efficiency and total energy demand from domestic electrical appliances. [77594]

Mr. Meacher: The Department's Market Transformation Programme (MTP), working with the Energy Saving Trust, the Carbon Trust, manufacturers, retailers and other experts, carries out or acquires market research and analysis to help develop measures for reducing the total energy consumed by domestic appliances and other equipment. MTP currently maintains detailed consultative Policy Briefs accounting for around 90 per cent. of domestic energy consumption with baselines and projections to 2010 and beyond. All this information is open to scrutiny and review on the programme web-site (www.mtprog.com)

The role of consumer choice and reliable consumer environmental product information is a central consideration in constructing effective action programmes. The approach is to achieve better choice of efficient products by stimulating innovation and competition (for example, by mandatory EU "A to G" energy rating labels); encouraging market take-up of the best available products (for example, by the "Energy Efficiency Recommended" endorsement scheme and the Energy Efficiency Commitment); and discouraging the poorest performing equipment, by regulation or by voluntary agreements with industry.

Our analysis shows that this approach has been very successful in increasing consumer choice of efficient products and in raising overall efficiency levels. For example, in 1995 the most efficient fridges and freezers generally available to UK consumers would have been rated "B", with nearly half of UK consumers choosing the least efficient categories "D, E and F". Today, the range of choice is within a much higher band of energy performance: the most efficient products actually exceeding the "A" rating and only a very few available below a "C" rating.

Antibiotics

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what assessment she has made of the extent of antibiotic use in agriculture, and if she will make a statement. [79699]

Mr. Morley: The Government take the emergence of antibiotic resistance in bacteria very seriously and is developing policies to minimise unnecessary use of antibiotics in controlling animal diseases.

One of the key planks of the Government's strategy to reduce the amount of antibiotics used on farm is to encourage the prudent use of all medicines. The Government actively supports the activities of the Responsible Use of Medicines in Agriculture (RUMA) alliance in helping to promote this message.

Government policy on this issue is informed by the advice of its specialist advisory committees. My Department funds a research programme with a principle aim of reducing the use of antibiotics by developing alternative approaches to animal disease control.

The Government also monitor annually the sale of antibiotics for use in animals in the UK. In February 2002 the Government published the latest of its annual reports for sales of antimicrobial products used as veterinary medicines, growth promoters and coccidiostats. The report showed that 437 tonnes of active ingredient of therapeutic antimicrobials were sold for food producing animals in 2000. This slight increase over the previous period is believed to be due in the main to the EU ban of some antimicrobial growth promoters in June 1999, which resulted in a rise in clinical infections in animals that required treatment. There has also been an increased need to treat secondary infections in pigs suffering from two new diseases in the pig industry (Post-weaning Multi-system Wasting Syndrome (PMWS) or Porcine Dermatitis and Nephritis Syndrome (PDNS) that are having a significant impact on our domestic pig herds. Despite the increase, sales for 2000 remain amongst the lowest of the eight years for which sales data are available.

No antibiotic products are used in horticulture in the UK.

The report is available in the House library.

African Exports

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what the price was at 1st October of one kilo of (a) unprocessed cocoa Beans, (b) unprocessed coffee beans, (c) unprocessed sugar cane, (d) processed cocoa products containing more than 31 per cent. cocoa solids, (e) roasted ground coffee and (f) refined white sugar from (i) Kenya and (ii) Uganda; and what percentage of this price was an imposed tarif. [79608]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 5 November 2002]: Overseas Trade Statistics show that, of the commodities listed, only (b) unprocessed coffee beans have recently been imported into the UK from Kenya and Uganda. The price of one kilo of unprocessed coffee beans from Kenya is £1.37 and from Uganda £0.67. These prices are based on the value and volume of imports in August, the latest month for which information is available, and represent the price at the point of entry to the UK. There is no imposed tariff on these imports.

Environment Council

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what was the outcome of the Environment Council on 17 October; what the Government's stance was on each issue discussed, including its voting record; and if she will make a statement. [76395]

Margaret Beckett: I represented the UK at Environment Council on 17 October, accompanied by Mr. Ross Finnie, the Scottish Executive Minister for Environment and Rural Development. This was the first Environment Council of the Danish Presidency. It was also the first to be held under the Council's new rules of procedure, which provide that final debates and votes on legislative proposals subject to co-decision with the European Parliament are held in public. The Council reached political agreement on 3 proposals and made progress on a range of other important issues.

The Council reached political agreement on a Common Position on the revision of the EC Directive on packaging and packaging waste, which was along the lines of the general approach adopted at June Council. I strongly supported this proposal, which sets targets for recovery and recycling that the UK will find challenging, but achievable. These include a minimum 60 per cent. recovery target and recycling targets between 55–70 per cent., with a 2008 deadline for implementation. The only opposition was from Belgium and the Netherlands, who would have preferred even more demanding targets.

Political agreement was reached on the "Seveso II" Directive, which I also supported. This modifies the existing Directive on the prevention and control of major accident hazards involving dangerous substances. It introduces new controls on hazardous sites across the EU. Obligations will be placed on industrial operators to put into effect Safety Management Systems and detailed risk assessments, as well as to provide information to the public.

Political agreement was also reached on a Regulation to complete implementation of the Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety in relation to transboundary movements of Genetically Modified Organisms (GMOs) from the Community. Along with the Commission, I argued that the Regulation should be as closely consistent with the Protocol as possible. After lengthy negotiations we secured significant improvements to the text, namely that the form of identification of GMOs in mixed bulk shipments should be consistent with other EC legislation, including existing legislation on the release of GMOs and the forthcoming proposed Regulation on traceability and labelling. Furthermore, express consent from the importer will be required for the first international transboundary movement of GM material. On the basis of the improved text I was able to support the political agreement.

There was a short discussion on the proposed Regulation on traceability and labelling of GMOs in products. This focussed on links with a proposal to cover GMOs in food and feed, which had been discussed at Agriculture Council earlier in the same week. There is still some way to go before Member States can reach political agreement, and Council requested that the Committee of Permanent Representatives (Coreper) continue to work on this dossier.

There was an orientation debate concerning the proposed directive on emissions trading, with a view to being in a position to seek political agreement at the December Council. I strongly supported the scheme but pressed for flexibility during the first period, in order to allow it to interact more easily with national schemes, such as the UK's successful existing regime, and allow inclusion of other sectors and gases.

Council adopted conclusions on the implementation of the EU Sustainable Development Strategy. This included follow-up to environment-related commitments from the Johannesburg World Summit on Sustainable Development. It called for a strengthening of the Cardiff process of integrating environmental considerations into EU business, and adopted a set of environment-related indicators which it recommended for inclusion in the Commission's report to the Spring European Council. The Conclusions include reference to the need, also accepted by the Agriculture and Fisheries Council on the 15 October, to take account of EU commitments made at the WTO meeting in Doha and at Johannesburg in considering the future of the Common Agriculture Policy and Common Fisheries Policy.

Council Conclusions on climate change were adopted, without discussion, defining the EU's negotiating position for the 8 Conference of the Parties to the UN Convention on Climate Change in New Delhi. The Conclusions call for all Annex 1 developed countries which accepted the comprehensive and balanced Kyoto agreement reached in Bonn and Marrakech last year to ratify the Kyoto Protocol as soon as possible so as to achieve its entry into force in the near future. Developed countries which do not intend to ratify are urged to meet their responsibilities under the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change and to return their emissions to 1990 levels. The Conclusions also recall the ultimate objective of the Convention—to achieve stabilisation of greenhouse gas emissions in the atmosphere at a safe level and call upon all states to engage in a dialogue with a view to initiating at the 8 Conference of the Parties a process for further action under the Convention and the Protocol.

We were able to support the negotiating mandate for the EC for the 12 Conference of the Parties to CITES (Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species) and were pleased to see it agreed without amendment. There was unanimous support for the UK's proposal to list the Basking Shark in Appendix II, and unanimous agreement to oppose the Japanese proposal to downlist two species of whales (Minke and Bryde's whales), which would effectively reopen trade in the species.

The Council took note of progress on the proposed Environmental Liability Directive. The Presidency indicated that political agreement would not be possible at the December Council, as the European Parliament's first reading is not expected until spring 2003. The Presidency updated Council on the proposed Regulation on the monitoring of forests (Forest Focus) which aims to establish a Community scheme to assess forest ecosystem conditions. The Presidency also updated Council on two inter-related proposals, a Regulation and a Council Decision, to implement the Rotterdam Convention on a Prior Informed Consent procedure for certain hazardous chemicals and pesticides in international trade. On the Regulation, a compromise package has been approved in Coreper and has been forwarded to the European Parliament.

Under any other business, the Commission presented a report on mercury from the Chlor-Alkali industry, which followed a request from the Council in June 2001 to clarify the legal situation. The Greek delegation presented the outcome of the Euro-Med conference that took place in Athens on 10 July 2002. The German delegation made a statement on the financing of the European Committee for Standardisation Environmental Helpdesk. The French delegation started an exchange of views on possible European action in the field of flood prevention. In relation to this the Commission informed Council that a Communication on an integrated strategy on prevention, preparation and response to natural and technological risks is under preparation. Austria and Ireland made a joint statement on nuclear power in the context of sustainable development. Finally, the Danish delegation presented the results of a meeting of EU nature and forest Directors, which took place in Vigso, Denmark on 2–4 October 2002.

Local Agenda 21

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what information on the work of Local Agenda 21 groups is received in her Department; and what efforts are made to consolidate their views [79635]

Mr. Meacher: The Government monitored progress on Local Agenda 21 (LA21) until the end of 2000. By then over 93 per cent. of local authorities in England and Wales had LA21 strategies in place. There had also been a number of studies into LA21 in the UK. The Local Government Act 2000 placed a duty on local authorities to prepare community strategies for promoting the economic, social and environmental well being of their communities and contributing to sustainable development in the UK. The Government's statutory guidance says that authorities should build on the experience of partnership working and community engagement gained through LA21. The Government does not require authorities to submit their community strategies. However, there is a Best Value Performance Indicator which monitors authorities' timetable for preparing community strategies whilst checking that they adhere to the key aims and components set out in the guidance.

Game Birds

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, if she will make a statement on the availability of Emtryl to the UK game bird rearers. [80254]

Mr. Morley: At the request of the holder of the marketing authorisations, the marketing authorisations for Emtryl premix for game birds, Emtryl pure for game birds and Emtryl soluble for game birds were suspended with effect from 22 October 2002. However, those products already supplied to the market may continue to be sold or administered to animals in accordance with the terms of the marketing authorisation until the expiry date of the product.

Haskins Review

Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what the terms are of the recently announced inquiry to be headed by Lord Haskins relating to her Department. [78583]

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what are the objectives, terms of reference and timescale of Lord Haskin's review of her Department and its agencies. [78911]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 4 November 2002]: Lord Haskin has agreed, at my request, to review delivery arrangements and structures to Defra's countryside responsibilities. Lord Haskins will consult widely with Defra stakeholders and those who deliver rural policy. We expect the review to be completed by the summer of 2003.

Agency Budgets

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what the budget is for the (a) Countryside Agency, (b) Environment Agency, (c) Central Science Laboratory, (d) Veterinary Laboratories Agency, (e) Veterinary Medicines Directorate and (f) English Nature in 2002–03; and if she will make a statement on the future projections for the budget of each of these bodies. [79729]

Alun Michael: The requested budget figures are as follows:

£'000s	2002–03 Resource	2002–03 Capital
Countryside Agency	92,050	1,000
Environment Agency	168,000	17,000
Central Science Laboratory*	38,509	1,425
Veterinary Laboratories Agency*	75,460	28,219
Veterinary Medicines Directorate*	10,529	285
English Nature	58,506	3,325

The above amounts score within Departmental Expenditure Limits, and exclude overheads for central services provided by the core department. They are subject to in year review and adjustment.

The three Executive Agencies (*) operate on a net administration costs basis, whereby gross costs are matched by income, and have full cost recovery targets. To make their budgets more meaningful the offsetting income has been excluded from the above table.

The NDPBs—Countryside Agency, Environment Agency, and English Nature—resource and capital allocations for 2003–04 will be finalised shortly. Those for the executive agencies are still under review and will be confirmed as part of the Business Planning process.

Pigswill

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what proportion of responses received to the pigswill consultation were in favour of (a) tightening controls, (b) maintaining current levels of control and (c) relaxing controls; [78542]

(2) what steps her Department has taken to revise the published consultation response on the practice of using pigswill; [78552]

(3) how many responses she has received on the pigswill consultation from (a) operatives who provide a pigswill service and (b) owners of pig-rearing farms; [78533]

(4) what proportion of responses received to the pigswill consultation were in favour of (a) continuing current pigswill arrangements (b) altering current arrangements and regulations and (c) a ban on the use of pigswill. [78541]

Mr. Morley: The final number of responses received by the Government in reply to the public consultation letter of 27 March 2001 on the proposal to ban swill feeding reached 351. Of those a minority objected to the proposed ban. To review all those responses again for the details requested would involve my Department in disproportionate costs.

A letter was sent on 9 May 2001 to all those that were consulted to advise on the decision that had been reached and to provide advice for producers who were feeding swill at that time. The advice was re-issued 2 days later to clarify certain paragraphs and to delete some of the advice on the disposal of unprocessed swill which was incorrect.

Milk

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1), whether the subsidy from the European Union aims to provide free school milk for children aged up to (a) seven and (b) 11; [79225]

(2) if she will make a statement on the European subsidy to provide milk for all school children up the the age of 11; and how many education authorities in the UK take advantage of the European Union subsidy to provide school milk. [79223]

Mr. Morley: The EU subsidy is intended to encourage the consumption of milk by children by reducing the cost of its provision in schools. In the UK it may be claimed by those education authorities which choose to provide children up to the age of 11 with milk. In the UK there were, in the 2000–01 school year, 208 such claimants.

Mr. Lindsay Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1), what measures she has taken to encourage supermarket chains to increase the purchase of milk from dairy farmers; [79229]

(2) what recent discussions she has had with (a) dairy farmers and (b) representatives from supermarket chains regarding the price of milk; [79228]

(3) if she will make a statement on the decision by supermarket chains to increase the purchase price of milk from farmers by 2 pence a litre. [79227]

Mr. Morley: The prices charged by retailers, or those negotiated between farmers and purchasers, or between processors and retailers, are private commercial matters. Defra Ministers cannot and have not sought to get involved in price negotiations with farmers, retailers or processors, although the market situation in the diary sector is naturally an issue that does arise during discussions. Meetings of an informal dairy supply chain group, chaired by my noble friend Lord Whitty, have addressed the issue of supply volatility and its effect on farmgate milk prices and, at its last meeting in September, representatives from different parts of the supply chain reported their views on the recently announced price increases. The Governments welcomes any action that will assist the long term sustainability of the dairy sector.

Parrett Project

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment Food and Rural Affairs, where the Chairman of the Parrett catchment project has visited overseas on official business in the last two years. [78749]

Mr. Morley: The Parrett Catchment Project is an independent body. I am advised that the Chairman visited the Ruhr Valley in Germany in October 2002 in order to attend the initial meeting of the International Steering Committee of the JAF Intereg 111b project.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment Food and Rural Affairs, what theChairman of the Parrett catchment project has been paid in out-of-pocket expenses over the last two years. [78750]

Mr. Morley: The Parrett Catchment Project is an independent body. I am advised that up to July 2002, the Chairman has claimed second class train fares, mileage and subsistence. These claims were made at standard County Council rates up to June 2001, and thereafter at Environment Agency rates, for meetings attended on Parrett Catchment Project business. Claims for the period since July 2002 have not yet been made.

Heathrow

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment Food and Rural Affairs, when she expects (a) the new DEFRA inspection team and (b) the sniffer dogs to be deployed at Heathrow. [79175]

Margaret Beckett: A new Local/Port Health Authority team to undertake additional checks for illegal imports, funded by Defra, is due to start work at Heathrow on 12 November. The detector dog pilot started at Heathrow on 16 September.

Rural Payments Agency

Mr. Liddington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, how many claims for payment under (a) the beef special premium scheme 2001 and (b) the suckler cow premium scheme 2001 have been refused by the Rural Payments Agency; if she will publish an analysis of the reasons for such refusals; and if she will make a statement. [77324]

Margaret Beckett: (a) 3544 claims for payment under the beef special premium scheme 2001 have been refused entirely, 7203 claims for payment have been partly refused for payment under the beef special premium scheme 2001.

(b) 851 claims for payment under the suckler cow premium scheme 2001 have been refused entirely, 7659 claims for payment have been partly refused for payment under the suckler cow premium scheme 2001.

The above claims contain animals whose eligibility could not be established under the Commission Regulations, which govern the bovine schemes. The RPA regrets the delays and the impact on farmer's cash flow, but cannot ignore the discrepancies discovered through cross-checks, or indeed any other verification method employed by the Agency. Failure to act on the findings identified will result in significant disallowance.

The Commission have indicated that all cross-checks should be carried out prior to payment as they view these checks as a key control to the fund. If RPA were found to be making unsafe payments it would inevitably face disallowance.

When applicants disagree with the refusal decision it is open to them to provide the RPA with additional information, which they feel, should be taken into account.

Dairy Products

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what estimates she has made of consumption of (a) dairy products and (b) milk in each nation of the UK in each of the last 10 years. [79753]

Mr. Morley: The table shows consumption of selected dairy products in households as recorded by the National Food Survey between 1991 and 2000. It excludes food eaten outside the home and dairy produce used in processed food, e.g. pizzas.

The National Food Survey collects details of food purchases from a sample of households. Some of the variation seen for individual years within the table will therefore be due to sampling error.

Packaging

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, if the Government will introduce legislation to compel the use of biodegradeable materials for packaging of goods. [70260]

Margaret Beckett: Some retailers are using a substitute for plastics in some types of packaging made from potato starch. This material is entirely biodegradeable and can be composted. Other biodegradeable materials are manufactured based on modified plastics made from mineral oil. These materials still have to be sent for recycling after use. We do not therefore plan to introduce legislation to compel the use of biodegradeable materials for packaging of goods, but we do strongly support the development of biodegradeable materials from non-fossil sources.

Animal Diseases

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, for what reason the United Kingdom made no application to the EU for a share of its 2003 funding programme to control animal diseases and zoonoses. [78364]

Margaret Beckett: The UK has applied for and obtained EU funding in support of agreed control programmes for 2002 and previous years. In respect of the 2003 claims, claims for TB and Brucella were not received by the Commission until after the 1 June 2002 deadline. We are in discussion with the Commission in an attempt to correct the position.

Flood Defences

Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, if she will make a statement on completing the Shrewsbury flood defence scheme. [79994]

Mr. Morley: Defra approved the grant aiding of the Environment Agency's flood alleviation scheme for the Frankwell area of Shrewsbury in October 2001. I understand that work is expected to be substantially complete by June 2003 although, weather permitting, the defence should be operational before the end of November 2002.

The Agency is continuing to consider the viability of sustainable defence measures for other areas of Shrewsbury, although in the current situation I understand that there is little likelihood that a further scheme could be justified.

Cod

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her Answer to the hon. Member for Argyll and Bute at European Standing Committee A on 23 April 2002 column 7, what steps she is taking to persuade the European Commission that banning trawling for nephrops will have a very small impact on cod recovery. [79607]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 5 November 2002]: The European Commission has yet to bring forward its proposals for the management of commercial fish stocks in 2003, following the recent recommendations from international scientists for a moratorium on most directed cod fishing and also on fishing for other species unless the taking of cod as a bycatch can be eliminated. We are working closely with the fishing industry to devise a package of measures which we can advocate in the EU and which will respect the scientific assessment whilst as far as possible keeping fishing opportunities open for the industry. We have already reminded the Commission of our view—substantiated last year by detailed scientific analysis—that curbing nephrops fishing brings minimal benefit to cod.

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to the Answer from the Parliamentary Under-Secretary to the hon. Member for Argyll and Bute at European Standing Committee A on 23 April, 2002 Official Report, column 7, if she will place in the Library (a) her Department's evidence to the European Commission which demonstrated that the level of cod by-catch in the nephrops fishery was very small and that the Commission's figures were an overestimate and (b) the European Commission's response; and if she will make a statement. [80055]

Mr. Morley: The Fisheries Departments in the UK submitted material to the European Commission on several occasions in 2001, refuting in detail the Commission's argument that cutting nephrops fishing significantly benefits cod stocks. The specifics of this correspondence are confidential, but the basis of the case was figures demonstrating that landings of cod did not increase in line with landings of nephrops. This material was submitted in support of the UK's request for in-year restoration of the cuts that were made to the Total Allowable Catches for nephrops in the North Sea, in the Irish Sea and West of Scotland in 2001: in response, the Commission did not agree to restore the cuts, but did subsequently largely withdraw its proposals for further substantial cuts for 2002. Restoration of the cuts made in 2001 is an issue we are still actively pressing with the Commission.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what estimate her Department has made of the weight and value of cod discarded in each of the fish management areas in the seas around the UK as a result of an unintentional by-catch of over quota cod in each year since 1997 and the latest available estimate for 2002; [79022]

(2) if her Department has estimated the total weight and potential value of fish discarded by UK fishing vessels as a result of the unintentional by-catch of over quota fish. [79023]

Mr. Morley: Estimates of discards are obtained by placing observers on a random sample of fishing vessels. Observers are not in a position to establish fully the reasons why fish are discarded, but the main reasons appear to be that fish are undersized, not of sufficient quality, or damaged. We are not able at this time to provide estimates for discards of all species in all sea areas. Estimates of the weight of cod discards (in tonnes, gutted) by (a) English and Welsh vessels in the North Sea and Irish Sea and (b) UK vessels landing into Scotland, are set out below.

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, how much in outstanding claims against her Department is owed in respect of clean-up operations on farms affected by foot and mouth disease. [76841]

Margaret Beckett: It is not possible at this time to reveal details of these claims for reasons of commercial confidentiality and legal privilege. Defra is pursuing the recommendation in the NAO report on the 2001 Outbreak of Foot and Mouth Disease concerned with the urgent pursuit of those cases where my Department believed it was overcharged for goods and services. Irregularities in contractors' claims are being investigated and resolved as quickly as possible. We have an obligation to ensure proper accounting methods are applied to valid invoices submitted. We have no intention of simply paying Invoices and claims that cannot be properly accounted for.

Microlisation

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what plans she has to provide match funding for microlisation; and if she will make a statement; [79231]

(2) what steps she has taken to increase the money for modulation to UK farms from the UK; and if she will make a statement. [79234]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 4 November 2002]: The UK is obliged under Community law to match-fund, pound for pound, money raised through modulating Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) production subsidies. Under current plans, the rate of modulation will rise from the present 3 per cent. to 4.5 per cent. by 2006.

The spending plans for 2003–04 to 2005–06, set out in the 2002 Spending Review White Paper "Opportunity and Security for All" (Command Paper 5570) presented to the House on 15 July by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer, include provision for match funding of £75m in 2005–06. This would be necessary if the rate of modulation were to be increased to 10 per cent. from 2005–06, as recommended by the Policy Commission on the Future of Farming and Food. However, a decision on increasing national modulation has yet to be taken. The final decision will depend on factors including the success of a pilot to test the Policy Commission's recommendation for an entry-level agri-environment scheme, and the outcome of negotiations on the Mid-Term review of the CAP.

Fly Tipping and Landfill

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what recent discussions she has had with farmers about fly tipping and landfill taxes; and if she will make a statement. [79238]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 4 November 2002]: Defra Ministers hold many meetings with farming organisations to discuss all manner of topics. However, there have been no recent meetings to discuss fly tipping specifically. The Government is, however, keen to find out more about the causes of fly tipping and has commissioned research into fly tipping on agricultural land.

Fly tipped waste is a blight on our countryside and towns. There are stringent controls in place to ensure that waste is dealt with properly. Where waste is disposed of illegally, it is clearly essential that steps are taken to dispose of the waste safely and properly to eliminate the risk of environmental pollution or harm to human health. The Environment Agency and local authorities, in their role as waste collection authority, may themselves take steps to remove fly tipped waste. DEFRA works closely with the fly tipping stakeholders forum to develop practical ways to combat the problem.

A Tidy Britain Group Report Effects of the Landfill Tax on Fly Tipping (published in 1998) did not establish any clear link between the tax and increased fly tipping. Indeed, the Report states that in 1997–98, domestic waste was, overall, the type of fly tipped waste most frequently collected by local authorities. As the tax does not directly affect householders it is unlikely to cause householders to fly tip waste. Moreover, each Waste Disposal Authority has a duty under section 51 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 to provide civic amenity sites for the deposit of household waste.

TB Testing

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what plans she has to increase the rate of TB testing in Gloucestershire; and if she will make a statement. [79314]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 4 November 2002]: Since an additional £3 million was made available to the State Veterinary Service earlier this year, veterinary, technical and administrative staff have been recruited to bring the administrative and veterinary teams dealing with TB in the Gloucester Animal Health Divisional Office up to full strength. Twenty temporary and casual staff have been recruited specifically for TB testing in addition to the normal complement of veterinary officers. This is starting to have a significant impact across the range of critical TB areas.

In early October Defra announced additional measures for the control of bovine TB in England, which included a timetable for the imposition of movement restrictions on herds with overdue tests. Within the Gloucester region the backlog of overdue tests is being actively managed to ensure that the number of herds put under restriction early next year as a result of the new measure is kept to a minimum. A dedicated team of six administrative staff has been set up to support the process. Letters will be sent out shortly to those farmers potentially affected encouraging them to arrange early TB tests. Defra is also maintaining close liaison with the NFU at county level.

20-Day Standstill Rule

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what plans she has to review the 20 day standstill rule; and if she will make a statement. [79317]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 4 November 2002]: This will depend on the outcome of the detailed risk assessment and cost benefit analysis which is being carried out in line with the FMD Inquiry recommendations. We hope to be able to take account of emerging findings to make decisions about any changes to the current rules in time for the Spring 2003 movement season.

GM Seeds

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, which GM crop varieties started national seed listing trials in September 2002; if she will give their (a) locations and (b) dates of planting; and if each trial is (i) a distinctiveness, uniformity and stability and (ii) a value for cultivation and use trial. [79737]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 6 November 2002]: No new GM candidate varieties started National List tests and trials in September 2002. Three Winter Oilseed Rape varieties, PHW99–429, PHW01–441, PHW02–450, were already in test and trial and these were sown again in September 2002. Of these, PHW99–429 has already completed Distinctness, Uniformity and Stability testing and was sown in Value for Cultivation and Use trials only. The site locations and dates of sowing are as follows;

Type of Test or Trial	Location	Date of Sowing
Distinctness Uniformity and Stability	Sand Hutton, Yorkshire	6 September 2002
Value for Cultivation and Use	Thorganby, Lincolnshire	6 September 2002
	Meden Vale, Nottinghamshire	12 September 2002
	Felton, Herefordshire	12 September 2002
	Melbourn, Cambridgeshire	10 September 2002
	Piccotts End, Hertfordshire	16 September 2002
	Shellingford, Oxfordshire	13 September 2002
	Bramham, Yorkshire	4 September 2002
	Banham, Norfolk	5 September 2002
	Udny, Aberdeenshire	11 September 2002

Climate Change

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, how many climate change levy underlying agreements within the meaning of paragraph 48 of Schedule 6 to the Finance Act 2000 she has (a) entered into and (b) varied or; if she will give the name of the other party or parties to each such agreement or variation; if she will indicate, in relation to each such agreement, the umbrella agreement within the meaning of the same paragraph to which it relates; and if she will place in the Library copies of all such agreements and variations. [78725]

Mr. Meacher: The Secretary of State currently is party to 5,460 underlying agreements within the meaning of paragraph 48 of Schedule 6 to the Finance Act 2000. The original umbrella agreements are placed in the Library and on the Defra website. The names of the operators of facilities currently covered by the underlying agreements are published, sector by sector, in Reduced Rate Certificates on HM Customs and Excise website. The underlying agreements contain commercially sensitive material in the form of energy efficiency targets and consequently cannot be published, though the standard template is also available on the Defra website. Variations to these agreements to date cover only new entrants to the agreements, withdrawals from them and changes of contact details. It would involve excessive costs to publish the variations involving these changes to company details. We have been in discussions with sector associations regarding variations to the agreements to provide for corrections to targets resulting from corrections to baseline data. The proportional improvements in energy efficiency required has been maintained. Any further variations to the provisions of the agreements will be placed in the Library under the same terms as the original agreements were placed.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, how many climate change agreements within the meaning of paragraph 47 of Schedule 6 to the Finance Act 2000 and variations, she has entered into and what the name is of the other party or parties to each such agreement or variation; if she will make a statement in relation to each such agreement on the description of energy-intensive installations within paragraph 51 of Schedule 6 to the Finance Act 2000 to which it relates; and if she will place in the Library copies of all such agreements and variations. [78726]

Mr. Meacher: There is one climate change agreement under paragraph 47 of Schedule 2 to the Finance Act 2000, which provided for the unique case where there was only one company operating a specific eligible IPPC process. The agreement under this paragraph therefore combines the provisions of the umbrella and underlying agreements within the meaning of paragraph 48. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House and on the DEFRA website. The agreement contains the names of the relevant parties and a description of the type of the installation covered by the agreement. There have been no variations to this agreement.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, if she will make a statement on the outcome of the Climate Change Conference in New Delhi; and if she will place in the Library copies of (a) the United Kingdom submissions, (b) other nations' submissions relevant to UK policy and (c) the text of the final communiqué. [80349]

Mr. Meacher: There were two main outcomes from the Eighth Conference of the Parties to the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC), held in New Delhi, India from 23 October to 1 November 2002.

The first was that good progress was made on several technical issues which are key to building the architecture for effective implementation of the Kyoto Protocol.

The first report of the Clean Development Mechanism (CDM) Executive Board, established at COP7 in Marrakech, was approved. This will allow for the prompt start of the CDM and projects should start to come through the system next year. This should result in investment benefits for developing countries and help developed countries meet their Kyoto commitments. Work on how to include afforestation and reforestation projects under the CDM continued and is on track for agreement on schedule at COP10.

The final element of the guidelines on the reporting and review of accounting for total emissions under Marrakech Accords (the rules implementing Kyoto) was agreed. Regular reporting and review is essential, for transparency in the system and to ensure that parties are keeping to detailed trading rules.

There were also productive discussions on legal and institutional matters, in particular on how the first meeting of the Kyoto Protocol governing body should be convened in conjunction with the Convention governing body.

Guidance was also agreed on how developing countries should report information to the COP in their national communications. This is essential for assessing the size of the global problem and as a basis for informing decisions on future action. Guidance was also agreed for the new funds agreed in Bonn and Marrakech last year.

The second outcome was the Delhi Declaration on climate change and sustainable development. Negotiations on the text were dominated by the developing country concerns of vulnerability to climate change and the fneed for countries to adapt to it effects, and by their reluctance to initiate a process for considering what more needs to be done by the international community until greater progress has been made in implementing existing commitments under the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change and the Kyoto Protocol. The final text was therefore less forward-looking than we and our EU partners would have liked. Nevertheless, the Declaration makes important points about setting climate change in the context of sustainable development and puts a welcome focus on the needs of developing countries in trying to adapt to climate change.

There were no UK submissions on issues discussed in New Delhi because the EU negotiates as a block in the UNFCCC. Denmark, which currently holds the Presidency, made submissions on behalf of all Member States. I have today placed copies of all EU submissions relevant to UK policy in the library, along with those from other Parties to the UNFCCC on the same subjects, and a copy of the final text of the Delhi Declaration. When they are available, I will also place copies of the formal EU statements made during the conference in the Library.

Waste Tyres

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what her estimate is of the stock pile of waste tyres in England in each of the last five years. [78470]

Mr. Meacher: These data are not collected centrally in the format requested. However, the Environment Agency estimate that about 13 million tyres are currently stockpiled in 38 sites in England. The majority of the tyres are held within 8 sites, including one which holds about 9 million of the tyres. This site is covered to provide protection.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what research she is undertaking into the environmentally safe disposal of waste tyres; [78472]

(2) what assessment she has made of civil engineering uses for the environmentally safe use of waste tyres; [78433]

(3) what policies she intends to adopt to (a) utilise and (b) dispose of waste tyres. [78471]

Mr. Meacher: The Government in partnership with the tyre industry through the Used Tyre Working Group (UTWG) is investigating alternative disposal, recycling and recovery options for those tyres displaced from landfill with the aim of ensuring that sufficient capacity is available to handle those tyres.

The prospect of the extra required tyre recovery capacity being developed in time for the 2006 ban appears encouraging. It is likely that cement kilns (who use tyres as fuel) will take very significant numbers of tyres provided they obtain the necessary authorisations (four kilns already use tyres).

In addition, the market for tyre granulate is growing. Tyre granulate has a number of applications including carpet underlay and sports and safety surfaces. Government is supporting a number of end-use studies including its incorporation in road surfaces and as an aggregate replacement in concrete. Other studies are looking at new processes to break down used tyres as well as looking at ways of improving the efficiency of present materials recycling operations. Government is also supporting research into the use of tyres in coastal and flood protection schemes.

There is also research underway, funded through the Landfill Tax Credits Scheme in collaboration with the Transport Research Laboratory and the Institute of Civil Engineers, to produce guidance on civil engineering applications for used tyres to stimulate market development. Whole tyres are already used extensively as an engineering material in landfill sites.

More widely, research is underway on creating longer-lasting tyres (without compromising safety) in order to help reduce the amount of tyres entering the waste stream in the first place.

Organic Cattle

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, if she will make a grant to Mr. Richard Smith of Sharpham, Totnes, Devon, to make good the failure of the Beef Assurance Scheme in relation to his cows and followers; and if she will make a statement as to the practices undertaken by her Department to help farmers rearing organic cattle. [78918]

Mr. Morley*[holding answer 5 November 2002]:* No grants are available for Beef Assurance Scheme members who are having difficulties finding local abattoirs willing to slaughter cattle aged 30–42 months because of EU requirements on testing and the removal of vertebral column. However, the Food Standards Agency will seek to put members in touch with abattoirs which will slaughter such cattle.

The Department seeks to promote all aspects of organic farming in line with the Organic Action Plan published on 29 July. Free advice is available to all farmers contemplating organic farming through the Organic Conversion Information Service. Aid for organic conversion, delivered through the England Rural Development Programme, amounts to some £140 million. The Department also funds organic R&D, including projects on both organic dairy and beef cattle husbandry and it is providing a series of meetings to help organic cattle farmers maintain high standards of health and welfare in their herds.

Public Consultations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what public consultations have been commenced by her Department in each month since 20 July; and what the (a) start date, (b) closing date and (c) website address of each were. [80267]

Alun Michael: Information on public consultation processes undertaken by Defra is held in the public domain and can be obtained from the Defra website at www.defra.gov.uk. in the section titled "Consultation Exercises".

Details as to the issue date and deadlines for comments are available and contact details regarding each consultation are provided. Responses to public consultations where the respondents have not asked for anonymity are also listed on this website page.

Welbeck Tip

Mr. Hinchcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, when she expects to be able to answer the letters sent to the Environment Minister on 5 October 2001 and 20 February 2002 by the hon. Member for Wakefield regarding the Welbeck Tip. [62309]

Mr. Meacher: I regret that the Department can find no trace of my hon. Friend's correspondence.

Chemicals

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what agreements were reached at the recent World Summit on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg relating to chemicals. [77572]

Mr. Meacher: The main points agreed at the World Summit on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg in relation to chemicals are contained in paragraph 22 of the Plan of Implementation.

These include an overarching target of "aiming to achieve by 2020 that chemicals are produced and used in ways that lead to the minimisation of significant adverse effects on human health and the environment". This would include actions at all levels to:

(a) Promote the ratification and implementation of relevant international instruments on chemicals and hazardous wastes.

(b) Encourage countries to implement the new globally harmonised system for the classification and labelling of chemicals

(c) Encourage partnerships to promote activities aimed at enhancing environmentally sound management of chemicals and hazardous wastes

(d) Promote efforts to prevent international illegal trafficking of hazardous chemicals and hazardous wastes

(e) Encourage development of coherent and integrated information on chemicals

(f) Promote reduction of the risks posed by heavy metals that are harmful to human health and the environment

A copy of the Plan of Implementation is in the House Library and can be found at http://www/johannesburgsummit.org/, along with a copy of the Political Declaration made at Johannesburg.

Plastic Waste

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what her latest estimate is of the value of non-recyclable plastic waste used for (a) landfill and (b) incineration for each London borough. [79639]

Mr. Meacher: This information is not available.

Animal Movements

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what changes have been made in the 20 day rule on animal movements since its introduction; and if she will make a statement. [79405]

Mr. Morley: A number of changes to the 20 day whole farm standstill rule have been made over recent months, following detailed discussions with industry and veterinary organisations. These include exemptions, subject to risk mitigating conditions, for breeding animals, calves, tack sheep and all movements direct to slaughter. Most recently, an exemption from the whole farm standstill was introduced on 6 September 2002 for cattle and sheep moved for breeding purposes, if they remain in approved isolation facilities for 20 days.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, if she will make an amendment to the 20 day standstill rule in the event of livestock being brought to feed for a period ranging from three to 12 months where the bid price is not reached to enable the producer to take livestock home and to prevent cattle and sheep from being slaughtered. [79437]

Mr. Morley: The mixing of animals at auction markets and their subsequent dispersal poses a particular disease risk so it is unlikely that any special exemptions to the 20 day rule will be introduced to cover these particular circumstances.

More generally, future animal movement controls will reflect the outcome of the detailed risk assessment and cost benefit analysis which is being carried out in line with the FMD Inquiry recommendations. We hope to be able to take account of emerging findings when we make decisions about any changes to the current rules in time for the 2003 Spring movement season.

Horticulture Research International

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what funding has been allocated to Horticulture Research International in each of the last 10 years. [79757]

Mr. Morley: Defra funding at Horticulture Research International (HRI) relates to specifically commissioned R & D projects and work won by HRI in the main through R & D competitions. We have also provided funding for capital and other purposes. A summary of the funding provided by Defra (and, prior to 2001–02, MAFF) in each of the last ten years is given in the table below.

Table showing Defra funding of Horticulture Research International over the period 1992–2002

Year	R&D payments[1]	CMF[2]	Restructuring and pensions	Capital & other payments	Total (£m)
1992–1993	13.5	–	–	7.3	20.8
1993–1994	13.7	–	–	11.3	25.0
1994–1995	13.9	–	0.1	7.3	21.3
1995–1996	13.3	–	0.4	9.5	23.2

GM Crops

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, which of the GM farm scale trials of maize, oil seed rape and beet planted between Autumn 2001 and Spring 2002 (a) ran until harvest and (b) were terminated; and what the reasons for termination were in each case. [79739]

Mr. Meacher: In Autumn 2001 a total of 30 winter oil seed rape crops were sown. One field was subsequently terminated following the advice of the scientific steering committee at their meeting of May 20 2002 (minutes at www.defra.gov.uk/environment/fse) as a result of the crop failing to establish; apparently due to the weather. The remainder ran until harvest.

In Spring 2002 the following number of FSE crop fields were planted: 25 spring oil seed rape; 16 beet and 33 maize. Two maize fields were terminated prior to harvest following extensive damage by protestors that rendered any further studies on the site impossible. No spring oil seed rape or beet crops were terminated.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, if she will place the tender documents for the biodiversity monitoring on the farm scale evaluations on sugar beet and fodder beet, the contracts for that work and related correspondence in the Library; if she will list the sites in England and Wales where releases of GM oilseed rape were made in 2000 and 2001 under the consent 98/R19/18; and if she will list the genetic transformation events in Aventis' spring oilseed rape released under the consent 00/R33/9 and other experimental release consents granted for this transformation under the GMO Deliberate Regulations. [80214]

Mr. Meacher: I refer my hon. Friend the Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Lewisham and Deptford (Joan Ruddock), Official Report, 6 April 2001, column 321W, which announced that a copy of each of the four farm-scale evaluation contracts, which include the invitations to tender, the tenders themselves, the project specification and the covering letter, have been placed in the Library.

In 2001, there were no releases in England or Wales under consent 98/R19/18. In 2000, there were no releases in Wales under consent 98/R19/18. In England, the locations of releases under this consent are summarised below.

Nearest Village	County
Little Shelford	Cambridgeshire
St Osyth, Seawick	Essex
Kempley	Gloucestershire
Chipping Campden	Gloucestershire
Itchen Abbas	Hampshire
Piccots End	Hertfordshire
Boothby Graffoe	Lincolnshire
North Kelsey	Lincolnshire
Horningtoft	Norfolk
Meden Vale	Nottinghamshire
Appleton	Oxfordshire
Alderminster	Warwickshire
Upper Tysoe	Warwickshire
Priors Hardwick	Warwickshire
Laverton	Worcestershire
East Newton	North Yorkshire
Hutton Magna	North Yorkshire

The transformation events in oilseed rape covered by consent 00/R33/9 are Ms8 and Rf3. Since 2000 releases of oilseed rape containing these events have also been carried out under consents 00/R33/5, 00/R33/6, 00/R33/7, 00/R33/10, 00/R33/11 and 98/R19/18 in England and 00/R33/5S, 00/R33/6S, 00/R33/7S, 00/R33/10S, 00/R33/11S and 98/R19/18 in Scotland.

Farm Incomes

Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment Food and Rural Affairs, what the average farm incomes, by sector, were for each year since 1992 for farms within Shrewsbury and Atcham. [80340]

Mr. Morley: It is not possible to provide data relating to the Shrewsbury and Atcham area. This is because the sample size of the Farm Business Survey (the basis of the income data) is too small to enable robust regional analysis to this level of disaggregation. The closest region available is England West.

The table below shows average net farm income by the main types of farm for England West for each year from 1992–3 to 2000–1. The data for each year provide the best estimate of income levels in each year in isolation but they should not be viewed as a time series. Each year is not directly comparable due to changes in the underlying sample that occur each year in the Farm Business Survey (the basis for the income data).

Average net farm income by farm type for the West of England:

Net farm income is defined as the return to the principal farmer and spouse for their labour and on the tenant-type capital of the business.

Agricultural Wages Board

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her Answer of 21st October (75916) what relevant qualifications Professor Ian Smith and Mrs Jacquie Findlay had for nomination as an independent member of the Agricultural Wages Board. [76816]

Alun Michael: Independent members of the Agricultural Wages Board for England and Wales are not required to hold any specific qualifications. However when new members are appointed we do try to ensure that collectively, the independent members have experience of as many areas of expertise relevant to the Board's work as possible. These include EU and UK employment legislation, EU and UK social policy, arbitration and conciliation, human resource management, tribunal work, accountancy and economic issues. Jacquie Findlay has relevant experience in the human resource field and has advised on employment law matters. Ian Smith is a Professor of employment law at Anglia University.

To ensure their impartiality, independent members must have no direct connection with the agricultural industry or any connection with organisations representing employers of agricultural labour or representing the interests of agricultural workers. This excludes from consideration any member of the National Farmers' Union or the Transport and General Workers Union, the organisations that nominate the representative members of the Wages Board.

Plastic Bags

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what consultation she is undertaking on the introduction of a charge for plastic bags given out in shops; and if she will make a statement. [79638]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

Taxes are a matter for the Chancellor.

Earth Summit

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to circulate Local Agenda 21 groups on the Government's evaluation of the Earth Summit held in Johannesburg. [79636]

Mr. Meacher: The Secretary of State has already held initial discussions with local government about the outcomes of WSSD. I will be discussing the way forward with stakeholders.

Aflatoxin Infections

Mr. John Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, how many incidents there have been of aflatoxin infections in each of the last five years. [75922]

Ms Blears: I have been asked to reply.

Data from the national poisons information service reveals that they have received two enquiries over the last five years relating to aflatoxin poisoning. In neither case were there any signs or symptoms observed. Both occurred in 1997.

Capital Grants

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environmental Food and Rural Affairs, what the estimated total cost is of delivering a 10 year 70,000 solar PV roof programme, funded by 50 per cent capital grants; and if she will make a statement. [79662]

Mr. Wilson: I have been asked to reply.

The Government Industry Photovoltaic Group Report of March 2001 recommended "The most effective means of encouraging the deployment of PV in the UK would be a major Market Stimulation Programme featuring a 50 per cent capital grant for 70,000 domestic roofs and a similar grant scheme for larger non—domestic buildings costing around £150 million over 10 years." Taken together this is equivalent to a 100,000 PV roofs programme.

Income

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment Food and Rural Affairs, what changes have taken place in the (a) gross and (b) net incomes of the (i) top and (ii) bottom deciles of farmers in each year since 1990. [79406]

Mr. Morley: The information for the years 1996–97 to 2000–01 are given in the table.

Ranges of farm incomes for full-time farms in England (£ per farm)

	Cash income		Net Farm Income
	First decile (10th percentile)	Ninth decile (90th percentile)	First decile (10th percentile)	Ninth decile (90th percentile)
1996–97	6,200	118,100	−3,400	72,000
1997–98	100	94,200	−12,600	41,300
1998–99	−400	83,500	−14,900	38,100
1999–00	0	73,800	−14,800	33,600
2000–01	−1,400	77,500	−14,800	35,500

I regret that the information given in a previous answer to my hon. Friend, Official Report, 22 January, column 779W, was incorrect. The figures had been mistakenly calculated for England and Wales, not for England. The information in this table corrects those figures.

Data for the six years 1990–1995 could not be provided without incurring disproportionate cost.

Non-devolved Posts

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, how many non-devolved posts were advertised in the Press in each year from June 1999; and what percentage of them were advertised in the Scottish Press. [76852]

Alun Michael: This information is being collated and I will write to the hon. Member.

Energy Conservation

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what discussions she has had with energy conservation authorities regarding her policy on home energy conservation. [77415]

Mr. Morley: Neither the Secretary of State nor any of Defra Ministers have had any discussions with energy conservation authorities regarding home energy conservation.

Energy Efficiency

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) pursuant to the Answer of 15 October, Official Report, columns 581–2W, on energy efficiency, to the hon. Member for Mid Bedfordshire (Mr. Sayeed), if the legal advice obtained by the promoters of the Home Energy Conservation Bill regarding the legal force of a principal aim compared with a statutory duty was made available to her; what steps she took to determine the validity of the promoters' advice; and what her conclusions were about the validity of the advice; [77447]

(2) pursuant to her answer of 15 October, Official Report, columns 581–2W, to the hon. Member for Mid-Bedfordshire, on energy efficiency, what advice was received about the duties that having a 30 per cent. improvement as a principal aim would place on local authorities; [77446]

(3) pursuant to her answer of 15 October, Official Report, columns 581–2W, to the hon. Member for Mid Bedfordshire, whether the advice that she received on the implications of having a 30 per cent. improvement in domestic energy efficiency as a principal aim of the Home Energy Conservation Bill suggested that progress towards such a principal aim could legally be made by (a) new regulation and (b) energy efficiency programmes funded by bodies other than the Government. [77440]

Mr. Meacher: The Government have seen the legal advice obtained by the promoters of this Bill. We sought our own advice on it, which did not reach the same conclusions. The Government does not comment on the details of its internal advice, but I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Mid Bedfordshire (Mr. Sayeed) on 15th October, Official Report, columns 581–2W, which sets out some of the issues which the Government considered.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Contaminated Land

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the amount of contaminated land that has been restored for beneficial use on an annual basis was, broken down by local authority area, in England and Wales since January 1997. [79596]

Mr. Meacher: I have been asked to reply.

This information is not held centrally in the form requested, because "beneficial use" is not a criterion in the main regime which helps to secure the remediation of land affected by contamination. From April 2000, Part IIA ("contaminated land") of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 placed local authorities in England under a duty to inspect their areas to identify contaminated land, as defined in the Act, and secure its remediation on the "suitable for use" principle. Some 40 sites have so far been formally identified under this regime, and remediation is underway in some of these cases. The main aim of this regime is environmental protection, rather than future land use, and contaminated sites may well be in beneficial use already.

The majority of remediation, however, takes place as part and parcel of the development of land, regulated through the planning system and building regulations; through urban regeneration programmes including the activities of regional development agencies and English Partnerships; through voluntary action by landowners including many major companies; through enforcement of environmental protection regimes; and through the programme of supplementary credit approvals for local authorities operated by my department. An overview is provided by a recent Environment Agency report, "Dealing with contaminated land in England", copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Census

Bob Laxton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, what the population was of each local authority in England based on the 2001 census; what the change was in the population of each authority since the mid year 2000 estimate; and what the change was as a percentage in each case. [79865]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

The Information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter to Mr. Bob Laxton from Mr. Len Cook dated 7 November 2002

As National Statistician and Registrar General for England and Wales I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking for details of the population of each local authority based on the 2001 Census; what the change was for each authority since the mid year 2000 estimate; and what the change was as a percentage in each case.(79865)

I am placing in the House of Commons Library, a table which supplies the information you have requested. It is also available on the National Statistics website at www.statistics.gov.uk/census2001/downloads/Comparison—ONC2001—MYE2000.xls. The current estimates for the years 1982–2000 are based on the 1981 Census figures, rolled forward, and will be shortly revised to take account of the results of the 2001 Census and an assessment of the cumulative errors that have built up in the mid-year estimates. Final revised mid-year estimates for 1991–2000 will be released on 13 February 2003 and those for 1982–1990 at a later date.

In order to assist users in interpreting changes over time, ONS have issued a set of interim revised national estimates for the period 1982–2000. At the national level, for example, the previous mid-year estimate for population of England and Wales for 2000, of 52,943 thousand has now been accordingly revised to 51,913 thousand.

Littering Offences

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, how many fixed penalty notices were issued in England and Wales broken down by local authority area since 1997. [79670]

Alun Michael: I have been asked to reply.

The total amount of fines issued with respect to Fixed Penalty Notices (FPNs) for littering offences in England and Wales since 1997 was:

No data in 1996–97
727 in 1997–98
4,778 in 1998–99
2,970 in 1999–2000
2,310 in 2000–01

The Department is unable to break down this data into Local Authority region.

Advantage West Midlands

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, if she will list the members of Advantage West Midlands; from what areas they are drawn; what their function is; how they were chosen; how they can be dismissed; what they will cost in 2002–03; and from what vote they are paid. [79846]

Alan Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

The Board members of Advantage West Midlands are;

Chairman Alex Stephenson, Deputy Chair Cllr Sue Davies, Richard Barnes,

Prof Kumar Bhattacharyya, Cllr Sir Albert Bore, Dr. Anthony Harris,

Dr. Christine King, Brian Woods-Scawen, Cllr David Sparkes,

Sukhvinder Kaur Stubbs, Norman Price, Isabella Moore,

Cllr Paul Tilsley, Tony Sealey, Bill Holmes.

Board Members are drawn from Business, Local Authorities, Higher Education, the Voluntary Sector, Employees Representation Groups and Rural Interests.

The function of Board Members is;

To direct and hold the executive team accountable for results

To reflect regional interests

To oversee and approve the production and review of the Regional Economic Strategy and corporate plan for presentation to Ministers

To chair and facilitate meetings

To represent Advantage West Midlands externally.

EU Equal Treatment Directive

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, when he intends to publish draft regulations and draft consolidated legislation on the age strand of the consultation Equality and Diversity: The Way Ahead with a view to implementing the EU Equal Treatment Directive; and if he will make a statement. [79411]

Alan Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

Unfortunately I have not been able to glean the information necessary to answer before Parliament is prorogued, but I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

The process for appointing the Board Members is run according to the Code of Practice issued by the Office for the Commissioner of Public Appointments (OCPA).

Appointments are made on merit, following open competition, application and formal interviews. Each applicant is assessed against the selection criteria, as set out in the person specification for the post.

A Board Member can be dismissed by the Secretary of State for Trade & Industry if he or she is in breach of conditions in Schedule 2 of the Regional Development Agencies Act 1998.

Current pay rates per annum are, Chair £47,800, Deputy Chair £15,208 and Board Members £7,604. All Members are eligible to claim Travel & Subsistence.

Board Members are paid from the DTI vote approved by Parliament, via the RDA single programme, which is administered by DTI.

Mayoral Elections

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much has been spent by (a) his Department, (b) local councils and (c) other bodies on mayoral elections and referenda since January 2001. [78630]

Mr. Raynsford: Departmental costs on mayoral elections and referendums are not separately identified from costs related to work on new council constitutions generally. Information on expenditure by local authorities or other bodies on these matters is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Pathfinders Housing Allowance

Mr. Stephen O Brien: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, if he will list those constituencies in which Pathfinder for Housing Allowance is being made available. [77549]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

On 21 October, my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State wrote to the hon. Members whose constituencies cover those local authorities which we have invited to be pathfinders for the standard local housing allowance.

The table lists the pathfinder authorities, along with the parliamentary constituencies which fall wholly or partially within those authority boundaries.

Firefighters' Strike

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he has contingency plans to allow the Armed Forces access to standard fire service fire engines during Fire Service strikes. [77024]

Mr. Raynsford: We are currently reviewing the availability of all appliances that could be deployed in the event of a strike by firefighters.

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he has taken to provide for emergency cover in the event of floods during any strike by fire brigade personnel. [77793]

Mr. Raynsford: The role played by the Fire Service in relation to flooding is to assist with rescue and to pump water from flooded properties. In the event of industrial action, the military response will be primarily directed towards saving life. It is therefore important that local authorities should ensure they are up to date with names of contractors and equipment suppliers who could be called upon to assist during a flooding event. They should also formulate plans to arrange early evacuation if severe flooding is forecast.

The Environment Agency's flood warning systems will continue to operate as normal. The Agency has also reviewed its emergency plans, in close liaison with local authorities and the police. The Agency will seek to assist the emergency services and local authorities as far as practicable by mobilising their resources including pumps and equipment, once it has ensured that its own systems and defences are secure.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what his estimate is of the number of fire fighting emergency vehicles which will be available in Somerset in the event of a firefighters strike; how many are available in a non-strike situation; and if he will make a statement; [77002]

(2) what the Government's target is for the maximum time taken to get a fire engine to an emergency call-out within Somerset; what assessment he has made of whether this target will still be met during the planned firefighters' strike; and if he will make a statement; [77521]

(3) what correspondence he has received within the last two months from the Leader of Somerset County Council about the firefighters' strike; if he will publish his response to such correspondence; and if he will make a statement; [77522]

(4) what assessment he has made of the ability of local authorities and the armed forces to maintain a safe level of fire service in Somerset during the planned firefighters' strike; and if he will make a statement; [77524]

(5) how many fire engines will be available for deployment in the Yeovil constituency during the planned firefighters' strike; what assessment he has made of the minimum safe level; and if he will make a statement. [77525]

Mr. Raynsford: Emergency cover in Somerset is currently planned to consist of a number of elements including five Green Goddesses, three breathing apparatus teams (BARTs), rescue teams equipped with specialist equipment, (RESTs) and the police. The Somerset Fire Brigade has 48 pumping appliances, although not all these will be operational at any one time. Two Green Goddesses and a BART will be based at RNAS Yeovilton, 2 Green Goddesses, a BART and a REST will be based at Taunton. 1 Green Goddess and 1 BART will be based at Bridgewater.

The provision of Ministry of Defence emergency fire cover has been planned in consultation with the Chief Fire Officer to minimise call-out response times and maximise the availability of a range of firefighting capabilities.

The command and operational structure for emergency fire cover has been designed to enable maximum flexibility and use of available resources, whether from within a county or from assets deployed nearby in neighbouring counties. The deployment of firefighters will be based on the assessment of how best to respond to an emergency in the quickest time possible. The deployment will be kept under review.

The target attendance times for Fire Brigade appliances vary according to the location of the reported incident, ranging from five minutes in busy high risk city centres to twenty minutes in rural areas. In the event of a firefighters strike it is not expected that military emergency cover would be able to match these attendance times in all cases. In providing emergency fire cover the Ministry of Defence would not be seeking to replicate the current fire fighting capability. The Armed Forces role during any strike will be to ensure that essential services are maintained by providing emergency cover and, by so doing, minimise the risk to life.

The Leader of Somerset Council wrote to the Deputy Prime Minster on 4 and 25 October. My reply, which I have copied to local MPs, reflects what I have said above about the provision of emergency cover by the Ministry of Defence.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what preparations he has made to ensure the safety and continuity of service to the public in Cambridgeshire in the event of a firefighters' strike; and what the cost is to the Department of these actions. [79566]

Mr. Raynsford: Emergency cover in Cambridgeshire is currently planned to consist of seven Green Goddesses, three breathing apparatus teams (BARTs), a rescue team equipped with specialist equipment, (a REST) and the police. The Green Goddesses and BARTs will be based at Peterborough, Huntingdon and Cambridge. The REST will be based at Cambridge.

The provision of Ministry of Defence emergency fire cover has been planned in consultation with the Chief Fire Officer to minimise call-out response times and maximise the availability of a range of firefighting capabilities.

The command and operational structure for emergency fire cover has been designed to enable maximum flexibility and use of available resources, whether from within a county or from assets deployed nearby in neighbouring counties. The deployment of firefighters will be based on the assessment of how best to respond to an emergency in the quickest time possible. The deployment will be kept under review.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will meet the additional costs incurred by the Ministry of Defence in providing emergency fire cover in England and Wales, net of savings in wages lost by striking firefighters. But it is very difficult to predict exactly what the cost will be. It will depend very much on what strike action the Fire Brigades Union actually takes.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) when the Independent Review Commission looking at firefighters' pay is expected to report; and if he will make a statement; [80238]

(2) if he will list the members of the Independent Review Commission examining the issue of firefighters' pay; how this membership has changed over the past two weeks; and if he will make a statement. [80237]

Mr. Raynsford: The Independent Review of the Fire Service is being conducted by Professor Sir George Bain, who has an outstanding record in industrial relations and academia. He is being assisted by Sir Anthony Young, past President of the TUC, and Sir Michael Lyons, who until recently was the Chief Executive of Birmingham City Council. The membership of the Independent Review team has not changed since it was announced in early September. Sir George hopes to be able to publish the final report in December.

Ageism

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what strategies his Department has to ensure that there is no ageism in recruitment and retention processes. [79286]

Mr. Leslie: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is committed to age diversity and is implementing the recommendations of the Government's Winning the Generation Game report.

Discrimination on the ground of age is not permitted under our equal opportunities policy.

Our recruitment, development, performance management and retention policies are continuously reviewed. There are no age barriers to employment and retirement age is determined on business needs only.

Sustainable Development

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister what role his Department expects local government to play in the delivery of (a) objectives agreed at the recent World Summit on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg and (b) sustainable development; and what steps have been taken by his Department to encourage local action. [77585]

Mr. McNulty: The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs will be launching a major review of the UK Sustainable Development Strategy in the new year. They will use this opportunity to consult stakeholders, including local authorities, on UK action to implement the Johannesburg commitments domestically.

The Local Government Act 2000 placed a duty on local authorities to prepare community strategies for promoting the economic, social and environmental well being of their communities and contributing to the achievement of sustainable development in the UK.

Community Halls (Grants)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, what grants his Department has allocated to community halls for the cost of installing disabled toilets in each of the last three years; what funds his Department is making available in each of the next three years; and if he will make a statement. [78425]

Mr. Raynsford: As far as I can ascertain, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has paid no grants specifically to Community Halls for the cost of installing disabled toilets in the last three years. We pay grants to local authorities, which have a power, but not a duty, to provide public toilets. Local authorities are subject to the Disability Discrimination Act.

Post Office Network

David Wright: To ask the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister what criteria will be used to define deprived areas in relation to the Post Office Urban Network Re-invention Programme. [78349]

Mr. McNulty: The "Indices of Deprivation 2000" will be used to define deprived areas in relation to both the Post Office Urban Network Re-invention Programme and the Post Office Fund for Urban deprived Areas.

The Indices of Deprivation 2000 are measures of deprivation for every ward and local authority area in England. It combines a number of indicators which cover a range of domains (Income, Employment, Health Deprivation and Disability, Education, Skills and Training, Housing and Geographical Access to Services) into a single deprivation score for each area.

The deprivation criteria for the Post Office Urban Network Re-invention Programme relates only to the fact that other than in exceptional circumstances, the compensated closure arrangements will not extend to offices in the 10 per cent. most deprived urban areas, which are more than half a mile from the next post office.

The deprivation criteria for the Post Office Fund for Urban Deprived Areas will be announced shortly.

Home Safety

Mr. Chope: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what firm his Department has commissioned to gather data from individual householders about safety in the home; and if he will make a statement. [78909]

Mr. Leslie: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has commissioned several organisations to carry out such research on its behalf since it took on responsibility for fire matters in May 2002

The research projects undertaken relate to individual's or householder's attitudes or behaviour with regard to fire safety in the home and are as follows:

The Attitude and Behaviour monitor is quantitative research which has been carried out annually by Taylor Nelson Sofres for four years—the last tranche being December 2001, and The Older People qualitative research was carried out by Andrew Irving Associates this summer.

Additionally, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has commissioned the Home Office to provide fire safety data through the British Crime Survey. From 2001, the survey has been conducted by British Market Research Bureau. For the first few months, British Market Research Bureau were in consortium with IPSOS RSL.

Urban Summit

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much (a) money, (b) departmental time and (c) other resources the Government has expended on the Urban Summit. [79344]

Mr. McNulty: The final expenditure and income figures for the Urban Summit have yet to be determined. However, the net cost of staging the event, after taking account of income from ticket sales, exhibition stand sales and sponsorship is currently estimated at about £550,000. This figure includes the costs of contractors, consultants and agency staff recruited to work on the Summit organisation, but excludes the costs of permanent ODPM staff. The costs of the permanent ODPM staff in the Summit organising team are estimated at about £200,000.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which urban councils not controlled by the Labour Party were represented at the Urban Summit on 31st October to 1st November. [80308]

Mr. McNulty: All urban councils were invited to attend the Urban Summit, regardless of political control. An analysis of the delegate database is being carried out to provide the information requested. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as the information is available. A copy of my letter will be deposited in the House of commons Library.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which (a) district councillors and (b) officers from urban councils which are not controlled by the Labour Party were invited (i) to speak and (ii) to chair sessions at the Urban Summit of 31st October to 1st November. [80307]

Mr. McNulty: Taking all local authorities in England, one County Councillor and four officers either spoke at or chaired themed sessions at the Urban Summit from authorities which are not controlled by the Labour Party.

Llew Smith: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the (a) regeneration initiatives and (b) publications launched by his Department at the Urban Summit in Birmingham; what the cost was of holding the summit; how many registered attendees and media representatives were present; whether a sustainability audit was done of the summit venue in advance of the decision to use the international convention centre; and if he will make a statement on matters learned at the summit; and what his next actions will be in relation to urban regeneration. [80364]

Mr. McNulty: A number of initiatives and publications were launched at the Urban Summit in Birmingham on 31 October and 1 November 2002. These included:

an announcement that steps were being taken to ensure that future housing developments in the South East would be at over 30 homes per hectare; publication of the report "Living Places—Cleaner, Safer, Greener" setting out the Government's vision for public space and its responses to the recommendations of the Urban Green Spaces Taskforce;

the setting up of a new unit to champion public space under the Commission for Architecture and the Built Environment;

publication of five reports, called "Partners in Urban Renaissance" bringing together work done over the last year in 24 towns and cities across England;

a partnership between the Housing Corporation and English Partnerships to work together on land assembly and delivering new homes;

the first annual review of the Neighbourhood Renewal Unit entitled "Places, People, Prospects"; publication of "Cities, Regions and Competitiveness" the interim report of a working Group on the role of Core Cities in creating prosperous regions.

In relation to the cost of staging the Urban Summit I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave yesterday to the hon. right Member for Suffolk Coastal (Mr. Gummer).

Final checks are being made on delegate numbers but our records currently show that 1525 delegates registered and attended the Summit and 138 media representatives were present.

No formal sustainability audit was carried out but sustainability issues, such as the accessibility of the venue by public transport, were factors in the criteria for selecting the venue.

Debate on urban issues at the Summit took place not just in the plenary sessions, but also in 28 themed sessions. The key messages and ideas which came out of those sessions are being gathered together and will be fed into the development of the long term plan for sustainable communities which the Deputy Prime Minister will be presenting to the House in January 2003. A report on the Summit's proceedings will be deposited in the House of Commons library.

British-Irish Relations

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister on what dates Ministers in his Department have held meetings with Ministers and officials of the Irish Government since 1 June 2000; where each Meeting took place; which ministers were involved in each meeting; which Irish Government departments were involved in each meeting; and which Ministers and officials from the Irish Government attended each meeting. [72688]

Mr. Leslie: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister attended the British-Irish Council Summit held in Jersey on 14 June 2002. The Taioseach and other Irish Ministers were also present. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Hull, North (Mr. McNamara) on 20 June 2002, Official Report c.494W.

Mobile Phone Masts

Mr. Willis: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, how many planning appeals his Department has decided on mobile phone masts and base stations; and what the outcome of the appeals were in each of the last three years. [79043]

Mr. McNulty: The following information relates to appeal decisions about telecommunications development generally, as information is not held about appeal decisions for mobile phone masts and base stations specifically. However, I would estimate that a large proportion of the appeals were for mobile phone masts and base stations.

Year	Appeals Recorded	Appeals Allowed	Appeals Dismissed	Appeals Withdrawn
2000	379	201	119	59
2001	702	403	203	96
2002 (Jan-Oct)	446	283	137	26

Note:
All figures relate to the year in which the appeal was received, not necessarily the year it was decided

Starter Homes Initiative

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many applications have been approved under the Starter Homes Initiative since its introduction, broken down by local authority area. [79679]

Mr. McNulty: As at 31 October 2002, some 1240 key workers had purchased homes under the Starter Home Initiative who would otherwise have been unable to afford to do so. The table below, shows by local authority area in which they are employed and by key worker group, the number of key workers that have benefited so far through the Starter Home Initiative.

Regions

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what were the administrative costs of (a) regional development agencies, (b) government offices for the regions and (c) regional chambers, in each region, this year; what the projected costs are for the next financial year; and if he will make a statement. [79669]

Mr. Raynsford: The available estimates for 2002–03 are in the table below.

The figures for the voluntary regional chambers show only Government grant. The remainder of their costs is a matter for the chambers themselves.

Projected costs for 2003–04 are not available, except for voluntary regional chambers which will continue to have available Government grant of £600,000 each.

Regional	Regional Development Agency	Government Office	Voluntary Regional Chamber
North East	£16,722,000	£8,658,690	£600,000
North West	£19,921,000	£13,852,480	£600,000
Yorkshire & the Humber	£14,750,000	£9,520,690	£600,000
East Midlands	£10,467,000	£7,39[illegible]220	£600,000
West Midlands	£13,500,000	£9,213,410	£600,000
South West	£13,975,000	£9,418,630	£600,000
East of England	£7,245,000	£7,704,080	£600,000
South East	£12,839,000	£9,249,800	£600,000
London	£14,044,000	£12,215,670	n/a

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many written representations he has received in the last 12 months expressing support for elected regional assemblies; and if he will make a statement. [79668]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for St. Ives (Andrew George) on 23 October 2002, Official Report, column 389W.

Further to that reply, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has now received over 1,200 individual responses to the White Paper Your Region, Your Choice, which we published on 9 May. I will write to the hon. Member once our analysis of these responses has been completed. In the six months prior to the publication of the White Paper we also received a number of letters and other enquiries about the Government's policy on elected regional assemblies.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list each overseas visit undertaken by himself and his Ministers along with the cost of each trip. [79598]

Mr. Leslie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 24 July 2002, Official Report, column 1374–75W.

Fire Service

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many discussions ministers have held with (a) Sir George Bain and members and officers of the Bain Inquiry since September and (b) representatives of the Fire Brigades Union since January; what was discussed at each; when each took place; and who participated. [79588]

Mr. Raynsford: Ministers have had several discussions with Sir George Bain, and members and officers of the Independent Review of the Fire Service (IRFS); and with representatives of the Fire Brigades Union (FBU). Subjects discussed included the working arrangements of the IRFS; the progress of negotiations on the FBU pay claim and the availability of striking members of the FBU in the case of a life-threatening emergency. Discussions have involved a variety of participants, including Ministers and senior officials.

Ms Walley: To ask the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the commencement date of each review undertaken in respect of the Fire Service; and in each case, whether (a) the findings have been published and (b) they have been placed in the Library. [79402]

Mr. McNulty: The Tables below set out the reviews of aspects of the fire service in England and Wales which have been started since May 1997. They do not include research projects. On 5 September the Government announced an Independent Review of the Fire Service under the Chairmanship of Professor Sir George Bain. The Independent Review is in progress.

Review	Review commenced	Findings published	In Library
Inquiry into the Machinery for Determining Firefighters' Conditions of Service	October 1999	March 2000	Cmd 4699

I will ensure that copies of those reports that are not already in the Library are placed there in due course.

Homelessness

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) homeless priority acceptances, (b) people living in temporary accommodation, (c) people living in bed-and-breakfast accomodation and (d) children living in homeless households there were in each year since January 1977, broken down by region. [79676]

Mrs. Roche: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as the information is available.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his estimate is of the number of homeless (a) individuals and (b) families accommodated in (i) bed and breakfast and (ii) hostels in each London borough; and what advice he is giving borough council's on the use of such facilities. [79659]

Mrs. Roche: The following numbers of homeless families are reported to have been in bed and breakfast and hostel accommodation as at 30 June 2002:

The Government have committed that by March 2004, local authorities will ensure that no homeless family with children will be in bed and breakfast hotels other than in an emergency and even then for no more than 6 weeks. Advice to local authorities on the use of accommodation for homeless individuals and families is contained in the Homelessness Code of Guidance which was issued jointly by my Department and the Department of Health in July 2002.

The figures referred relate to individuals and families who are statutory homeless i.e. the number of applications to local authorities.

Ministerial Discussions

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many discussions Ministers have held with (a) councillors, (b) devolved Administrations and (c) the Mayor of London since May; what subjects were discussed at each; when they took place; and who participated. [79589]

Mr. Leslie: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister and Ministers from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister have regular meetings with a wide range of organisations and individuals, including Councillors, members of the Devolved Adminstrations and the Mayor of London. As with previous Administrations it is not practice to provide details of all such meetings.

Housing Stock

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many dwellings were transferred under large scale stock transfers in each year since 1997, broken down by local authority area; and if he will make a statement. [79678]

Mr. McNulty: The table below lists those local authorities that have undertaken large scale voluntary transfers since 1997 and the number of dwellings transferred in each transfer.

Social Housing

Alan Simpson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, how many respondents to the Consultation Paper on a Decency Standard for Social Housing supported the view that the proposed minimum standards required under the Thermal Comfort criteria were sufficiently rigorous; and how many took the opposing view. [79501]

Mr. McNulty: The Consultation Paper on refining the detail of the thermal comfort criterion of a decent home proposed two options:

(a) retaining the fuel poverty measure; and

(b) moving to a stock measure of thermal comfort which would require a dwelling to have both effective insulation and efficient heating.

Of the 140 respondents to the consultation:

46% favoured moving to the proposed stock measure,

26% favoured moving to a stock measure but stated that they felt the standard proposed was too low,

25% rejected both proposals—many of these respondents suggested SAP although there was little consensus on what constituted an appropriate level; and 3% favoured the retention of fuel poverty as the measure.

Following the consultation a number of refinements were made to the definition of efficient heating and effective insulation before publishing the revised guidance. The main change was the requirement for higher levels of insulation in dwellings with electric storage heaters, programmable solid fuel or LPG central heating.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many successful asylum applicants were subsequently housed in social housing in each Government Office region in each year since 1999. [79716]

Mr. McNulty: The Government do not collect information relating to the number of former asylum seekers granted refugee status or exceptional leave to remain who are housed in social housing.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many of those recognised as refugees and granted indefinite leave to remain or exceptional leave to remain were later accepted as being owed a duty by a local authority under the Homelessness Act 2002 in each Government Office region in each year since 1999. [79715]

Mr. McNulty: The Government do not collect information about the number of persons granted refugee status or exceptional leave to remain who are allocated housing accommodation by local housing authorities under Part 6 of the Housing Act 1996, or allocated accommodation by registered social landlords. Nor does the Government collect information specifically about the number of persons granted refugee status or exceptional leave to remain who are accepted as owed a duty by a local housing authority under Part 7 of the Housing Act 1996 (as amended by the Homelessness Act 2002).

However, data about households accepted as being eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in priority need, and whose last settled home were accommodation provided by the National Asylum Support Service (NASS), has been collected from local housing authorities on the quarterly housing activity return (Form PIE) since April 2002. The degree of response and the quality of data received varied widely and the data we hold for the April to June 2002 quarter are not considered reliable. Information for the July to September 2002 quarter will be available in December 2002. These data do not, however, identify refugees and persons granted exceptional leave to remain who were not accommodated by NASS.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which of his Department's Public Service Agreements relate to fuel poverty reduction; and what progress has been made to date in achieving them. [79502]

Mr. McNulty: The Public Service Agreement to bring all social housing up to a decent standard and to increase the proportion of vulnerable households in the private sector who live in homes that are in decent condition by 2010 will contribute to a reduction in fuel poverty. To be classed as decent, a home must provide a reasonable degree of thermal comfort by providing efficient heating and effective insulation, measures which will make homes cheaper to heat.

On the social sector side of the target, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is on track to meet its interim target of tackling a third of the worst social housing by 2004 and is working to ensure it meets the target by reviewing all policies that contribute to the delivery of decent social housing to ensure they are as effective as possible and provide value for money.

For the private sector side of the target, officials are in the process of drawing up a delivery plan with colleagues in DEFRA responsible for the home energy efficiency scheme. The plan will set out in detail how the target will be delivered and include the steps that will be taken to ensure the contributing policies and procedures are working together as efficiently as possible.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will estimate the number of fuel-poor households who occupy dwellings that meet the Thermal Comfort criteria of the Decent Homes Standard; and how many households in this sector will remain fuel poor after all social housing complies with the standard. [75904]

Mr. McNulty: We will not have up-to-date figures of the numbers of fuel poor households living in decent homes until we complete the relevant parts of the analysis of the 2001 English House Condition Survey, in early 2003. This work will be undertaken jointly between ODPM, DEFRA and DTI.

To estimate the numbers of households who will be living in fuel poor households after all social housing is brought up to a decent standard in 2010 requires a number of assumptions about influencing factors such as energy prices and incomes. We are not able to provide a robust estimate of these factors at this time.

Right to Buy

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what information he has collated on the number of council dwellings sold under right-to-buy in each of the past five years in each London borough; and the number of new dwellings constructed by RSL or councils; and how many he expects to be constructed in 2002–03 and 2003–04. [79609]

Mr. McNulty: The available information on right to buy sales and new build in London is presented in the tables below:

Ministers set the Housing Corporation a target to complete a minimum of 21,000 dwellings in England in 2002–03. The Corporation's Investment Bulletin, published in April 2002, forecast that approximately 5,200 of these units would be in London.

The bidding round for the 2003–04 approved development programme (ADP) is now in progress. The Housing Corporation's Investment Bulletin for 2003–04 will be published early next year.

Special Advisers

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the special advisers serving in his Department, and their salary bands; and if he will make a statement. [79605]

Mr. Leslie: There are three special advisers serving in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister—Joan Hammell, Ian McKenzie and Paul Hackett. For details of paybands occupied by special advisers I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to my hon. Friend the member for Ellesmere Port and Neston (Mr. Miller) on 24 July, Official Report, Hansard, column 1372W.

Housing Fitness Standards

Alan Simpson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, what the timescale is for the full implementation of the Housing, Health and Safety Rating System; and what mechanisms exist to ensure compliance with its requirements. [79503]

Mr. McNulty: We intend to legislate to replace the current housing fitness standard with the Housing Health and Safety Rating System at the earliest opportunity. We will ensure that appropriate mechanisms exist for compliance with the new regime.

Land Ownership (Public Authorities)

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment has been made by his Department of the total development land owned by public authorities in each London borough; and what advice he gives on its disposal. [79630]

Mr. McNulty: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister collects information about previously developed land, distinguishing between that in the ownership of the private sector, local authorities and other public sector bodies, and the borough in which it is located. ODPM published National Land Use Database—Previously Developed Land (NLUD-PDL) data for 2001 on 12th September 2002 and this is available at www.odpm.gov.uk, including a Supplementary Table on "Previously developed land that is unused or may be available for redevelopment by land type and Planning Authority: England 2001".

Guidance on disposals includes chapter 24 of "Government Accounting 2000", available at www.government-accounting.gov.uk.

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans his Department has to decentralise non-departmental public bodies that are affiliated to his Department and devolve their responsibilities to local authorities. [79667]

Mr. Raynsford: There are currently no plans to decentralise the work of Non-Departmental Public Bodies to local authorities. The Housing Corporation has long had regional offices.

In the case of the four Housing Action Trusts, the relevant local authority is represented on each board by 1–3 Councillors and tenants have the right to choose the Council or a Registered Social Landlord as their future landlord.

We also plan to introduce new arrangements to strengthen links, at regional level between housing, planning and economic development strategies. These arrangements include the introduction of a single regional pot for resources for housing investment.

Parliamentary Questions/Correspondence

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) parliamentary questions and (b) letters to him from hon. Members in this session remain unanswered, broken down by those which are (i) one month old, (ii) two months old, (iii) three months old, (iv) four months old and (v) over six months old. [79942]

Mr. Leslie: (a) As at today, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has no Parliamentary Questions outstanding.

(b) The Cabinet Office publishes a report to Parliament on an annual basis, setting out the volume of Members' correspondence received by departments. The Report for 2001 was published on Friday 24 May, [Col. 677w]. Copies of previous reports are available in the Library of the House.

Following the recent machinery of government changes and the creation of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on 29 May 2002 I will write to the hon. Member as soon as the information on correspondence is collated.

Houses in Multiple Occupation

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to bring forward legislation to ensure that homes in multiple occupation meet satisfactory standards, with particular reference to energy efficiency. [80007]

Mr. McNulty: The Government are committed to raising standards in houses in multiple occupation (HMOs) and we intend to introduce legislation to achieve this as soon as a legislative slot is available. Our proposed measures will include a requirement for local authorities in England & Wales to licence those HMOs in their areas that pose the greatest risk to the health and safety of their occupiers. Underpinning the licensing regime and applying to all residential properties will be a new risk assessment based approach to housing conditions, which will replace the current prescriptive standards, and enable local authorities to target those HMOs with the worst housing conditions, including energy efficiency standards.

Council Rents

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what estimate he has made of the cumulative additional rent paid in real terms over the 10 years rent restructuring period by council tenants in London in (a) money terms at 2002–03 prices and (b) as a percentage of the Housing Revenue Account rent income for 2001–02 at 2002–03 prices, assuming that (i) there is no change in the number of council tenants over the period, (ii) councils move to the average of the formula rents proposed by his Office and (iii) they do so in the roughly equal steps proposed by his Office, (1) taking the impact of individual tenants' rent increase capping into account and (2) not taking the impact into account; [79862]

(2) what estimate he has made of the average real terms increase in rents paid by council tenants in London in (a) money terms at 2002–03 prices and (b) percentage terms compared to 2002–03 prices at the end of the 10 year rent restructuring period, assuming (i) that there is no change in the number of council tenants over the period and (ii) that councils move to the average of the formula rents as proposed by his Office, 1 taking the impact of individual tenants' rent increase capping into account and 2 not taking the impact into account. [79858]

Mr. McNulty: Setting of council tenants' rents remains a matter for individual local authorities. Future council rent levels will be influenced by, among other things, the outcome of future Spending Reviews.

However, were London boroughs to follow our policy on rent restructuring, we estimate that on current assumptions the average rent paid by council tenants in London in 2011–12 at the end of the ten year rent restructuring period, would be £8.17 higher in real terms in 2002–2003 prices. This represents a real increase of 12.8 per cent., as a percentage of the Housing Revenue Account rental income of London boroughs for 2001–2002 in today's prices.

The estimated cumulative additional average rent paid each year in real terms over the ten years is shown in the following table in 2002–2003 prices.

Year	Real rent increase	Percentage increase over today's average rent
2002–2003	£0.82	1.3%
2003–2004	£1.63	2.6%
2004–2005	£2.6%	3.8%
2005–2006	£3.27	5.1%
2006–2007	£4.09	6.4%

Year	Real rent increase	Percentage increase over today's average rent
2007–2008	£4.90	7.7%
2008–2009	£5.72	8.9%
2009–2010	£6.54	10.2%
2010–2011	£7.35	11.5%
2011–2012	£8.17	12.8%

Notes:
1. These figures do not make any allowance for the impact of future Right To Buy sales or transfers to Registered Social Landlords.
2. As relevant data is currently unavailable, these estimates do not take account of the effects of the rent caps and limits on individual rent rises, which will have the effect of reducing this average rise.

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, what plans he has to ensure that the proceeds of the increased rents in real terms paid by council tenants in London over successive years as a result of rent restructuring will be available for (a) the better resourcing of services to council tenants' homes and (b) investment in those homes. [79861]

Mr. McNulty: The resources to be made available to local authorities for housing will be a matter for future Spending Reviews.

The ring fencing of the Housing Revenue Account ensures that rental and other revenue income relating to council dwellings must be spent on matters relating to those dwellings. Within that ring fence, it is a matter for individual local authorities to decide how to prioritise spending in order to provide a better service to council tenants and to ensure the necessary investment in their homes.

Agricultural Buildings (Rates)

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the benefit accruing to agriculture from the exemption of agricultural buildings from payment of local rates. [79261]

Mr. Raynsford: I have been asked to reply.

Agricultural land and buildings are exempt from rating under Schedule 5 of the Local Government Finance Act 1988. As a result, the Valuation Office Agency, whose responsibility it is to compile and maintain an accurate rating list, makes no assessment of the values of such properties and therefore there is no reliable basis on which to make an estimate.

Decent Homes

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, what estimate he has made at 2002–03 prices of (a) the national total and (b) totals broken down by Government Office region for the investment required to (i) meet the Decent Homes Standard for council tenants' homes and (ii) clear the backlog of housing investment in council tenants' homes, broken down into (A) repairs and (B) improvements. [79864]

Mr. McNulty: We estimate that at April 2001 there was a backlog of capital works in the council housing sector totalling about £20 billion at 2002 prices—£10.5 billion for repairs and £9.5 billion for improvements. About £16.5 billion of this relates to works within the decent home standard and £3.5 billion for works outside the standard (eg environment improvements, security works etc).

These estimates are based on the 1996 English House Condition Survey, rolled forward to give a 2001 position. Regional estimates of the total backlog, based on applying the regional distribution from local authority Housing Revenue Account Business Plans to this national total, are given in the table.

GO Region	Estimated Backlog at 2001 (2002 Prices) Cost (£mn)	% of Total
North East	1,300	6%
North West	3,100	16%
Yorkshire and the Humber	2,700	14%
East Midlands	1,200	6%
West Midlands	2,500	12%
East of England	1,100	5%
London	6,100	31%
South East	1,200	6%
South West	900	5%
England total	£20,000	100%

Note:
Components may not sum to total due to rounding

The 2001 English House Condition Survey will provide more up-to-date estimates early in the New Year.

Housing Receipts

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) if he will set out for each year from 1997–98, and including estimates for 2002–03, (a) the totals of set-aside housing receipts and (b) the totals of housing basic credits approvals, broken down by Government Office region; [79863]

(2) what the national total of (a) set-aside housing receipts and (b) housing basic credit approvals was in each year from 1997–98; and what these figures are estimated to be in 2002–03. [79859]

Mr. McNulty: (a) The total of set-aside housing receipts in England in £thousands was:

	2001–02	2000–01	1999–2000	1998–99	1997–98
North East	48,118	175,552	71,998	37,608	46,470

North West	114,497	206,833	162,130	89,143	91,706
National Total	1,362,002	1,625,580	1,477,180	1,084,610	942,575

Note:
The estimated national total for 2002–03 is £2.5bn. No estimates are made of the figure by Government Office region.

(b) The amount in £thousands, for England, of Housing Annual Capital Guidelines (credit approvals plus the allowance (£199 million in recent years) made for capital funded from authorities' useable receipts) was:

	2002–2003	2001–2002	2000–2001	1999–2000	1998–1999	1997–1998
North East	47,036	43,756	130,369	77,332	73,707	49,811
Yorkshire & Humber	77,015	70,826	201,255	117,701	109,207	77,516
East Midlands	61,273	58,095	140,758	73,359	69,393	48,967
East of England	61,066	55,381	142,372	82,762	79,803	56,144
London	322,163	309,722	601,712	353,945	329,377	247,426
South East	92,752	85,582	175,966	107,193	100,143	75,764
South West	54,920	52,163	113,525	69,120	67,746	50,127
West Midlands	99,533	95,559	227,451	125,165	121,444	87,069
North West	128,997	111,389	285,195	172,427	162,272	109,822
National Total	944,756	882,473	2,018,603	1,179,004	1,113,092	802,646

These figures include the separate Capital Receipts Initiative funding provided in 1997–98 to 1999–2000.

The reductions between 2000–01 and 2001–02 reflects the switch of funds into the new Major Repairs Allowance, paid as part of housing subsidy, to fund capital works to maintain council housing.

Revenue Grant Distribution

Ann Winterton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many representations he has received from residents of (a) Cheshire and (b) Congleton constituency registering their response to his Department's review of revenue grant distribution; when he expects to announce his decision following his Department's consultation; and if he will make a statement. [80003]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Macclesfield (Sir Nicholas Winterton) on 5 November 2002, Official Report.

Shropshire Waste Plan

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the objectors to sites SA 22 and 23 in the Shropshire Waste Plan produced by Shropshire County Council; and if he will place copies of the objections in the Library. [79993]

Mr. McNulty: There were 97 objectors to Policy SA 22 and 90 objectors to Policy SA 23 of the Deposit Draft of the Shropshire Waste Local Plan 2002–2014. It is the responsibility of Shropshire County Council to consider these objections and to take the plan through all its stages. Information on the objectors and the details of each objection are not held in Government. Shropshire County Council intend to place all the objections to this Waste Local Plan on their website, www.shropshire-cc.gov.uk. In the meantime, they can be viewed by prior appointment at the Community and Environment Department; Shropshire County Council, Shirehall, Abbey Foregate, Shrewsbury (Telephone: 01743 252595).

Renewable Energy

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the steps which he is taking to promote building integrated renewables, with special reference to solar thermal and solar photovoltaics in new housing developments through the planning process. [79792]

Mr. McNulty: We will be issuing a draft Planning Policy Statement note on Renewable Energy and Planning for consultation at the turn of the year. This updated PPS revises PPG22. It will include guidance on including integrated renewables in developments such as housing. Also, through our planning policies for housing we encourage local authorities to adopt policies which promote the energy efficiency of new housing where possible.

Seaside and Country Homes Scheme

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 22 October 2002, Official Report, column 283W, on the Seaside and Country Homes Scheme, if he will commission research into (a) the capacity of seaside and country areas in South East England for an expansion of the Seaside and Country Homes Scheme and (b) the likely popularity and take up of the Scheme. [80090]

Mr. McNulty: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is leading in the procurement of a new service to improve mobility, especially labour mobility for social housing tenants, throughout the UK. As part of the procurement of this service (currently going under the working name HEMS—Housing and Employment Mobility Services) the operation and extent of the Seaside and Country Homes scheme is being reviewed. We expect to award the HEMS contract in March 2003 and for delivery of the new service to begin in July 2003.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, if he will place in the Library the location of the dwellings used under the Seaside and Country Homes Scheme. [80091]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested has been placed in the Library of the House.

Housing (Overcrowding)

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, what legislation is in force relating to overcrowding standards in housing; and when each provision came into force. [80092]

Mr. McNulty: The current overcrowding standards are set out in Part X of the Housing Act 1985. The Room Standard is breached if two people of opposite sexes who are not living together as husband and wife must sleep in the same room. The Space Standard specifies the number of people who may sleep in a dwelling according to the number of rooms and their floor area. Both standards must be met. The 1985 Act is a consolidating Act. The standards were carried forward from the Housing Act 1957, which itself consolidates those which had originated in the Housing Act 1935.

In respect of houses in multiple occupation, local authorities also have powers under section 358 of the 1985 Act to serve an overcrowding notice where they are satisfied that there are, or there may become, an excessive number of people living in a property having regard to the number of rooms available. Such notice must specify the number of people who can occupy the property. Contravention of the notice is a criminal offence.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 22 October 2002, Official Report, column 284W, on overcrowding, if it is his policy (a) to end the practice of counting living rooms as rooms available to sleep in, (b) to end the practice of not counting babies under the age of one and (c) to lower the age at which males and females should no longer be expected to have to sleep in the same room for the purposes of determining overcrowding. [80093]

Mr. McNulty: We are considering whether overcrowding is best tackled through a modern set of standards—updating the present legislative framework—or through the new Housing Health and Safety Rating System (HHSRS), which we hope to introduce as a replacement for the housing fitness standard when Parliamentary time allows. It will be possible to assess and tackle hazards from crowding and space under HHSRS, but we would need to be satisfied that the problem is one that can be dealt with through this process alone.

Local Authority Finance

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of spending by (a) Hampshire County Council, (b) Fareham Borough Council, (c) English county councils and (d) English district councils is to be financed by council tax payers in 2002–03. [80303]

Mr. Raynsford: Local authorities budgeted to finance the following percentages of revenue expenditure from the council tax in the year 2002–03:

	Income from council tax as a percentage (%) of spending
Hampshire County Council	33
Fareham Borough Council	41
English County Councils	32
English District Councils	40

Public Consultations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what public consultations have been commenced by his Department in each month since 10 September; and what the (a) start date, (b) closing date and (c) website address of each were. [80279]

Mr. Leslie: Full details and the texts of public consultation exercises launched by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister since 10 September 2002 are set out on our website (www.odpm.gov.uk) in the section entitled "What's New".

Supporting People Programme

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the impact of the introduction of Supporting People; and whether a community care assessment will be required for residents living in a leasehold sheltered housing scheme in order for its Department to meet the costs of its scheme manager and allied arrangements attributed as "having related support" as part of their income support. [80019]

Mr. McNulty: The Supporting People programme, which will be operational from 1 April 2003, will improve the quality of housing related support services for vulnerable people. It will provide an integrated policy and funding framework for the comprehensive review of support needs in a local area and for planning how those needs will be met.

Those leaseholders in sheltered housing schemes who currently receive Income Support need to obtain a community care assessment in order for the costs of support to continue to be met. After 1 April, these costs will be paid from the Supporting People grant. Those people who receive Income Support and who move into leasehold housing schemes after 1 April will not need a community care assessment in order to receive Supporting People money. Local authorities are currently mapping providers of support services and, after 1 April, leaseholders will be eligible for Supporting People money if they receive Income Support and are living in a scheme that has been mapped by local authorities as providing support services.

Guidance on how the Supporting People programme will apply to leaseholders was published in September and is available on the Supporting People knowledge web at: http://www.spkweb.org.uk/search/search—docdisplay.asp?doc—id = 10996

Urban Regeneration

Mr. Flight: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to encourage urban regeneration. [80381]

Mr. McNulty: The Government's policies for urban regeneration were set out in the Urban White Paper "Our Towns and Cities: the Future—Delivering an urban renaissance" which was published in November 2000. Significant achievements have been made since then. My right Hon. Friend hosted an Urban Summit in Birmingham on 31 October and 1 November to review progress and identify what more needs to be done. Key messages from the Summit will be fed into the long term plan for sustainable communities which the Deputy Prime Minister will announce to the House in January 2003.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many of the recommendations by Lord Rogers of Riverside's Urban Task Force have been implemented. [80380]

Mr. McNulty: The Government have endorsed the principles behind all of the recommendations in Lord Roger's report and in the majority of cases have accepted them in full or in part. Our response to each recommendation was set out in the Annexe to the Urban White Paper "Our Towns and Cities: the Future—Delivering an urban renaissance" which was published in November 2000. Significant progress has been made in delivering the measures laid out in the Urban White Paper. An Implementation Plan is available on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website.

Fly Tipping

Mr. Love: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the cost of fly tipping to local authorities in (a) Greater London and (b) England and Wales in each of the last five years. [78084]

Mr. Meacher: I have been asked to reply

The Government do not hold any central data on the cost of fly tipping to local authorities. However, the Institute of Public Finance has produced a report entitled "Waste Collection and Disposal Statistics 2000–01 Actuals". The report states that in 2000–01, fly tipping resulted in costs to the waste collection authorities of £3,859,000 in the London Boroughs, £1,178,000 in the Metropolitan Districts and £3,941,000 in the Non Metropolitan Districts.

This report is available on the internet at: http://www.ipf.co.uk/sis/environmental/wastemanagement/2000–01/commentary.pdf.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Moscow Theatre Siege

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to establish whether the gas used by the Russian Government to end the Moscow theatre siege contained neuro-paralytic agents. [78567]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 4 November 2002.

EU Documents (Security)

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions there have been breaches of security with respect to security covered EU documents in the last three years. [78123]

Mr. Macshane: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Consular Assistance (Tourist Resorts)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, how many requests have been received for consular assistance during the last 12 months in (a) Tenerife, (b) Corfu, (c) Majorca, (d) Benidorm, (e) Malaga and (f) Ibiza; how many of these were as a result of UK visitors being arrested by the police; and, of those arrested, how many have led to court appearances. [76309]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The number of registered requests requiring consular assistance during the last 12 months are set out below. However, some consular work involves providing various types of routine information to British nationals. These requests are not always recorded.

Consular Assistance Requests Oct 2001—Sept 2002

	Consular Assistance	Detentions	Notes
a) Tenerife	4000	303	The Consulate receives more than 10,000 visitors per year.
b) Corfu	1100	48	The Consulate receives more than 3,300 calls per year.
c) Majorca	1800	197
d) Alicante	1100	302	The Consulate receives 6,000 written enquiries each year.
Benidorm does not keep separate statistics: requests for assistance are channelled through the Consulate in Alicante, which requests the assistance of the Honorary Vice-Consul in Benidorm as required.
e) Malaga	1150	240	The Consulate receives 27,000 written enquiries each year.
Figures for Malaga include Cadiz, Seville and Granada.
f) Ibiza	3000	135	The Consulate receives 3,000 written enquiries each year.

We do not keep statistics on court appearances.

European Commission

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those cases over the past 10 years where a staff member of the European Commission has been suspended; on what grounds; and what was the nature of the final settlement of the case. [78302]

Mr. MacShane: We have requested this information from the Commission. I will write to the hon. Member with a full reply as soon as this is received.

Departmental Staff (Ethnic Minorities)

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals he has to increase the level of representations of black and Asian people in his Department. [78866]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The FCO is determined to increase the level of representation of ethnic minorities. But there is no "quick fix" without using positive discrimination, which is unlawful. We continue to seek and attract high calibre candidates from all sectors of the community. We use targeted marketing techniques to advertise career opportunities as widely as possible and encourage applications from black and Asian people. Our objective is to ensure that 10 per cent. of recruits to the Diplomatic Service are from minority ethnic backgrounds. Encouragingly, in 2002 we exceeded this target. 15 per cent. of new entrants at policy level were from black and Asian backgrounds.

(Over-50s) Recruitment

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of new recruits to his Department in the past two years were aged 50 and over. [79302]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The percentage of new recruits to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in the past two years aged 50 and over is as follows;

1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001 – 9.3 per cent.

1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002 – 10.5 per cent.

Deaths (UK Nationals)

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many deaths of UK nationals have been notified to his Department (a) in Greece and (b) the island of Rhodes in the last 12 months. [78993]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: There were a total of 116 deaths of UK nationals in Greece that were notified to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in the last 12 months. Sixteen of those deaths were reported from the Island of Rhodes.

Burma (International Aid)

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information his Department has collated regarding the Thai authorities' destruction of international aid destined for persecuted groups in Burma; and if he will make a statement concerning the Government's response to this situation. [79006]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has not been shown any evidence of destruction by the Thai authorities of international aid destined for persecuted groups in Burma.

Singapore

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Singapore regarding the imprisonment of the leader of the Singapore Democratic Party, Dr. Chee Soon Juan. [79012]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: None. Dr. Chee was imprisoned for failure to pay a fine imposed by the Singapore Courts in connection with an offence under the Public Entertainment Act.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, what recent discussions he has held with the Government of Singapore regarding freedom of speech and human rights issues. [79011]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We raise these issues with the Singaporean authorities whenever the opportunity arises. The former Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, my hon. Friend the Member for Exeter (Mr. Bradshaw), did so during his visit to Singapore in May this year.

Child Access

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many cases of prevention of access to children of British Nationals living in Germany have been reported to each of the British consulates in Germany in the last five years; and in what proportion of these cases the problems have been solved. [79519]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: During the last five years, twenty three British parents have contacted our Consulates in Germany about difficulties in securing access to children in Germany where the other parent has custody. Of these cases, we are aware that: two have been resolved; in fifteen cases the parents have had no further contact with the Consulate, so we are not aware of progress; six are ongoing and the relevant post in Germany continues to monitor the case.

Western Sahara

Albert Owen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's policy is on the right of the people of Western Sahara to self-determination; and what steps it is taking to ensure Morocco does not obstruct the United Nations Security Council Resolutions. [79521]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 5 November 2002]: The British Government support a just and durable outcome to the Western Sahara dispute. We support the position of the Secretary General and his Personal Envoy, James Baker, to find a just and lasting solution to the situation in Western Sahara. The United Nations Secretary General noted in his report to the Security Council on Western Sahara on 19 February 2002 that

> "Despite their assertions to the contrary, the parties have not been willing to fully cooperate with the United Nations either to implement the settlement plan or to negotiate a political solution that will bring about an early, durable and agreed resolution of their dispute over Western Sahara".

On this basis we have called on both parties to the dispute—Morocco, the Polisario Front and Algeria—to show flexibility in the search for a long term solution, which at this point seems stalled by their mutually exclusive objectives.

Export Licences

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, what definition of internal repression is used in considering applications for export licences. [79755]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: All export licence applications are assessed on a case by case basis against the Consolidated EU and national arms export licensing criteria announced by my right hon. Friend for the Member Neath (Mr. Hain) on 26 October 2000, Official Report, 199–203. Criterion 2 of the Consolidated criteria sets out the Government's definition of internal repression as:

> "Internal repression includes, inter alia, torture and other cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment or punishment; summary, arbitrary or extra-judicial executions; disappearances; arbitrary detentions; and other major suppression or violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms as set out in relevant international human rights instruments, including the Universal Declaration on Human Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights."

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, what definition of internal repression is used in considering applications for export licences. [79844]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer given to the hon. Member for Carmarthen, East and Dinefwr (Adam Price) today (UIN 79755).

European Union

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how United Kingdom citizens may obtain copies of the draft report of the Convention on the future of Europe; and what steps he is taking to publicise the document. [79965]

Mr. MacShane: The Convention has not produced an overall draft report at this stage. But all the Convention's documents are available to the public on the Convention's Website (http://european-convention.eu.int). This includes Valéry Giscard d'Estaing's preliminary draft constitutional treaty, as well as the final recommendations of those Working Groups that have concluded their work.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his policy towards qualified majority voting for deciding when national parliaments should be allowed to vote on EU proposals. [79935]

Mr. MacShane: The Convention Working Group on Subsidiarity has proposed the creation of a new mechanism to enable national parliaments to monitor compliance with subsidiarity. The full text is available on the Convention's website (http://european-convention.eu.int).

This Government supports the Working Group's conclusions. We believe that national parliaments should review each new Commission legislative proposal. If a majority of national parliaments judged that a proposal infringed subsidiarity, the Commission should be required to re-examine its approach.

Ministerial Meeting (Indian Foreign Minister)

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent meeting with Mr. Yashwant Sinha, the Indian Foreign Minister. [79927]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary met Yashwant Sinha, the Indian Foreign Minister, in London on 31 October. They discussed a wide range of bilateral and international issues. They agreed that the bilateral relationship is in excellent shape, and reiterated our joint commitment to developing further cooperation in line with the provisions of the New Delhi Declaration signed by the two Prime Ministers in January. The Foreign Secretary also reiterated the UK's support for India's permanent membership of the UN Security Council.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary welcomed the recent successful Jammu and Kashmir elections and discussed with Mr. Sinha how tensions in the region could be further reduced.

North Korea

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contributions the United Kingdom has made through the EU to the North Korean light water nuclear reactor programme; and whether the United Kingdom was represented at the foundation laying ceremony in August. [79928]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The light water reactor project, established under the 1994 Agreed Framework, forms part of a package of measures introduced to bring DPRK into line with its international obligations under the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty. The UK contributions, made through the European Atomic Energy Commission, amount to a total of £10.64 million (up to the end of Financial year 2001–02. This year's contribution has not yet been made).

The European Commission represented all EU Member States at the foundation laying ceremony.

Ascension Island

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on democratic development on Ascension Island. [80105]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The residents of Ascension Island voted overwhelmingly in August this year to establish an Island Council. This was a key step towards a democratic system of government, the first in the island's history. The election of Councillors took place on 1 November, and has resulted in a broad cross-section of the island's population being represented on the Island Council. We hope that the Island Council will work closely with the Administrator and the Governor for the long-term benefit of Ascension Island.

Sudan

Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the application for an export licence for the supply of two de-mining vests to the United Nations Office for Project Services in Sudan.

Mr. Rammell: The Government recently approved an application for a licence to export two de-mining vests for the United Nations Office for Project Services in Sudan. Although the demining vests are on the Military List, they will be used to open roads and increase the cost effectiveness of the UN relief operation which is working to alleviate the suffering in Sudan. This decision does not affect the Government's continued support for the EU common position on arms exports to Sudan.

Council of the European Union

Lawrie Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the forthcoming business in the Council of the European Union for November and major European Union events for the period from 30 November to May 2003. [80107]

Mr. MacShane: The information is as follows:

Malaysia

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Government of Malaysia concerning the operation of the Internal Security Act and its compliance with international legal norms; and if he will make a statement. [79648]

Mike O'Brien: EU Heads of Diplomatic Missions in Kuala Lumpur raised this issue with the Malaysian Minister of Foreign Affairs, Syed Hamid, on 17 May 2001. We also regularly express our concerns about the use of the Internal Security Act with the Malaysian High Commission in London.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, what representations have been made to the Government of Malaysia concerning the imprisonment of the former Deputy Prime Minister, Anwar Ibrahim; and if he will make a statement. [79647]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Our views on Anwar Ibrahim's continuing imprisonment were expressed in an EU statement of 12 July 2002. That statement recalled our deep concern about the fairness of the trial and expressed disappointment that the verdict had been upheld on final appeal. Our High Commissioner has also discussed this issue with Malaysian ministers.

National Missile Defence

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent meetings have been held with the US Deparments of (a)

State and (b) Defense on the United Kingdom's contribution to national missile defence; and if he will make a statement. [79651]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Missile defence issues are discussed regularly in the course of official UK/US contacts. It remains the case that there has been no formal US request for the use of UK facilities for missile defence purposes. If a request is received, the Government will consider it. But the Government would only agree to use of UK facilities if satisfied that the overall security of the UK and NATO would be enhanced.

Bermuda

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, what steps he has taken to ensure that the Boundary Commission in Bermuda has properly discharged its duty to invite representations from the public relating to proposals to change Bermuda's electoral system. [79867]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Constituency Boundaries Commission invited the public to express views and attend meetings through widely advertised notices in the press and on the radio in Bermuda. Everyone had an opportunity to attend. Meetings were held in four different places, including the capital Hamilton.

Sikhs

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, what representations have been received by Her Majesty's Government from the Indian Government concerning the separate ethnic monitoring of British Sikhs in the United Kingdom. [80367]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We have not received any representations from the Indian Government regarding the separate ethnic monitoring of British Sikhs.

Zimbabwe

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received on the sale by the wife of the Zimbabwe National Army Commander, of crops seized from Chakoma Estates in Goromonji to United Kingdom supermarkets; and if he will make a statement. [80061]

Mr. Rammell: Mrs. Chiwenga's involvement with Chakoma Estates has been reported in both the UK and Zimbabwe media. We have no additional information about the sale of the company's produce to UK supermarkets.

Anglo-French Summit

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) which country first proposed an Anglo-French Summit to take place in the last three months of this year; [79963]

(2) when a place for an Anglo-French summit in the last three months of this year was agreed; [79962]

(3) when and by whom it was suggested that an Anglo-French summit scheduled to take place in the last three months of this year should be postponed or cancelled; and if he will make a statement on current arrangements on the summit. [79961]

Mr. MacShane: UK-French Summits have taken place roughly annually for over 25 years. The venue alternates between UK and France. It was France's turn to host this year and consequently for them to propose a date. They originally proposed 3 December, but have since postponed to allow more time for preparation. We look forward to receiving a new date.

UK Consulates (California)

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact on the (a) diplomatic and (b) business role of the United Kingdom Consulates in California on the creation of five separate regional development agency offices in that state. [79921]

Mr. Rammell: There have been no formal assessments of the impact on the Consulates in California of the local Regional Development Agency (RDA) offices. However, if an RDA wishes to open a new (or expand an existing) overseas office, it is required to present a business case for prior approval by my noble Friend the Baroness Symons, and by the Consulate General.

Although the RDAs have no diplomatic remit, their presence can strengthen the FCO's public diplomacy effort, for example, when issues arise concerning a particular area of the UK (e.g. Northern Ireland).

Our Consulates in California have a good relationship with the RDAs, and integrate their business activities where practicable. To ensure there is no "double handling", the inward investment activity of the RDAs is regulated by the Committee on Overseas Promotion Guidelines, which require them to notify the relevant Post in advance before visiting companies within the Post's area of responsibility.

Charter of Fundamental Rights

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if it is his policy to make the Charter of Fundamental Rights enforceable in law. [78869]

Mr. MacShane: The Charter is a political declaration. The Government strongly supports it. People need to know their rights and the EU institutions need to respect them.

The Government has always maintained that there are legal and practical problems linked to giving the text as its stands legal status. The Laeken European Council mandated the participants in the Future of Europe Convention to consider the Charter's status. We have worked hard in the Convention's Charter Working Group to find solutions to the issues of legal certainty that would need to be resolved before the UK could consider a change in the Charter's status.

In looking at the Charter's status, two key aspects of the existing text must be maintained: that the Charter is addressed to the Institutions and the Member States only to the extent they are implementing Union law; and that the Charter creates no new power or tasks for the EC and does not modify powers or tasks defined by the Treaties.

The Government welcomes the Working Group's final report, including some of the technical amendments the group recommends, as a basis for further work on the Charter's status. Any decision on the future status of the Charter will be taken by Heads of Government at an IGC.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

European Scrutiny

Miss McIntosh: To ask the President of the Council, what plans he has to bring forward proposals to give further powers to Select Committees to take evidence on matters relating to European policy and European draft legislative proposals; and if he will make a statement. [80384]

Mr. Robin Cook: I refer the hon. Lady to the Government's Observations on the Thirtieth Report of the European Scrutiny Committee 2001–02, European Scrutiny in the Commons (Second Special Report of that Committee 2001–02, HC 1256), particularly paragraphs 6 and 34–36. Select Committees have power already to take evidence on matters relating to European policy and European draft legislative proposals; and the Liaison Committee's recent guidance to select committees on core objectives and tasks specifically asks them to examine policy proposals from the European Commission.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Disability Living Allowance

Valerie Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many people with autism and Asperger's Syndrome applied for disability living allowance in 2001; how many were (a) successful in their application and (b) refused; and how many of those who were refused were later awarded disability living allowance on appeal. [77283]

Maria Eagle: The information requested is not available but such information we can give is shown in the table:

Number of new recipients of Disability Living Allowance with main disabling condition as learning difficulties or severely mentally impaired between November 2000 and November 2001

Thousands

	Learning Difficulties	Severely mentally impaired
Great Britain	13.7	0.1*

Notes:

1. Figures are in thousands and rounded to the nearest hundred.
2. Figures marked* are under 500 and therefore are subject to a high degree of sampling variation and should only be used as a guide to the current situation.
3. We do not have autism listed as a disability, therefore, figures for people with Kanner type autism are most likely to be classed under severely mentally impaired, and people with Asperger's Syndrome could be classified under learning difficulties, although these figures will also include other people.
4. New recipients figures are people in receipt of DLA at November 2001 but not November 2000, there will be a small additional number of new recipients in the year to November 2001 whose DLA award had ceased before 30 November 2001. Therefore, they will not have been present on either our November 2000 or 2001 extract.

Private Pensions

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what discussions he has had with (a) the pensions industry (b) employers and (c) trades unions to ensure that the public is better informed about their future pension provisions. [75031]

Mr. McCartney [holding reply 21 October 2002]: The Government are committed to ensuring that individuals have access to better information to improve awareness of the importance of retirement planning. We have discussed these issues with a range of pensions representative organisations; such as the members of the Joint Working Group on Occupational Pensions and the Financial Services Authority, as part of our regular dialogue on pensions issues. We have a pension education strategy which includes:

Raising awareness of retirement planning through a dedicated publicity campaign;

Providing more information to people about their pension provision through combined pension forecasts; and Testing new ways to get information out to the public, for example through interactive digital television.

Following the Prime Minister's statement at the TUC conference, Ministers have met with both the TUC and the CBI to discuss a range of pensions issues and officials are continuing the constructive dialogue. In addition, the Department of Work and Pensions liasies with a range of organisations on an ongoing basis, to consider ways to improve the provision of pensions information to consumers. For example, in relation to the work on the combined pension forecast we have worked closely with a range of employers such as Sainsburys and Prudential.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many final salary pension scheme closures there were over the last five years. [79767]

Mr. McCartney: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible with the information requested and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

HSE Inspections

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what assessment he has made of the impact of the recent change in the annual number of Health and Safety Executive inspections. [80244]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: There was a fall in the number of preventive inspections between 1996–97 to 2001–02 from 116,652 to 75,237. Over the same period, there was a 35 per cent increase in the number of investigations.

Investigations take much longer than inspections and so it is inevitable that more investigations mean fewer inspections. HSE has also taken action to increase their other preventive work including seminars, conferences and awareness days.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what assessment he has made of the level of investigations by the Health and Safety Executive into deaths and major injuries of (a) the public and (b) workers. [80242]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The data are not available in the format requested. However, incidents that meet HSE's incident selection criteria are investigated; the criteria are in the public domain and were agreed only after thorough consultation with all interested parties.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what assessment he has made of the levels of prosecution following investigation by the Health and Safety Executive into deaths and major injuries of (a) the public and (b) workers. [80245]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The data are not available in the format requested.

However, all the Health and Safety Executive's decisions about taking enforcement action are made in accordance with the principles contained in the Health and Safety Commission's Enforcement Policy Statement (EPS).

In addition, the HSE has to ensure that proposed enforcement action meets the requirements of the Code for Crown Prosecutors in England and Wales, and the Prosecutors Code in Scotland. These require that there is sufficient evidence to provide a realistic prospect of obtaining a conviction, and that any proposed prosecution would be in the public interest.

Dr. Cable (Twickenham): To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many accidents were (a) reported to and (b) investigated by the Field Operations division of the HSE in (i) 1998 99, (ii) 1999–2000, (iii) 2000–01 and (iv) 2001–02; and if he will make a statement. [75131]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The following table shows the number of injuries to employees, self-employed people and members of the public as reported to HSE's Field Operations Directorate and the total number of incidents investigated, 1998–99/2001–02.

Year	Injuries Reported	Incidents Investigated
1998–1999	141,549	7,805
1999–2000	141,507	9,754
2000–2001	138,312	14,279

Notes:

1. "Injuries" includes all fatal, major and over-3-day injuries.
2. Injuries reported as required by the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations (RIDDOR) 1995.
3. "Incidents" includes injuries, diseases, dangerous occurrences and gas safety incidents.

The data for investigations are not available in the form requested. The data for 2001–02 are not available as the information is subject to exemption 10 under the National Statistics Code of Practice pending the publication of HSE Statistics in December 2002

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what plans he has to increase the proportion of (a) dangerous occurrences and (b) major injuries investigated by the Health and Safety Executive; [80241]

(2)What assessment he has made of the reasons underlying differences between Health and Safety Executive areas in the level of (a) investigation, (b) inspection and (c) prosecution. [80243]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, whether housing benefit will continue to be paid four weeks in arrears in the housing benefit reform pilot areas. [80257]

Malcolm Wicks: Yes.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, if he will place in the Library a copy of the report made to him on housing benefit at Swale Borough Council. [79920]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Scarborough and Whitby (Lawrie Quinn) on 22 October 2002, Official Report, cols 136-38W.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how he will indentify those vulnerable people he intends to safeguard in the housing benefit reform pilot areas; and what form these safeguards will take. [80262]

Malcolm Wicks: Tenants in the pilot areas will have their rent paid to them rather than to their landlord. However, we appreciate that not all tenants will be able to cope with this responsibility. For this reason safeguards will be in place to ensure that landlords and vulnerable tenants are protected.

For example, as now, where it is considered appropriate, the pathfinder authority will be able to make the first payment of benefit direct to the landlord. And in cases where 8 weeks' rent arrears have built up, payments of Housing Benefit will be made to the landlord. In addition, certain groups of vulnerable tenants—such as those living in hostels—will not be included in the standard local housing allowance scheme.

The details of the new scheme will be set out in regulations and we shall be consulting on these in due course.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how mobility within and between neighbourhoods of differing housing quality and cost will be monitored in the housing benefit reform pilot areas; whether the pre-1996 housing benefit restrictions are being repealed in the housing benefit reform pilot areas; and how much he estimates the gainers in the housing benefit reform pilot areas will benefit; [80253]

(2) how he plans to measure the impact on the supply of quality housing in the housing benefit reform pilot areas; [80260]

(3) how he plans to monitor if rent is being negotiated in the housing benefit pilot areas; and if he will monitor the effectiveness of (a) the elderly, (b) lone parents, (c) ethnic minority groups and (d) people with disabilities in such negotiations; [80261]

(4) if he will review the effect of the operation of non-dependent deductions in the housing benefit reform pilot areas; [80258]

(5) whether the number and size of localities used to determine local reference rents and standard local housing allowances in the housing benefit reform pilot areas will be monitored following the Rent Offices (Housing Benefit Functions) (Amendment) Order 2001. [80252]

Malcolm Wicks: The standard local housing allowance will repeal the pre-1996 Housing Benefit restrictions in pathfinder local authority areas. The benefits to the gainers in the pathfinder areas will depend on the local conditions in those authorities that volunteer to become pathfinders.

In consultation with independent researchers we are drawing up a rigorous evaluation strategy to monitor the standard local housing allowance pathfinders.

The evaluation strategy will use a range of research techniques, including both fieldwork with key stakeholders in the pathfinder areas and analysis of administrative and operational data collected by the Department. This will enable us to understand both the impact of the pathfinders and the way in which these impacts have been achieved.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people are receiving housing benefit in respect of private sector tenancies, (a) in Great Britain and (b) each of the smallest geographical units for which figures are available; [76799]

(2) when the reference rent scheme was introduced; and how many private sector tenants in receipt of housing benefit have been affected by it in each year since it was introduced; [76801]

(3) how many private sector tenants in receipt of housing benefit whose eligible rent is capped by the reference rent are (a) pensioners, (b) couples with children, (c) childless couples, (d) lone parents and (e) other single people; [76802]

(4) what proportion of private tenants in receipt of housing benefit have their eligible rent capped by the reference rent system in (a) Great Britain and (b) in each of the smallest geographical units for which figures are available. [76800]

Mr. Andrew Smith: There are limits and complexities to the available data. I will write to the hon. Member shortly with more detail and place a copy of my letter in the Library

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have had their housing benefit restricted to below the level of rent payable as a result of the local reference rent; and how many of those people have only one room for their exclusive use in each of the last five years. [79479]

Mr. Andrew Smith: There are limits and complexities to the available data. I will write to the hon. Member shortly with more detail and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the impact of Swale borough council's housing benefit procedures on homelessness in Sittingbourne and Sheppey. [79919]

Malcolm Wicks: The Benefit Fraud Inspectorate (BFI) has an ongoing programme of inspections to help councils identify and act on weaknesses in their benefit services, and drive up standards of administration. On 25 September the BFI published a report of an inspection of Swale Borough Council conducted in spring 2002. The report commended Swale for clearing its backlog of benefit claims since the previous BFI inspection in 2000, and for improvements in the council's speed in processing benefit claims.

Although it made further recommendations to help the council address ongoing weaknesses, we recognise the detrimental effect that delays in processing Housing Benefit claims can have on the ability of tenants to meet their rent responsibilities. That is why a key aim of our strategy for reforming Housing Benefit is to improve its administration.

However there is no evidence to show a direct link between poor benefit administration and homelessness.

Martin Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many people in receipt of housing benefit in the private sector in Wandsworth have to make up the difference between the amount received and the rent stated in their claim. [77290]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is not available in the format requested.

The table shows the number, the average weekly Housing Benefit payment and the average eligible rent of Housing Benefit recipients living in the deregulated private sector, in the London Borough of Wandsworth, at May 2002. There is no directly comparable information about the actual rents paid by Housing Benefit recipients.

Local Authority	Housing Benefit Recipients	Average Weekly Eligible Rent	Average Weekly Amount Of Housing Benefit Paid
Wandsworth	2,050	£136.00	£128.20

Notes:

1. The data refer to households claiming Housing Benefit, which may be a single person, a couple or a family. More than one benefit household can live in one property, for example two or more adults in a flat or house share arrangement.

2. The eligible rent is the amount of rent, which may be met by Housing Benefit after any restrictions applied by the rent officer, taking account of the cost of suitable accommodation in the area.
3. Figures include cases where Housing Benefit is paid at a reduced rate due to the tenant's income.
4. The caseload figure is rounded to the nearest ten cases.
5. The average amounts are rounded to the nearest ten pence.
6. Figures exclude any extended payment cases

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of gainers in the housing benefit reform pilot areas are likely to benefit from the removal of housing benefit restrictions other than the local and single reference rents. [80259]

Malcolm Wicks: The proportions for individual pathfinder areas will depend on which local authorities agree to take part in the pilot.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what reasons underlay his decision on the length of the period before landlords can begin receiving housing benefit directly if a tenant gets into arrears; and what assessment he has made of the impact of his decision on possession cases in shorthold tenancies. [80255]

Malcolm Wicks: The requirement that housing benefit payments must be made to the landlord if a tenant builds up rent arrears of 8 weeks is an established part of the benefit scheme and is linked to housing law, under which the establishment of at least 8 weeks' worth of rent arrears is a ground for eviction. We intend to maintain this requirement for the standard local housing allowance pathfinder areas, together with other safeguards to protect landlords and vulnerable tenants.

We have made no assessment of the practical impact of the 8 week limit on possession cases.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on how the rapid re-claim facility for housing benefit will operate; and what targets have been set for the time taken to process these claims. [80256]

Malcolm Wicks: We introduced Rapid Reclaim for Housing Benefit recipients on 28 October 2002.

Rapid Reclaim removes barriers to taking and declaring work by reducing Housing Benefit recipients' concerns about the delays in reclaiming benefit if a job does not last. People of working age can re-claim Housing Benefit within 12 weeks of the end of their last claim, using a shortened, simplified claim form which includes a declaration that their circumstances are the same as when they previously claimed. Providing there have been no significant changes in circumstances, the local authority can process the claim based only on that declaration.

No clearance time targets have been set for Rapid Reclaim cases over and above the targets and performance indicators that already exist. However, the nature of Rapid Reclaim means that claims will be processed much more quickly than new Housing Benefit claims and that customers will therefore receive their benefit sooner.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions by what means information will be made publicly available about (a) the size and boundaries of localities determined by the Rent Service to calculate the standard local housing allowance in the housing benefit reform pilot areas and (b) what the average rent is by size of dwelling in those localities. [80251]

Malcolm Wicks: Under the new scheme, pathfinder authorities will be required to make information about the localities and the standard allowances publicly available. Details of the boundaries of localities and the standard allowances for different property sizes will therefore be accessible to both tenants and landlords

The details of the scheme will be set out in regulations and we will be consulting on these in due course.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many persons have been found to have been claiming benefits pending an asylum application in the UK and Eire at the same time in each of the last three years; [78502]

(2) what assessment he has made of the extent of fraud perpetrated by those claiming benefits in Eire and the UK simultaneously whilst pursuing an asylum application. [78503]

Malcolm Wicks: Our strategy for tackling fraud focuses on prevention by tightening the gateway to benefits, making stringent checks to verify a person's identity and details of their claim at the outset.

People from abroad who wish to claim benefits must first provide sufficient evidence of their identity and circumstances for a National Insurance number (NINO) to be allocated.

This process involves a rigorous face to face interview, scrutiny of supporting documentation, and corroborative checks made on the information provided prior to the allocation of a NINO. The process applies to all foreign nationals requiring a NINO. If during the allocation process suspicions are raised as to the legitimacy of an individual's right to be in the country, the case is referred to the Department's National Identity Fraud Unit for further action.

Upon arrival in this country asylum seekers are initially supported by the Home Office National Asylum Support Service. Contact with this Department for the allocation of a NINO will therefore not normally take place until a decision has been made by the Home Office on the person's application for asylum. Once this has taken place (or if the person has been in the country for more than 6 months and is still awaiting a decision), an application for a NINO can be made.

There are arrangements in place between this Department and the Department of Social, Community and Family Affairs in the Republic of Ireland which allow fraud investigators to compare information held by both departments relating to individuals suspected of committing fraud.

Job Advertisements

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many posts were advertised in the press in each year from June 1999; and what percentage of them were advertised in the Scottish press. [76851]

Mr. McCartney [holding reply 24 October 2002]: The information is not held centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Goodwin and I v. UK

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to the answer of 24 July, concerning the case of Goodwin and I v. UK, Official Report, col 1308W, if he will list the several Departments which have incurred costs in this case. [75743]

Mr. McCartney: This litigation raised policy implications for most Government Departments, however those Departments most closely involved are the Foreign Office, Lord Chancellor's Department, Department for Work and Pensions and Department of Heath.

Correspondence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, when he will reply to the letters dated 28 August and 20 September from the hon. Member for Buckingham. [76017]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: I replied to the hon. Member on 22 October.

Child Support

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many current CSA assessments would be altered by implementation of the proposed changes in procedures. [78729]

Malcolm Wicks: It is expected that the majority of assessments made by the Child Support Agency will alter when the new scheme is introduced for existing cases. This is expected to be about a year after the new scheme is commenced for new cases.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what the average payment made in child support maintenance by the non-resident parent under the CSA system for (a) one child, (b) two children and (c) three or more children, based on the most recent five per cent. scan of the Child Support Computer System. [79360]

Malcolm Wicks [holding reply 4 November 2002]: The information is in the table.

Average maintenance payment, £ per week

Number of qualifying children
27.43	35.30	36.24

Notes:
1. Figures are taken from a 5 per cent sample of "live and assessed" cases of the May 2002 quarterly scan of the Child Support Computer System and so are subject to sampling variation.
2. Figures are based only on payments to parents with care made via the CSA collection service. Data is not held on those payments made directly by the non-resident parent to the parent with care.
3. Averages are based on cases with Full Maintenance Assessments only.
4. Payments made to reduce outstanding arrears are included in the calculation.
5. The averages exclude cases assessed at zero maintenance payable; these represent nearly half of all cases with a Full Maintenance Assessment.
6. The figures in the table represent average amounts paid by each non-resident parent for a single case.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what the average child support maintenance assessment is for (a) all, (b) employed and (c) unemployed non-resident parents for (i) one, (ii) two and (iii) three or more qualifying children. [79364]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 4 November 2002]: The information is given in the table.

Average maintenance assessment, £ per week

Employment status of non-resident parent	Number of qualifying children
All	19.05	25.38	23.45
Employed	33.96	43.08	44.86
Unemployed	2.27	2.89	1.92

Notes:
1. The averages take account of cases assessed at zero maintenance payable.
2. Figures are taken from a 5 per cent sample of all "live and assessed" cases of the May 2002 quarterly scan of the Child Support Computer System and so are subject to sampling variation.
3. Figures are for Full Maintenance Assessments only.
4. Employment status of the non-resident parent is based on the information held on the Child Support Computer System.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, if he will make a statement on the timetable for the introduction of the proposed changes in the CSA; and what assessment he has made of the impact upon the parent with responsibility of its proposed changes. [77308]

Malcolm Wicks [holding reply 28 October 2002]: I refer my hon. Friend to the letter sent to right hon. and hon. Members on 19 September 2002 by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, a copy of which was placed in the Library.

The White Paper "A new contract for welfare: children's rights and parents' responsibilities", (CM4349) published in July 1999, gives our most recent estimates.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, (1) if he will update his estimates of gainers and losers from his proposed reforms to child support; [74842]

(2) what estimates he has made of the change in average maintenance assessment under the new Child Support Scheme for a non resident parent supporting (a) one qualifying child, (b) two qualifying children and (c) three or more qualifying children. [76109]

Malcolm Wicks: The White Paper "A new contract for welfare: children's rights and parents' responsibilities", (CM 4349) published in July 1999, gives our most recent estimates.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will estimate the (a) percentage and (b) number of non-resident parents who will see (i) an increase and (ii) a decrease in their child support maintenance assessment under the new scheme, based on the (A) five per cent. scan of the Child Support Computer System that was conducted in August 2000 and (B) the most recent five per cent. scan of the system; [79363]

(2) if he will estimate the average child support maintenance assessment under the new scheme for (a) all, (b) employed and (c) unemployed non-resident parents for (i) one, (ii) two and (iii) three or more qualifying children, based on the most recent scan of the Child Support Computer System; [79365]

(3) if he will estimate the average (a) weekly amount and (b) percentage change in child support maintenance assessment under the new scheme for (i) all, (ii) employed and (iii) unemployed non resident parents for (1) one, (2) two and (3) three or more qualifying children, based on the most recent five per cent. scan of the Child Support Computer System. [79368]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 4 November 2002]: I refer my hon. friend to the letter sent to right hon. and hon. Members on 19 September 2002 by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

The White Paper "A new contract for welfare: children's rights and parents' responsibilities", (CM 4349) published in July 1999, gives our most recent estimates.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much has been paid in compensation for Child Support Agency maladministration in each of the last five years; and how many cases have been involved. [79361]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter to Mr. Steven Webb from Doug Smith, dated 7 November 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent parliamentary questions about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply from me.

You ask how much has been paid in compensation for Child Support Agency maladministration in each of the last five years; and how many cases have been involved.

The amounts that have been paid by the Agency's Special Payments Team in respect of consolatory and financial redress and the number of cases involved are as follows:

	Number of Cases	Total amount Paid (£)
1997–1998	1,389	786,590
1998–1999	8,195	3,683,277
1999–2000	7,705	2,529,695
2000–2001	9,821	2,736,479
2001–2002	12,007	2,518,487

I hope you find this useful.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer of 28 October 2002, Official Report, column 649W, on child maintenance, what proportion of parents with care on income support and income-based jobseekers' allowance received maintenance for their children in (a) 1997 and (b) at the most recent date for which figures are available. [79924]

Malcolm Wicks: Based on data for February for both years, in 1997, 36 per cent. of the total of 255,000 parents with care, on income support or income-based job seeker's allowance and with full maintenance assessments were receiving maintenance. For 2002, that proportion was 31 per cent., but of a caseload that had increased by over 50 per cent., to some 392,000 such parents with care.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many complaints and queries have been dealt with by the Child Support Agency in each of the last five years; how many absent parents were no longer contactable in each of these years; how many maintenance accounts held by the agency were in arrears in each of these years (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) in Durham; and what the outstanding amounts were (i) in the United Kingdom and (ii) in Durham. [80233]

Malcolm Wicks: I will write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible with the information requested and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Pensions

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what income sources his Department includes when measuring progress towards the Government's target on increasing the balance of spending on pensioners' incomes that comes from the private sector, as outlined on page 103 of the 1998 Green Paper on pensions Command Paper 4179; and what the figures were for each of these income sources in each year since 1998. [78331]

Mr. McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given to the hon. Member for Northavon (Mr. Webb) on 20 May 2002, Official Report, column 41W, and on 3 July 2002, Official Report, columns 420W–22W.

Harrow Benefits Agency

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many complaints have been received about late payment of benefits by the Harrow Benefits Agency in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [77228]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Over the last 12 months, a total of 1,051 complaints have been received at the Harrow Social Security Office regarding late payment of benefits.

The last 12 months have seen substantial change in what was Harrow Benefits Agency and a period of industrial action which has had some impact on performance. The Harrow Social Security Office now forms part of the Jobcentre Plus District for Brent, Harrow and Hillingdon. The District has already begun an improvement programme including re-training for staff in some areas of their work. This is already showing improved results in customer service and performance, with a corresponding reduction in the number of complaints received. There were 153 complaints about late payments of benefit in October 2001. By October 2002 there were only 13 complaints.

Disability Benefits

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many disabled benefit recipients have failed his Department's tests in each of the last five years for which records are available; and how many have had those benefits restored on appeal for each of the different tests for which disabled people are required to undergo. [76089]

Maria Eagle: Two medical assessments are used to determine incapacity for work for benefit purposes: the Own Occupation Test, which is applied during the first 28 weeks of incapacity, and the Personal Capability Assessment. Attendance Allowance (AA) and Disability Living Allowance (DLA) are self-assessment benefits and as such there is no requirement for a medical assessment. However, Decision Makers may request further evidence which can include a report from an examining medical practitioner.

The available information is in the tables.

Notes:
[1] The Personal Capability Assessment replaced the All Work Test in April 2000.
[2] Figures are for 3 quarters only. Due to a change in the recording system reliable figures for the personal capability assessment are not available for the quarter ending 30 November 1998.
[3] National Insurance Credits Only cases are included in these figures.
[4] Numbers marked "*" are based on a very few sample cases and are therefore subject to a high degree of sampling error and should be used as a guide to the current situation only.
[5] "—" denotes nil or negligible.

Jobcentre PWS Interviews

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many (a) income support, (b) incapacity benefit, (c) invalid care allowance, (d) bereavement benefit and (e) severe disablement allowance claimants have had (i) a new claim refused as a result of work focused interview non-attendance and (ii) benefit reduced as a result of failure to attend a repeat work-focused interview, under The Social Security (Jobcentre Plus Interviews) Regulations 2001; [79371]

(2) what percentage of (a) income support, (b) incapacity benefit, (c) invalid care allowance, (d) bereavement benefit and (e) severe disablement (i) new claimants in Jobcentre Plus areas have had a claim refused as a result of work focused interview non-attendance and (ii) existing caseload claimants in Jobcentre Plus areas have had their benefit reduced as a result of failure to attend a repeat-work focused interview, under The Social Security (Jobcentre Plus Interviews) Regulations 2001. [79372]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

NIRS2 Recalculation

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what the average (a) underpayment and (b) overpayment for (i) retirement pension, (ii) widow's benefit, (iii) bereavement benefit, (iv) incapacity benefit and (v) jobseeker's allowance is as a result of incorrect NIRS2 calculations; [79370]

(2) how many (a) retirement pension, (b) widow's benefit, (c) bereavement benefit, (d) incapacity benefit and (e) jobseeker's allowance cases are waiting for a review triggered by a NIRS2 calculation; [79366]

(3) how much has been paid in arrears of (a) retirement pension, (b) widow's benefit, (c) bereavement benefit, (d) incapacity benefit and (e) jobseeker's allowance; and to how many pensioners, as a result of incorrect NIRS2 calculations; [79367]

(4) how much has been paid in overpayment of (a) retirement pension, (b) widow's benefit, (c) bereavement benefit, (d) incapacity benefit and (e) jobseeker's allowance and to how many claimants, as a result of incorrect NIRS2 calculations; [79368]

(5) how much has been underpaid in (a) retirement pension, (b) widow's benefit, (c) bereavement benefit, (d) incapacity benefit and (e) jobseeker's allowance and to how many claimants as a result of incorrect NIRS2 calculations; [79369]

(6) how many cases are waiting for a review triggered by a NIRS2 calculation. [79357]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 4 November 2002]: Up to 30 November 2001, the information requested is as follows:

Benefit or pension	Total amount underpaid	Number underpaid	Average amount underpaid	Total amount overpaid	Number overpaid	Average amount overpaid
Retirement pension	£64,171,357	190,791	£336	£2,895,937	11,629	£249
Widow's benefit/bereavement benefit	£29,420,184	17,496	£1,681	£316,123	722	£438
Incapacity benefit	£3,339,274	9,984	£334	£746,525	793	£941
Jobseekers allowance	£906,473	2,524	£359	£180,251	475	£379

Underpayments have been rectified. There should be no cases awaiting a review as a direct result of a NIRS2 recalculation.

Incapacity Benefit

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, in what circumstances incapacity benefit is means tested; and whether the incapacity benefit is reduced if a man aged 61 has an occupational pension. [76924]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Incapacity Benefit exists to provide a measure of earnings replacement for people of working age who are incapable of work. Where a person is duplicating this provision the law provides for this to be taken into account.

If a person claiming Incapacity Benefit receives an occupational pension, personal pension or payments through a permanent health insurance scheme of £85 a week or more, their Incapacity Benefit is reduced by half the amount which exceeds £85. Only people making new claims from 6 April 2001 are affected by the new rules.

Occupational Deafness

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, when he will publish the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council report on occupational deafness. [79764]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The Industrial Injuries Advisory Council expects to publish its report on occupational deafness shortly.

Focus Group Research

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what use he and his Department have made of focus group research since June 2001; if he will identify for each research project the topics covered, the person or organisation carrying out the research, and the total cost; and if he will publish the research on his Department's website. [74986]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The information is available in the table.

Pay Offer Pack

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what the cost was of the Pay 2002 information pack circulation; and if he will make a statement in respect of targeting information to recipients [78337]

Mr. McCartney: The cost for design, print and distribution of the Department 2002 Pay Offer information pack was £1.34 per pack. Around 146,500 copies were issued to staff.

Distribution of the package was based on payroll information for staff from the former Department for Social Security, and the most recent "census" information for staff from the former Employment Service.

This year's pay offer to staff was particularly significant because it was the first since the Department was formed in 2001, where staff were brought together from the former DSS, Employment Services and Department for Education and Employment. For the past year different terms and conditions have applied within the Department.

The offer package provided staff with comprehensive details on a raft of harmonised changes to their terms and conditions, pay structure and conditions of employment for staff in the Department for Work and Pensions. The proposed changes to terms and conditions contained in the 2002 pay offer were complex and contractual. It was therefore, essential that all staff had the opportunity to read, understand and ask questions about the changes. The only way to ensure that this was achieved was to distribute personal copies of the information package to all staff in the Department.

Jobcentres (Wiltshire)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many employees there are broken down by function at (a) Avon House Jobcentre, Salisbury, (b) Amesbury Jobcentre and (c) Summerlock House, Salisbury; and what plans he has to change the number of jobs, broken down by function, at each location. [80301]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The number of staff and the functions they perform in the two jobcentres are as follows:

	Salisbury Jobcentre	Amesbury Jobcentre
Employer Services	1	1
Personal Advisers	7	1
Customer Services	9	2
Jobseeker's Allowance claims processing	6	0
Programme Centre	2	0
Management and Office services	1	1
Total	26	5

In the Summerlock House Social Security Office the staff deployment is as follows:

Customer Services	7
Income Support claims processing	8
Incapacity Benefit claims processing	10
Home visiting	2
Management and Office services	5
Counter Fraud Investigation Service	4
Minimum Income Guarantee claims processing	2
Retirement Pension claims processing	19
Total	57

There are no plans to make significant changes to job functions in the short term. In the longer term the migration of existing Jobcentres and Social Security Offices into fully integrated Jobcentre Plus offices and the development of The Pensions Service may lead to changes in job functions in order to deliver improved services to customers.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many of his staff at (a) Avon House Jobcentre, Salisbury, (b) Amesbury Jobcentre and (c) Summerlock House, Salisbury were (i) threatened, (ii) verbally abused and (iii) physically assaulted in 2001; on how many occasions the police were called; and how many prosecutions followed. [80300]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The number of incidents recorded during 2001 was as follows:

Office Name	Verbally Abused	Threatened	Actual Physical Assaults	Number of times the Police were asked to attend	Number of prosecutions
Avon House Salisbury	11	7	3	3	0
Summerlock House Salisbury	3	1	1	0	0

Whilst clearly unacceptable, the physical assaults that occurred were minor incidents in which no member of staff sustained serious injuries.

Winter Fuel Payments

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what the cost would be of extending winter fuel payments to those families who receive disability living allowance. [78645]

Maria Eagle: We estimate that the cost of extending Winter Fuel Payments to people under 60 who are receiving any rate of Disability Living Allowance would be around £270 million a year.

Notes:

Based on the 2000–2001 Family Resources Survey and data taken from DWP administrative records for November 2001 and May 2002.

Assumes that the payment is made to claimants in receipt of any rate of DLA who are aged under 60.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, if the departmental computer error affecting the entitlement to the winter fuel payment of residents in separate tenement flats at the same street number has been rectified. [80083]

Mr. McCartney: It is not a question of a computer error but one of how we determine the number of eligible occupants of tenement flats in Scotland. This year, to ensure that the correct Winter Fuel Payments are made to people living in tenements in Scotland, staff have clerically intervened in the process.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, when he expects pensioners to receive the winter fuel allowance this winter. [80089]

Mr. McCartney: The first payments were issued on 4 November, and payments will continue to be sent out over the next few weeks. The vast majority of eligible people, including those who receive payments automatically, will receive their payment before Christmas.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how much money has been paid as winter fuel allowance to UK citizens living abroad since the allowance was introduced. [79156]

Mr. McCartney: To date, we have paid Winter Fuel Payments totalling £154,200 to 2,040 eligible people who are now living in an European Economic Area country other than the UK.

Pensions (Employer Contributions)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many employees with personal pension plans receive an employer contribution into their pension of (a) 0 (b) less than 3 per cent. (c) 3 to 3.9 per cent., (d) 4 to 4.9 per cent., (e) 5 to 5.9 per cent., (f) 6 to 6.9 per cent., (g) 7 to 9.9 per cent. and (h) 10 per cent. or higher (i) in total and (ii) broken down by (A) industry group (B) whether in the public or private sector and (C) employer size. [79959]

Mr. McCartney: The data are not available in the form requested. However, the Employers Pension Provision Survey 2000, the fourth in a series commissioned by the Department for Work and Pensions, examined different types of pension arrangements in the private sector. The survey includes information on the proportion of employers who contribute to employees' personal pensions, who provide access to group personal pensions and the contribution rates that such employers make.

A copy of the report, entitled "Employers Pension Provision Survey 2000" by Alison Smith and Stephen McKay, Department for Work and Pensions Research Report No. 163 is available in the Library.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many employees in defined benefit occupational pension schemes receive an employer contribution into their pension of (a) 0, (b) less than 3 per cent., (c) 3 to 3.9 per cent., (d) 4 to 4.9 per cent., (e) 5 to 5.9 per cent., (f) 6 to 6.9 per cent., (g) 7 to 9.9 per cent., and (h) 10 per cent. or higher (i) in total and (ii) broken down by (A) industry group, (B) whether in the public or private sector and (C) employer size; [79957]

(2) how many employees in defined contribution occupational pension schemes receive an employer contribution into their pension of (a) 0, (b) less than 3 per cent., (c) 3 to 3.9 per cent., (d) 4 to 4.9 per cent., (e) 5 to 5.9 per cent., (f) 6 to 6.9 per cent. (g) 7 to 9.9 per cent. and (h) 10 per cent. or higher (i) in total and (ii) broken down by (A) industry group (B) whether in the public or private sector and (C) employer size. [79958]

Mr. McCartney: Information on contributions to defined contribution occupational pension schemes and deferred benefit occupational pension scheme was collected as part of the Government Actuary Department's Occupational Pension Scheme Survey 2000, preliminary results from which were published recently.

A full breakdown of results in the form requested not available at this time. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible with a full breakdown of the results and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Recruitment (Over-50s)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what percentage of new recruits to his Department in the past two years were aged 50 and over. [79300]

Mr. McCartney: The complete information requested is not readily available. Such information as is available is in the table.

Supported Employment

Valerie Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which disability-specific national programmes his Department is funding for supported employment; and what plans he has to fund a national supported employment programme for people with autism and Asperger Syndrome. [77282]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: WORKSTEP is a national supported employment programme for disabled people who have complex barriers to finding and keeping work. The programme is not specific to any one disability but instead is designed to help all disabled people meeting the criteria to work in a supportive environment and, where possible, to progress in mainstream employment.

In addition, Disability Employment Advisers based in Jobcentres work with local employers to place people into jobs, making use of other specialist programmes such as Access to Work where necessary. These arrangements have enabled people with many different disability-related barriers to work, including those with autism and Asperger syndrome, to move successfully into jobs.

Stakeholder Pensions

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, if he will make a statement on the take up of stakeholder pensions. [78222]

Mr. McCartney: Figures from the Association of British Insurers (ABI) show that up to the end of June 2002 1,011,934 stakeholder pensions had been sold. A detailed breakdown of sales will not be available until next year. Sales of over a million in their first 15 months on the market represents a very encouraging start.

In addition the ABI figures show that 330,296 employers had designated a scheme for their workforce. This means more people have the chance to save for a decent income in retirement through the workplace.

The ABI said that stakeholder pensions have also had a wider beneficial effect on pension provision by helping to increase the size of the overall pensions market. Stakeholder pensions have driven down other personal pension charges, some employers have widened access to their occupational pension schemes and other employers have set up group personal pensions with an employer contribution.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, on how many occasions between 31 March 2001 and 31 March 2002 (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental special advisers have travelled abroad in an official capacity; what places were visited; and how much each visit cost. [80359]

Mr. McCartney: None.

Public Consultations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what public consultations have been commenced by his Department in each month since 10 June; and what the (a) start date (b) closing date and (c) website address of each were. [80277]

Mr. McCartney: Since 10 June 2002 the Department for Work and Pensions has commenced one public consultation entitled the Social Security Advisory Committee Review.

(a) 16–10–02

(b) 08–01–03

(c) http://www.dwp.gov.uk/consultations/2002/index.htm

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer of 28 October 2002, Official Report, column 632W, on post offices, what alternative methods he is assessing to pay benefit recipients who cannot be paid directly into an account. [79925]

Malcolm Wicks: Work is currently underway to identify an alternative for those people who cannot be paid directly into an account. We will ensure that the method introduced will be secure, efficient and available from outlets including Post Offices.

Jobcentre Plus Staff (Assaults)

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the latest quarterly figures are for incidents of violence against staff in Job Centre Plus offices. [79070]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding reply 4 November 2002]: We estimate that during the period July to September 2002 over 10 million callers visited Jobcentre Plus offices. The number of recorded assaults (excluding incidents of verbal abuse) in Jobcentre Plus offices during this period are shown in the table. The figures show a decrease on the previous quarter's statistics.

	Actual Assaults	Attempted Assaults
April to June 2002	92	191
July to September 2002	86	154

These figures include all offices within the Jobcentre Plus network including Jobcentres, Social Security Offices and newly integrated Jobcentre Plus Offices.

Outset Ltd

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what process he went through to satisfy himself of the solvency and fitness for purpose of the company Outset Ltd before it was contracted to deliver services to disabled people in the Bedfordshire area under New Deal; whether he has investigated its liquidation; and whether he intends to compensate disabled people who may have suffered loss through its failure. [79256]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding reply 4 November 2002]: In line with standard procurement processes, an assessment of the legal status and financial capacity of Outset Limited was made prior to the awarding of a contract. The information provided by Outset was assessed by a panel comprising a range of officials and external stakeholders, including professionally qualified procurement staff, qualified accountancy staff and representatives of disability organisations. The process was audited by independent consultants.

It is not within this Department's remit to investigate the company's liquidation, although Jobcentre Plus officials have been in discussion with the Official Receiver regarding its effect on the New Deal for Disabled People.

Those people registered for New Deal help with Outset have been offered alternative provision that fully replaces the support that they were formerly receiving. In addition, officials are also addressing, on an individual basis as they are raised, concerns of those who were receiving other forms of provision delivered by Outset.

Pensioner Poverty

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what assessment he has made of projected pensioner poverty. [79766]

Mr. McCartney: We are committed to tackling poverty and social exclusion among older people. The Government are spending an extra £6 billion a year in real terms on pensioners as a result of policies introduced since 1997. This includes £2½ billion more on the poorest third of pensioners.

Our annual Opportunity for all reports monitor progress against a range of indicators of the many different aspects of poverty and social exclusion affecting older peoples' lives.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what the cost would be of extending the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme to Families with disabled children. [78646]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

To qualify for a grant under the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme, now marketed as Warm Front Team, the householder or their spouse must be in receipt of a qualifying income or disability related benefit. Householders in Receipt of the Disability Living Allowance are currently entitled to assistance up to the value of £1500. There are currently over 241,000 recipients of Disability Living Allowance aged under 16. If Warm Front was extended to include this group, allowing for a 100 per cent. take up the extra cost to the scheme would be over £361 million.

Warm Front is aimed at householders on low income. We believe that receipt of benefit is the best mechanism with which to assess the ability of the householder or their spouse to be able to afford to keep their home warm at a reasonable cost. We realise that this is a difficult issue, whatever the cut-off point, there will always be those who just miss out, but we must take a decision in order to ensure the most effective possible use of the available resources.

Radiation Exposure

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Works and Pension, what the maximum permitted levels of radiation exposure are for (a) workers in the nuclear industry and (b) members of the public; and how many times these have been exceeded in each of the last 20 years. [77643]

Mr. Wilson: I have been asked to reply.

The Ionising Radiations Regulations 1999 (IRR99) set the limit on effective dose for radiation exposure of any employee of 18 years and above as 20 millisieverts (mSv) in any calendar year. The limit on effective dose for radiation exposure of any member of the public is 1 millisievert in any calendar year.

IRR99 came into force on 1 January 2000. The previous annual limits were set out in the Ionising Radiation Regulations 1985 (IRR85) that came into force on 1 January 1986, and were 50 millisieverts for employees and 5 millisieverts for members of the public.

The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) does not hold details in a readily accessible form of the number of cases where it has been notified that the statutory limits have been exceeded in respect of all nuclear workers. The following data have been drawn from the HSE's national database of occupational exposure to ionising radiation—the Central Index of Dose Information (CIDI).

Year	Number Of Cases Greater Than 50mSv Under IRR85
1986	1
1987	2
1988	1
1989	3
1990	1
1991	0
1992	0
1993	0
1994	0
1995	2
1996	1
1997	0

Year	Number Of Cases Greater Than 50mSv Under IRR85
1998	0
1999	0
	Number of cases greater than 20mSv under IRR99
2001	0

The database started in 1986 and its main purpose is to provide a continuous record throughout the lifetime for employees who, at the same time in their working lives, have been designated by their employer(s) as "classified person" under IRR99 or IRR85.

Blind/Partially Sighted People

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what percentage of (a) blind and (b) partially sighted people in each of the nations of the UK are unemployed. [79763]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: There is no central register of people who are clinically blind or partially sighted. However, some information on the number of people reporting a visual impairment is available from the Labour Force Survey. The available information is in the table.

People Of Working Age Who Report That They Have Difficulty In Seeing Percentage Not In Employment

England	62
Wales	66
Scotland	67
Northern Ireland	*
United Kingdom	63

Notes:
1. Percentages are calculated from the Spring 2002 Labour Force Survey.
2. The data do not include respondents whose eyesight problems are effectively compensated for by wearing glasses or contact lenses. However, the LFS may overstate the numbers because some of those who identify difficulty in seeing would not necessarily be diagnosed as blind or partially sighted.
3. The term "not in employment" includes people who are not actively seeking work as well as those who are covered by the International Labour Organisation (ILO) definition of unemployment. The ILO unemployment rates for people with visual impairments are only available for England and the UK because of small sample sizes.

Payment Methods

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Harwich (Mr. Henderson) of 21 October 2004 Official Report, column 14, on the Universal Bank, what alternative arrangements he will put in place for those people who will not be able to use the PIN number associated with a Post Office card account. [78076]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Northavon (Mr. Webb) on 28 October 2002, Official Report, column 652W.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which benefits he intends to transfer from cash payments to direct bank transactions in April 2003; and of these (a) what proportion of recipients he expects will opt to continue receiving payments in cash and (b) what saving his Department will make in the cost of making payments. [79414]

Malcolm Wicks: From April 2003 the normal method of payment for benefits and pensions will be direct into bank and building society accounts (including the Post Office card account).

Customers will be able to access their cash at banks/ building societies and Post Office Branches.

Even where a customer is paid directly into an account, they can still collect their cash at post office branches, either through existing network banking arrangements between Post Office Ltd and several banks or, from 2003, through universal banking services at post offices.

On costs, I refer the hon. Member to the Written Answer I gave the hon. Member for Twickenham (Dr. Cable) on Monday 22 July 2002, Official Report, column 806W.

Income Support

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, whether it is possible for somebody to become financially worse off as a consequence of moving from a position of receiving income support and housing benefit and council tax benefit to a position of receiving incapacity benefit with the right to put a claim in for housing benefit and council tax benefit. [77085]

Malcolm Wicks: Where a person is not in receipt of Income Support or income-based Jobseeker's Allowance, entitlement to Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit is assessed by comparing a person's net income with an amount which is broadly similar to what they would receive on either Income Support or income-based Jobseeker's Allowance. For each pound that their income exceeds that level, the amount of benefit payable is reduced by fixed tapers of 65 pence for Housing Benefit and 20 pence for Council Tax Benefit. As a consequence people will generally see an improvement in their overall financial position.

Anti-fraud Strategy

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many staff are employed by Jobcentre Plus on anti-fraud work; and how many people were employed in total on this work in the two predecessor departments. [74846]

Malcolm Wicks: The overall aim of the Department's anti-fraud strategy is to have a benefit system, which is secure from first claim to final payment. The implementation of this strategy means that an anti-fraud focus is integral to the work of all staff in the Department, as is dealing with the wider agenda of error and incorrectness in benefit payments.

When the Department for Work and Pensions was established, the Employment Service, which was an Agency of the former Department for Education and Employment, did not have any staff dealing specifically with benefit fraud.

The information currently available suggests that, over recent years, around 5,000 staff have been employed by the Department and its agencies in work to investigate suspicions of fraud. However, taking account of changes in data collection measures over time and the integration of investigators more fully with frontline staff, it is clear to me we need to improve the validity of and reliability of year on year comparisons, and I have asked the Department to undertake further work on this. I have concluded that it is not possible to make valid comparisons between figures year-on-year.

I have therefore asked the Department to undertake a review to improve the consistency of centrally collected information for the future.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the rate of staff turnover in each of the last three years in (a) benefit fraud inspection work and (b) his Department as a whole. [74847]

Malcolm Wicks: The overall aim of the Department's anti-fraud strategy is to have a benefit system which is secure from first claim to final payment. The implementation of this strategy means that an anti-fraud focus is integral to the work of all staff in the Department, as is dealing with the wider agenda of error and incorrectness in benefit payments.

The information currently available suggests that, throughout the period, around 5,000 staff have been employed by the Department and its agencies in work to investigate suspicions of fraud. However, on examination, it is clear that data on the number of staff is not consistent as data collection measures have changed over time and as the deployment of investigators has become more fully integrated with front line staff. I have concluded that it is not possible to make valid compariaons between the figures year-on year.

I have therefore asked the Department to undertake a review to improve the consistency of centrally collected information for the future.

The following table provides information available on the total numbers of permanent staff and numbers of leavers in the last three years, for the areas that now come under the Department for Work and Pensions.

Year (1 April to 31 March)	Permanent Staff	Leavers
1999–2000	118,926	Insufficient data held
2000–2001	126,942	9,642
2001–2002	134,247	5,692

Employers' Liability Insurance

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what estimate he has made of the number of companies conducting business without employers' liability insurance. [75850]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Social Fund

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will review the rules that require family members not on qualifying benefits to pay for funerals, rather than receiving help from the Social Fund; [79179]

(2) if he will increase the amount of grant available for funeral expenses in the funeral payment from the Social Fund; [79180]

(3) if he will review the operation of the rules that require the liability of family members not on a qualifying benefit to be considered when application for a funeral grant is made. [79211]

Malcolm Wicks: The Social Fund targets help on people with the lowest incomes who qualify for income-related benefits.

Social Fund funeral payments cover the cost of necessary charges including fees levied by burial authorities and crematoria. In addition, up to £600 is allowed for other funeral expenses. This gives the person arranging the funeral the freedom to select the items or services they consider appropriate.

We have no plans to change these arrangements, but we keep the level of support provided with funeral costs under review.

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will make a statement on his policy on the future availability of Social Fund loans and their extension to a wider group of people on low incomes, with particular reference to (a) providing support to families with children and (b) combating social exclusion; [68221]

(2) if he will ensure that the Social Fund continue to provide (a) loans and (b) an improved system of grants; [79206]

(3) if he will review the arrangements for access to Crisis Loans; [79208]

(4) if he will abolish the qualification period of 26 weeks for Budgeting Loans; [79213]

(5) if he will change the eligibility criteria to enable people whose sole income is contributory benefit such as incapacity benefit or contribution based jobseeker's allowance to apply for help from both the discretionary and the regulated Social Fund. [79215]

Malcolm Wicks: Our priority is to tackle poverty and combat social exclusion by helping those who are able into work and making work pay, and increasing support for the most vulnerable members of society: children, pensioners, and disabled people.

The Social Fund supports that strategy by giving help to millions of people on low incomes for a variety of intermittent expenses. Social Fund help is targeted on the neediest people in our society.

Access to a Crisis Loan is available to anyone in an emergency or as a consequence of a disaster where there is no other means of preventing serious damage or serious risk to their health or safety or that of their family. There is no requirement for a Crisis Loan applicant to be receiving an income-related benefit, but any income or capital they have will be taken into account.

Over 1 million Budgeting Loans were provided to people last year. We believe it is right that there should be a waiting period before these loans become available and that six months is a reasonable period for people to rely on their own resources before turning to the state.

We keep all aspects of the Fund under review.

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will change the eligibility criteria to allow people who qualify for the maximum child credit and working tax credit to apply for help from both the discretionary and the regulated Social Fund. [79178]

Malcolm Wicks: With the introduction of the New Tax Credits from April 2003, anyone who receives the Child Tax Credit at the maximum rate or any other rate greater than the family element, or the Working Tax Credit where a disabled worker is included in the assessment, will qualify for Sure Start Maternity Grants and Funeral Payments from the regulated Social Fund, provided that all of the other eligibility criteria are met.

Patsy Calton: To ask the the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, if he will ensure that from April 2003, people who qualify for maximum child credit and/or who qualify for Working Tax Credit are eligible to apply for grants from the regulated Social Fund, with particular reference to (a) Sure Start Maternity Grants and (b) Funeral Grants. [79207]

Malcolm Wicks: From April 2003, Sure Start Maternity Grants and Funeral Payments will be payable to families receiving Income Support, income-based Jobseeker's Allowance, Child Tax Credit at the maximum rate or any other rate greater than the family element, or Working Tax Credit where a disabled worker is included in the assessment.

Crisis Loans

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will review the arrangements for the granting and collection of Crisis Loans, with particular reference to accessibility in rural areas. [79181]

Malcolm Wicks: We believe that the current arrangements are sufficiently flexible to support a good standard of delivery to customers, regardless of their location.

Budgeting Loans

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will ensure that regular statements are issued showing the outstanding balance on any budgeting loan; [79218]

(2) if he will amend the repayment formulae to allow the option of more modest repayment rates; [79219]

(3) if he will (a) increase the maximum possible budgeting loan and (b) review the treatment of outstanding loans. [79220]

Malcolm Wicks: We have improved the standard of information given to applicants to explain Budgeting Loan decisions. In addition to the standard letter of notification, we now provide a calculation sheet which sets out, in clear stages, how the final decision has been reached.

The scheme already provides for anyone who finds the repayments terms offered unacceptable to opt for a lower size of loan and lower repayments. In addition, anyone who has difficulty maintaining repayments can ask for the repayment period to be extended so that weekly repayments are reduced to a more manageable level.

The £1000 limit on total debt to the Social Fund has been set to ensure access to a reasonable and manageable level of credit which recognises the possible needs of people on Income Support and income-based Jobseeker's Allowance. It means that debt owed to the Social Fund is kept to a manageable level. Keeping the limit at its present level means repayment deductions from benefit can be set at a reasonable level.

We continue to keep all elements of the Social Fund under review to see whether further improvements can be made to its operation and to ensure that the Fund supports our wider welfare reforms.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Organised Crime

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what the membership is of the Organised Crime Task Force in Northern Ireland. [79416]

Jane Kennedy: The Organised Crime Task Force (OCTF), which I chair, is a Government led multi-agency initiative to tackle organised crime. It is made up of the Northern Ireland Office, Police Service of Northern Ireland, Her Majesty's Customs & Excise, National Criminal Intelligence Service, Home Office and the Inland Revenue. The Task Force is supported by a number of sub groups and expert groups comprising of other Government departments and agencies with a role to play in tackling organised crime including the Health and Safety Executive, Trading Standards Services and the Environment and Heritage Service

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what funds have been allocated specifically for tackling organised crime in Northern Ireland. [79417]

Jane Kennedy: It is for the law enforcement agencies to decide what resources should be allocated to tackling organised crime effectively in order to deliver their operational strategies.

The Organised Crime Task Force seeks to bring the Agencies together in a way that respects their independence and autonomy and allows them to share information and agree priorities. This enables the agencies to agree shared priorities at a senior level and to commit resources and assistance to each other.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what the terms and conditions are of the appointment of Professor Ronald Goldstock as an adviser to the Secretary of State on organised crime; and what his remuneration is. [79415]

Jane Kennedy: The Secretary of State appointed Professor Goldstock, ex-director of the New York State Organised Crime Task Force, in March 2002 to act as an independent expert and to provide an international perspective on the problem of organised crime in Northern Ireland.

He has been asked to report to the Secretary of State, with recommendations for tackling the problem and, in particular, to formulate proposals for securing cross-community support for action, drawing on international experience.

His remuneration is 1,000US dollars per diem.

Academic Selection

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, Pursuant to the answer of the Minister of State on 28 October, Official Report, column 513W, on the 11-plus, on what evidence he bases the Government's view on the ending of academic selection and the extent of opposition to this proposal. [79742]

Jane Kennedy: The responses to the consultation and the extent of support for and opposition to academic selection and the other proposals in the Burns Report are set out in a Report on the Consultation published on 8 October by the Department of Education for Northern Ireland. Copies of the Report are being placed in the Library.

No decisions have been taken on academic selection and my officials will be discussing the responses to consultation with our educational partners and representatives of parents over the coming weeks.

Parades Commission

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, when he received the Quigley review of the operation of the Parades Commission; when he transmitted the report to the (a) Government of Ireland, (b) Northern Ireland political parties, (c) members of the Parades Commission, (d) Loyal Orders and other marching organisations and (e) principal residents' group; what the recommendations of the report are; and when he plans to put it into the public domain. [78985]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Sir George Quigley submitted his report on 27 September 2002. It has now been printed and copies have been placed in the Library. I have circulated the report today and intend to allow a period of consultation up to the end of January next year. I will be seeking a broad cross-section of opinion, including from those parties referred to by my hon. Friend.

Blind/Partially Sighted People

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland suffer from (a) serious sight loss and (b) blindness. [79424]

Desmond Browne: Information is not available in the form requested.

Information collected by the Department from Health and Social Services Trusts showed that, at the end of March 2002, there were around 2,200 people in Northern Ireland registered as visually impaired.

During the financial year 2001-2002, there were 2,604 blind and 3,283 partially sighted people recorded by Trusts as being in contact with Social Services personnel.

The numbers of registrations and the numbers of people in contact with Social Services are underestimates of the total number of people with a visual impairment, as not all such people are registered or in regular contact with Social Services.

General Practice

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what (a) area is covered by and (b) the greatest travelling time between doctor and patient is in each general practice out of hours co-operative in Northern Ireland. [79781]

Desmond Browne: The areas covered by each general practice out-of-hours co-operative in the four Health and Social Services Boards is shown in the table below. Also shown is the estimated greatest travelling time between patient and Co-operative.

Eastern Health and Social Services Board

Diabetes

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what action he is taking to increase screening for children and adults in cases where a family member has already been diagnosed as being diabetic. [80357]

Desmond Browne: No screening for diabetes in any children or adults takes place at present. The National Screening Committee, which is responsible for providing advice to Health Ministers on all aspects of screening policy, is presently developing proposals for research into the area of screening for type 2 diabetes among high-risk groups. The Committee has made a commitment to provide definitive advice on this topic to Health Department in 2005

European City of Culture

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what measures he proposes to advance the application of Belfast to be named European City of Culture. [78355]

Angela Smith: On 30 October 2002, the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport announced the shortlist of six cities which were successful in being nominated as Centres of Culture and will now be under consideration for the final nomination of European Capital of Culture 2008 in Spring 2003.

I regret that Belfast was not among the six cities shortlisted by the independent judging panel and therefore Belfast is no longer in competition for designation as European Capital of Culture in 2008.

Personal Care

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the report of the Inter-Departmental Group on Personal Care will be completed; when he expects to publish the report; and what public consultation he plans on its findings. [79439]

Desmond Browne: The Inter-Departmental Group's Report on Free Personal Care was forwarded to the First Minister and Deputy First Minister on Thursday 8 August 2002. Following discussion at the Executive on 12 August, Ministers asked for further work to be undertaken. That work has not yet been completed. In any event, it is not possible at this stage to give any indication about the timing or subsequent handling of the report, since this is a matter which should be determined by the Executive.

Castlereagh Break-in

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, how many police officers have had to move home in response to the security threat arising from the break-in at Castlereagh Police Station; and what has been the cost to the taxpayer. [76152]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The PSNI has, to date, processed 92 SPED applications in relation to the break-in at Castlereagh. Information on cost for specific applications is not available. Under the SPED Scheme, a Chief Constable's certificate is sufficient for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive to invoke the scheme, without the need for further background as to the individual or the actual incident concerned. However I can confirm that the total number of SPED applications accepted since April this year is 169 and the cost to date is £17.7m.

Business Manifesto

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what assessment he has made of the Business Manifesto issued by the Confederation of British Industry for Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [77600]

Mr. Pearson: I welcome this Business Manifesto, which sets out how the CBI sees the important interaction between the public and private sectors to achieve a better economic future. The Manifesto addresses many of the issues which are of critical importance to the development of the Northern Ireland economy and which relate closely to the strategic priorities developed by the Economic Development Forum. I look forward, with my ministerial colleagues, to exploring the proposals contained in the Manifesto.

Law and Order Task Force

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what the terms of reference are of the Law and Order Task Force; what its membership is; how frequently and where it will meet; what resources have been made available to it over the next two years; what body will provide its secretariat and staff; and what decisions the Task Force has made. [74795]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The terms of reference for the Law and Order Action Group are

"to monitor the effectiveness and co-ordination of action to combat crime and reinforce law and order in Northern Ireland."

The Group will help support the independent operational agencies in their co-ordinated approach to tackling all aspects of crime. I chair the Group. The other members are Jane Kennedy, Des Browne, Lord Goldsmith, Rosie Winterton and their advisers. The Chief Constable and the Director of Public Prosecutions attended the first meeting on 24 September and will be invited to attend future meetings. The Group will meet on a regular basis, the location to be decided as appropriate for each meeting. No specific resources have been allocated to the Group. The Northern Ireland Office provides the Secretariat. The Group is taking a broad look at the crime spectrum; public order issues were discussed at the first meeting.

European Court Cases

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, if he will place in the Library a copy of the paper delivered on 8 October to the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe in relation to the cases of Jordan, McKerr, Kelly and Others v. UK and Shanaghan v. UK; and it he will list the members of the group of officials established to consider the Government response to these cases. [78146]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Today, I have placed in the libraries of both Houses a copy of the package of measures sent to the Secretariat to the Council of Europe. On receipt of the judgements, an article 2 group was established to provide advice to Ministers on the judgements and the Government's response. The group consisted of Northern Ireland Office Officials and legal advisers, and representatives from FCO, MOD, Northern Ireland Court Service and the Attorney General's Office. Representatives of the Police Service of Northern Ireland and the Department of the Director of Public Prosecutions attended meetings to provide advice as to any practical implications that arose.

Police Service

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what the cost was of organising and publicising the PSNI New Directions conference; what monies were expended on external consultancies and promoters; how many persons attended, broken down by sex and perceived community background; and if he will place the major speeches and papers from the conference in the Library. [78795]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The costs of the PSNI's conference ("New Directions: a human rights and racial equality focus on policing with ethnic minority communities") have not yet been finalised but it is anticipated that the final costs will be approximately £60,000.

About 230 delegates attended the conference which took place on 21 and 22 October, including my hon. friend the Member and Northern Ireland Office colleague, the member for Kilmarnock and Loudoun. Community background information was not sought from delegates but a list of the organisations invited to attend is below. From the register of attendance, the gender breakdown was approximately 50:50.

Key speakers at the conference included: Hugh Orde, Chief Constable, PSNI; Lord Herman Ouseley, former Chairman of the Commission for Racial Equality; Imran Khan, solicitor; Cressida Dick, Commander, Diversity Directorate in the Metropolitan police; Joe Stewart, head of human resources for the PSNI; Ravi Chand, President of the National Black Police Association; Maqsood Ahmed, Director of Diversity for the National Probation Service; Zelda Holtzman, Deputy Provincial Commissioner of the Western Cape, South Africa; and Sam Kinkaid, Assistant Chief Constable in the PSNI with responsibility for human rights issues.

Representatives from all district command units in the PSNI were invited to attend the conference as well as representatives of the following groups:

Al-Nisa Association of Northern Ireland
Amnesty International
An Garda Síochána
Belfast Islamic Centre
Belfast Travellers Education and Development Group
Belfast Travellers Support Group
British Irish Rights Watch
Chinese Community Association
Chinese Welfare Association
Committee on the Administration of Justice
Craigavon Vietnamese Club
Concept 11
Council of Europe
Director of Public Prosecutions

Equality Commission of Northern Ireland
Indian Community Centre
Mediation Northern Ireland
Mid-Ulster Group
Multi-cultural Resource Centre
National Black Police Association
Northern Ireland African Cultural Centre
Northern Ireland Association for the Care and Resettlement of Offenders
Northern Ireland Council for Ethnic Minorities
Northern Ireland Council for Refugees and Asylum Seekers
Northern Ireland Council for Voluntary Action
Northern Ireland Filipino Association
Northern Ireland Gay Rights
Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission
Northern Ireland Office
Northern Ireland Pakistani Association
Northern Ireland Policing Board
Northern Ireland Victim Supp
Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister—Racial Equality Unit
Office of the Oversight Commission
Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland
Traveller Movement of Northern Ireland
Wah-Hip Chinese Community Association
Women of the World

A conference report is being compiled which will contain any materials submitted by speakers and participants. This will be made available on the PSNI website in due course and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what consultancy fees (a) the Policing Board, (b) The RUC/PSNI and (c) the Northern Ireland Office have paid in (i) 2000 and (ii) 2001 and to which companies; what the purpose was of the consultancy contracts; and what estimates he has made of consultancy fees for the next two financial years. [78145]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I will write to my hon. Friend. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Parliamentary Boundary Commission

Mr. Tom Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will announce the name of the newly appointed member of the Northern Ireland Parliamentary Boundary Commission. [80099]

Paul Murphy: I am pleased to announce that I have recently issued a Warrant of Appointment for the Northern Ireland Parliamentary Boundary Commission to Mr.Richard Mackenzie, CB. The appointment will run until 29 October 2006

East Timor

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the creation of a UN International Tribunal to bring to justice the major perpetrators of crimes against humanity during Indonesia's occupation of East Timor; and what discussions her Department has had with (a) the UN, (b) the USA and (c) the Government of East Timor concerning the establishment of such a Tribunal. [78719]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have been asked to reply.

In February 2000, the United Nations Security Council accepted Indonesia's pledge to conduct its own enquiry and prosecute those responsible for crimes committed in East Timor in 1999. This led to the establishment of an Ad Hoc Tribunal on 14 March 2002. As it is still considering several of the cases it would be premature to push for an alternative justice mechanism now. If we judge that it has not delivered justice we will certainly consider the case for an international tribunal with our EU partners and others in the international community. Officials in Washington and Dili have already discussed the idea of an international tribunal with US and UN officials and representatives of the East Timorese government.

The East Timorese government with the assistance of the UN Special Crimes Unit is also investigating serious human rights violations that have taken place during the last 25 years. The East Timor Commission for Truth and Reconciliation which was established on 7 February 2002 is dealing with less serious violations.

Malawi

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the arrest and subsequent release of the leader of the opposition in Malawi; and what discussions she has had with the government of Malawi on the subject. [78679]

Mr. Rammell: I have been asked to reply.

The arrest on 20 October of Gwanda Chakuamba, President of the main opposition Malawi Congress Party, and three of his colleagues, followed the circulation of a letter purportedly detailing the ruling party's strategy on changing the Constitution to allow President Muluzi to run for a third term in office. Mr.Chakuamba was released by the court on bail the following day having been charged with libel, forgery and disseminating false information in connection with the letter.

The proposal for a third term has generated intense political debate in Malawi. We and other international partners have urged that there should be broad consultation on the issue and that it should be conducted in an atmosphere free from violence and intimidation.

Health and Education

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what proportion of the UK's overseas aid budget is allocated to a) basic health provision and b) education. [78073]

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what percentage of her Departments budget has been allocated to (a) basic healthcare and (b) primary education in each year since 1997. [76973]

Clare Short: Since 1997 my Department has committed over £870 million to support education and £1.5 billion to support health care in partner countries. This represents 13 per cent. and 24 per cent. respectively of bilateral commitments over the same period. Of this, over £700 million went to primary education and £1.3 billion to basic health care, representing 11 per cent. and 20 per cent. respectively of bilateral commitments.

These figures are based on the bilateral portfolio as a whole rather than annual allocations and could only be disaggregated at disproportionate cost. They do not include support for education and health provided through our multilateral contributions.

Rwanda/Uganda

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will make a statement on the outcome of the meeting between President Museveni and President Kagame in London last week. [76970]

Clare Short: President Museveni and President Kagame recommitted themselves and their Governments to the Understanding they signed last November in London on not interfering in each others' political and security affairs. They agreed to make more regular and effective use of the mechanisms that had been put in place to resolve differences and to avoid recourse to the use of the media. The UK agreed to continue to act as Third Party in this process.

Equally importantly Presidents Museveni and Kagame agreed to work together to achieve peace and stability in the region. They urged President Mbeki of South Africa, as Chairman of the African Union, to convene an urgent Regional Summit to call on all parties to fully implement the Pretoria and Luanda Peace Agreements.

Presidents Museveni and Kagame shared my deep concern at the situation in Burundi and agreed we should all work together, especially with the Governments of Tanzania and South Africa, to get a full cease fire and support the Transitional National Government under the Arusha Accords.

Water Supplies (Palestinian Territories)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what assessment her Department has made of the water security situation in the Palestinian Territories; and if she will make a statement. [78203]

Clare Short: Water has long been a major problem for rural Palestinian communities. The severe economic and social decline caused by closures and curfews has compounded the problem. Many villages without water networks are facing shortages, as water tankers cannot access villages, or people can no longer afford the escalating price of tankered water. The situation has been exacerbated by the recent Israeli ban on drilling for water in the West Bank. Households cope by going into debt, seeking alternative water sources (that are often not clean), and cutting back on consumption. All of these responses pose threats to family well-being. In conjunction with other donors, we are working with the Palestinian Water Authority, and a number of rural communities, to help improve water security. We are also supporting a study by PWA of the western aquifer water source, to assess its sustainable yield.

Lira Refugee Camp

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will make a statement on the overcrowding in the refugee camp in Lira, Uganda; what discussions her Department has had with non-governmental organisations working in the camp; what assessment her Department has made of the vulnerability of women as a result of the sleeping arrangements in the camp; how much aid her Department will give to Uganda in 2002–03; what plans her Department has to give aid to the refugee camp in Lira; and what assessment her Department has made of (a) starvation and (b) health levels of the refugees in the camp. [79541]

Clare Short: The circumstances faced by internally displaced people in Lira are of grave concern. We are monitoring the situation closely with international partners and the Government of Uganda, and are considering an appropriate response in the light of a detailed report recently issued from local NGOs.

The total DFID aid programme for Uganda for 2002–03 is scheduled to be £75 million. In response to the recent escalation in insecurity, DFID has committed £450,000 for humanitarian supplies for internally displaced persons in Northern Uganda.

Ageism

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what strategies her Department has to ensure that there is no ageism in recruitment and retention processes. [79296]

Clare Short: My Department's Equal Opportunities Policy Statement makes it clear that DFID does not permit discrimination on grounds of age in either its recruitment or any of its other personnel management processes.

The only age-related practice has been the operation of an age of retirement of 60—consistent with the normal retiring age specified in the Principal Civil Service Pensions Scheme and with the purposes of section 109(1)(a) (i) of the Employment Rights Act 1996. However, agreement has recently been reached that, with the exception of the Senior Civil Service, staff may, if they so wish, continue to serve until age 65, which will make that the normal retiring age for the purposes of the 1996 Act.

European Bank of Reconstruction and Development

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, what financial support her Department has given to the European Bank of Reconstruction and Development in each of the last five years; and what support her Department will provide in the next three years. [79151]

Clare Short: As a shareholder (8.5 per cent.) in the EBRD, the UK Government makes payments towards its capital subscription in the Bank.

As part of the General Capital Increase, agreed in 1996, my Department has made cash payments and issued promissory notes as detailed below:

	Cash Element	Promissory Notes
1998	Euro 9,582,000	Euro 14,373,281
1999	Euro 9,582,000	Euro 14,373,281
2000	Euro 9,582,000	Euro 14,373,281
2001	Euro 9,582,000	Euro 14,373,281
2002	Euro 9,582,000	Euro 14,373,281

Over the next three years the following payments will be made:

	Cash Element	Promissory Notes
2003	Euro 9,582,000	Euro 14,373,281
2004	Euro 9,582,000	Euro 14,373,281
2005	Euro 9,582,000	Euro 14,373,281

My Department has also provided grant funding to support EBRD's technical cooperation work. The EBRD has received the following contributions from DFID over the last five years:

1998—£1,100,000
1999—£300,000
2000—£950,000
2001—£1,690,125
2002—£899,000.

We have outstanding commitments of £1,813,000.

Intellectual Property Rights

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, if the Government will recommend extending TRIPS implementation deadlines for all developing countries. [78220]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply

The TRIPS Agreement lays down procedures for extending implementation deadlines for the Least Developed Countries (LDC). The general implementation deadline is 2005 but an extension to 2016 was agreed for pharmaceutical products at the WTO Ministerial Conference in Doha. There is no specific mechanism for extending TRIPS implementation deadlines for all developing countries.

The UK government works through the EU on issues relating to the TRIPS Agreement. The UK government supports the development of objective criteria to form the basis upon which extensions of TRIPS transition periods should be agreed. The UK government therefore supports the introduction into TRIPS of a mechanism for extending transition periods for individual developing countries.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Equal Pay

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister for Women, what assessment she has made of the impact of the Government's policies on reducing the disparities between men and women's pay. [78825]

Ms Hewitt: Since the Equal Pay Act was introduced in 1970, the pay gap has reduced from 37 per cent to 19 per cent. today. Action taken by the Government to close the pay gap is having a positive impact.

We are leading by example, through our commitment to equal pay reviews in the Civil Service. We are making it easier for women to get equal pay through changes in the Employment Act 2002. We are making it easier for employers to pay fairly through the work of the Fair Pay Champions and the Castle Awards. We are tackling the wider causes of the pay gap by helping mothers stay attached to the labour market, investing more resources in childcare, improving the skill levels of those already in the labour market and helping employers make the most of their female workforce.

HOME DEPARTMENT

War Memorials

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what steps he is taking to protect war memorials in England and Wales. [80103]

Hilary Benn: With assistance from Friends of War Memorials, the Imperial War Museum, English Heritage, and others, we are tomorrow publishing a code of practice on the preservation and management of war memorials. A copy of the text is being placed on the Home Office web site and is in the Library. A leaflet will be available shortly.

Race Equality

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, when he will publish the third edition of Race Equality in Public Services. [80104]

Beverley Hughes: I have today placed in the Library a copy of the document "Race Equality in Public Services". The publication shows a number of areas of general improvement in public service delivery and in representation of ethnic minorities in the public sector workforce.

Smoking (Public Places)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what plans he has to ban smoking in public places. [77808]

Ms Blears: I have been asked to reply.

The Government has no plans to ban smoking in public places. Instead, we want to work with businesses and others to achieve real change, highlighting and building on best practice. We have worked closely with the hospitality trade to develop a public places charter designed to provide customers with clear information on the type of smoking policy operating in a particular establishment and allow them to make an informed choice.

Specifically aimed at local action, the Department this year has provided project funding to local tobacco control alliances to tackle health inequalities and passive smoking. Local alliances are promoting smoke free areas in workplaces and public places. These projects will be evaluated and examples of good practice will be shared across the tobacco control alliance network.

Passports (Hong Kong)

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what representations he has received from Sir James Hodge concerning the status of BNOCO BDTC passports in Hong Kong. [78874]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has not received any representations from Sir James Hodge, HM Consul General in Hong Kong about the status of BN (0) passports in Hong Kong. Sir James, however, has received two approaches from the Indian Community on this subject.

Immigration Control

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what plans he has to improve immigration control to ensure that people coming into the United Kingdom do so in accordance with the Immigration Rules. [80101]

Beverley Hughes: The Government are firmly committed to ensuring that those who seek to migrate to the United Kingdom do so properly under the Immigration Rules, and that those who do not have such grounds are prevented from doing so.

Throughout this year there has been an increase in the number of Zimbabwe nationals who on arrival at UK ports are found to be inadmissible. Therefore, from 00.01 hours on Saturday 9 November we will require nationals of Zimbabwe to obtain visas to come to the United Kingdom. Zimbabwe nationals will also have to obtain a Direct Airside Transit Visa when they intend to remain airside while in transit through the United Kingdom.

To avoid any undue hardship for those who have already made their travel plans, we have agreed to the operation of the following grace period. From 00.01hours on 9 November to 23.59hours on 15 November, any Zimbabwe national who purchased their ticket on or before 7 November and is travelling to the UK on a direct journey from Zimbabwe, will not be refused entry solely on the basis of not holding a valid visa.

Engagements

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what plans he has to meet Governor Ridge, the Head of Homeland Security, on his visit to the United Kingdom, and if he will make a statement. [80102]

Mr. Blunkett: I met Governor Ridge and his staff yesterday and will have further meetings with them today for a discussion of the current terrorist threat and the measures we are both taking in response. To assist Governor Ridge, I have prepared a briefing paper on the UK dimension, a copy of which is available in the Library and on the website www.homeoffice.gov.uk/new.htm.

National Insurance Numbers

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, when he expects the Department of Work and Pensions to make progress in respect of delays in issuing national insurance numbers and consequent non-payment of housing benefit. [73689]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

In April 2001, the Department introduced an Enhanced National Insurance Number Process to provide more secure procedures for the allocation of national insurance numbers (NINOs) to adults living in the UK. These tighter controls combined with an increasing number of applications have regrettably led to delays in allocating permanent NINOs. Jobcentre Plus is addressing this through a national recovery plan implemented in April this year. We expect the backlog of applications to be fully cleared by March 2003.

However, the payment of Housing Benefit is not dependent on a customer having a NINO, as long as sufficient information and evidence of identity is provided for a NINO to be traced or allocated. Once the local authority is satisfied that this has been provided, and that all other conditions of entitlement have been met, Housing Benefit should be paid.

SCOTLAND

Firefighters' Strike

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what preparations she has made to ensure the safety and continuity of service to the public in the event of a firefighters' strike; and what the cost is to the Department of these actions. [77663]

Mrs. Liddell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my rt. hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and the Regions, on 28 October 2002, Official Report,columns 527W. The cost of providing emergency cover in Scotland is a matter for the Scottish Executive and will depend on the extent and nature of any industrial action.

Skills Migration

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will make a statement on the impact of regional gross domestic product disparity of skills migration. [79494]

Mrs. Liddell: The Government are working to increase wealth in all parts of the UK. Economic stability and sound public finances provide the foundation for rising prosperity.

The decision to migrate is affected by many factors that contribute to the quality of life.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) parliamentary questions and

(b) letters to her from hon. Members in this session remain unanswered, broken down by those which are (i) one month old, (ii) two months old, (iii) three months old, (iv) four months old and (v) over six months old. [79944]

Mrs. Liddell: No parliamentary questions or letters from hon. Members remain unanswered at the end of this session.

Unemployment

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimates her Department has made of the sectors which have contributed to the change in unemployment in Scotland in the last seven months. [80224]

Mrs. Liddell: Sectoral Labour Force Survey employment data are not seasonally adjusted. However, over the past year employment growth in Scotland has been driven by the Banking, Finance and Insurance sector and the Public Administration, Education and Health sector. In the last six months the main growth sectors have been Energy and Water and Agriculture and Fishing. However, performance in these sectors is affected by seasonal variation.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agriculture Regulations

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many regulations have been introduced in each year since 1992 related to agriculture. [80341]

Alun Michael: This information is not available in the form requested as it would involve looking at all legislation, both E.C. and UK, introduced by different Government Departments to consider whether it related to agriculture. Such information could only be assembled at disproportionate cost.

Focus Group Research

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what use she and her Department has made of focus group research since June 2001; if she will identify for each research project the topics covered, the person or organisation carrying out the research, and the total cost; and if she will publish the research on her Department's website. [74990]

Alun Michael: The Department makes use of focus group research to gain a better understanding of the public and stakeholder perception of many of its projects. Records of this type of research are not held centrally for Defra, its Executive Agencies or NDPBs and the cost of this research is normally subsumed within the total cost of a project. Further information and costs could only be obtained at a disproprtionate cost.

Below is a table of focus group research that can be identified from our records.

Research Project/ Topic	Organisation/Person	Web
Foot and Mouth Disease Focus Group Research	Andrew Irving Associates / COI	To be published on Defra Website
Public Perceptions Concerning Vaccination FMD Case Study	Professor Glynis M. Breakwell	Summary to be published on Defra Website

Community Rail Partnerships

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been spent by her Department on Community Rail partnerships in rural areas in (a) 2000–01, (b) 2001–02 and (c) 2002–03 to date. [78396]

Alun Michael: Community Rail Partnerships are supported financially through the Rural Transport Partnership programme, administered by the Countryside Agency on behalf of Defra. The Strategic Rail Authority also allocates £12,500 per annum to Community Rail Partnerships, currently up to September 2003. Annual spending by the Countryside Agency is shown below, which includes funding to the Association of Community Rail Partnerships for providing advice on improving platforms at rural railway stations.

	Countryside Agency
2000–2001	£48,629
2001–2002	£128,634
2002–2003	£79,081 (Spent up to October 31)

Rural Expenditure

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 28 October 2002, Official Report, column 587W, on rural expenditure, to the hon. member for SouthEast Cornwall (Mr. Breed), how much was (a) available, and (b) spent in (i) 2000–01, (b) 2001–02 and (iii) 2002–03 to date through the following, the (A) Aggregates Levy Sustainability Fund, (B) Local Heritage Initiative, (C) Support for Rights of Way,

(D) Doorstep Greens, (E) Millennium Greens and (F) Walking the Way to Health schemes, broken down by region. [79728]

Alun Michael: This information is not readily available. I have asked whether it can be collected and will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Organic Products

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what legislation governs the sale of products labelled as organic; and what bodies are responsible for (a) implementation of and (b) inspections related to such legislation. [79828]

Mr. Meacher: EC Council Regulation 2092/91 (as amended) sets out the labelling requirements, which must be used in organic farming and growing, and the inspection system, which must be put in place to ensure this.

All food sold as organic therefore must originate from growers, processors and importers who are registered with a body approved by the United Kingdom Register of Organic Food Standards (UKROFS) and subject to an annual inspection by these bodies.

The sale of products labelled as organic is governed in England by The Organic Products Regulations 2001 (2001 No. 430). Local Authorities have enforcement powers to implement these Regulations.

Farm Incomes

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average farm income was (a) in 1997 and (b) at the most recent available date in real terms. [76465]

Mr. Morley: Expressed in real terms at 2001–02 prices, average net farm income in England was £17,400 in 1997–98, and £11,400 in 2001–02. This last figure was a forecast made last January.

The final figure for 2001–02 will be published on 28 November and the forecast for 2002–03 will be released on 30 January.

Net farm income is defined as the return to the principal farmer and spouse for their labour and on the capital of the business

Dairy Farming

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what support and assistance she is providing to dairy farmers. [79226]

Mr. Morley: Annual EU expenditure on the Dairy CAP runs at almost 2 billion euro. Over the last year, mindful of the difficult market situation in the dairy sector, measures have taken in Brussels, backed by the Government, to increase support in the sector. For example, export refunds have been increased for skimmed milk powder, whole milk powder and butter to help encourage exports by making up the difference between Community and world prices. Despite this considerable expenditure, the farmgate price of milk remains below the level at which many dairy farmers can make the investment required to sustain their business. This clearly shows that the current Dairy CAP is failing farmers and is in need of reform.

We believe that a sustainable future for dairy farming is best secured through the recommendations in the Report of the Policy Commission on the Future of Food and Farming, together with the Milk Task Force Report. The Government has already announced measures to take forward some of the recommendations in the Policy Commission Report and we will publish our Sustainable Agriculture Strategy shortly. Furthermore, my noble friend Lord Whitty has convened a number of meetings of an informal dairy supply chain group, including representatives of dairy farmers, which has addressed issues of concern to those in the dairy supply chain that came out of these reports. This group is also likely to consider how the industry can best address any lessons that emerge from the ongoing KPMG study on the structure of the UK dairy sector and milk pricing, which was commissioned by the Milk Development Council.

Recycling

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research her Department has undertaken to investigate funding of doorstep recycling schemes. [79020]

Mr. Meacher: We have commissioned no specific research on this topic. However, the Strategy Unit of the Cabinet Office are currently reviewing waste issues, including the costs of delivering the diversion from landfill to which we are committed. This takes account of door-step recycling. We expect their report to be published very shortly.

Home Energy Efficiency

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment has been made by her Department of the cost and potential savings at a different initial levels of energy efficiency of property of the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme; [77590]

(2) what assessment has been made by her Department of the cost effectiveness of the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme in reducing fuel poverty amongst owner-occupiers and private sector tenants; [77586]

(3) what (a) assesment she has made, (b) discussions she has had or plans and (c) representations she has received in relation to the research conducted by the institute of Fiscal Studies on the cost-effectiveness of the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme; [77591]

(4) what assessment (a) has been made and (b) is planned of the effects of the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme on reducing fuel poverty (i) to date and (ii) under the fuel poverty strategy. [77589]

Mr. Meacher: The information requested will take time to collate and I will write to the hon. Member shortly. I will place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if she will estimate how many households would be taken out of fuel poverty if their properties were to be improved by the average SAP rating achieved by Warm Front and Warm Front plus assistance; [79512]

(2) what funding (a) was available for the Warm Front scheme in 2001–02 and 2002–03 and (b) will be available in 2003–04; how such funding relates to the annual budgets set out in the statement of 30 November 2000, Official Report, column 765; and if she will make a statement; [79508]

(3) what research has been carried out into the match between fuel poverty and eligibility for Warm Front assistance; and if she will make a statement; [79506]

(4) which of her Department's Public Service Agreements relate to fuel poverty reduction; and what progress has been made in achieving them; [79514]

(5) what assessment has been made of the administration costs incurred by the two Warm Front scheme managers in terms of (a): cost effectiveness and (b): efficiency programmes; [79510]

(6) in how many cases private sector landlords have been obliged to repay costs of heating and insulation installations as a result of properties that have bene fited from Warm Front no longer being occupied by eligible tenants; [79505]

(7) what progress has been made on establishing a common definition of fuel poverty for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland; [79513]

(8) what training is undertaken by individuals providing advice to households under the Warm Front scheme; and what formal qualification verifies that the adviser is a skilled and competent person; [79509]

(9) how many households are eligible for (a) Warm Front grants and (b) Warm Front plus grants; and by how many these numbers would be increased if there were to be 100 per cent take up of the qualifying benefits; [79507]

(10) what resources are expected to be expended on domestic energy efficiency improvements over the next three years through (a) the Warm Front Programme, (b) the Energy Efficiency Commitment, (c) capital budgets of local authorities and (d) Registered Social Landlord energy efficiency programmes. [79511]

Mr. Meacher: The information requested will take time to collate and I will write to my hon. Friend shortly. I will place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Abattoirs

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been spent by her Department on supporting small and medium sized abattoirs in (a) 2000–01, (b) 2001–02 and (c) 2002–03 to date, broken down by category of support. [78403]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 31 October 2002]: Information relating specifically to small and medium sized abattoirs is not readily available without incurring a disproportionate cost. However, actual spending and spending in the pipeline (2002–2003 to date) on the abattoir sector is as follows:

£'000s (to nearest thousand)

	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03 to date
Rural Enterprise Scheme	—	—	6
Processing and Marketing Grant	—	27	516
Agricultural Development Scheme	11	—	—

Radioactive Waste

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she received the latest annual report from the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee; what response she has made; and what plans she has to make changes to its membership. [80348]

Mr. Meacher: The Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee's 2002 annual report was supplied on 30 October 2002. No response has yet been made to it. The Managing Radioactive Waste Safely consultation paper considered possible changes in the Government's advisory machinery in the radioactive waste management area. Future membership needs of the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee have yet to be decided in light of the outcome of that review.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will publish the list of prospective sites for the disposal of radioactive waste drawn up by NIREX. [80097]

Mr. Meacher: There is no current list of prospective sites for the disposal of radioactive waste drawn up by NIREX. Any such historical list does not have any bearing at all on current considerations of disposal policy.

Weeds Act

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the amount of ragwort growing in the UK; and if she will propose amendments to the Weeds Act 1959 to include commercial equine activities. [80333]

Alun Michael: Defra has provided funding totalling £420,000 to underpin the preparation of The New Atlas of the British and Irish Flora. This divides the country into ten by ten kilometre squares and charts the distribution of plants, including Ragwort across Britain and Ireland. The New Atlas, which was published in September, shows that the general distribution of Ragwort has not changed since the 1962 Atlas was prepared.

Under the Weeds Act 1959, primary responsibility for weed control rests with the occupier of the land on which the weeds are growing. Where there is a risk that one of the five injurious weeds to which the Act applies might spread, the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs can serve a notice on the occupier of the land requiring action to be taken to prevent its spread. Under section 1 of the Act the authority to serve a notice applies to any land.

Defra will consider all complaints about the spread of weeds but in determining what action to take, priority is given to those complaints where there is a threat to farmland or land that is being used for the keeping of horses as part of a diversified farm business.

Parliamentary Questions/Correspondence

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) parliamentary questions and (b) letters to her from hon. Members in the current session remain unanswered, broken down by those which are (i) one month old, (ii) two months old, (iii) three months old, (iv) four months old and (v) over six months old. [79938]

Alun Michael: My Department anticipates answering all parliamentary questions that have been tabled during this session by the rising of the House today.

The Cabinet Office publishes a report to Parliament on an annual basis, setting out the volume of Members' correspondence received by Departments. The Report for 2001 was published on Friday 24 May, Official Report, column 677W. Copies of previous reports are available in the Library of the House.

The table below shows the number of letters in my department which had not received an answer at 5 November.

With a Received Date Between	Number
1 & 2 months	135
2 & 3 months	138
3 & 4 months	69
4 & 6 months	64
greater than 6 months	119

Plant Health Directive

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on Directive 2002/36/EC (OJ L116, 3 May 2002) as it relates to measures in the United Kingdom; and in what circumstances, as per Recital 8, (a) applicant states and (b) OCTs are included as European states for political definitions. [77249]

Mr. Meacher: Directive 2002/36/EC amends the technical annexes to the Plant Health Directive (2000/29/EC) to provide better protection against the introduction into, and spread within, the EC of a number of serious pests and disease of plants. Three new pests are added to the list of those which are prohibited. The scope of the plant passport regime, which governs movements of plants within the Community, and the scope of import controls on plants from outside the EC, are extended to reflect more accurately the wide range of host plants attacked by some listed pests. The amendment also strengthens measures to ensure that plants are free from Bemisia tabaci before entering the area recognised as a "protected zone" for that pest (which includes the whole of the UK). Directive 2002/36/EC will be implemented in the UK by amendments to the Plant Health (Great Britain) Order 1993 and the Plant Health (Northern Ireland) Order 1993.

Decisions on listing countries and regions in the Annexes of the Plant Health Directive are based on their plant health status. In the case of Malta and Cyprus the ranges of plant pests and diseases which occur in those countries are known to be similar to those of continental Europe. Conversely the EC Overseas Countries and Territories are treated separately from European territories, according to Article 1.1 of the Plant Health Directive, because of the different pest risks in those territories.

Agricultural Wages Board

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she plans to abolish the Agricultural Wages Board; and if she will make a statement. [79244]

Alun Michael: No.

ARBRE Energy

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her policy is towards the recovery of grants paid to ARBRE Energy in respect of the Eggborough power station. [76844]

Margaret Beckett: Under the Energy Crops Scheme, grants to plant crops are payable to growers. In the case of crops to provide fuel for the ARBRE power station, the Department was asked by the growers to make the payments to ARBRE Energy. The scheme requires that crops are used to produce energy, and the Department would be required to consider recovering grant from growers where crops are used for other purposes. It is too early to consider this as discussions on the future of ARBRE are continuing. In addition, if it does become necessary, the Department will work closely with growers to access the alternative energy markets which are being developed.

British Cattle Movement Service

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what investigation she has made of delays in sending out claims forms by the British Cattle Movement Service; and if she will make a statement. [79280]

Alun Michael: The British Cattle Movement service does not send out any claim forms. Its work does not involve directly the processing or payment of subsidy claims. The orgnisation deals only with the registration and tracing of cattle and when a fully correct birth registration is received, I understand that the organisation issues cattle passports the next day.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her most recent estimate is of annual emissions of carbon dioxide in the UK; and what the level was in 1997. [77461]

Mr. Meacher: The UK's carbon dioxide emissions in 2000, the last year for which confirmed data are available, were 152.1 million tonnes of carbon, compared to 152.5 million tonnes of carbon in 1997. A provisional estimate of carbon dioxide emissions for 2001, based on energy use, was published by the Department for Trade and Industry in March in its "Energy Trends" publication. This estimated that carbon dioxide emissions were 154.4 million tonnes of carbon, approximately 6 per cent. below the UK's 1990 baseline emissions of 164.4 million tonnes of carbon.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what future reductions in CO_2 emissions are expected by 2010 as a result of Government policy in (a) the domestic sector, (b) transport, (c) industrial sector, (d) the tertiary sector, (e) the public sector and (f) other changes. [77463]

Mr. Meacher: The Government have estimated that the additional policies and measures in the UK climate change programme, published in November 2000, could by 2010 reduce carbon dioxide emissions in the domestic sector by at least 7.8 million tonnes of carbon; in the transport sector by 5.7 million tonnes of carbon; in the business sector, which includes both the industry and commerce, by at least 4.5 million tonnes of carbon; and in the public sector by at least 0.5 million tonnes of carbon. Other policies, which includes afforestation and those policies that cut across sectors, could achieve further savings of 2.6 million tonnes of carbon.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will commission an independent analysis of the likelihood of current Government policies being able to deliver a 20 per cent. cut in CO_2 by 2010; and if she will make a statement. [77467]

Mr. Meacher: It is estimated that the quantified policies and measures identified in the climate change programme could lead to a reduction in carbon dioxide emissions of 19 per cent. below 1990 levels by 2010. Carbon savings, which have not been quantified, from additional policies in the programme, could help us achieve our domestic goal. There will be a formal review of the climate change programme in 2004, which will be an opportunity to assess the effectiveness of existing policies and, if necessary, to develop new ones.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what her assessment is of the change in carbon dioxide emissions that will result from households switching to digital television and the use of set-top boxes; [77475]

(2) what progress has been made (a) on the Government sustainability index on climate change and (b) towards the Government's domestic target for a 20 per cent. reduction in CO_2 emissions based on 1990 levels; and if she will make a statement. [77462]

Mr. Meacher: (a) The latest figures for the Headline Sustainable Development Indicator for Climate Change were published in a Defra Statistical Press Release on 28 March. Emissions of the 'basket' of six greenhouse gases covered by the Kyoto Protocol, weighted by global warming potential, fell by 13.2 per cent. between the 1990 base year and 2000, the last year for which confirmed data are available. There was no change between 1999 and 2000. The UK has a target under the Kyoto Protocol to reduce its greenhouse gas emissions by 12.5 per cent. below 1990 levels by 2008–12. We remain on course to achieve this target.

(b) A provisional estimate of carbon dioxide emissions for 2001, based on energy use, was published by the Department for Trade and Industry in March in its Energy Trends publication. This estimated that carbon dioxide emissions were 154.4 million tonnes of carbon, approximately 6 per cent. below the UK's 1990 baseline emissions of 164.4 million tonnes of carbon.

Cold Sector (Energy Efficiency)

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what Energy Efficiency Index targets have been set for the United Kingdom cold sector as part of the market transformation programme; and what role has been played by the Department in (a) setting and (b) meeting the targets. [77556]

Mr. Meacher: The Market Transformation Programme (MTP) does not itself set targets, but operating largely in the public domain, seeks to establish and maintain an informed consensus on the risks, potential and scope for achieving sustainable beneficial market changes over time (e.g. increased volume sales of energy efficient appliances or elimination of inefficient products by specified dates) and, in parallel, on the detailed policy measures and other actions necessary to achieve those changes, taking into account underlying trends, timing and wider issues. In that regard, my Department both sponsors and participates in MTP's open consultations on feasible market transformation targets and it seeks to negotiate integrated programmes of policy measures to meet them. These include, for example, EU directives to label and to set minimum standards for domestic refrigeration, voluntary agreements with industry on improvement targets, public domain product procurement information, the promotional programmes supported by the Energy Saving Trust and the Carbon Trust, including the Energy Efficiency Recommended scheme, the Energy Efficiency Commitment and Enhanced Capital Allowances.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) discussions she has had, (b) representations she has received and (c) meetings she has attended in relation to energy efficiency improvements by the cold sector. [77558]

Mr. Meacher: The Department has on-going dialogue with business and other stakeholders on the potential for energy savings in the cold sector and on the practical strategies and policy measures that could help deliver these. In particular, discussions have taken place and representations received from business, enforcement agencies and other EU member states under the aegis of the Energy Efficiency Partnership, the Market Transformation programme, and in response to formal consultations on such matters as EU mandatory energy labelling and voluntary industry agreements. Recently, my officials have attended meetings held by the Energy Saving Trust, the Market Transformation Programme, and by the European Commission.

Correspondence

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she intends to reply to the letter dated 4 March from the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan regarding his constituent, Mr. A. Rogers of Banff. [50074]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 17 April 2002]: I am sorry that the hon. Member has not yet received a response to his letter. I have asked that this be looked at as a matter or urgency so that I may reply shortly.

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will respond to the letter of the hon. Member for Hexham of 25 April, ref 168998. [65643]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 2 July 2002]: I am sorry that the hon. Member has not yet received a response to his letter. I have asked that this be looked at as a matter of urgency so that I may reply shortly.

David Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will answer the letters of 11 June and 13 August from the right hon. Member for Penrith and The Borders on behalf of Mrs. J. Kerr of Wigton, Cumbria. [77551]

Alun Michael: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will be responding to this letter shortly.

Countryside Agency

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the budget for the Countryside Agency is for 2002–03; and how it is allocated among the Agency's main projects. [79060]

Alun Michael: The Agency's total budget for 2002–03 is £93 million. Its main projects, including Vital Villages, are as follows (with estimated programme spend this year):

	£ million
Market Towns	2.49
Rural Transport Fund	10.11
Aggregates Levy Sustainability Fund	4.8
Local Heritage Initiative	1.68
Support for Rights of Way	1.35
Doorstep Greens	1.24
Millennium Greens	0.44
Walking the Way to Health	1.42

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the next review of the Countryside Agency's funding will be. [79061]

Alun Michael: Funding for the work of the Countryside Agency is decided as part of the corporate planning process.

Energy Policy

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will publish the White Paper on Energy Policy. [77476]

Mr. Wilson: I have been asked to reply.

I plan to publish the Energy White Paper in the New Year.

Farm Mapping

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what procedure will be followed if farmers disagree with field size calculated by digital mapping. [78746]

Alun Michael: Farmers are being given the opportunity to check and agree the areas digitised. If they are unable to agree with the field size calculated, they will be asked to provide evidence in the form of a suitably qualified surveyors report to support the size that they believe it to be.

GM Fish

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the Government's policy towards the continuing development of GM fish. [77306]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 28 October 2002]: The release and marketing of GMOs in the EU is governed by European Directive 2001/18/EC. In England, Directive 2001/18 is implemented by part VI of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and the Genetically Modified Organisms (Deliberate Release) Regulations 2002. The devolved Administrations for Scotland and Wales are responsible for implementing Directive 2001/18 in their respective territories.

The above legislation covers any proposed release of GM fish into the environment for research or commercial purposes, including any proposed release of GM fish in nets, tanks or cages in the sea or in rivers, lakes or streams. Before any such release could go ahead, it would have to be authorised by a consent from the relevant authority. Decisions on whether or not to allow a release would be based on a detailed assessment of any risks that may be posed by the GMO to human health or the environment in each case. It is difficult to envisage any circumstance in which a release of GM fish would be authorised in England.

There are no GM fish being held in aquatic net-pens in the UK and no approval has yet been sought or granted for the commercial production of GM fish.

The Department for International Development is funding research on GM techniques that may accelerate the growth rate and confer sterility in tilapia, a freshwater fish widely farmed in Africa and Asia. This work is being carried out by the University of Southampton in strictly controlled contained tank conditions in accordance with GMO (contained use) legislation. It is designed to provide a better understanding of how poor producers and consumers in developing countries could benefit, and to help these countries to decide for themselves whether they want to use the techniques.

At the fifth North Sea Conference at Bergen in March 2002, Ministers also agreed to take all possible actions in accordance with the requirements of Directive 2001/18/EC and comparable national legislation, to ensure that the culture of genetically modified marine organisms is confined to secure, self-contained, land-based facilities in order to prevent their release to the marine environment.

Halons

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment her Department has undertaken to ascertain whether halons from fire-extinguishing systems made illegal after 2003 should be (a) destroyed and (b) recycled to critical users. [77562]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 28 October 2002]: In October 1998, WS Atkins and the Halon Users National Consortium (HUNC) produced a report for the former DETR entitled, "Assessment of the Use of Halon in the United Kingdom". This estimated that about 81 tonnes of Halon 1211 and about 238 tonnes of Halon 1301 would be decommissioned from fire-extinguishing systems by the end of 2004. Assumptions made by the consultants estimated that about 20 per cent. of the Halon 1211 and about 60 per cent. of the Halon 1301 would be recycled. The remainder would be destroyed.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many tonnes of Halons remain in service in the United Kingdom, and of this tonnage, how much comprises (a) H1301 and (b) H1211. [77564]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 28 October 2002]: In 2000, the European Commission produced "A Strategy for the Management and Elimination of the Use of Halons in the European Community". For the UK, it was estimated that 300–315 tonnes of Halon 1301 and 162 tonnes of Halon 1211 were installed in fire-extinguishing systems. In addition, it was estimated that 400 tonnes of Halon 1310 and 180 tonnes of Halon 1211 were held in stock.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department is taking to ensure atmospherically friendly products are being promoted as a preferable option to fire extinguishing systems which contain HFCs. [77565]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 28 October 2002]: The Government issued the UK Climate Change Programme in November 2000, and its publication was widely publicised. The programme sets out the key elements of the Government's policy on HFCs to enable industry and users to make investment decisions with more certainty. These elements include that HFCs should only be used where other safe, technically feasible, cost-effective and more environmentally acceptable alternatives do not exist, and that HFCs are not sustainable in the long term. The Government have a voluntary agreement with the UK fire-fighting industry in order to reduce emissions of HFCs and PFCs, which is currently under review.

In May 2001, jointly with the Department of Trade and Industry, the Department issued guidance to the industry and users entitled, "Phase out of Halons: Advice on Alternatives and Guidelines for Users of Fire Fighting and Explosion Protection Systems". The guidance suggests a range of alternatives to ozone-depleting halons, including systems using water, carbon dioxide and foams.

Household Waste

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many times a week she recommends household rubbish collections should take place; and what measures are in place to ensure that such collections take place. [77007]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 29 October 2002]: Section 45 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 places a duty on each waste collection authority to arrange for the collection of household waste in its area. It is up to each authority to decide on the most appropriate method and frequency of collection, and the resources required.

The waste collection authority will need to monitor the service to ensure that it is delivered in the manner they have prescribed. Ultimately, a waste collection authority can be referred to the local authority ombudsman if it is deemed to be failing to fulfil its statutory duty in this area.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many local authorities have systems for recycling household waste from the doorstep; where they are located; and what plans there are to introduce doorstep recycling in all authorities. [77006]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 29 October 2002]: We are clear that there needs to be a significant increase in kerbside recycling. We have provided significant extra funds to local authorities through the standard spending assessment and a separate ring-fenced fund for recycling and waste minimisation. We are currently assessing the second tranche of bids for funding from that budget. The Prime Minister's Strategy Unit is currently reviewing waste strategy and its funding and is due to report shortly.

The following 288 local authorities reported that they undertook some form of kerbside recycling scheme in the 2000–01 Municipal Waste Management Survey.

Market Transformation Programme

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will place in the Library copies of the minutes from meetings of the Market Transformation Programme, attended by her Department. [77557]

Mr. Meacher: The Market Transformation Programme works by engaging with stakeholders who have policy interests across a range of product and service sectors, mainly by exposing its analysis of issues and illustrative strategies to public scrutiny and open consultation, and doing this largely through internet communication. From time to time the contractors who service this programme for the Department hold meetings with experts and other interested parties (eg. from business, NGOs, research organisations and Government Departments) to help build consensus on the relevant data and analysis. No formal minutes are made of such discussions, but the outcomes of all consultations are reflected in updates to the documented analysis, the position papers and the programme action plans, which are all published for the Department on the programme's public domain website, www.mtprog.com. In addition, the Department holds meetings concerned with the steering and management of the programme's work, as distinct from its content. These meetings are minuted and I will arrange for copies of the minutes and supporting papers covering the most recent meeting to be placed in the Library of the House.

Peninsular Proteins Ltd.

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will make a decision in respect of an appeal by Peninsular Proteins Ltd. against a refusal to grant a licence to operate their rendering plant at Great Torrington; and if she will make a statement. [78201]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 29 October 2002]: A letter, outlining the decision which the Department proposes to make in respect of the appeal by Peninsular Proteins Ltd., will be sent shortly.

Plastic Products

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proposals she has for reducing householders' use of plastic products that are not biodegradeable. [70257]

Mr. Meacher: We are concerned that re-use and recycling of plastic remains very low and that non-biodegradeable plastic remains in and litters the environment almost indefinitely. A substitute for plastic made from potato starch is now being developed, which is being used for some types of packaging by some retailers. Such material is entirely biodegradeable and can be composted. A number of companies are marketing degradeable plastics technology and products manufactured from these materials. These new technologies are based on modified plastics manufactured from mineral oil and still have to be sent for recycling after use. But we do strongly support the development of boidegradeable plastics made from non-fossil sources.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what consultation she is undertaking on the introduction of a charge for plastic bags given out in shops; and if she will make a statement. [79638]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

Taxes are a matter for the Chancellor.

Sellafield Discharges

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs,what action will be taken to eliminate the discharges of Technetium-99 from Sellafield into the Irish Sea. [77599]

Mr. Meacher: Following a decision in 1999 to reduce the technetium-99 discharge limit from 200 TBq/year to 90 TBq/year, Ministers requested the Environment Agency to carry out a review of technetium-99 discharges from Sellafield. The Agency published its proposed decision concerning these discharges on 20 September 2001 and set out various actions that, subject to technical problems being overcome, and HOUSE being content about the safety implications, could be undertaken to reduce the current technetium-99 discharge limit to 10 TBq/year by 2006. The Agency's proposed decision is currently under consideration by the Secretaries of State for Health and for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, who jointly have the decision-making responsibilities in this area. We expect that their response to the Agency's proposals will be published shortly.

SF6 Emissions

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how her Department regulates the use of SF_6 and its emissions in electricity transmission and distribution in the United Kingdom. [77567]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 28 October 2002]: The Government do not regulate the use of SF_6 from the electricity transmission and distribution sectors. Emissions from electrical insulation currently account for less than 20 per cent. of the UK's total emissions of SF_6. While there has been a small increase in emissions from this sector since 1995, and they are forecast to continue increasing until 2010, estimated emissions reduction in other sectors are projected to offset this increase and lead to a fall in total SF_6 emissions of about 3 per cent. between 1995 and 2020.

Sustainable Development

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) assessment has been made and (b) discussions have taken place, or are planned by her Department, of the political declarations emerging from the recent World Summit on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg from (i) the Inter-Parliamentary Union, (ii) local government groups and (iii) regional government groups. [77561]

Mr. Meacher: The relevant declarations are (i) the declarations by parliamentarians at the session organised by the Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU); (ii) the declaration by local government representatives at the session organised by the International Council for Local Environmental Initiatives (ICLEI); and (iii) the declaration by regional government representatives at the regional government event (known as the Gauteng Declaration).

We are in the process of assessing the contents of these declarations, and will discuss their implications with the relevant stakeholders, including how they might contribute to sustainable development in the UK.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions her Department has had with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in relation to the role of local government in the delivery of objectives agreed at the recent World Summit on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg; and what the outcomes of the discussions have been. [77563]

Mr. Meacher: Discussions have begun with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and other Government Departments about how to take forward the UK's commitments from WSSD at the local, national and international level. There are many aspects to consider and we anticipate these discussions continuing for some time.

We will be launching a major review of the UK Sustainable Development Strategy in the new year. We will use this opportunity to consult stakeholders, including local authorities, on action to implement the Johannesburg commitments across the UK.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reason the UK did not have a stand at the Umbuntu Village and the NASREC exhibition space at the recent World Summit on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg. [77569]

Mr. Meacher: After careful consideration, the UK Government decided not to have a stand at Umbuntu Village as we believed that the benefits to be gained from exhibitioning did not justify the use of the limited human and financial resources we had available.

NASREC was the location for the Global People's Forum, which ran in parallel to the main summit, and was a forum for all forms of civil society to coalesce and discuss sustainable development. It was not a forum for Governments to exhibit. I visited it during the WSSD Conference and spent half a day there. I also visited Umbuntu Village twice.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps have been taken to develop national coalitions to assist in the delivery of (a) outcomes of the recent World Summit on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg and (b) additional non-binding agreements or pledges made by the UK Government relating to the recent World Summit on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg. [77578]

Mr. Meacher: The United Kingdom Government are co-operating with like-minded Governments, both bilaterally and through international institutions such as the United Nations, European Union and Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), to assist the delivery of the outcomes of the Johannesburg World Summit on Sustainable Development and related non-binding commitments which it has made.

Such co-operation will not necessarily involve the development of publicly identified 'coalitions'. However, at Johannesburg the EU member states and a number of like-minded countries, commonly referred to as the 'Renewable Energy Coalition', made a declaration on "The Way Forward for Renewable Energy". This commits us to work together to further develop and promote renewable energy technologies and substantially increase the global share of renewable energy resources; and to work with others to achieve this goal, especially through partnership initiatives and through forthcoming international conferences.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans her Department has to (a) attend and (b) support events relating to outcomes of the recent World Summit on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg. [77595]

Mr. Meacher: The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Defra) is committed to follow-up the World Summit on Sustainable Development (WSSD) both at a national and international level. Within the UK, Defra is supporting numerous events on the outcomes of WSSD, these include stakeholder meetings to discuss follow-up action in the UK, a Conservation Foundation workshops on WSSD looking at the local dimension, the Royal Institute of International Affairs General Meeting on the outcomes of WSSD, a DEMOS seminar on sustainable business and a keynote speech by my right hon. Friend the Secondary of State for Defra on the outcomes of WSSD at the Associate Parliamentary Environment Group Christmas reception.

The Department is also committed to attending numerous international meetings, particularly at EU and UN level, relating to the outcomes of WSSD.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which individuals and organisations who were consulted by her Department in relation to (a) Prepcom meetings and discussions relating to the recent World Summit on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg; and (b) the negotiations and involvement of the UK Government delegation at the World Summit. [77573]

Mr. Meacher: The Department for Environment, Food and rural Affairs (Defra) worked closely with various stakeholder groups in our preparations for the World Summit on Sustainable Development. Consultations with civil society were through umbrella organisations such as UNED-UK and the BOND Network (British Overseas NGOs for Development).

Defra engaged with the business community and the Prime Minister instigated five sectoral initiatives in March 2001, which were partnerships for the delivery of sustainable development between Government, civil society. Stakeholders groups, including NGOs, local authorities and business were invited to be part of the delegation at the Prepcoms and at the summit itself.

Negotiations at the summit were inter-governmental. However, daily UK delegation meetings and regular briefing sessions with civil society enabled non-governmental stakeholders to feed in their views.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department has taken to (a) develop a system for monitoring of and (b) produce guidelines for Type II agreements relating to the delivery of objectives relating to the delivery of (i) sustainable development and (ii) outcomes of the recent World Summit on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg. [77576]

Mr. Meacher: Defra negotiators were instrumental in the development and adoption by the UN of a set of guiding principles for Type II partnerships at the fourth Preparatory Committee meeting for WSSD in Indonesia in May this year. We also fought extremely hard for the inclusion of relevant text in the Plan of Implementation agreed at Johannesburg, with the result that the UN Commission on Sustainable Development (CSD) has been mandated to develop a follow-up mechanism for partnerships.

Domestically, a policy lead has been identified for each of those Type II partnerships in which the UK Government are involved. These include officials from FCO, Forestry Commission, DfID and DTI in addition to Defra.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list Type II agreements in place relating to the delivery of (a) sustainable development and (b) outcomes of the recent World Summit on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg. [77577]

Mr. Meacher: I refer the hon. Member to the UN website for the World Summit on Sustainable Development which lists more than 600 Type II partnerships (http://www.johannesburgsummit.org/html/sustainable_dev/partnership_initiatives.html).

The UK Government instigated or was involved in more than 20 partnerships developed for WSSD. Those that were registered as formal Type II partnerships are:

UK-led Water Partnership—Partners For Water and Sanitation (PAWS)

UK-led Sustainable Tourism Initiative (STI)

EU Water Initiative—Water for Life

EU Energy Initiative—'Energy for Poverty Eradication and Sustainable Development'

Global Village energy Partnership (GVEP)

Global Network on Energy for Sustainable Development

Partnership For Principle 10 (Environmental Democracy)

Oceans Initiative: "White Water to Blue Water: A Crosscutting Approach to Regional Oceans and Coastal Ecosystem Management"

Congo Basin Forest Partnership

Japanese led Asian Forest Partnership

Details of these, and the other partnerships in which we are involved, are available on the Government sustainable development website (http://www.sustainable-development.gov.uk/wssd/).

Timber

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent measures her Department has taken to ensure that the National Building Standards (Government Works) standard has been amended to reflect Government policy on timber procurement; and if she will make a statement. [77673]

Mr. Meacher: My officials contacted the National Building Specification, a trading name of RIBA Enterprises Ltd., on 1 October drawing their attention to the timber scoping study report (published on the internet at http://www.forestforum.org.uk), and asking them to consider reviewing the NBS (Government Works) standard format to reflect Government policy on its own timber procurement. The Government committed Departments and their agencies in July 2000 actively to seek to procure their timber and timber products from legal and sustainably managed sources.

The National Building Specification does not contain specification clauses for the procurement of timber. It is left to the specifier to decide the content of the specification because currently, NBS considers the issue of sustainability complex, imprecise and the subject of conflicting information. However, general guidance to the National Building Specification refers to advice from the Forests Forever Campaign, that was established in 1990 by the Timber Trade Federation. This says: ". . . as yet there is no internationally agreed definition of, or accepted criteria for, 'sustainability'. At present a supplier may only be able to provide evidence that timber comes from a 'sustained yield' source i.e. managed to provide a continuous supply of timber . . .".

NBS is compiling a dossier on the subject of timber procurement and has agreed to meet officials to discuss the issue. In the meantime, we have asked Government Departments to ensure that anyone employed by Government on any construction, maintenance or supplies contract is made aware that the Government's policy on timber procurement should be complied with when drawing up specifications. This message will be reinforced by an Information Note to be issued by the Office of Government Commerce shortly.

Veterinary Surgeons and Students

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many unqualified people have been found guilty of impersonating a veterinary (a) surgeon and (b) student in each of the last 10 years. [76615]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 October 2002]: (a) Two. The first in 2001 and the second in 2002. (b) None.

Village Halls

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures she is taking to improve funding arrangements for village halls; and if she will make a statement. [78435]

Alun Michael: Central funding for village halls, from the recent Government and the National Lottery has increased substantially in recent years. About £10 million per year was available in the 1980s, which increased to around £50 million per year in the late 1990s, largely due to the contribution from the Millennium Fund which funded over 500 village halls and community centres to the value of nearly £100 million. That programme was specifically intended as an injection of extra funds over the millennium period and has benefited many local communities. Since the millennium the annual assistance to village halls remains three times the previous level at approximately £33 million per year now.

It must be remembered that the finances of village halls have traditionally come from local sources with come support from central government and that this Government have been active in encouraging local action. While this approach has been productive the contribution of central government must not be seen as an alternative to local leadership and fund raising.

Nevertheless the Government are working with stakeholders to quantify the funding needs of village halls and how best to meet these needs. My officials met representatives of Action with Communities in Rural England and others on 22 October to discuss how available funds, from central and local government and the lottery distributors, can best support local investment in village halls and the services and facilities they provide for their local communities. I shall be meeting the National Village Halls Forum during November.

Waste Dumping

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what regulations there are and how they can be enforced by (a) the Environment Agency and (b) local councils, to prevent developers dumping contaminated waste on sites that are being recontoured and are not licensed tips. [77241]

Mr. Meacher: The disposal and recovery of waste is regulated primarily through the Waste Management Licensing Regulations 1994, for which the Environment Agency is the competent authority and primary regulator. Paragraph 9 of schedule 3 of the 1994 regulations allows certain types of material to be spread to land for the purposes of reclamation or improvement under an exemption from waste management licensing. This material includes soil, rock, ash or sludge, or waste from any dredging of inland waters or arising from construction or demolition work. The material can only be spread provided it meets the requirements of Article 4 of the Waste Framework Directive ie to ensure protection of the environment and human health.

Any activity being carried out under this exemption must be registered with the Environment Agency, and failure to adhere to the 'general rules' of the exemption is an offence that is punishable by a fine if convicted in court.

The Government will be consulting shortly on amendments to some exemptions (including paragraph 9). These amendments are being designed to tighten the requirements and to prevent abuse of the controls.

Along with the Environment Agency, local authorities have more general powers under section 33 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 in relation to fly tipping, ie depositing controlled waste without a waste management licence ore registered exemption. In the event of a conviction, severe penalties are available to the courts including an unlimited fine or imprisonment of up to five years.

Waste Incinerators

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many waste incinerators are planned by waste disposal authorities; what the capacity is of each incinerator planned; and what information she collates on the contractual arrangements for waste disposal. [77745]

Mr. Meacher: There are at present 14 municipal solid waste incinerators in the whole of the UK, two of which are in Scotland. Details of facilities where planning applications are determined by local planning authorities are not held centrally.

There are many hundreds of other incinerators for sewage sludge, hazardous waste, clinical waste, production waste from factories etc. In England and Wales, the larger plant generally is regulated by the Environment Agency and details of their locations are available on the Environment Agency's public register. Other plant that is part of another process regulated by the Agency may not be shown separately on the register. Smaller plant is regulated by local authorities. In Scotland, all such plant are regulated by the Scottish Environmental Protection Agency.

A new plant will need planning permission to start construction and a PPC permit to start operations. The table gives the number and status, as at 21 August 2002, of new municipal waste incineration plants in England and Wales. The table contains information shared with the Environment Agency by prospective applicants for pollution control permits. There may also be other planning applications or amendments which have been submitted to local authorities over which the Agency has not been consulted. The planning status may have been changed since the data were supplied.

The Department does not routinely collect information on contractual arrangements for waste disposal. It is the responsibility of waste disposal authorities to make appropriate contractual arrangements with respect to their requirements for waste disposal.

Web Sites

Dr. Vincent Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the web site links associated with her Department, including sites now dormant or closed, and indicating whether they are live, dormant or closed; what the start up costs were for each site listed; what the operating costs were in each year since start up for each site; which company hosted each site; what assessment takes place for each site; which company does the assessment; if she will place the assessment reports in the Library; and if she will make a statement. [75590]

Alun Michael: In addition to its overall strategic functions, Defra has a range of specialist responsibilities in the fields of environment, food, animal welfare, agriculture and rural policy. Website links therefore range from small or specialist sites established by the Department (or its predecessors) and its agencies and NDPBs for specific purposes to DEFRA's own main website and those of its agencies and NDPBs. We are also checking whether joint sites have been established with other organisations by operational units within Defra or within its agencies and NDPBs.

The information requested is currently being collated. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as it is available.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Children in Care

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, what action she is taking to raise the educational standards of children in care. [73928]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 15 October 2002]: We are committed to raising the educational standards of all children, including those who are in care, in order to build a fair and inclusive society. In May 2000 we issued comprehensive Guidance on the Education of Children and Young People in Care to help local authorities, in their role as corporate parents to raise the educational attainment of children and young people in public care and to bring them closer in line with those of their peers. The Department seeks through it's policies to help LEAs work towards achieving the PSA target set by the Department of Health that, by 2004, 15 per cent. of children leaving care at age 16 or over shall have achieved at least 5 GCCEs at grade A*-C.

The Guidance is backed up by an Implementation Programme, Education Protects, which is jointly supported by the DfES and the Department of Health. Currently, a team of advisors work with ten networks of Lead Officers for Children in Public Care across the country.

The Implementation Team is also gathering examples of best practice to help inform future work locally and nationally. Examples of best practice will shortly be disseminated through the upgraded Education Protects DfES website.

We are currently consulting on a revised School Admissions Code of Practice that will require all admission authorities in their over subscription criteria, to give top priority to looked after children, after children with statements of special educational needs.

For 2002–03 there is £10 million in the DfES Standards Fund to raise the achievement for children in public care and sick children. A new £20 million Capital Modernisation Fund scheme to increase access to information technology for children in and leaving care is available over the 2 financial years 2002–03 and 2003–04. The money is being distributed as part of the Department of Health's Quality Protects programme. This is on top of the overall budget of £885 million made available over 5 years for the Department of Health's children's services quality protects grant.

The Social Exclusion Unit are are currently undertaking a project looking into the educational achievement of children in public care. We will be considering any recommendations made when their report is published. This is currently expected to be in December 2002.

Firefighters' Dispute

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, what preparations she has made to ensure the safety and continuity of service to the public in the event of a firefighters' strike; and what the cost is to the Department of these actions. [77656]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: My Department has set up an Incident Team representing all policy and services directorates led by a senior Board member. The Team is liaising closely with central Government to keep abreast of updates on the situation outlined by my right hon. Friend, the Ministery for Local Government and the Regions in his answer to this question of the 28 October 2002 Official Report, column 527W. Briefing has been circulated to all Local Education Authorities, colleges and universities. Further communications will be sent as appropriate. Risk Assessments have also been carried out on departmental premises and specific measures introduced to safeguard people – which include large numbers of visitors as well as staff – on strike days.

The cost of providing emergency cover will depend on the extent and nature of any industrial action.

Ethnicity Statistics

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how ethnicity is measured by schools and local education authorities and what checks are carried out to ensure the accuracy of those figures. [78609]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: In January this year the Department issued to LEAs updated guidance on how schools should obtain and record pupils' ethnic group. This guidance was prompted in part by a new ethnic group classification introduced by the 2001 national Census of Population, which meant that all existing information had to be re-collected on this new basis. The main features of the guidance are:

once the re-collection exercise is complete, information for new pupils to be collected on first entry to school, and then passed on from school to school;

information to be collected via parents, who, in the case of pupils aged 11 or over, are encouraged to involve the pupil in the decision;

any refusal to provide information must be respected. However if a parent merely fails to respond to the school's enquiries, the school may, subject to certain conditions, ascribe an ethnic group based on its own best judgement. In these cases the fact that the information has been derived in this way, rather than provided by the parent or pupil, must be recorded;

LEAs have discretion to adopt a more detailed ethnic group classification where necessary to meet local monitoring needs (within a framework specified by the Department).

The steps taken to ensure the accuracy of the information obtained and recorded by schools under the new guidance are:

the guidance was drawn up following extensive discussions with the Commission for Racial Equality and the Information Commissioner, and a major consultation exercise involving (amongst others) the teacher unions, LEAs and a sample of schools;

great emphasis has been placed on the need for LEAs to take the lead in ensuring that their schools iinplemented the guidance fully and correctly, and have all the advice and support necessary to enable them to do so;

each LEA has been asked to nominate and notify the Department of a senior officer within authority who will take overall responsibility for implementation of the guidance, and all authorities have now done so. Feedback on progress has been obtained through these contacts, and further guidance or clarification issued as required; an explanatory leaflet (with translations into 14 languages) has been produced by the Department for distribution by schools to parents. A model letter and completion form for parents has also been provided for schools' use; a dedicated website (www.standards.dfes.gov.uk/ethnicminorities) has been set up through which all guidance and key documents (including translations) can be viewed and downloaded;

LEAs have been required to submit to the Department for approval any refinements of the national ethnic categories which they propose to adopt for local monitoring purposes in order to ensure that consistency of data at national level is maintained;

the Department has worked very closely with the suppliers of management information systems to schools and LEAs to ensure these systems are developed in order to store and process the new data correctly, and enable it to be transferred electronically from school to school as pupils move.

The new information will be collected by the Department for the first time in the Pupil Level Annual Schools Census (PLASC) taking place in January 2003. These data will be analysed closely to verify that they accord with the guidance. Any apparent gaps or anomalies will be taken up with the LEA concerned.

Connexions Card

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, what the estimated annual cost is of the Connexions card; and what the card has cost so far. [79123]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 6 November 2002]: The Connexions Card contract is valued at £109.7m over seven years.

Due to the agreed implementation plan the annual cost of the Card is not a fixed amount per annum. The £109.7m is spread as follows (these figures are subject to annual review);

Financial Year	01-02	02-03	03-4	04-5	05 6	06-7	07-8	08-9
Annual Budget (£m)	14.5	15.5	14.5	14.0	13.6	13.6	13.1	10.9

To date, the Card has cost £18.9m.

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, which third party organisations and companies have (a) received and (b) bought information contained on the Connexions card. [79124]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 6 November 2002]: Only the Connexions Service has received information contained on the Connexions Card. No third party organisation or company has bought information contained on the Connexions Card.

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, whether information held on individuals who have Connexions cards has been passed on to third parties (a) for no consideration and (b) for a consideration. [79125]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 6 November 2002]: Only the Connexions Service has been passed information held on individuals who have Connexions Cards and this is for no consideration. No information held on individuals who have a Connexions Card has been passed to a third party for a consideration.

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many Connexions cards have been issued. [79126]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 6 November 2002]: As of 5 November, there have been 175,161 Connexions Cards issued.

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how old the youngest person is who has received a Connexions card. [79127]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 6 November 2002]: The youngest person who has received a Connexions Card is 14 years old.

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, what information can be held on an individual who uses a Connexions card. [79128]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 6 November 2002]: The young person's name, date of birth and photo is shown on the Card and their name, date of birth and unique Connexions Card number are recorded on the chip.

In addition to the above information, each young person's record on the Connexions Card database holds details of the learning centre(s), attendance, points collected and redeemed, and rewards chosen.

Recruitment (Over 50s)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, what percentage of new recruits to his Department in the past two years were aged 50 and over. [79299]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Some 3.5 per cent. of new recruits to the Department for Education and Skills since 9 June 2001, when the Department was established, were aged 50 and over.

Parliamentary Questions/Correspondence

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many (a) parliamentary questions and (b) letters to him from hon. Members in this session remain unanswered, broken down by those which are (i) one month old, (ii) two months old, (iii) three months old, (iv) four months old and (v) over six months old. [79939]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: There are no Parliamentary Questions tabled to this department which are over a month old. Information on letters from hon. Members is not collected in this format and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. The Cabinet Office, publishes a report to Parliament on an annual basis, setting out the volume of Members' correspondence received by departments. The Report for 2001 was published on Friday 24 May 2002, Official Report, column 677W. Copies of previous reports are available in the Library of the House.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many staff have been employed at his Department in each year from 1995–6 to 2002–3; and if he will make a statement. [80235]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The staffing numbers—as at 1 April in each year—are given below.

To note: Two numbers are given for the year 1995 as the Employment Department and Department for Education were then separate Departments. The numbers for 1996 to 2001 are for the Department for Education and Employment. Those for 2002 are for the Department for Education and Skills.

Year	Staff numbers
1995	4,890 (Employment) 1,630 (Education)
1996	5,050
1997—	4,480
1998—	4,500
1999—	4,560
2000—	4,970
2001—	5,430
2002—	4,820

Public Consultations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, what public consultations have been commenced by his Department in each month since 10th July; and what the (a) start date, (b) closing date and (c) website address of each were. [80266]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: A list of the public consultations undertaken by my Department since 10 July, 2002 is attached. Information includes the start dates and closing dates as requested. The website address for all public consultations is www.dfes.gov.uk.consultations.

Departmental Funding (Huntingdon)

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, if he will list the projects to which his Department has allocated funding in the Huntingdon Constituency since 1997, indicating the amount in each case. [79565]

Mr. Charles Clarke: My Department does not allocate funding at constituency level. The information requested could only be provided at disproportionate cost. Details of overall allocations for all my departmental programmes are listed at table 4.2 in the Departmental Annual Report.

Online Centres

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many United Kingdom online centres (a) have been and (b) are intended to be established in Scotland. [80062]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The UK online centres initiative is administered by the Department for Education and Skills and covers England only. The devolved administration in Scotland has an equivalent project details of which can be found on their website http://www.scotland.gov.uk/digitalscotland/

LEA Costs

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to his answer of 23 October, Official Report, column 383W, on LEA costs, what, in real terms, was (a) the total cash not devolved by each LEA to schools and (b) the total cash spent by the LEA on its staff and other overheads and administration, in each year from 1996–97 to 2002–03; what the annual real growth rate of such expenditure was in each LEA; and if he will make a statement. [80248]

Mr. Miliband: The information requested is not readily available. I will write to the hon. Member when I am able to reply and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Bramwood County Primary School

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, when he expects to be able to give Surrey County Council section 77 consent in respect of approval for sale of the former Bramwood County Primary School in Surrey. [80234]

Mr. Miliband: The Department has no record of a Bramwood County Primary School in Surrey. The Department has, however, received an application from Surrey County Council for the Secretary of State's consent to sell the site of the former Barnwood Primary School. The application will be considered by the School Playing Fields Advisory Panel as soon as Surrey County Council provides the additional information that has been requested.

Criminal Records Bureau

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, if he will make a statement on the abolition of Criminal Records Bureau checks for school governors. [80038]

Mr. Miliband: In the light of the continuing problems being encountered by the Criminal Records Bureau, checks on school governors have been suspended for the foreseeable future. General advice was posted on the Department's School Governors' website on Monday 4 November. Further guidance for registered bodies will be issued shortly.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, what amendment he intends to make to the School Governance (Constitution) Regulations to abolish the requirement for Criminal Records Bureau checks, [80037]

Mr. Miliband: The School Governance (Constitution) (England) Regulations 2003 are currently out for consultation. The suggested wording in Schedule 6 on disqualifying governors from holding, or continuing to hold, office is triggered by an individual's refusal to agree to an application being made for a criminal records certificate when a request is made. While this wording does not in itself require all governors or potential governors to automatically undergo a Criminal Records Bureau check we will consider whether this disqualification should be removed or reworded before the Regulations are laid next spring.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many school governors have (a) received and (b) not received a Criminal Records Bureau check. [80036]

Mr. Miliband: Information on the number of newly appointed and re-appointed school governors who either have received or have not received a Criminal Records Bureau check is not routinely collected by the Department.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, when his Department will publish guidance to registered bodies about the postponement of Criminal Records Bureau checks as set out in the announcement made on 1 November. [80020]

Mr. Miliband: In the light of the continuing problems being encountered by the Criminal Records Bureau, checks on school governors have been suspended for the foreseeable future. General advice was posted on the Department's School Governors' website on Monday 4 November. Further guidance for registered bodies will be issued shortly.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many school days were lost owing to teachers being unable to gain clearance from the Criminal Records Bureau before the first day of this school year in (a) Cambridgeshire and (b) East of England. [79564]

Mr. Miliband: We do not hold this information.

School Staff (Legal Actions)

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) if he will make a statement on the settlement reached in the case of Higginson v. Cheshire County Council; [79973]

(2) what guidance he has given to LEAs on informing governing bodies of the outcome of legal actions involving the authority and past or present members of a school's staff: and if he will make a statement. [79974]

Mr. Miliband: The conclusion reached in the case of Higginson versus Cheshire County Council is a matter for the parties concerned. My Department has not, to the best of my knowledge, issued advice to LEAs on disclosure of the outcomes of legal actions to governing bodies where such actions involve members of school staff.

Modern Apprenticeships

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, what progress he has made in increasing the use of modern apprenticeships. [78459]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: There are currently 100,000 more young people on Advanced Modern Apprenticeships and Foundation Modern Apprenticeships than at the same time in 1998. The Government has published a target for 2004 for at least 28 per cent. of young people to start a Modern Apprenticeship by age 22. The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) has a lead role in meeting the target and has in place robust plans to do so. It is working closely with the Connexions Service, the new Sector Skills Councils and others to increase demand for places from both young people and employers. The LSC and Ministers are advised on MA developments by a Board made up of employers and others. New publicity campaigns are underway, including one aimed at employers which began last week.

IT Skills Shortages

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, what recent representations he has received from (a) right hon. and hon. Members, (b) trade associations and employers organisations and (c) training companies, concerning higher level skills shortages in the information technology sector. [79834]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I have not received any significant representations on higher level skills shortages in the Information Technology (IT) sector in the last six months. Skills deficits in the sector have declined from their peak in 1999 when the Stevens report, "Skills for the Information Age" highlighted these issues. Since that time, an £8 million programme of measures has been put in place to improve the image of the IT industry, build greater understanding of the labour market and strengthen links between education and industry.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, if he will list the former grant-maintained schools which are parties to operating leases in respect of buildings. [79912]

Mr. Miliband: The information is not held centrally. Decisions in respect of operating leases were a matter for the governing bodies of former grant maintained schools.

Examinations (Irregularities)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many cases of irregularities with SATs results and tests were reported to the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority in each local education authority in (a) 2000, (b) 2001 and (c) 2002 to 10 October; and how many investigations were carried out by the QCA into these reports. [80049]

Mr. Miliband: The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA) has made a concerted effort to raise awareness of the need to report every event, which could lead to an allegation of malpractice or maladministration in national tests. This has led to an increase in the number of events reported. All such reports are logged, but not all merit further investigation. Reports which do not normally require further investigation would include, for example, where a school has received its test pack with the external sealing damaged.

The total number of events reported to the QCA and investigated by the QCA in each of the last three years is as follows:

	2000	2001	2002
Events reported to QCA	147	270	479
Cases investigated by QCA	47	59	96

The breakdown of these totals by Local Education Authority is still being compiled. I shall write to my hon. Friend with this information when it becomes available and place a copy in the library.

School Boredom

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, if he will make a statement on the causes of the boredom suffered by British secondary school pupils in the classroom. [79436]

Mr. Miliband: There are various factors which can lead to boredom in secondary school classrooms, including: lessons which are not challenging enough; lessons that do not cater for pupils with special educational needs; lessons that recover old ground; lack of progress on transition to secondary school; pupils' lack of awareness of their learning goals; and perceived lack of relevance of the curriculum to pupils' personal goals.

We believe good teaching and a good curriculum are the best ways to engage and motivate pupils. We have introduced a wide range of strategies to improve teaching and learning, including our widely-acclaimed Literacy and Numeracy Strategies. Since September 2001 we have been implementing our new strategy to improve the attainment of 14 year olds (the Key Stage 3 Strategy). There have already been major improvements: OFSTED now rate nearly 70 per cent. of lessons as good compared with 40 per cent. five years ago.

Learning and Skills Council

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, if he will list the members of the board of the Herefordshire and Worcestershire Council of the Learning and Skills Council, indicating (a) their place of residence and (b) those of them who represent or serve on local district, city or county councils. [79487]

Margaret Hodge: The board members of the Herefordshire and Worcestershire Learning and Skills Council, are as follows;

Learning And Skills Council Herefordshire And Worcestershire Council Member names, sector representation and residence location

Mr. C Swan (Business) Chairman of LSC Herefordshire and Worcestershire Stratford upon Avon, Warwickshire Work: Herefordshire	Mrs. C Bucknell (Further Education) Hereford Work: Warwickshire

Mr. N Helme (Business) Leominster, Herefordshire Work: Herefordshire	Vacant post advertised for school Headteacher from either Herefordshire or Worcestershire.

Graduate Employment

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many students graduated from university and how many graduates gained employment in the region in which they graduated, broken down by region in each year since 1995. [78556]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 4 November 2002]: The available information is shown in the table.

[1] In the early years of the time series, not all graduates specified the region in which they obtained employment, and this has contributed to the lower employment rates in these years.

Departmental Costs

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, what his estimate is of the gross administrative costs of his Department in (a) cash and (b) real terms in each year from 1995–96 to 2002–03; what the growth rate was of each category of expenditure in each year; and if he will make a statement. [80236]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested is set out in the table below; the figures for the Department include Sure Start and the Children's Fund. The information for 1995–96 is not available in the form requested.

(a) DfES Gross Administrative Costs—Cash (£000s)

Education Finance (Cheshire)

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many representations he has received from residents of (a) Cheshire and (b) Macclesfield constituency registering their response to his Department's review of revenue grant distribution; when he expects to announce his decision following his Department's consultation; and if he will make a statement. [79274]

Mr. Miliband: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government on 6 November.

Student Bursaries

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many opportunity bursaries have been awarded to students from each Government Office region in the academic years (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [80048]

Margaret Hodge: In 2001–02, 6,580 Opportunity Bursaries were allocated to students from Excellence Challenge areas entering higher education in England. In 2002–03, 8,210 new Opportunity Bursaries were allocated for those entering HE in England.

Information on the allocation and uptake of Opportunity Bursaries by government office regions is unavailable.

Child Care Facilities

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many (a) day nurseries, (b) childminders and (c) out of school clubs there were on 31 March and what percentage of these were provided by the private sector. [78593]

Mr. Miliband: We are unable to provide a breakdown on providers as requested, however information on the number of places is shown in the following table.

Number of, and places in, day care providers by type[1]
England
Position at 31 March 2001

	Number	Places
Day nurseries[2]	7,800	285,100
Registered childminders[2]	72,300	304,600
Out of school clubs[3]	4,900	152,800

Notes:
[1] Figures have been rounded to the nearest hundred.
[2] Day nurseries and childminders provide care for children under eight years of age.
[3] Out of school clubs provide care for five to seven year old children.

Latest figures on Day Care facilities in England were published by the Department in the Statistical Bulletin "Children's Day Care facilities at 31 March 2001 (08/01)" in October 2001, a copy of which is available from the Library. An electronic copy of this publication is also available on the Department's web-site (www.dfes.gov.uk/ statistics).

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how much of the Sure Start Rural Fund was spent in (a) 2000–01, (b) 2001–02 and (c) 2002–03 to date, broken down by project. [78408]

Mr. Miliband [holding answer 31 October 2002]: There is no separate fund identified from Sure Start's resources for rural areas. We have to date, however, approved 13 full Sure Start programmes where the catchment area covers predominantly rural areas.

The expenditure committed to each programme, by year is shown in the table.

Round	Programme	Approved revenue grant (£000)			Capital
		2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
1	South Fenland	718	629	805	905
1	East Cleveland	469	597	645	791

4	West Somerset	—	109	500	750
	Total grant funding	£1.405m	£4.905m	£8.024m	£9.659m

The capital funding shown above was based on the capital strategy submitted by each programme, and is intended to fund major capital projects in the first three years of the programme. An additional £250,000 per programme may also be available to the programmes, if needed, to meet further capital expenditure in year 4 and 5 or earlier.

We have also established a pilot initiative of 50 smaller Sure Start programmes (48 programmes approved to date) in rural areas and pockets of deprivation, which would not normally be covered by the traditional Sure Start model. These programmes are managed through Early Years Childcare and Development Partnerships and linked to Neighbourhood Nurseries, Early Excellence Centres or other existing provision to deliver Sure Start-type services to some 150–170 children in each catchment area. Revenue funding up to £100,000 for each year and capital of up to £250,000 is available. The total budgeted provision for these programmes in 2002–03 is £10.25m. 48 of the 50 Mini Sure Start programmes have now been approved.

A list of the local authority districts where the 50 Mini Sure Start programmes are located is shown below.

Ageism

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, what strategies his Department has to ensure that there is no ageism in recruitment and retention processes. [79288]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: I will write to my hon. Friend when the information is available and will place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Staff Recruitment

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how much has been spent in recruiting staff to his Department in (a) London and (b) the south east in each year since 1997. [78557]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 4 November 2002]: I will write to my hon. Friend when the information is available and will place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Higher Education

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what the annual real terms funding per student in higher education has been in each year since 1997; [78383]

(2) what projections he has made of the annual real terms funding per student in higher education in each year until 2010. [78384]

Margaret Hodge [holding reply 31 October 2002]: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, when he will publish his annual grant letter to the Higher Education Funding Council for England. [80278]

Margaret Hodge: The grant letter to the Higher Education Funding Council for England will be published in due course.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, if he will make a statement on the overall financial position of the higher education sector in each of the last three years; and how many institutions were in (a) surplus and (b) deficit in each of those years. [80317]

Margaret Hodge: The table shows the overall financial position of the publicly funded higher education sector in England and the number of institutions with deficits in the last three years for which information is available.

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
Total income £m	9,915	10,402	11,069
Operating surplus £m	173	125	44
Number of HEIs in deficit	28	52	48

In 2000–01, there were 130 higher education institutions funded by the Higher Education Funding Council for England.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, what research he collates on the correlation between higher education expenditure and changes in Gross Domestic Product. [80337]

Margaret Hodge: Data for OECD countries shows a positive correlation between the proportion of GDP spent on higher education institutions and levels of Gross Domestic Product. It is difficult to isolate the impact of higher education on growth due to the many other things which determine economic growth. Evidence suggests that higher education is more important for growth in developed countries than other levels of education. The returns from higher education enjoyed by individuals are high. For example, graduates earn around 64 per cent. more than non-graduates. Participation in higher education generates wider social benefits such as improved health and reduced crime. Research also suggests that the spill-over effects of higher education R&D on productivity are extremely high.

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, if he will calculate the (a) amount spent per pupil on primary and secondary education by Cheshire County Council and (b) average amount spent per pupil on primary and secondary education by local authorities in England in the last financial year for which figures are available; what assessment he has made of the effect on educational provision in Cheshire if the average sum were to be spent; and if he will make a statement. [80005]

Mr. Miliband: The requested information is as follows:

(a) Net Current Expenditure per pupil in Cheshire
Primary	£2310
Secondary	£2920
Both	£2580

(b) Net Current Expenditure per pupil in England
Primary	£2440
Secondary	£3060
Both	£2710

All figures in cash terms and rounded to the nearest £10.

The data has been taken from Cheshire Education Authority's section 52 Outturn statement for the 2000–01 financial year. Variations in spending per pupil between authorities reflect higher area costs and greater incidence of deprivation in some areas. The Government will be announcing later this year the outcome of its review of formula funding for local authorities.

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many representations he has received from residents of (a) Cheshire and (b) Congleton constituency registering their response to his Department's review of revenue grant distribution; when he expects to announce his decision following his Department's consultation; and if he will make a statement. [80004]

Mr. Miliband: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government on 6 November.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many students were attending a full-time degree level course or its equivalent in each year since 1990, broken down by local education authority. [79252]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 4 November 2002]: I will write to my right hon. friend when the information is available and will place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, if he will consult (a) students and (b) parents of students living in Cambridgeshire on the findings of the review of higher education. [79571]

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, what plans the Government has to consult student organizations on the outcome of the review of higher education. [79449]

Margaret Hodge: We have announced our intention to publish in January a strategy document setting out our vision for the development and reform of higher education, including the outcome of the review of student support. Once the document is published there will be opportunity for interested parties to respond.

Schools (Cambridgeshire)

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, if he will ensure that no schools in Cambridgeshire have a cash budget cut in the next financial year. [79567]

Mr. Miliband: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Castle Point (Bob Spink) on 6 November 2002.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many representations his Department has received in connection with the funding of (a) schools and (b) school pupils in Cambridgeshire over the last year. [79570]

Mr. Miliband: My right hon. Friend has received 25 letters in connection with the funding of schools in Cambridgeshire over the last year. In addition a number of Cambridgeshire residents responded to the consultation on Local Government Funding reform which closed on 30th September: to identify precisely these letters from amongst the very large numbers of responses to the consultation would incur disproportionate cost.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many schools in Cambridgeshire had a cash budget cut in this financial year. [79568]

Mr. Miliband: In Cambridgeshire Local Education Authority 46 schools had a fall in their cash budget share in 2002–03, but of these only 7 also had a fall in their cash budget share per pupil. Changes in pupil numbers are the principal reason for changes in budget share from year to year. 199 schools had a rise in their cash budget share, but of these 12 had a fall in their cash budget share per pupil: this was largely in cases where small primary schools had rising rolls and therefore received less of the extra funding that goes to the smallest schools under the authority's formula.

The information is taken from data published in the LEA's section 52 budget statements for 2001–02 and 2002–03.

Student Finance

Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) when the Government will publish its review of student funding; [78522]

(2) To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, if the Government will reintroduce targeted maintenance support for students from poorer backgrounds. [78521]

Margaret Hodge: The outcome of the student finance review will form part of the strategy document setting out our 10-year vision for the development and reform of higher education. The document will be published in the next few months; it would not be right to pre-empt it here by saying what is or is not planned.

School Funding

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, what the average funding per pupil is in (a) Swindon and (b) England in 2002–03 [79960]

Mr. Miliband: In 2002–03 Swindon's average funding per pupil is £3,170 compared with the average in England of £3,610.

Note:

Figures in cash terms for pupils aged 4–19—rounded to the nearest £10. The figures include the Education SSA plus grants.

Sir Patrick Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how much his Department spent in 2001 on each (a) primary and (b) secondary school pupil in (i) Staffordshire and (ii) Hertfordshire. [79849]

Mr. Miliband: The requested information for 2000–01 is as follows:

(a) Net current expenditure per pupil in maintained pre-primary and primary schools:

(i) Staffordshire £2,240

(ii) Hertfordshire £2,310.

(b) Net current expenditure per pupil in secondary schools:

(i) Staffordshire £2,780

(ii) Hertfordshire £2,950.

All figures in cash terms and rounded to the nearest £10.

Sir Patrick Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how much additional funding has been provided to secondary schools in (i) Staffordshire and (ii) Hertfordshire in the current financial year. [79850]

Mr. Miliband: Most additional funding for schools is allocated to local education authorities and cannot be disaggregated between different types of schools. The following table shows the additional funding that is specifically allocated for secondary education in Staffordshire and Hertfordshire in 2002–2003. Secondary schools will receive more than this from grants that cover all types of school, but the exact amount will depend on local decisions.

Grant	Staffordshire £	Hertfordshire £
School Standards Grant	4,929,600	5,975,100
Specialist Schools	1,624,659	2,023,168
Training Schools	–	155,000
Beacon Schools	92,000	190,500
Key Stage 3 Strategy	1,637,400	1,897,685
School Achievement Awards	317,560	578,020
Vocational GSCEs	58,732	73,203
Electronic Registration Systems	17,200	113,810
Total	8,677,151	11,006,486

Sir Patrick Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many representations on the funding of education in Staffordshire his Department has received since June 2001. [79848]

Mr. Miliband: The Department has answered 87 letters on the funding of education in Staffordshire since June 2001, and has received 5 petitions from schools. In addition a number of Staffordshire residents responded to the consultation on Local Government Funding reform which closed on 30 September: to identify precisely these letters from amongst the very large numbers of responses to the consultation would incur disproportionate cost.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how much was spent on each (a) primary and (b) secondary school pupil in (i) 2001–2 and (ii) 2002–3 in (A) Cambridgeshire, (B) Bedfordshire, (C) Hertfordshire, (D) Northamptonshire, (E) Norfolk, (F) Essex, (G) London, (H) Liverpool and (I) Birmingham. [79569]

Mr Miliband: The following table contains information from 2000–01, the latest year for which data is available:

	LEA	Net Current expenditure per pupil (primary)	Net Current expenditure per pupil (secondary)
A	Cambridgeshire	2,290	2,930
B	Bedfordshire	2,320	2,730
C	Hertfordshire	2,240	2,950
D	Northamptonshire	2,330	2,940
E	Norfolk	2,360	3,150
F	Essex	2,390	3,090
G	Inner London	3,230	4,220
G	Outer London	2,590	3,230
G	Inner and Outer London	2,820	3,540
H	Liverpool	2,670	3,570
I	Birmingham	2,610	3,360

Tuition Fees

Mr Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, what percentage of students from families resident in each government office region were (a) exempt from tuition fees, (b) paying less than full tuition fees and (c) paying no fees at all in the academic year 2002–03 [80047]

Margaret Hodge: Data on contributions towards the cost of tuition by government office region for academic year 2002–03 are not available.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, if he will place in the Library the research analysis that led to his conclusion that a graduate had lifetime earnings £400,000 greater than non-graduates; from which period these data were gathered; whether the sum stated is gross or net of tax; and if he will estimate the sum (a) gross and (b) net of tax. [80065]

Margaret Hodge: The relevant data come from the four quarters Autumn 2000 to Summer 2001 in the Labour Force Survey. The £400,000 figure is gross, and is consistent with conventional practice used by ONS when quoting earnings figures. The equivalent figure, net of income tax, national insurance and other contributions, is around £250,000. For the avoidance of doubt, £400,000 is the earnings premium of a graduate over that of the national average rather than for a non-graduate. The premium over a non-graduate would be significantly higher.

Student Loans

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, what the (a) stock and (b) net annual investment is of student loans; and what the additional cost would be at full market rate of interest. [79851]

Margaret Hodge: At the end of the 2000–01 financial year there were some 2,253,000 borrowers with student loans, either mortgage style or income contingent. This includes 705,000 borrowers with loans which have been sold to the private sector. The total amount outstanding on student outlay was £7,833.2m of which £1,789.9m was in respect of loans sold to the private sector.

The resource cost for student loans issued in the 2000–01 financial year was estimated to be £794m.

Student loans are charged interest at the rate of inflation. A full market rate of interest would be higher and would not increase the costs to public funds. It would, however, increase the total amount repaid by HE leavers and graduates. It would also increase the time taken to repay their loans and the likelihood of loans being written off.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what discussions he has had with the Scottish Executive regarding his Department's review of post-16 student support; [78782]

(2) what discussions he has had with the Scottish Executive regarding the interest rate on student loans. [78779]

Margaret Hodge: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State has had no such discussions so far.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Paul Burrell

Ian Lucas: To ask the Solicitor-General what discussions her Department had in the case of Regina v. Paul Burrell with the Crown Prosecution Service concerning the making of an application for a public interest immunity certificate. [79838]

The Solicitor-General: No such discussions took place. There was never any question of continuing with the prosecution while withholding disclosure of the information and no attempt was made to do so. No Minister was asked to give a PII certificate or signed one, nor was a draft certificate ever prepared, nor was any consideration given by anyone to preparing such a certificate to place before the judge. The judge agreed to postpone the disclosure of the information in the public interest until further enquiries had been carried out and a fuller picture obtained so as to enable properly informed decisions to be made, in particular as to the future conduct of the trial.

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Solicitor-General, if she will investigate the circumstances surrounding the decision of the CPS to prosecute Paul Burrell; and what the cost of the action was to public funds. [79845]

The Solicitor-General: On the information known to the Crown Prosecution Service at the time of the decision last year to bring a prosecution, I have no reason to doubt the assessment made that there was a realistic prospect of securing a conviction and that the public interest was in favour of a prosecution. The cost of the prosecution to public funds has not yet been ascertained.

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Solicitor-General, if she will undertake an inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the collapse of the court case Regina v. Paul Burrell. [79847]

The Solicitor-General: A full statement was made by the prosecution and the facts of the case are already known. A copy of the statement has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The Crown Prosecution Service will be considering carefully the lessons of what happened but, as the Prime Minister has stated, there is no need for an inquiry. This was a unique set of circumstances.

Llew Smith: To ask the Solicitor General, what plans she has to review the procedure for issuing public interest immunity certificates. [80095]

The Solicitor-General: None.

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Solicitor-General, which Ministers signed PII certificates in the case of Regina v. Burrell; and which categories of information these certificates covered. [79843]

The Solicitor-General: No Minister was asked to give a PII certificate or signed one, nor was a draft certificate ever prepared, nor was any consideration given by anyone to preparing such a certificate to place before the judge.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Solicitor-General, if she will make a statement on the discussions between the Attorney-General and the Director of Public Prosecutions about the prosecution of Paul Burrell prior to the decision to end the case; and when he first discussed the decision of the Director of Public Prosecutions to end the case against Paul Burrell. [80059]

The Solicitor-General: The Attorney-General first learnt about the case shortly after his appointment. The Director of Public Prosecutions had drawn the case to the attention of his predecessor in May last year. Thereafter, the case was included in a list of high profile cases in respect of which brief reports are provided to Law Officers on a monthly basis. The Law Officers were not asked for and did not give their views about whether the case should proceed. On Tuesday last week, the Crown Prosecution Service and prosecution counsel drew the attention of the Attorney-General to the new information that had been disclosed by the Palace to the police. Naturally, the Attorney-General's views were sought on how to proceed in the light of that development and he gave them. But in the end, as he made plain should be the case, the decision was made by the CPS following further consideration and having taken leading counsel's advice. At the time that decisions were made, the Director of Public Prosecutions was abroad. He kept in close touch with his office and approved the decision, but there were no direct discussions between the Attorney-General and the Director of Public Prosecutions. They first spoke directly of the matter on 3 November.

Robert Hamill

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Solicitor General, when the Department of Public Prosecutions in Northern Ireland received papers on the investigation into the death of Robert Hamill and when he expects a decision on prosecution to be made. [77619]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 30 October 2002]: A police investigation file relating to the death of Robert Hamill was received in the Director's Office on 7 August 1997. Following consideration of that file a direction was issued on 27 January 1998 to prosecute one person, Paul Hobson, for the scheduled offence of murder and affray. On 25 February 1999 at Belfast Crown Court Hobson was found not guilty of murder but guilty of affray and sentenced to 4 years imprisonment.

On 12 June 2001 a second police investigation file dealing with matters arising out of the investigation into the death of Robert Hamill was received in the Director's Office. Following consideration of the second file, on 20 August 2001 a direction was issued to prosecute two persons, Michael McKee and Andrea McKee, for the offence of doing an act with intent to pervert the course of justice. On 7 May 2002 at Craigavon Crown Court the two persons pleaded guilty to the offence. Michael McKee was sentenced to 6 months imprisonment and Andrea McKee was sentenced to 6 months imprisonment suspended for 2 years.

On 19 December 2001 a third police investigation file dealing further with matters arising from the investigation into the death of Robert Hamill was received in the Director's Office. Following consideration of the third file together with further material which became available in May 2002, a decision as to prosecution of persons reported in that file will issue shortly.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Pesticides

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the pesticides and pest repellent chemicals that have been withdrawn from use in commercial products following EU directives in the last five years; and what the reason was for their withdrawal in each case. [79378]

Mr. Morley: Directive 91/414/EEC concerns the marketing of plant protection products (these are basically pesticides and pest repellent chemicals used in agriculture). From 1998 to 2002 the following chemicals were withdrawn from the market under the first stage of the 91/414/EEC review programme: chlozolinate; dinoterb; DNOC, fentin acetate; fentin hydroxide; fenvalerate; lindane; monolinuron; pyrazophos and quintozene. Decisions to withdraw a further 8 chemicals have been taken but in all these cases the marketing can continue into 2003–2004.

Chlozolinate, fenvalerate, monolinuron and pyrazophos were withdrawn because the companies concerned did not provide, sufficient information to support their review. The other chemicals were withdrawn because they did not meet the requirements laid down in Directive 91/414/EEC. In all these cases concerns were expressed regarding the safety of operators potentially exposed to the chemicals and for some there were also concerns regarding the behaviour of the chemicals in the environment and their possible impact on non-target organisms.

Finally, marketing authorisations for 320 chemicals throughout the EU (of which 45 had UK approvals) will be withdrawn in July 2003 (although a few "essential uses" of some of these chemicals can continue to 2007). In all these cases withdrawal arises because the companies concerned have not supported the chemicals in the second and third stages of the review programme.

Aggregate Imports

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much aggregate has been imported in each of the last five years. [79758]

Mr. Wilson: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Offshore Transmission Grid

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she plans to publish her response to the PB Power Report Concept Study-Western Offshore Transmission Grid published in February. [79529]

Mr. Wilson: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Solar Power

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the estimated cost is of delivering a 100,000 solar PV roof programme funded by 50 per cent. capital grants by 2010; and if she will make a statement. [79949]

Mr. Wilson: The Government Industry Photovoltaic Group Report of March 2001 recommended "The most effective means of encouraging the deployment of PV in the UK would be a major Market Stimulation Programme featuring a 50 per cent. capital grant for 70,000 domestic roofs and a similar grant scheme for larger non—domestic buildings costing around £150 million over 10 years." Taken together this is equivalent to a 100,000 PV roofs programme.

Nuclear Liabilities

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the public consultation held on the proposals for a nuclear liabilities management authority; how many responses were made to the consultation; and if she will place copies of consultation submissions in the Library. [80098]

Mr. Wilson: I will write to my hon. friend and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Energy White Paper

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, if she will make a statement on the purpose, agenda and attendance of each workshop held with stakeholders on the energy White Paper; and if she will make a statement on the outcomes of each. [80346]

Mr. Wilson: We organised expert workshops with stakeholders to stimulate debate on energy issues with a view to informing the preparation of the Energy White Paper. The workshops covered a wide range of issues and included three opening workshops in London,

Glasgow and Newport, a final integrative conference in London and workshops on regional issues, energy policy and long term carbon reductions, energy efficiency renewables and the energy implications of PIU energy review. Workshops and focus groups were also held with the general public. These workshops contributed to the 6,500 contributions received to the consultation. Details are being posted on the DTI's web site at http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/developep/reports.shtml.

Magnox Fuel

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the (a) technical feasibility and (b) cost of converting the dry store for spent magnox fuel at Wylfa into a hardened sub-surface storage vault. [80347]

Mr. Wilson: None. Any such assessment would be a mater for BNFL Magnox Generation and would be subject to regulatory scrutiny.

Renewable Energy

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much capital grant funding is available from 2002 to 2006 for the (a) offshore wind, (b) biomass and (c) solar PV industries as a result of the Comprehensive Spending Review; and if she will make a statement. [80213]

Mr. Wilson: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the progress made in implementing regional assessments and targets for renewable energy provisions; and what effect they have on the planning and promotion at regional and local level of on-shore wind farms. [80010]

Mr. Wilson: The Government initiated regional assessments throughout all regions in the UK. These studies identified each region's renewable energy resource. This information is now available on the DTI Website at: http://www.dti.gov.uk/renewable/oxera report.pdf.

This report also sets out each region's possible contribution to our national 10 per cent. target.

We would encourage Local Planning Authorities to earmark sites in their local development plans for renewable energy developments.

Development plans provide the basis for decisions on specific development proposals. These ensure that planning decisions are not arbitrary and that developers have a measure of certainty about what development is allowed.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, how many applications to develop (a) onshore and (b) offshore wind farms her Department has received in each year since 1997; and how many of these have been approved. [80009]

Mr. Wilson: The following is the information requested:

Onshore Windfarms

	Applications	Approvals
2002 (to date)	0	1

Offshore Windfarms

2002 (to date)	7	2

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Harrow, West (Mr. Thomas) of 17 October 2002, Official Report, c. 891W, what criteria are being used in the development of the United Kingdom wind speed database. [80063]

Mr. Wilson: The UK windspeed database has now been made available on the DTI website at: http://www.dti.gov.uk/renewable/windspeed/online.html.

The data is the result of an air flow model that estimates the effect of topography on wind speed. Each value stored in the database is the estimated average windspeed for a 1 km square at 10m, 25m and 45m above ground level. The database does not take account of local thermally driven winds, topography on a small scale or local surface roughness. The data is intended as a guide to be followed by on-site measurements.

The database uses the Ordnance Survey grid system for Great Britain and the grid system of the Ordnance Survey of Northern Ireland.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what percentage of the United Kingdom's energy is generated from wind energy; and what percentage it will have to be if the Renewables Obligation is to be met in 2010. [80011]

Mr. Wilson: In 2001 0.03 per cent. of the total primary inland consumption of energy in the United Kingdom was accounted for by onshore and offshore wind, with all renewable sources together accounting for 1.3 per cent. Electricity generated from wind accounted for 0.3 per cent. of electricity sold in the UK in 2001 with all renewable sources eligible for the renewables obligation together accounting for 1.5 per cent.

The Government have a target for 10 per cent. of licensed electricity supplies in the UK to be generated from sources eligible for the Renewables Obligation by 2010, but this Obligation is a market based approach and the deployment levels for individual renewables technologies are for the industry rather than the Government. We would, however, expect a significant contribution to the 10 per cent. target to be from onshore and offshore wind energy.

Mobile Phone Masts

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research is under-way into the health and safety issues surrounding the siting of mobile telecommunications masts. [79883]

Mr. Timms: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Regulatory Costs

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate her Department has made of the cost to business of the draft regulations to outlaw discrimination on the grounds of (a) sexual orientation and (b) religion. [79073]

Alan Johnson: Unfortunately I have not been able to glean the information necessary to answer before Parliament is prorogued, but I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Trade Liberalisation

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what role her Department played in the development on the non-paper on trade liberalisation at the recent World Summit on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg; and what outcomes emerged from discussions relating to this paper involving her Department. [77568]

Ms Hewitt: At the end of the World Summit on sustainable Development (WSSD) Bali Prepcom in June, the Chair asked Member States for ideas on how to resolve those areas (which included parts other trade text amongst others) of the Plan of Implementation which had yet to be agreed. The European Commission (acting in accordance with its general mandate from EU member states to negotiate trade issues) and the US agreed a non-paper on the trade, finance and globalisation texts which was submitted to the South Africans as an informal contribution in advance of WSSD in Johannesburg. This was not a formal EU position agreed by member states. The formal EU position was adopted in the Development Council conclusions on WSSD agreed in May prior to the WSSD Bali Prepcom.

All discussions on trade liberalisation issues at Johannesburg itself were based on text negotiated at the Bali Prepcom and developed through subsequent drafts produced by the Chair of the Trade Group (the Antiguan Ambassador to the UN) during WSSD itself. I welcome the fact that the final trade sections of the WSSD text strongly reinforce the commitments made at the WTO Ministerial in Doha in November 2001. The text as agreed by consensus is publicly available on the WSSD website (www.johannesburgsummit.org/).

Shipbuilding

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what financial assistance was provided by the Government to the (a) Shipbuilding Intervention Fund and (b) Home Shipbuilding Credit Guarantee Scheme in (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99, (iii) 1999–00, (iv) 2000–01 and (v) 2001–02; what amounts are outstanding under the HSCGS; what amounts have been written off under the HSCGS; what assessment has taken place of (A) the SIF and (B) the HSCGS; and if she will make a statement. [78269]

Alan Johnson: Unfortunately I have not been able to glean the information necessary to answer before Parliament is prorogued, but I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Broadband

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Totnes (Mr. Steen) of 22 October 2002, Official Report, column 250W, how the £30 million Broadband Fund is being divided amongst the regions and devolved administrations. [80064]

Mr. Timms: The £30 million UK Broadband Fund has been divided amongst the regions and devolved administrations as follows:

Region/Nation	Total Amount Awarded From Broadband Fund (£million)
Scotland	4.39
Wales	2.67
Northern Ireland	1.46
North East	1.46
North West	2.68
Yorkshire and Humberside	3.10
West Midlands	2.08
East Midlands	2.09
East of England	3.22
South West	3.78
South East	2.90
London	0.11

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what assessment she has made of the cost arising from broadband interference caused by powerline telecommunications to high frequency radio transmissions by broadcasters and short range devices used by the police and Government agencies. [78531]

Mr. Timms: The Radiocommunications Agency intends to publish a national consultation later this month to determine the implications, including costs, associated with a number of possible options for limiting emissions from powerline and other wired telecommunication systems that have potential to cause interference to high frequency radio services.

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what steps she is taking to minimise broadband interference caused by powerline telecommunications to high frequency radio transmissions by broadcasters and short range devices used by the police and Government agencies. [78530]

Mr. Timms: The Radiocommunications Agency established a Technical Working Group in March 2001 to determine the compatibility of powerline telecommunication and other broadband wireline systems with radio services operating between 1.6 MHz and 30 MHz. Membership of the group was open to all interested parties and its final report will be published later this month as part of a national consultation. The outcome of the consultation is expected in early 2003. It will be used to inform the Government's contribution to work that is underway in the relevant international standards bodies concerned with limiting broadband telecommunication interference.

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, if she will make a statement on the Government's policy toward internet access via powerline telecommunications. [78529]

Mr. Timms: The Government has set a target of making the UK the most competitive and extensive broadband market of all the G7 countries. We believe this can best be achieved through deployment of a wide range of competing delivery technologies and this includes powerline telecommunications. This technology has the potential to provide broadband connectivity to isolated communities and is currently undergoing some small project trails in Scotland that are part funded by government.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many applications were considered and by whom for the position of DTI South West Regional Broadband Advisor; and if she will make a statement on the training and experience held by the incumbent; [78922]

(2) what the nature is of the relationship between Smart South West and the UK Online for Business Regional Broadband Champion; [78924]

(3) when, by whom and at what cost the appointment of the UK Online for Business Regional Broadband Champion was advertised; [78921]

(4) if she will make a statement on the experience and technical training of the successful candidate selected to be the South West Regional Broadband Unit Broadband Expert; [78923]

(5) if she will make a statement on the competition for the appointment by Smart South West of a UK Online for Business Regional Broadband Champion; and what the remuneration offered was. [78925]

Mr. Timms [holding answers 5 November 2002]: The Department of Trade and Industry is currently setting up a UK Broadband Taskforce, with the aim of extending the availability and take-up of broadband throughout the United Kingdom.

A regional broadband co-ordinator is being appointed in each English region and Devolved Administration. This person will work alongside Regional Development Agencies (RDAs) and Devolved Administrations in order to achieve the unit's overarching aim.

Competition for each of the contracts has been undertaken on an open and transparent basis. Contracts were advertised through the Broadband Stakeholder Group, the Communication Managers' Association and a recruitment agency. In a number of cases RDAs also put forward candidates. The advertising process was run at no cost; the recruitment agency charges a fee if one of their candidates is placed—in line with industry standards. From the candidates put forward a shortlist was compiled in discussion between DTI and the relevant RDA, based on the match between the candidate's CV and the job description. The shortlisted candidates were generally interviewed by a representative of the DTI, the new Head of the UK Broadband Taskforce and a representative of the Regional Development Agency.

In the case of the South West Regional Development Agency, the long-list consisted of seven candidates of which three were interviewed. The successful candidate was considered by each interviewer, independently, to have the required combination of communication skills, knowledge of broadband and regional understanding to perform the role of regional broadband co-ordinator. The remuneration package for the successful candidate is approximately in line with the total remuneration package offered to a Range 10 Civil Servant in the DTI (up to £46,502 plus superannuation, outside London).

Smart South West is a Public Private Partnership whose purpose is to map IT-related projects in the South West Region. The new regional broadband co-ordinator in the South West Region is a former part-time employee of Smart South West. The broadband co-ordinator will work across the region, including with bodies such as Smart South West in order to extend the availability and take-up of broadband.

As part of the appointment and contract management process, we are putting appropriate measures in place in order to ensure that we avoid or minimise potential conflicts of interest.

Nuclear Power Stations

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps will be taken in respect of the decommissioning dismantling and clearance of Nuclear Magnox Reactors in Great Britain. [77598]

Mr. Wilson: BNFL has announced its strategy for the Magnox stations including projected latest dates for their generating lifetimes. As is stated in CM2919 "Review of Radioactive Waste Management Policy—Final Conclusions" published in 1995, the decommissioning strategies of nuclear operators are subject to quinquennial review by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE). Such a review of the decommissioning strategy for the reactors operated by Magnox Electric plc was completed by HSE in February 2002. Details of the strategy, and the outcome of the review, can be found in HSE's report which is available on the HSE website at www.hse.gov.uk/nsd/magdecom.pdf.

As indicated in the recent white paper "Managing the Nuclear Legacy—A Strategy for Action", the detailed timing and operational plans for decommissioning the Magnox stations is one of the matters to be considered by the Liabilities Management Authority (LMA) once established. The LMA will operate openly and transparently and its plans will be published.

Parliamentary Questions/Correspondence

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) parliamentary questions and (b) letters to her from hon. Members in this Session remain unanswered, broken down by those which are (i) one month old, (ii) two months old, (iii) three months old, (iv) four months old and (v) over six months old. [79945]

Ms Hewitt: The Cabinet Office publishes a report to Parliament on an annual basis setting out the volume of Members' correspondence received by Departments. The Report for 2001 was published on Friday 24 May, Official Report column 677W. Copies of previous reports are available in the Library of the House.

The following table shows the number of letters to hon. Members which remain outstanding.

1 Month Old	2 Months	3 Months	4 Months	Over 6 Months
71	47	22	8	—

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer from the Under-Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, of 19 September 2002, Official Report, c.238W, when she will reply to the letter dated 31 January from the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan regarding the Johannesburg Earth Summit. [79338]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 5 November 2002]: I apologise for the delay in responding to the hon. Member's letter. A reply has been sent out today.

Consumer Sector

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what percentage of (a) United Kingdom GDP and (b) the United Kingdom work force the consumer goods and business and consumer services sector accounts for; and if she will make a statement. [78109]

Ms Hewitt: Industries covered by the DTI consumer goods and services unit represented about 14 per cent. of UK total Gross Value Added at basic prices in 2000. The estimate has been derived from the ONS Input-Output Analyses and the ONS Annual Business Inquiry.

Estimate of the UK work force involved in the sector are not available in sufficient detail to provide an estimate, but the ONS Annual Business Inquiry shows it provides 18 per cent. of GB employee jobs.

Subscriptions

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, how much was spent on the UK's subscription to the (a) WTO, (b) Energy Charter Treaty Secretariat, (c) International Energy Agency, (d) International Atomic Energy Agency, (e) Safeguards Support Programmes and (f) Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons in (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99, (iii) 1999–00 and (iv) 2000–01; what the budget is for 2001–02; and if she will make a statement. [78291]

Ms Hewitt: Please see table below.

[all figures in £000s]

Organisation	Actual 97–98	Actual 98–99	Actual 99–00	Actual 00–01	Budget 01–02
WTO	2,794	3,075	3,016	3,348	3,288
Energy Charter Treaty Secretariat (European Energy Charter)	318	217	238	253	260

BAE Systems

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer of 17 June 2002 Official Report, column 28W, on BAE Systems, if she will list the meetings she and her ministers have had with BAE Systems since June 2001, stating in each case the date and subject of the meeting. [79878]

Alan Johnson: Since June 2001, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry and her Ministers have had meetings with BAE Systems on the following dates:

3 July 2001	16 July 2002
13 September 2001	25 July 2002
20 November 2001	5 September 2002
23 May 2002	24 September 2002
12 June 2002	23 October 2002
1 July 2002	31 October 2002

A range of subjects was discussed at these meetings.

Fireworks

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will estimate the number of domestic animals which received veterinary treatment as a result of an accident involving a firework during October, November and December 2001; and what plans she has to launch an investigation into how the health of domestic animals is affected by fireworks. [76529]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have no records of accidents to domestic animals involving fireworks. My colleagues at DEFRA are considering amendments to the Protection of Animals Act 1911 and they will look into whether there is scope to take more effective action where the welfare of captive or domestic animals is being endangered through the reckless discharge of fireworks.

Miners Compensation

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many mining compensation claims resolutions she estimates are being held up by delays in releasing to solicitors the chronic bronchitis and emphysema pensions model on computer disk; [80321]

(2) what proportion of relevant outstanding mining compensation claims she expects to be speeded by release of the first phase of the chronic bronchitis and emphysema pensions model on computer disk; and what proportion will have to await subsequent phases of the model for speedy resolution. [80320]

Mr Wilson: I will write to my hon. Friend.

British Energy

Mr Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria British Energy will have to meet in order for them to gain an extension to their loan agreement with the Government. [78987]

Mr Wilson: No decisions have been taken and no commitments given on British Energy's long term future at this time.

Mr Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry under what terms the Government loan was agreed with British Energy; and whether these terms are under review. [78988]

Mr Wilson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 15 October 2002, Official Report, c.665W, to the hon. Member for South Suffolk (Mr. Yeo) about the credit facility agreement provided to British Energy.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what interest rate was attached to the recent loan made to British Energy; and what contingencies have been put in place in the event that British Energy is unable to repay the loans. [80345]

Mr. Wilson: Full details of the credit facility agreement are commercially confidential unless and until it is made public by British Energy. The Government has taken security over British Energy's assets for the facility provided to the company.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what communications she has had with the European Commissioner Monti in respect of the loan provided to British Energy. [80383]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry met Commissioner Monti on 10 October to discuss various matters including rescue aid to British Energy.

Women in Science

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what plans she has to publish the Greenfield Report. [74918]

Ms Hewitt: I am looking forward to receiving the final version of Baroness Greenfield's report on a stronger strategic approach to promoting women in science, engineering and technology by the end of this month and will publish it as soon as possible thereafter. We will also publish the Government's response once we have had a chance to consider the report's recommendations properly.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) when she will publish the Greenfield Report on women in science; [74964]

(2) when she will publish her responses to the recommendations in the Greenfield Report. [74965]

Ms Hewitt: I am looking forward to receiving the final version of Baroness Greenfield's report on a stronger strategic approach to promoting women in science, engineering and technology by the end of this month and will publish it as soon as possible thereafter. We will also publish the Government's response once we have had a chance to consider the report's recommendations properly.

Women's Enterprise

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what she is doing to increase the number of women setting up their own business; and if she will make a statement. [76228]

Ms Hewitt: DTI is addressing the issue of women's enterprise principally through the Small Business Service and its network of Business Link Operators.

SBS has been leading on cross-government work on developing Women in Business policy. It has built up good relations with a number of organisations looking into this area—including the recently formed Prowess which brings together representatives of business support organisations targeting help at female entrepreneurs. Prowess has been supported by my Department's Phoenix fund. The Phoenix Development Fund is funding 96 projects to support innovative approaches to promoting enterprise in disadvantaged areas and under-represented groups, including women. All of the projects are open to women, but 20 focus specifically on their needs.

I attended the formal launch of Prowess on 30 October which highlighted their role in raising awareness of the needs of women entrepreneurs and the need to work towards equal numbers of women and men starting in business.

Post Office

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry who holds the contracts to provide the IT system to run the post office card system for ACT. [79152]

Mr. Timms: These are matters that fall within the day-to-day responsibility of Post Office Limited and I have therefore asked the Chief executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what the (a) start date, (b) planned completion date, (c) current expected completion date, (d) planned cost and (e) current estimated cost are of the IT system to support the Post Office Card Account. [79956]

Mr. Timms: These are matters that fall within the day to day responsibility of Post Office Ltd. and I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether Horizon swipecard software will be used to support the Post Office Card account. [79923]

Mr. Timms: These are matters that fall within the day to day responsibility of Post Office Ltd. and I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Engineering Industry

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what measures she is taking to promote British engineering; [79545]

(2) what measures she is taking with the Department of Education and Skills to increase the number of graduates in the engineering sector. [79466]

Mr. Wilson: I am taking a number of measures to promote British engineering. British engineering is able to benefit from the services of British Trade International in competing in overseas markets. And there is a range of specialist activity such as the "Capability Statement" documents on education and training in the oil and gas industry which describe the roles UK trained and educated engineers play in all the major centres of oil and gas production world-wide.

The Department promotes engineering in key overseas markets through the deployment of International Technology Promoters who promote collaboration between UK firms and overseas counterparts. Smaller engineering firms have access to additional support through a secondments programme, which enables SMEs to improve their competitive position by spending up to a year in a foreign company.

I am taking a range of measures: to encourage young people to consider engineering as a rewarding career choice; to increase the attractiveness of degree courses in engineering; and to provide a clear progression path though school, FE and HE. I am particularly keen to ensure individual learners and employers are offered flexible training opportunities for people in the workforce.

The Government accept that without an adequate supply of young people studying the sciences, technologies, engineering and mathematics, the UK's long-term prospects are bleak. The Government aims to increase young people's engagement in science and technology through increased activity in schools that will inspire young people and improve perceptions of the relevance of the curriculum to the world of work. For its part the DTI is working closely with our colleagues in the DfES to ensure that in response to Sir Gareth Roberts' Report "SET for Success" a number of measures are taken to improve the supply of people with science, technology, engineering and mathematics skills. For example: an additional investment of £100 million a year by 2005–06 (in addition to extra resources for the Department for Education and Skills) to implement the recommendations of the Review

Government will also be funding the Research Councils to increase the minimum PhD stipend to £12,000 by 2005–06, which should also enable the average PhD stipend to rise to over £13,000 by 2005–06 and investing in research careers by increasing funds for PhD training.

Sir Gareth's Report recommends that the Government increase its support for SETNET, (the Science, Engineering, Technology and Maths Network) and the UK-wide network of 53 SETPoints that it administers which channel Science, Technology, Engineering and Maths (STEM) activities supported by industry into schools. This network also administers the Science and Engineering Ambassadors programme. The Government is still considering how best to respond to these specific recommendations.

The Government are also committed to supporting the new Engineering and Technology Board, which has replaced the former Engineering Council and has the more effective promotion of science, technology, engineering and maths as one of its key objectives.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate she has made of the number of engineers educated in the UK who were working abroad in each of the last five years. [79574]

Mr. Wilson: This information is not available.

Recruitment (Over-50s)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of new recruits to her Department in the past two years were aged 50 and over. [79310]

Ms Hewitt: 7.8 per cent. of new recruits to my Department in the past two years were 50 and over.

Lighter Refills

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what action she will take in accordance with European legislation to allow cigarette lighter refills to be limited to a 5ml can size. [79585]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Environmental and Social Responsibility

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many of the FTSE 350 companies have reported on the environmental and social implications of their activities since January; and what assessment she has made of the quality of these reports; [79054]

(2) what assessment she has made of the merits of companies' reportings of environmental and social impacts of their activities. [79056]

Miss Melanie Johnson: In July 2002, the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs contacted all companies in the FTSE 350 to assess the number companies reporting on their environmental performance.

99 companies currently report on their environmental performance, including data on their key impacts. Of those 99 companies, 20 have produced their first report since December 2001. 140 companies make information on their environmental performance publicly available, but fall short of full reporting.

The General Guidelines on Environmental Reporting published in November 2001, suggests contents and key indicators for the quality of individual company environmental reports.

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, how the Government will ensure that its corporate policies on social and environmental responsibility of companies help meet its sustainable development targets. [79053]

Mr. Timms: The Government's approach on both Corporate Social Responsibility and Sustainable Development is subject to extensive inter-departmental co-ordination and co-operation. The teams in DTI supporting these processes are both located in the Department's Sustainable Development Unit with a unified management structure, ensuring a closely integrated approach on the Government's sustainable development and CSR objectives.

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer of the Prime Minister on 16 October 2002, Official Report, c. 310, what discussions her Department has held regarding social responsibility with (a) business and (b) groups representing civil society, the environment, labour standards and human rights and (c) other organisations. [79170]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department has consulted widely on Corporate Social Responsibility with a range of different stakeholders. A series of Ministerial Round Tables were held last year, and two further Round Tables took place in September with, respectively, business and groups representing civil society. In addition, Ministers and officials regularly meet representatives of the different interest groups bilaterally, as well as participating in meetings and events organised by them.

Miners Pensions

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average pension paid to members of the British Coal Staff Superannuation Scheme is in (a) Wales, (b) Scotland and (c) England; and what the average pension paid to widows and widowers is in the same scheme. [78969]

Mr. Wilson: These are matters for the British Coal Staff Superannuation Scheme. I am informed, however, that the average pensions paid for the year to 30 September 2002 were:

Average pension paid

Wales	8,948.60
Scotland	8,598.53
England	10,331.54

Average pension paid to widows or widowers

Wales	5,198.71
Scotland	5,237.99
England	5,586.34

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average pension paid to members of the miners pension fund is in (a) Wales, (b) Scotland and (c) England; and what the average pension paid to widows or widowers is in the same scheme. [78960]

Mr. Wilson: These are matters for the Mineworkers Pension Scheme. I am informed, however, that the average pensions paid in the year to 30 September 2002 were:

Wales	2,010.50
Scotland	1,997.56
England	2,564.19

Average pension paid to widows or widowers

Wales	1,456.67
Scotland	1,508.07
England	1,629.51

Insolvency Service

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress she has made on introducing new pay scales for the Insolvency Service; and what recent discussions she has had with the Treasury about their introduction. [79063]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The outline of the new Pay and Grading system for The Insolvency Service was contained in a pay remit which has been formally submitted to the Treasury and discussions are continuing.

World Trade Organisation

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the brief was of the British civil servant who accompanied the Ghanaian delegation to the Doha talks. [78840]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 5 November 2002]: No British civil servant accompanied the Ghanaian delegation to the Doha talks. At the specific request of the Government of Ghana, a consultant working in the Ghanaian Ministry of Trade and Industry on a two-year long DFID funded Trade Policy Project accompanied the Ghanaian delegation. The consultant's role, as set out in an official statement by the Ghana Ministry of Trade & Industry in December 2001, was to observe the WTO process and analyse the issues for the Ghanaian Government. The consultant did not participate in any of the negotiations.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how the staff of the World Trade Organisation are selected; and what the process was by which the deputy director generals were recently appointed; and if she will make a statement. [79193]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 6 November 2002]: WTO staff at all grades below Deputy Director General are selected on merit after open advertisement. Interviews are conducted by WTO management on the basis of staff rules agreed by WTO members.

The appointment of the four Deputy Director Generals is a matter for the Director General who makes his decision in consultation with WTO members.

The Director General is chosen by all WTO members, after a call for candidates, on the basis of consensus.

Renewables Obligation

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce banding of renewable obligation certificates under the Renewables Obligation; and if he will make a statement. [79950]

Mr. Wilson: There are no plans to introduce banding of the Renewables Obligation. The Renewables Obligation is a market led measure and will remain so. The Obligation is helping the UK renewable industry to take forward those renewable technologies that are close to becoming commercially competitive. Government grants continue to support the development of technologies still some way from commercial viability.

Public Service Agreements

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which of her Department's Public Service Agreements relate to fuel poverty reduction; and what progress has been made to date in achieving them. [79500]

Ms Hewitt: My Department has recently agreed a PSA target for 2003–2006 to ensure the UK ranks in the top 3 most competitive energy markets in the EU and G7 in each year, whilst on course to maintain energy security and to achieve fuel poverty objectives. We also have a joint target with DEFRA to improve the environment and the sustainable use of natural resources, including through the use of energy saving technologies, to help to reduce greenhouse gas emissions by 12.5 per cent. from 1990 levels and move towards a 20 per cent. reduction in carbon dioxide emissions by 2010.

Fuel poverty objectives will be measured using the relevant fuel poverty targets for England, as defined and set out in "The UK Fuel Poverty Strategy",

The number of households in fuel poverty has been reducing since 1996 as has the number of vulnerable fuel poor. In broad terms it is estimated that the number of fuel poor households in England has fallen from about 4.3 million in 1996 to about 2.8 million in 2000 (when housing costs and ISMI are included as income), with the number of vulnerable fuel poor estimated to have fallen from about 3.0 million to about 2.3 million in the same time.

The 2001 English House Condition Survey will update the information on the extent of fuel poverty in England. Results from this will be published in the annual update of the UK Fuel Poverty Strategy which should be published early in 2003.

Nuclear Power

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the proposals put forward by the European Commissioner de Palacio to the Commission on 6 November concerning the harmonisation of nuclear reactor safety and radioactive waste management across the EU. [80343]

Mr. Wilson: Officials in my Department and DEFRA are taking preliminary steps to assess the implications for the UK. It is important to remember that the proposals currently under discussion within the Commission could be changed significantly before any proposal is made to the Council.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what additional resources have been made available to her Office of Civil Nuclear Security following the terrorist attacks of 11 September 2001. [80344]

Mr. Wilson: It has been agreed with the Treasury that the budget for the Office for Civil Nuclear Security will be increased by £200,000 for the financial year 2002–2003 and by £300,000 for the financial year 2003–2004

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the public consultation on the proposed revisions to civil nuclear security arrangements; how many responses were received; and if she will place copies of them in the Library. [80094]

Mr. Wilson: The Department has drawn up proposals for the Nuclear Industries Security Regulations which will provide a clarified and updated legislative basis for security regulation in the UK's civil nuclear industry.

The Department has carried out a public consultation exercise on the proposals and is considering the 27 responses it has received with a view to making the regulations as soon as possible.

The Department will publish a document summarising the responses received, and its responses to the points raised. As explained in the consultation document for the regulations, this will not identify individual responses. This is for security reasons. Nor will the summary document refer to issues with potential implications for operational security.

A copy of this document will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Liabilities Management Unit

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the cost of creating and operating the Liabilities Management Unit has been to date; and what the projected cost of the LMU until its dissolution is. [77298]

Ms Hewitt: Between 1 April and 30 September 2002, my Department spent £4.26m on setting up and running the Liabilities Management Unit. I expect the full cost for the 02–03 financial year to be around £10.9m. Similar annual expenditure is expected in the run up to the establishment of the Liabilities Management Authority.

Women's Rights

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry and Minister for Women what assessment her Department has made of the recent Economic and Social Research Council Report on disparities in salaries between men and women. [78824]

Ms Hewitt: The Government welcome the ESRC's recent report, entitled "Diversity in Britain's Labour Market", as a contribution to the debate about women's earnings.

The report confirms that the pay gap has many complex causes. The government is tackling these underlying problems by encouraging equal pay reviews; introducing the annual Castle Awards and Fair Pay Champions and providing additional funding of £151,867 (on top of the initial £145,000) to trade unions, for training representatives in equal pay issues in the workplace. Work-Life Balance initiatives, the right to request reduced hours, improved and extended maternity rights and the National Childcare Strategy will also help to tackle both the full-time and part-time pay gap.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on (a) the work of the UN Commission on the Status of Women and (b) her Department's financial support for the Commission. [78665]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

The UN Commission on the Status of Women (CSW) plays an important role in promoting women's rights, developing follow up to the 1995 Fourth World Conference on Women and has a catalytic role in mainstreaming a gender perspective into policies and programmes of the UN system. It was established by the Economic and Social Council, which elects CSW's 45 members for four-year terms.

The UK is an active member of the Commission and takes a leading role in the development of its policy and work programme, reflecting the UK's commitment to promote gender equality. The UK sends a strong delegation to the annual session of the Commission in New York, including officials from the DTI, FCO and DfID, plus members of the Women's National Commission.

The Commission's operating costs are funded through the UN Regular Budget to which the UK contributes 5.6 per cent. (the total Regular Budget is $2,625 million per year). Additional voluntary UK funding is provided to support the work of the UN Secretariat to prepare for CSW. In 2002, this included £10,000 from DfID for development-related expert group meetings held in advance of CSW to facilitate discussion and help the Secretariat produce reports on the Commission's priority themes. In preparation for CSW's 2003 session DfID will provide similar funding for expert group meetings.

Trade Partners UK

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will place in the Library a copy of the standard contract letter which is drawn up between Trade Partners UK and secondees from private companies before they start their secondment. [78150]

Ms Hewitt: Trade Partners UK is the Trade and Development arm of British Trade International—the joint DTI/FCO Trade Development and Inward Investments body. Depending on the nature of the secondment the contracts can be with either DTI or FCO. I have today arranged for the standard contract letter between the DTI and the secondee, and the standard contract between the Department and the company to be placed in the Library of the House. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has arranged for standard contract letters with the FCO also to be placed in the Library.

General Agreement on Trade in Services

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Morley and Rothwell (Mr. Challon) of 31 October 2002. Official Report, 989, if she will define what the (a) commercial and (b) competitive bases are for supplying public services under the GATS agreement. [79906]

Ms Hewitt: The GATS agreement contains no definition of these terms. WTO Members retain the right to define their own public services.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on how many occasions between 31 March 2001 and 31 March 2002 (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental special advisers have travelled abroad in an official capacity; what places were visited; and how much each visit cost. [80361]

Ms Hewitt: Between 31 March 2001 and 31 March 2002 a Departmental Special Adviser accompanied me to Brussels on one occasion, to Madrid on two occasions and to Washington on one occasion. It is not practicable separately to identify the cost of these visits, but each journey complied with the Civil Service Code.

Corporate Governance

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations she has made on the European Commission's plans to enhance regulation on corporate governance. [80042]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I welcome publication on 4 November 2002 by the Commission of the Report of the High Level Group of Company Law experts ("A Modern Regulatory Framework for Company Law in Europe") on matters related to company law and corporate governance. I recognise the considerable work that has gone into this against a very demanding timetable and will be reviewing its recommendations in detail.

I consider that the United Kingdom is well placed to contribute to the debate on corporate governance regulation within the European Union. Important UK initiatives include:

Publication of the White Paper ("Modernising Company Law") in July following completion of the Company Law Review last year;

An independent review of Non-Executive Directors led by Derek Higgs which began in April;

The work of the Co-ordinating Group on Audit and Accounting Issues which issued an Interim report in July;

and Review of the Regulatory Regime of the Accountancy Profession which published a consultation document in October 2002.

In order that this work can be reflected in the Commission's emerging plans. I have ensured that the Commission has been kept fully informed and aware of the ideas and thinking being generated by these, and other, domestic corporate governance initiatives through personal meetings and correspondence with the Commission, attendance at the Competitiveness Council on 30 September 2002 and follow up meetings at senior official level with the Commission.

Turkey

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to visit Turkey. [79933]

Ms Hewitt: I have no plans to visit Turkey in the immediate future.

EU Agency Workers Directive

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will place in the Library a copy of the EC legal appraisal of the competence of the proposed agency workers draft directive to cover pay; and if she will make a statement. [76662]

Alan Johnson: I am not able to put the requested information in the House of Commons library. As we said in the Explanatory Memorandum which we laid before this house in May 2002, "there is an issue as to whether the directive can cover pay. The proposal applies an equal treatment principle to certain 'basic working and employment conditions' listed at article 3.1*(d)*, including 'pay'. However, Article 137(6) provides that, 'the provisions of this article shall not apply to pay'. In the light of this, the Government took the view when agreeing to directives 97/81/EC and 99/70/EC on part-time work and fixed term work respectively, that these directives, which also have article 137 as a legal base, could not cover pay. On the face of it, it seems difficult to reconcile the specific inclusion of pay in the directive with the provision in Article 137(6)." The House of Commons European Scrutiny Committee has endorsed this approach, following a scrutiny debate on 10 July 2002.

Employment Tribunals

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make provision to enable employment tribunal cases to be heard in North Staffordshire; and if she will make a statement. [79007]

Alan Johnson: Unfortunately I have not been able to glean the information necessary to answer before Parliament is prorogued, but I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy in the Library of the House.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many cases were referred to the employment tribunals in Shrewsbury for dispute resolution from Stoke-on-Trent in each of the last five years. [79009]

Alan Johnson: It is not possible to interrogate the Employment Tribunals Service database at the Shrewsbury tribunal office to ascertain this information and a manual search of the public register of applications could only be done at disproportionate cost.

However, a recent manual exercise which recorded the originating postcode of tribunal applications between 1 February and 28 June 2002 indicated that 275 cases came from postcode areas prefixed ST1–13 (covering Stoke-on-Trent and those surrounding ST postcode areas which fall within the jurisdiction of the Shrewsbury office). During the same period, the tribunals in England and Wales registered 31,609 applications.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, if she will revise the map advising those travelling to the employment tribunal in Shrewsbury to include details of how to arrive by car and by public transport from Stoke-on-Trent. [79008]

Alan Johnson: Unfortunately I have not been able to glean the information necessary to answer before Parliament is prorogued, but I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy in the Library of the House.

Electricity Disruption (Herefordshire)

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will set up an inquiry into the response of the electricity industry to the situation in Herefordshire caused by the storms of 26 and 27 October. [79980]

Mr. Wilson: I have already launched a study into the performance of companies in their handling of the storms.

It will look at:

the robustness of the networks

the preparations for the storms–acting on weather warnings

the comparisons of performance with previous storms and events

the telephone system and provision of information to customers the automated information systems

the availability of management and deployment of staff and resources

the availability of materials and the companies' perception of lessons learned.

The findings will be mapped across to those of a study carried out earlier into the resilience and robustness of our electricity infrastructure.

Intellectual Property Rights

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will seek to lift restrictions on the export of generic drugs within the TRIPS Agreement at the WTO mini-ministerial meeting in Sydney on 14 November. [79726]

Ms Hewitt: The Doha "Declaration on TRIPS and Public Health" made clear that the TRIPS Agreement should be interpreted and implemented in such a way as to protect public health and promote access to medicines for all.

The EU is currently working with all WTO Members to find a solution to the issue of how WTO Members with insufficient manufacturing capacities in the pharmaceutical sector (mainly developing countries and Least Developed Countries) can make effective use of compulsory licensing under the TRIPS Agreement. We are hopeful that an effective and workable solution will be reached by the deadline of the end of the year.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what plans she has following the Commission on Intellectual Property rights report to call for a substantive review and revision of TRIPS; and what plans she has to recommend extending TRIPS implementation deadlines to all developing countries. [79727]

Ms Hewitt: The Government are currently considering the report of the Commission on Intellectual Property Rights (CIPR) and plans to respond to the recommendations contained in the CIPR report early in the New Year. However, the Government have no plans to call for substantive review and revision of TRIPS.

The TRIPS Agreement lays down procedures for extending implementation deadlines for the Least Developed Countries (LDCs). The general implementation deadline is 2005 but an extension to 2016 was agreed for pharmaceutical products at the WTO Ministerial Conference in Doha. There is no specific mechanism for extending TRIPS implementation deadlines for all developing countries.

The UK Government work through the EU on issues relating to the TRIPS Agreement. The UK Government support the development of objective criteria to form the basis upon which extensions on TRIPS transition periods should be agreed. The Government therefore support the introduction into TRIPS of a mechanism for extending transition periods for individual developing countries.

Airship Technology

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer of 31 October 2002, Official Report, c.963W, what support has been given to British companies in the development of airship technology that could be used for fixed mobile telecommunications purposes. [79970]

Mr. Timms: The Department has provided support to the development of airship technology through the Smart Exceptional Project scheme and its civil aeronautics research programme. The aim of the support has been to enhance technical capability for a number of potential applications, which could include mobile telecommunications purposes.

Regulation

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many new regulations were imposed on UK businesses in each year since 1997–98. [79074]

Nigel Griffiths: The number of Statutory Instruments (SIs) that this Department has passed is as follows:

Year	SIs
1997	130
1998	135
1999	178
2000	148
2001	126
Jan-Oct 2002	100

Only a small proportion of SIs have a significant impact on business. Of the 100 SIs so far produced in 2002, 11 have produced benefits to business and 78 have had negligible or no impact. A regulatory impact assessment is produced for all SIs that have a cost to or benefit for business and copies are available from the Libraries of the House.

The information is currently being collated.

Export Licences

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many licence applications for the export of mass spectrometers to Iran have been made in each year since 1997; how many applications have been granted; how much and what value of mass spectrometers have been exported to Iran in each year; what undertakings were sought about end-use; and what end-use monitoring has been undertaken. [78862]

Nigel Griffiths: Unfortunately I have not been able to answer before Parliament is prorogued, but I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy the letter in the Library of the House

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many high-risk products/dual use pathogens and component materials related to the production of chemical and biological warfare capabilities have been refused export licenses to (a) Israel, (b) Egypt and (c) Sudan since the implementation of the her Department's Dual Use Items (Export Control) Regulations in 2001. [79196]

Nigel Griffiths: The export of dual use pathogens is controlled under entries 1C351, 1C352, 1C353 and 1C354 of Council Regulations (EC) 1334/2000 and 1C992 of the Dual Use Items (Export Control) Regulations of 2000. The Dual Use Items (Export Control) Regulations 2000 came into force on 28 September 2000.

Between 28 September 2000 and 25 October 2002, no Standard Individual Export Licence applications or Open Individual Export Licence applications were refused, for items with the above ratings, where the end users were in Israel, Egypt or Sudan.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what applications for export licences have been made by BAE Systems/the British Aerospace group, and for which destinations, in the last five years for (a) Hawk aircraft and (b) spare parts for Hawk aircraft. [80323]

Nigel Griffiths: Unfortunately I have not been able to answer before Parliament is prorogued, but I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what export licences have been issued, when and for which destinations, for (a) Hawk aircraft and (b) spare parts for Hawk aircraft in the last five years. [80322]

Nigel Griffiths: Unfortunately I have not been able to answer before Parliament is prorogued, but I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what export licences have been issued in the last 10 years for (a) arms and (b) military supplies to Zimbabwe. [80326]

Nigel Griffiths: Unfortunately I have not been able to answer before Parliament is prorogued, but I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what applications for arms export licences have been made by (a) John Bredenkamp and (b) companies controlled by John Bredenkamp, and for which destinations in the last five years; and which of these applications for licences were granted. [80324]

Nigel Griffiths: Unfortunately I have not been able to answer before Parliament is prorogued, but I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what applications have been made in the last five years for licences for the export of (a) arms and (b) military supplies to the Democratic Republic of the Congo; and how many such licences were issued. [80327]

Nigel Griffiths: Unfortunately I have not been able to answer before Parliament is prorogued, but I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what applications for export licences have been received in the last five years for (a) arms and (b) military supplies to Zimbabwe. [80325]

Nigel Griffiths: Unfortunately I have not been able to answer before Parliament is prorogued, but I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many British export licences to Iraq have been authorised in the last 12 months. [79931]

Nigel Griffiths: Unfortunately I have not been able to answer before Parliament is prorogued, but I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many British export licences have been issued, and to which countries, in the last 12 months. [79932]

Nigel Griffiths: It would entail disproportionate cost to establish how many British export licences have been issued, and to which countries, in the last 12 months. However, details of all relevant British export licences are published by calendar year and destination in the Government's Annual Reports on Strategic Export Controls; copies of which are available from the Libraries of the House.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on her assessment of the need for end-user controls within UK legislation on arms; and whether she plans secondary legislation under the Export Control Act 2002 that will introduce a more rigorous system of end-user controls. [79725]

Nigel Griffiths: The Government have made clear its commitment to effective monitoring of the end-use of UK defence exports where this can make a genuine contribution to preventing their diversion or misuse. However, follow-up monitoring can only confirm if UK exports have been misused or diverted after the export as taken place. We believe that the most effective way to prevent misuse or diversion of UK equipment is by rigorous assessment at the export licensing stage. To this end we have taken a number of steps to strengthen end-user risk assessment in the export licensing process. Before taking a decision on export licences, Ministers take into account all reliable information about end-users of potential concern, including reporting from other Government Departments and UK posts overseas, and also from any relevant information received from Non-Governmental Organisations and other external sources. Overseas posts have standing instructions to report any misuse of UK-origin defence equipment so that it can be taken into account in the licensing process. These measures do not require legislation and the Government does not therefore propose to include specific provisions on end-use monitoring in the secondary legislation to be introduced under the Export Control Act 2002.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the consultation period on secondary legislation on the Export Control Act 2002 will begin. [79722]

Nigel Griffiths: The Government expect to publish the draft orders they propose to make under the Export Control Act 2002 and an accompanying consultation document before the end of the year.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what plans she has to propose legislation on arms covering the activites of UK arms brokers wherever they are located; and if she will make a statement; [79723]

(2) what plans she has for secondary legislation on the Export Control Act 2002 to cover extra-territorial controls on the activities of UK arms brokers. [79724]

Nigel Griffiths: The Export Control Act 2002 contains a new general power that allows controls to be introduced on arms trafficking or brokering (referred to in the Act as trade) by persons in the UK and UK persons overseas. The Government has stated that it will use these powers to introduce extra-territorial controls on trade in controlled goods to embargoed destinations, trade in equipment the export of which has already been banned because of evidence of its use in torture, and trade in long-range missiles.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many licence applications for the export of furnaces to Iran have been made in each year since 1997; how many applications have been granted; how many and what value of furnaces have been exported to Iran in each year; what undertakings were sought about end-use; and what end-use monitoring has been undertaken. [78863]

Nigel Griffiths: Unfortunately I have not been able to answer before Parliament is prorogued, but I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, how many licence applications for the export of inertial equipment using accelerometers to Iran have been made in each year since 1997; how many applications have been granted; how many and what value of such equipment have been exported to Iran in each year; what undertakings were sought about end-use; and what end-use monitoring has been undertaken. [78860]

Nigel Griffiths: Unfortunately I have not been able to answer before Parliament is prorogued, but will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, how many licence applications for the export of maraging steels to Iran have been made in each year since 1997; how many applications have been granted; how much and what value of maraging steels have been exported to Iran in each year; what undertakings were sought about end-use; and what end-use monitoring has been undertaken. [78861]

Nigel Griffiths: Unfortunately I have not been able to answer before Parliament is prorogued, but I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Training Initiatives

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment has taken place of (a) Stockholding 2000, (b) Export Strategy and (c) Benchmarking club training initiatives; what costs were associated with each project in each year since 1997–98; and if she will make a statement. [78268]

Ms Hewitt: It is not clear which initiatives the hon. Member is referring to. If he writes with further information I will respond in detail.

John Bredenkamp

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussion her Department's officials have had in the last three years with (a) John Bredenkamp and (b) companies controlled by John Bredenkamp. [80329]

Nigel Griffiths: Unfortunately I have not been able to answer before Parliament is prorogued, but I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Ageism

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what strategies her Department has to ensure that there is no ageism in recruitment and retention processes. [79295]

Ms Hewitt: All applications for employment in my Department are considered on their merits, against the criteria and competences specified for the advertised vacancies.

The Department's internal career development structure is governed by a diversity and equality policy which ensures that job opportunities are open to all staff regardless of their age. We are also working with the Employers Forum on Age to further develop initiatives and to share best practice with a range of public and private employers.

The normal age of retirement for staff in my Department is either 60 for the Senior Civil Service or 65 for other staff.

Departmental Initiatives

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the schemes and initiatives sponsored by her Department and its agencies which are not the subject of national roll out, showing (a) the authorities or areas covered by the scheme and (b) the budget of the scheme in the last year for which information is available. [75674]

Ms Hewitt: Many DTI sponsored services are delivered at a regional and local level through Regional Development Agencies, Business Links and other local and regional organisations. These bodies often undertake local publicity campaigns for Government-sponsored services. To provide a list of this activity could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

My Department does run pilot schemes in certain localities from time to time, for example the SBS is currently piloting the City Growth Strategy in four regions in England (London, East Midlands, South West and North West). The total budget for this pilot is £1.5 million.

Public Consultations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what public consultations have been commenced by her Department in each month since 10 September; and what the (a) start date, (b) closing date and (c) website address of each were. [80274]

Ms Hewitt: The consultation documents published by the Department from 10 September until 5 November are as follows:

	Date Published	Date Closes
Consultation on Topics for Forsight Projects	10–09–02	04–12–02
Consultation on Competition Commission Monetary Penalties	18–09–02	16–12–02

National Minimum Wage

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many successful prosecutions for failure to pay the national minimum wage there have been in (a) the London Borough of Enfield, (b) Greater London and (c) the United Kingdom since its introduction; and if she will make a statement. [78088]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

The National Minimum Wage Act 1998 contains a number of provisions empowering enforcement officers to take civil action against non-paying employers and the Inland Revenue always use these in the first instance.

Since the minimum wage was introduced in April 1999 the Inland Revenue has issued around 450 enforcement notices requiring employers to start paying the minimum wage and make good any arrears, and identified over £11 million in arrears. A minority of disputed cases have been considered by employment tribunals. To date there have been no criminal prosecutions in relation to underpayment of the minimum wage.

TREASURY

Fuel Duty

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer If he will make a statement on his policy on the rates of duty on biodiesel and bioethanol. [78237]

John Healey: All duty rates are reviewed annually as part of the Budget process. In doing so, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer takes into account a range of economic, social and environmental factors.

Tax Incentives (Pensions)

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on tax incentives for occupational pension schemes. [78238]

Ruth Kelly: The Government understand how important tax incentives are in encouraging retirement provision. The current pensions tax system is under review and we will consult on proposed changes later this year.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to change tax incentives for pensions provision. [78257]

Ruth Kelly: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer of earlier today to the Member for Hamilton, South (Mr. Tynan)

Small Business

Mr. Baron: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry regarding the impact of taxes and his deregulation policy on small businesses. [78239]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chancellor meets regularly with my right hon. Friend, at which time he discusses a full range of relevant issues, including the Government's success at reducing the corporate tax burden on companies and introducing such reforms as a R&D tax credit and improvements to the capital gains tax regime.

Dividend Tax Credits (Pension Funds)

Phil Sawford: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the long-term implications are of the abolition of dividend tax credits for pension funds; and if he will make a statement. [78240]

Ruth Kelly: The withdrawal of payable tax credits on dividends was part of a package of reforms that included cuts in corporation tax and the abolition of advance corporation tax. These changes were designed to improve the climate for long-term investment in the UK. In the long run, this should benefit all investors—including pension funds and those saving for retirement.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has with other Ministers on the effects of his policies on pension funds. [78254]

Ruth Kelly: Treasury Ministers have many discussions with other Ministers on a range of matters, including pensions.

EU Stability Pact

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with other EU finance Ministers about the stability and growth pact. [78241]

Ruth Kelly: The Government support a prudent interpretation of the Stability Pact, which takes into account the impact of the economic cycle, sustainability and the important role of public investment. We continue to discuss this with our EU colleagues.

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made on his five economic tests for euro entry of the effect of the operation of the stability and growth pact. [78249]

Ruth Kelly: The Government have consistently made clear that it supports a prudent interpretation of the Stability and Growth Pact that takes into account the economic cycle, sustainability and the important role of public investment.

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the differences between his rules governing the level of public spending and those operated within the stability pact adopted within the Eurozone. [78246]

Ruth Kelly: As set out in paragraph 2.65 of the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report, the Budget 2002 projections are consistent with the Government's prudent interpretation of the Stability and Growth Pact which takes account of the economic cycle, sustainability and the important role of public investment (as specified in Article 104 of the EU Treaty).

Manufacturing Employment (North-West)

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the change in the manufacturing employment in the North West in 2001. [78242]

John Healey: Manufacturing employment declined at a much slower rate in the North West than in the UK as a whole in the 12 months to June 2002, despite declining at a faster rate than in the UK as a whole through 2001.

BCCI

Keith Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received concerning the settlement arrangements for the creditors and ex-employees of BCCI. [78243]

Ruth Kelly: The hon. Gentleman wrote to the Paymaster General, who arranged for him to meet Inland Revenue officials recently to discuss the tax issues arising. I understand the meeting was a constructive and helpful one.

Overseas Aid Budget

Mr. Caton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the UK Overseas Aid Development budget to reach the UN target level of 0.7 per cent. of gross national income. [78244]

John Healey: The Government remain fully committed to reaching the UN 0.7 per cent. ODA/GNI target. In the 2002 Spending Review we made substantial increases to the aid budget. The UK's level of overseas development assistance will be increased to 0.33 per cent. by 2003/04, up from 0.26 per cent. in 1997, and will reach 0.40 per cent. of GNI by 2005/06. This is the largest ever increase in UK aid and represents a 93 per cent. real terms increase since 1997.

Aid effectiveness is also important as well as aid volumes. We are committed to redirecting the development assistance budget to the poorest countries, particularly those with effective governments pursuing high growth and pro-poor economic and social policies. In addition, we have untied all our aid as from 1 April 2001.

Debt Relief (Africa)

Norman Lamb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on debt relief in respect of those countries affected by famine in Africa. [78245]

John Healey: The Government are very concerned about food crises in Africa and is acting decisively to limit the impact of famine on those countries affected. We have already committed a total of £68 million for humanitarian assistance and recovery programmes to the region and will continue to monitor the situation closely. Of the eight countries currently affected by famine, 4 are already benefiting from US$11 billion of debt relief that has been committed under the HIPC initiative.

DfID's Southern Africa Humanitarian Crisis Unit (SAHCU) is currently being established in Johannesburg. The unit will assist the ongoing DfID response, carry out situation and needs assessments; and identify opportunities for further UK interventions if necessary.

As part of this commitment to providing humanitarian assistance, DfID is supporting infrastructure programmes, such as the rehabilitation of the rail link between the port of Nacala in Mozambique and land-locked Malawi. The improved link is essential to the special emergency operation being run by the World Food Programme on behalf of the Malawian government to get food to those most at need. The total cost of the programme is £4.26 million, £4.1 million of which will be funded by DfID.

In Malawi, Zambia and Zimbabwe food shortages have followed a poor season when coping mechanisms are already stretched. Poor governance has played a major role in the shortages, particularly in Zimbabwe where lack of inputs for small-holder agriculture, and the ruling party's disastrous economic and land policies, have both caused shortages and undercut survival strategies. Throughout the region HIV and AIDS has also weakened communities' capacity to cope with additional stress.

The crisis underlines the need for good governance in Africa. The three worst affected countries (Malawi, Zambia and Zimbabwe) have been hit by drought, but have also suffered in varying degrees from economic problems and poor governance, which have turned a fall in agricultural production into a crisis. The drought has been exacerbated by corruption in Zambia under the previous administration, poor management of food stocks in Malawi, and disastrous land and economic policies in Zimbabwe.

At the spring meetings of the IMF and World Bank, the UK argued strongly that we should be prepared to use the flexibility in the HIPC initiative to provide additional debt relief to ensure a robust exit from unsustainable debt, particularly for those countries affected by extreme circumstances.

The Government is working to strengthen the HIPC initiative to help the most vulnerable countries. In a speech to the United Nations General Assembly Special Session last year, the Chancellor set out the UK's agenda for strengthening the HIPC initiative. In addition to pressing for more cautious forecasts to assess debt sustainability, the Chancellor stressed the importance of additional debt relief (or topping-up) at Completion Point for those countries which have experienced external shocks such as natural disaster. In order to deliver these reforms, the UK has called for a further $1 billion to the HIPC initiative.

At Kananaskis the UK was at the forefront of the international debate on debt relief, helping to secure agreement from the G7 that they fund their share of the $1 billion financing shortfall in the HIPC initiative. The UK is the second largest donor to the HIPC Trust Fund, pledging over $300 million in total since 1999.

Ahead of the September meetings the UK made clear that, once again, we were prepared to shoulder our share of the burden, and called on other countries to follow our lead. The Development Committee welcomed these announcements of support and called upon other countries to make firm pledges and contributions as early as possible. I am pleased to report that, at a recent HIPC Technical Meeting in Paris, not only did the UK reaffirm its commitment to providing $120 million towards the $1 billion financing gap, but was joined by nearly all donors in making firm commitments totaling around $850 million.

Credit Unions

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to expand the role for credit unions. [78247]

Ruth Kelly: Credit unions have an important role to play in tackling financial exclusion and in providing greater choice and diversity in the financial services sector. That is why we have been involved in initiatives to help the movement grow and to enable credit unions to offer a greater range of services to their members.

We are in the process of delivering a programme of legislative and regulatory changes to help improve the operational flexibility of credit unions. Also, through the Financial Services and Markets Act, we have brought credit unions under the regulatory supervision of the Financial Services Authority and given depositors with credit unions similar protection to those with banks or building societies. The new regulatory system, combined with our programme of deregulation, will give the movement a strong position from which to build and thrive.

The Government will continue to work closely with the movement to support and encourage its future development.

Company Taxation

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with the Confederation of British Industry regarding the impact of company taxation on state UK businesses. [78248]

Dawn Primarolo: Treasury Ministers meet regularly with business leaders and others to discuss a wide range of topics.

Employment, Scotland

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the future prospects for employment in Scotland. [78250]

Ruth Kelly: Since 1997 in Scotland, total employment has risen by 100,000 (or 4.4 per cent.) and claimant count unemployment has been reduced by 60,700 (or 37.4 per cent.).

The UK Government and the Scottish Executive have put in place a comprehensive range of policies designed to reduce unemployment and get people back into work. These policies have already paid dividends and, as the figures show, will continue to benefit the Scottish labour market into the future.

Environmental Taxation

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the need for further changes to the taxation system to help deliver reductions in greenhouse gas emissions. [78252]

John Healey: The Government have introduced a range of fiscal measures to tackle carbon emissions, including the Climate Change Levy, and reforms to both Vehicle Excise Duty, fuel duties and the taxation of company cars. The Chancellor considers all relevant social, economic and environmental factors when deciding taxation policy.

Tax Concessions (Sports Clubs)

Mr. Reed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress he has made implementing his tax concessions scheme for community and amateur sports clubs. [78253]

John Healey: The legislation enabling community amateur sports clubs to benefit from certain tax reliefs was contained in Finance Act 2002. The Inland Revenue is now accepting applications for registration from qualifying sports clubs.

Landfill Tax

Tom Brake: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his plans for landfill tax. [78255]

John Healey: The Government announced in Budget 2002 that we anticipate the need for significant increases to the landfill tax in the medium term and that we will take future decisions on the tax in the light of the report of the Cabinet Office Strategy Unit waste project, which is due to be published later this year.

National Insurance (Women)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with the Minister for Women and the Department of Work and Pensions regarding the position of women who paid national insurance contributions at the reduced rate for married women. [78256]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chancellor discusses a wide range of issues with his Cabinet colleagues.

Deprived Communities

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to sponsor investment and enterprise in deprived communities. [78258]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government are committed to encouraging enterprise, investment and wealth creation across all regions in Britain.

We believe that enterprise can make a valuable contribution to the regeneration of disadvantaged communities, and bring significant benefits to these communities, such as new sources of employment for local people. In order to ensure that our most disadvantaged communities share in the country's rising prosperity, we have introduced a range of measures to encourage investment and enterprise in these areas. These include the Community Investment Tax Credit, the Bridges Community Development Venture Fund, the Phoenix Fund, and the introduction of an exemption from stamp duty for most property transactions in the 2000 most disadvantaged areas of the UK.

Many of the Government's other policies are contributing to the creation of an environment in which businesses can start and grow in disadvantaged areas, including policies to develop the skills of the workforce, help the unemployed into work and improve the planning regime.

Tax Credits

Mr. Plaskitt: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in Warwick and Leamington will benefit from the introduction of the working tax credit. [78259]

Dawn Primarolo: 1,829 families in Warwick and Leamington were receiving WFTC or DPTC on 31st May 2002.

The Child Tax Credit and Working Tax Credit, to be introduced in April 2003, are expected to benefit around 6 million families.

Ross Cranston: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the implications for levels of social exclusion of any inability of individuals in low income employment to access Tax Credits for the cost of higher level skills training in the information technology sector. [79837]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government recognises that improving the skills of the workforce plays an important part in reducing social exclusion. The financial assistance available to adult learners is being reviewed in the context of the development of the Government's Skills Strategy, which will be published next year. In addition, the Government keeps all taxes under review as part of the normal Budget process.

Pensioners

John Robertston: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on measures to raise the standard of living of Britain's poorest pensioners. [78260]

Ruth Kelly: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 9 May 2002 (Official Report, 9 May 2002, column 339 W).

Unemployment (London)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the 12-month change in the claimant measure of unemployment in London. [78228]

Mr. Boateng: Despite a relatively small rise over the past year, claimant unemployment in London is more than 40 per cent. down since spring 1997.

Tax Residence and Domicile Rules

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the amount of foreign investment in the UK that results from the non-domicile tax rules. [78231]

Dawn Primarolo: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced on Budget Day that we are reviewing the residence and domicile rules as they affect tax liabilities of individuals. We believe that modernisation of these rules needs to be based on clear principles: the rules should be fair, clear, easy to operate and support the competitiveness of the British economy. As part of the review, various fact-finding exercises will be carried out, drawing on a range of sources.

Private Finance Initiative

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will publish the full results of the retrospective application of the revised Treasury technical note, How to Account for PFI Transactions; and if he will make a statement. [74125]

Mr. Boateng: The results to date of the retrospective application of the revised Treasury Taskforce Technical Note are set out in the table below. The table shows, for all PFI contracts that were operational by the end of the 2001 02 financial year, the accounting treatment that has been adopted.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate by how much public borrowing as a percentage of GDP would have to be raised to cover the capital expenditure of all current and past projects financed through PFI/PPP. [76012]

Mr. Boateng: It is estimated that, by the end of this year, the value of PFI/PPP contracts signed will increase private sector capital expenditure on public services to over £25 billion. Revised estimates are published annually in the Budget and updated during the financial year under arrangements agreed with the National Audit Office.

It is not possible to calculate accurately the increased level of public debt that would be created if these projects were funded instead by the public sector. That would depend on the way in which the project was taken forward. Since the abolition of universal testing, public authorities choose the method of procurement which is best suited to individual projects.

Partnerships UK

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the members of Partnerships UK and their interest in companies involved in past privatisation projects in each case. [78517]

Mr. Boateng: The private sector shareholders of Partnerships UK are as listed:

Abbey National Treasury Services plc
Sun Life Assurance Society plc (HSBC Global Custody Nominees (UK) Limited)
The Prudential Assurance Company Limited
Barclays Industrial Investments Limited
Royal Bank Project Investments Limited
The Governor and Company of Bank of Scotland (Uberior Investments plc)
Halifax Project Investments Limited
Serco Limited
The British Land Company plc (Boldswitch Limited)
Group 4 Falck Joint Venture Limited
Jarvis plc

The details of their holdings in the companies involved in past privatisations are not held centrally.

Mapeley

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) which IR and C and E buildings are owned by (a) Mapeley UK Ltd, (b) Mapeley Steps Ltd, (c) Mapeley Steps Contractor Ltd and (d) Mapeley Columbus Ltd; and whether the companies owning and maintaining the IR offices is based in Britain; [78519]

(2) what independent valuation was carried out on the Tax and Customs offices sold to Mapeley; and what it indicated the buildings were worth; [78537]

(3) how much stamp duty has been paid by Mapeley on the purchase of Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise Offices; [78518]

(4) what difference is between the amount the Inland Revenue will pay in rent each year to Mapeley and what it would have cost them if they still owned the buildings themselves. [78520]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 31 October 2002]: The information to answer the HM's question about the amount of stamp duty paid by the Mapeley consortium is covered by the Inland Revenue's legal duty of taxpayer confidentiality which is laid down by S182 of Finance Act 1989 which states, at sub section 1.

A person who discloses any information which he holds or has held in the exercise of tax functions, tax credit functions or social security functions is guilty of an offence if it is information about any matter relevant, for the purposes of any of those functions.

Valuation of the Inland Revenue and Customs & Excise buildings was carried out as part of the STEPS process by independent valuers. This was performed by Insignia Richard Ellis in conjunction with Gerald Eve. Their opinion of Market Value was £370 million.

Under the Mapeley contract the Inland Revenue pays Mapeley STEPS Contractor Ltd for the provision of fully serviced accommodation. A full appraisal was done at the time of the contract and that appraisal indicated that there would be a significant benefit to the Departments from the proposed arrangement over the lifetime of the contract compared with the status quo at that time.

The table below lists the Departments' properties which (with three exceptions) were transferred to Mapeley STEPS Ltd which is registered in Bermuda. The three exceptions were Custom House Southampton, Rutland House Bradford and 23 Piccadilly York which were sold to Mapeley STEPS Contractor Ltd which is UK registered. Some buildings were considered to be of particular importance (including primarily buildings of historical significance) and were not sold. Those properties within this category over which Mapeley STEPS Ltd are granted a long lease are included on the list. The maintenance and day to day services are provided by Mapeley STEPS Contractor Ltd which is a UK registered company.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what renegotiation is taking place on the Inland Revenue Customs STEPS contract with Mapeley; and who initiated it. [80217]

Dawn Primarolo: Discussions have taken place between the Departments and Mapeley following an approach from the company.

Social Fund Budget

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will increase the Social Fund budget, with particular reference to (a) the Community Care Grant and (b) the Budgeting Loan budgets. [79214]

Mr. Boateng: The Government are examining options to enable the Social Fund better to fulfil its aim of helping the poorest and most vulnerable people in society meet certain needs.

Alternative Fuels

Mr. Todd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce fiscal incentives to encourage consumers to purchase and use combined electric and petrol engine powered vehicles. [79409]

John Healey: The Government have introduced fiscal incentives for the purchase of combined electric and petrol powered vehicles through discounts in vehicle excise duty and company car tax.

Furthermore, the Government are also promoting the use of cleaner fuels through schemes such as the PowerShift programme, which offers grants for motorists to buy or convert vehicles which run on LPG, natural gas or electricity.

Ann Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what fiscal incentives he has made available for the wider use of alternative fuels for motor vehicles. [78229]

John Healey: In successive Budgets, the Chancellor has introduced a number of initiatives to promote the use of cleaner fuels. These include duty differentials for road fuel gases and bio-diesel, discounts to vehicle excise duty for cars using cleaner fuels, and the environment-focused changes to the company car tax system.

Furthermore, the Government continues to promote the use of cleaner fuels through schemes such as the PowerShift programme, which offers grants for motorists to buy or convert vehicles which run on LPG, natural gas or electricity, and the Green Fuel Challenge which is supporting projects for the development of biogas, ethanol and hydrogen through duty reliefs.

VAT Compliance Costs

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 23 October 2002, Official Report, column 352W, on VAT, for what reason he is unable to give a publication date; and if he will make a statement. [79517]

John Healey: Ministers are considering the research methodology, data and analysis in this research, in accordance with their continuing commitment to reduce compliance costs for VAT—registered businesses.

Gift Aid

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the value of shares given in Gift Aid was in the last tax year. [79105]

John Healey: There is no Gift Aid scheme on gifts of shares. However, Budget 2000 introduced relief at a taxpayer's marginal tax rate on gifts of shares and other qualifying investments.

The value of shares and other qualifying investments given to charities in 2000–01 is estimated at £100 million.

Regional GDP

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps the Government are taking to decrease disparities in regional gross domestic product per capita; and which Minister is in charge of these efforts. [79322]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 7 November 2002]: The Government set out in the 2002 Spending Review White Paper (Cm 5570) the steps which it is taking to promote prosperity in every region of the UK. Given the Government's long term ambition to reduce the persistent gap in performance between regions, the Spending Review established a new Public Service Agreement target to make sustainable improvements in the economic performance of all English regions and over the longer term reduce the persistent gap in growth rates between the regions. This target, as described in full in the 2002 Spending Review White Paper, is jointly owned by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, DTI and the Treasury. Devolved policies are the responsibility of the devolved administrations.

Third World Debt

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on recent measures he has taken to reduce third world debt. [78234]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Chancellor to the hon. Member for Richmond Park (Dr. Tonge) earlier today.

Census

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the groups recognised in Census 2001 with numbers of less than 700,000 as recorded in the 1991 Census; which groups other than Sikhs requested separate monitoring for the Census 2001 but were denied their request; and which groups recognised in law as distinct ethnic groups requested separate monitoring for the Census 2001 but were denied their request. [78212]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Menzies Campbell, dated 7 November 2002:

As National Statistician and Registrar General for England and Wales I have been asked to reply to your recent question concerning the groups recognised in the 2001 Census with numbers of less than 700,000 as recorded in the 1991 Census; which groups other than Sikhs requested separate monitoring for the 2001 Census but were denied their request; and which groups recognised in law as separate ethnic groups requested separate monitoring for the Census but were denied their request.

Those ethnic group categories identified in the 2001 Census question on ethnic group by a separate tick box responses, but for which less than 700,000 responses had been recorded in the 1991 Census question, were:

Mixed White and Black/Caribbean

Mixed White and Black African

Mixed White and Asian

Pakistani

Bangladeshi

Black Caribbean

Black African

Chinese

The matter of determining which ethnic group categories should be specifically identified in the 2001 Census resulted from a programme of wide consultation with census users on their requirements for information and with representatives of the various ethnic communities, and of extensive small- and large-scale testing of potential questions, including a major Census Test in 1997 and the Census Rehearsal in 1999.

The question that was eventually proposed in the Government's White Paper on the 2001 Census in March 1999 and which was subsequently included in the 2001 Census in England and Wales, following approval by Parliament, had been revised in consultation with users, both to meet their requirements for additional information, particularly about the Irish population in Great Britain and people of mixed origin, and to be as acceptable as possible to respondents.

Special attention had been given to using words or terms that encompassed the widest range of attributes including birthplace, race and cultural characteristics.

The new response categories were such as to provide optimum comparability with the 1991 Census question while, at the same time, attempting to improve response to the question particularly among those communities who, tests had shown, preferred to describe themselves as "Black British" or "Asian British".

Prior to the 2001 Census, a number of representations were made to ONS to include in the ethnic group question, additional tick boxes response categories for the purpose of recognising particular groups. Other than those from the Sikh community, these included representations concerning the following groups that could not, in the event, be included in the question, either because there was not a sufficiently wide enough user support or because the case was made too late:

Welsh

English

Cornish

Kashmiri

Arab

Greek

Turkish

Kurdish

Cypriot

Vietnamese

Gypsies/Travellers

However no such group—whether or not subject to any lawful recognition as an ethnic group—was denied the opportunity of being recognised as such in the 2001 Census, since the form of the ethnic group question provided for write-in responses within each of the main groups in order to allow persons to describe their ethnicity in whichever way they chose. I announced at the time of the Census that such responses would be identified in coding and that counts would be made available in the results if there were a user requirement for the information.

Additional and specific information on Sikhs was, however, collected in the 2001 Census through the new question on religion.

Tax Fraud

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the present practice of the Board of Inland Revenue is with regard to instituting criminal proceedings in cases of suspected serious tax fraud. [80100]

Mr. Gordon Brown: Further to the statement made on 18 October 1990 at column 882 by the then Chancellor, the right hon. John Major, the practice of the Board of Inland Revenue in cases of suspected serious tax fraud is as follows:

The Board reserves complete discretion to pursue prosecutions in the circumstances it considers appropriate.

Where serious tax fraud has been committed, the Board may accept a money settlement instead of pursuing a criminal prosecution.

The Board will accept a money settlement and will not pursue a criminal prosecution, if the taxpayer, in response to being given a copy of this Statement by an authorised officer, makes a full and complete confession of all tax irregularities.

Royal Mint

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 10 July 2002, Official Report, column 1030w, on the Royal Mint; if he will make a statement on progress on the independent review. [74288]

Ruth Kelly: The independent review has now been completed.

Mr. Simon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many meetings each of the Royal Mint's non-executive directors have attended in the last 12 months. [78340]

Ruth Kelly: The table shows the number of occasions on which each of the Royal Mint's non-executive directors have been able to attend meetings of the Board and Audit Committee in the last year (period covered 1 November 2001 to 31 October 2002).

	Management Board	Audit Committee
David Stark	6	2
Lyndon Hadden	6	2
Jan Smith	6	2
David Trapnell	5	1
Lucy Woods	2	–

The non-executive directors' contribution of course goes much wider than this, offering advice and challenge in less formal ways.

Mr. Simon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the (a) statutory, (b) economic and (c) security reasons preventing the Treasury from splitting its contract for circulating coins between manufacturer, design and specification. [78347]

Ruth Kelly: The Royal Mint, a government department financed by a trading fund, is the part of central government currently responsible for the manufacture and issue of UK circulation coins. It carries out these functions in agreement with HM Treasury as the department with overall responsibility for the economy and financial affairs. The Royal Mint Advisory Committee, a separate public body, the members of which are appointed by the Queen on the recommendation of the Chancellor, is currently responsible for advice on coin design.

Mr. Simon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the Royal Mint's fixed costs are covered by its Treasury contract for UK coin production in 2001–2002. [78345]

To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, whether the Royal Mint is benefiting from the contribution to overheads made on its monopoly circulating coin contract with the Treasury to price down overseas contracts in competition with the privately owned Birmingham Mint. [78343]

Ruth Kelly: The detail of the Royal Mint's agreement with the Treasury for the supply of domestic circulating coin is commercially confidential and cannot be disclosed in accordance with Exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. The agreement is a challenging one for the Mint, providing a commercial rate of return below that expected of the business overall. The Mint believes that there is no cross-subsidisation involved between the UK circulating coin element of the business and the overseas business, and is preparing with the involvement of the National Audit Office a confidential note for the Public Accounts Committee which sets out the evidence.

Mr. Simon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) statutory and (b) security issues preclude the Treasury from putting out to tender its requirement for (i) UK circulating coins and (ii) manufacture of blanks-for-sterling coins. [78338]

Ruth Kelly: There are no insurmountable statutory obstacles to putting the arrangements for the supply of circulation coins out to tender. Of key importance however is security of supply.

The Treasury keeps the arrangements for the supply of circulation coins under review. The current arrangements with the Royal Mint have several years to run. They are designed to enable both the Treasury and the Mint to plan for the medium term on a commercial basis, and to ensure a cost-effective supply of coins to meet demand.

It is only finished coins that are obtained from the Royal Mint. Whether to purchase blanks from outside sources, for use in the production of UK circulation coinage, is a commercial decision for the Mint.

Mr. Simon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which joint ventures have been (a) concluded and (b) disbanded by the Royal Mint in the period since December 1999. [78341]

Ruth Kelly: The Royal Mint enters into and terminates a wide variety of business relationships, contracts and other ventures.

Mr. Simon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what the (a) sales and (b) revenue forecasts for (i) UK and (ii) overseas coin sales the Capital Investment Programme for the Royal Mint in 1997 to 2000 was based. [78342]

Ruth Kelly: The underlying internal commercial assumptions and forecasts used were drawn from the Royal Mint's Corporate Plan and based on the experience of management at the time.

Mr. Simon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions the Royal Mint has bought in coin blanks in the last five years, and what the quantity has been in each of these cases. [78339]

Ruth Kelly: The following table gives the number of contracts awarded for circulating coin blanks for the last 5 years together with the total quantity ordered in each year.

	Contracts	Tonnes
2001–02	2	3
2000–01	6	559
1999–00	—	—
1998–99	8	1737
1997–98	4	715

Inheritance Tax

Nick Harvey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to my hon. Friend Member for Truro and St. Austell Matthew Taylor of 15 October 2002, Official Report, column 600W, on inheritance tax, if he will break down the cost of the inheritance tax cultural exemption scheme; and what the value was of each object accepted. [78648]

Dawn Primarolo: The breakdown is as follows:

	Yield + / Cost −
Net effect of conditional exemption (relief £8 million, less tax clawed back in respect of items losing conditional exemption £10 million)	+ £2 million
Tax value of items accepted in lieu of tax	− £8 million
Cost of other heritage reliefs (private treaty sales and maintenance funds)	− £2 million
Net cost for 2001–2002	− £8 million

These costs are recorded for the year in which all heritage aspects of a particular case are settled. Details of items accepted in lieu of tax, and the tax they can settle, are published by the Council for Museums, Archives and Libraries by reference to the year (often earlier) when an acceptance is agreed. Their 2000–2002 Report can be found at http://www.resource.gov.uk/action/ail/OOail.asp.

Exemption 15 (Statutory and other restrictions) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information applies to the value of objects taken into account for purposes of the other heritage reliefs.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his Department's projected income from stamp duty on share transactions is for (a) the current financial year and (b) each of the next three financial years; and what income has been received in each financial year since 1997. [79099]

Ruth Kelly: Details of the Stamp Duty projections are not published. Stamp Duty receipts arising from transactions in shares and other securities, for the financial years since 1997, are given on the Inland Revenue website at: http://www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/stamp—duty/sd—t01—1.htm.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with the European Commission on stamp duty. [80212]

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what discussions he has had with the European Commission regarding his proposed policy of abolishing stamp duty on commercial properties in rundown areas; and when he expects approval to be given. [80379]

John Healey: The extension of the stamp duty relief for non-residential property in disadvantaged areas is a key part of the Government's overall drive to regenerate deprived areas. We have already exempted from stamp duty all property transactions in disadvantaged areas where the consideration is less than £150,000.

We now want to extend that relief to exempt all non-residential properties in disadvantaged areas.

Officials have been pursuing full approval of this relief as state aid since we notified the measure to the European Commission. In addition, I met Commissioner Monti in September to discuss our application for approval as state aid of this measure. As part of a wider discussion on a range of issues, the Chancellor discussed this issue with Commissioner Monti in October.

The European Commission is currently conducting a thorough review of our application. Clearly we cannot pre-empt the timing of state aid approval since this is a matter for the European Commission.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many applications have been received for relief from stamp duty on houses worth less than £150,000; [80382]

(2) what he estimates the total amounts of stamp duty is that purchasers have saved from the abolition of stamp duty on houses worth less than £150,000. [80378]

John Healey: Between the implementation of the relief at the end of November 2001 and the end of August 2002, relief had been granted for around 35,000 residential properties. This figure does not include transactions where the consideration is less than £60,000 since these are not currently chargeable to stamp duty.

Forecasts of the amount of stamp duty exemption for disadvantaged areas were given in table A2.1 of the Budget 2002 report and will be updated in the Pre-Budget Report.

Mr. Flight: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate to how many purchases last year his proposed policy of abolishing stamp duty on commercial properties in rundown areas would have applied had it been in operation; [80375]

(2) how many commercial properties he estimates his proposed policy of abolishing stamp duty on commercial properties in rundown areas would apply to. [80376]

John Healey: The number of properties affected by the proposed policy depends on market conditions in the affected areas but is estimated to be in the order of 1,000 a year.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what provision he has made to encourage urban regeneration in the event that the European Commission rejects his proposed policy of abolishing stamp duty on commercial properties in rundown areas. [80377]

John Healey: We continue to work closely with the European Commission to progress our application for state aid approval for the extension of the existing relief from stamp duty in disadvantaged areas which is part of a wider package of measures designed to regenerate the most deprived areas of the UK.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much tax revenue he estimates the Treasury saved last year through purchasers failing to apply for relief from stamp duty on purchases of properties worth less than £150,000; [80373]

(2) how many purchasers he estimates since the inception of the scheme could have applied for relief from stamp duty on purchases of houses worth less than £150,000 but failed to. [80374]

John Healey: I regret that this information is not available. The Government is committed to ensuring that everyone who is entitled to this relief receives what is due to them. Where the relief is not claimed but is subsequently discovered to have been due, the Inland Revenue will make a full repayment of any duty paid.

Information Technology

Mr. Caton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the new contractor will be required to ensure that the service remains (a) unified, (b) accountable and (c) within the United Kingdom under the Inland Revenue's tendering process for IT services. [79457]

Dawn Primarolo: The service will be unified and will be let as a single contract covering all existing and future IT needs of the Inland Revenue. The scope of the contract was set out in an OJEC notice, dated 2 March 2002, which announced the start of the procurement process. The UK Government complies fully with its EU and WTO treaty obligations. It is the intention of the Inland Revenue, through the Invitation to Tender, to specify a unified service which is accountable and within the UK.

Customs and Excise

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many agency agreements HM Customs and Excise have in place with private companies whereby Customs are paid to police intellectual property rights on behalf of the companies in question. [79038]

John Healey: As of 31 October 2002, HM Customs and Excise have a total of 152 agency agreements in place with private companies.

Prostate Cancer Statistics

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many male deaths from prostate cancer there were in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [80046]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Paul Marsden, dated 7 November 2002:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question concerning the number of male deaths from prostate cancer since 1997. [80046]

The most recent available mortality data are for the calendar year 2001. Figures for each year from 1997 to 2001 are given in the table below.

Number of deaths from prostate cancer[1], England and Wales, 1997 to 2001[2]

Calendar year	Number of deaths
1997	8,523
1998	8,573
1999	8,533
2000	8,293
2001	8,912

Notes:

[1] The cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9) code 185 for the years 1997 to 2000, and for the year 2001, the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) code C61.

[2] Figures are for deaths occurring in each calendar year.

[3] The introduction of ICD-10 for coding cause of death in 2001 means that data for prostate cancer in this year are not comparable with data for earlier years. The introduction of ICD-10 has led to an apparent increase of 4 per cent. in the number of deaths coded to prostate cancer. The figures should therefore be interpreted with caution.

The effect of the change in classification in 2001 is described in a report published in May 2002[1]

Student Top-up Fees

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by how much, in their current ratios, the small companies and mainstream rates of corporation tax would have to rise to yield the current revenues of student top-up fees. [79265]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 6 November 2002]: Universities do not charge top-up fees. The amounts that can be raised by changing the small companies and mainstream rates of corporation tax are contained in Table 1.6 on Inland Revenue's Website www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/tax—expenditures/g—t06—1.htm

Suicide Statistics

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many suicides of young men aged 15 to 24 years there were in each year from 1979; and if he will make a statement. [80052]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Paul Marsden, dated 7 November 2002:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question concerning the number of suicides in young men aged 15 to 24 in each year since 1979. [80052]

The most recent available mortality data are for the calendar year 2001. Figures for each year from 1979 to 2001 are given in the table below.

Number of deaths from suicide and undetermined whether purposely inflicted or not[1] occurring in men aged 15 to 24, England and Wales, 1979 to 2001[2]

Calendar year	Number of deaths in men aged 15–24
1979	355
1980	353
1981	403
1982	365
1983	377
1984	407
1985	460
1986	491
1987	544
1988	618
1989	574
1990	623
1991	572
1992	571
1993	556
1994	530
1995	484
1996	451
1997	502
1998	461
1999	436
2000	398
2001	434

Notes:

[1] The cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9) codes E950–E959 and E980-E989 excluding E988.8 for the years 1979 to 2000, and, for the year 2001, the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) codes X60–X84 and Y10–Y34 excluding where the verdict was pending.

[2] Figures are for deaths registered in each calendar year from 1979 to 1992 and for deaths occurring in each calendar year from 1993 to 2001.

[3] The introduction of ICD-10 for coding cause of death in 2001 means that data for suicide and undetermined whether purposely inflicted or not in this year are not comparable with data for earlier years. The introduction of ICD-10 has led to an apparent increase of 1 per cent. in the number of deaths coded to undetermined whether purposely inflicted or not. The figures should therefore be interpreted with caution. The effect of the change in classification in 2001 is described in a report published in May 2002.[1]

IT Skills

Ross Cranston: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations his Department has received from (a) right hon. and hon. Members, (b) trade associations and employers organisations and (c) training companies concerning the economic impact of higher level skills shortages in the information technology sector. [79835]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chancellor of the Exchequer receives a large number of representations from trade and employers organisations, firms and members of the House of Commons in relation to a wide variety of different areas of Government policy.

Ross Cranston: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to review the financial assistance to, and tax treatment of, individuals in employment who choose to meet the costs of their own training in higher levels skills in the information technology sector. [79836]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government keep all taxes under review as part of the normal Budget process. The financial assistance available to adult learners is being reviewed in the context of the development of the Government's Skills Strategy, which will be published next year.

Energy Efficiency

Bob Spink: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy further to promote energy efficiency in (a) new buildings and (b) existing buildings. [78468]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government have a range of policies for promoting energy efficiency of both existing and new buildings. Details of current and proposed fiscal policies are set out in the Budget 2002 report. In Budget 2002 the Government announced that it would consider ways in which economic instruments might be used to improve household energy efficiency. The Treasury and DEFRA published a joint consultation document, "Economic Instruments To Improve Household Energy Efficiency", in July 2002. The consultation period ended on 8 October 2002. The Government is currently considering the responses to that consultation.

The Climate Change Levy introduced in April 2001 provides an incentive to all businesses and the public sector to improve their energy efficiency in all areas including their building stock.

The Government's Climate Change Programme sets out our other measures to improve energy efficiency and reduce greenhouse gas emissions across all sectors of the economy.

NIRS2

Mr Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the value was of duplicate National Insurance payments made into personal pension plans triggered by the NIRS2 computer system; and if he will make a statement; [79951]

(2) what the value was of duplicate National Insurance payments that were recovered from personal pension plans that were triggered by the NIRS2 computer system. [79953]

Dawn Primarolo: The value of payments affected is £61.95m. The vast majority of this has been recovered from the pension schemes affected.

Mr Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many personal pension plans received duplicate National Insurance payments triggered by the NIRS2 computer system; [79952]

(2) how many personal pension plans were recovered from which duplicate National Insurance payments triggered by the NIRS2 computer system; and what action his Department took to inform (a) individuals and (b) the managers of personal pension plans that duplicate National Insurance payments triggered by the NIRS2 computer system would be recovered. [79954]

Dawn Primarolo: Up to 1255 pension schemes were affected and we have recovered any amount overpaid from the vast majority of these. We have worked very closely with the pension industry's representative bodies and with the individual pension schemes affected to keep them informed and to consider how they should best deal with their individual members.

Research and Development Tax Credit

Mr Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 24 October 2002, Official Report, column 429W, on small firms, what assessment he has made of the impact of the research and development tax credit for small firms. [80310]

Dawn Primarolo: Both the research and development (R&D) tax credit for small or medium companies (SMEs) and the new R&D tax credit for large companies, introduced this year, are measures for the long term. At present we only have figures for the first year of the SME credit. However, in that first year, the response from small companies was good and all the signs are that interest is growing.

Tobacco Imports

Mr Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what advice he took from health experts before deciding to change the personal allowance for tobacco imports. [80008]

John Healey: Within the European Union there are no personal allowances for tobacco imports. Since the creation of the Single Market in 1993 travellers have been able to bring back as much EU duty paid tobacco and alcohol as they wish as long as it is for their own use. The recent changes to indicative levels simply act as a guide to assist shoppers and make it easier for Customs officers to distinguish between the honest shopper and the illegal smuggler.

The new package of measures against tobacco smuggling, which I announced on 29 October, is designed to continue the successful crackdown on the illicit supply of cigarettes. It is this illegal supply of cheap, unregulated cigarettes which presents the principal threat to keeping the effective price of smoking high in support of the Government's health objectives.

For details of these measures I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Preseli Pembrokeshire on 29 October, Official Report, column 686w.

Office Rents

Mr Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much rent was paid by (a) Inland Revenue and (b) Customs for their offices in the last nine months of 2001; to which companies; and if he will give the equivalent information for (i) the first six months of 2002 and (ii) a forecast of the total for the next 10 years. [80220]

Dawn Primarolo: The majority of the Departments' accommodation is now occupied as serviced accommodation under a number of PFI/PPP contracts. Under some of these contracts the Departments pay a unitary charge in return for serviced accommodation which includes the accommodation, related facilities management and maintenance. The unitary charge does not include any separately identifiable amount in respect of rent. The main such contract is the STEPS contract with Mapeley.

The Departments have paid the following unitary charges to Mapeley Steps Contractor Ltd:

	Inland Revenue		HM Customs & Excise
	Last 9 months of 2001	First 6 months of 2002	Last 9 months of 2001	First 6 months of 2002
Payment (plus VAT)	£99,375,490	£67,512,708	£35,541,277	£24,000,123

It has not proved possible to obtain corresponding information for the other PFI/PPP contracts in the time available. I will write to the HM with this information and put a copy of my letter in the House Library.

In addition both Departments occupy certain property outside the PFI/PPP contracts where rent is payable to a number of landlords. For example the Customs & Excise posts at ports and airports. The information on the rent payable on these properties could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Annuities

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether Inland Revenue regulations, as they relate to annuities, preclude an annuitant to transfer from one provider to another; and what plans he has to change the regulations. [79968]

Ruth Kelly: The tax rules do not prohibit the transfer of liability to pay an annuity to a different provider so long as the terms of the annuity are not altered. It is a matter of contract between the parties whether this can occur at the request of the annuitant.

As indicated in the reply given on 18 July 2002 to the hon. Member for Bridgwater (Mr. Liddell-Granger), Official Report, column 467W, the Government plans to bring forward powers to make it possible to offer people buying annuities more choice and flexibility. Any reforms to annuities will need to dovetail with simplification and other reforms being considered in the pensions Green Paper this autumn.

Public Consultations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what public consultations have been commenced by his Department in each month since 20 July; and what the (a) start date, (b) closing date and (c) website address of each were. [80275]

John Healey: A full list of recent public consultations including start date, closing date and a link to the relevant document can be found by following the consultations link on the Treasury web site at: www.hm-treasury.gov.uk.

Euro

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list Government statements and publications that demonstrate how adoption by the United Kingdom of the euro would alter its power to manage the economy. [80211]

Ruth Kelly: The Government have said that they will complete an assessment of the five economic tests within two years of the start of this Parliament. The assessment will be comprehensive and rigorous. Once the assessment is complete, it will be published and will be subject to intensive public scrutiny and debate.

Company Auditors

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, if he will make a statement on his plans to implement Commission Recommendation 2002/590/EC on Statutory Auditors' Independence. [78127]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply

Recommendation 2002/590/EC was adopted by the European Commission on 16 May 2002.

The UK requirements on the independence of statutory company auditors and in the Companies Act 1989 to supervise statutory company auditors and in auditing standards set by the Auditing Practices Board. These bodies are preparing the changes needed to ensure that their requirements are in line with the Recommendation. No changes are needed to auditing standards to bring our requirements into line with the Recommendation.

The Recommendation also suggests the disclosure of fees paid by major companies to their auditors in respect of audit services and non-audit services, broken down into major categories. The UK already requires large companies to disclose in their accounts the fees paid to their auditors in respect of audit and non-audit services. We will consult on changes to the existing regulations to require a breakdown of the non-audit services provided by the auditors

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) parliamentary questions and (b) letters to him from honourable Members in this session remain unanswered, broken down by those which are (i) one month old, (ii) two months old, (iii) three months old, (iv) four months old and (v) over six months old. [79947]

John Healey: One Parliamentary question for answer in July, which was transferred to the Treasury in September, has not been answered.

The information relating to letters from Members to Treasury Ministers is as follows:

	Amount
(i) one month	54
(ii) two months	37
(ii) three months	19
(iv) four months	7
(v) over six months	0

The Cabinet Office publishes a report ot Parliament annually setting out the volume of Members' correspondence received by departments. The report for 2001 was published on 24 May 2002 Official Report, column 674W. Reports for earlier years are available in the Library of the House.

British Museum

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations his Department received prior to the announcement of the revenue increase for the British Museum. [78838]

Mr. Boateng: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Share Indices

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received regarding the impact of Treasury policy on the performance of (a) the FTSE 100 and (b) the all share index with particular reference to international competitiveness. [79109]

Ruth Kelly: The Chancellor of the Exchequer and other Treasury Ministers receive numerous representations concerning the impact of Treasury policy on FTSE 100 companies, the all share index and the competitiveness of UK industry and the City of London. These are taken into consideration in the development of Government policy in these important areas.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the discount rate of 6 per cent. For HMG PFI projects was calculated. [65533]

Mr. Boateng: I have been asked to reply. I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what funding has been authorised in each financial year since May 1997 for raising capital via the Private Finance Initiative, broken down by Department; and what limits on sums authorised were imposed under European Community law, identifying the relevant EU instruction in each case. [79833]

Chris Grayling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what rate of interest the Government pay in the PFI schemes. [78418]

Mr. Boateng: I will write to the hon. Members and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Spinning (Investment Banks)

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from the Financial Services Authority regarding the alleged practice of spinning by investment banks; and if he will make a statement. [79096]

Ruth Kelly: This is a matter for the Financial Services Authority. I understand the FSA has begun an informal inquiry into spinning and has requested information on what processes UK regulated firms have in place to prevent spinning, while seeking views on a possible rule change which would explicitly outlaw certain types of conduct.

Tax Havens

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether account is taken in PFI and PPP contracts of whether bidders are based in tax havens; and what assessment is made in awarding such contracts of the competitive advantage given to such companies; [80216]

(2) if he will ban companies based in tax havens from participation in Government contracts. [80215]

Mr. Boateng: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

LORD CHANCELLOR

Court Accommodation (Northern Ireland)

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department whether she is yet in a position to announce their proposals relating to court accommodation in Northern Ireland. [80108]

Ms Rosie Winterton: After full consideration of all the information gathered during the public consultation exercise which followed the issue of the consultation document "Court Accommodation in Northern Ireland 2001–2010", I have decided that the courthouses at Clogher and Cookstown will close at the end of this year and business will be transferred to the new courthouse at Dungannon. Business currently dealt with in rented accommodation in Kilkeel will transfer to Newry courthouse.

The courthouses at Banbridge and Larne will remain as court venues as will Limavady courthouse. Hearings at Limavady courthouse will be restricted to magistrates courts adult criminal business. The future of Limavady courthouse will be reviewed in light of business trends and with particular regard to the outcome of the Review of Public Administration in Northern Ireland and any changes this necessitates in court divisional boundaries.

The Court Service will conduct a feasibility study in the North Down area on the possibility of replacing the existing courthouses at Bangor and Newtownards. Consideration will also be given to upgrading or replacing the courthouse at Lisburn.

Damages

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary Lord Chancellor's Department how the Lord Chancellor intends to take forward proposals which she consulted on in her consultation paper, "Damages for Future Loss: Giving Courts the Power to Order Periodical Payments for Future Loss and Care Costs", published on 13 March. [80109]

Yvette Cooper: The Lord Chancellor has today published the post-consultation report to the consultation paper "Damages for Future Loss". Copies of the report have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. A majority of respondents agreed with the Government's proposal that courts should have the power to award damages for future loss and care costs in the form of periodical payments. The Government intend to legislate when a suitable opportunity arises.

Public Consultations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary Lord Chancellor's Department what public consultations have been commenced by her Department in each month since 20 July; and what the (a) start date, (b) closing date and (c) website address of each were. [80272]

Yvette Cooper: It is not possible to answer the question before prorogation and I will write with the answer and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Better Public Buildings Initiative

Ms Shipley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary Lord Chancellor's Department if she will name the projects the departmental design champion has sponsored as part of the Better Public Buildings Initiative; and if she will make a statement on the extent of her personal input in respect of each. [80338]

Yvette Cooper: It is not possible to answer the question before prorogation and I will write with the answer and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Ageism

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what strategies her Department has to ensure that there is no ageism in recruitment and retention processes. [79292]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department is committed to equality of opportunity, a key feature of all civil service employment: ageism is not tolerated. Retirement age is determined on business needs only (currently 60, 62 or 65 depending on grade).

Recruitment, development, performance management and retention policies are reviewed continuously.

Child Abduction

Keith Vaz: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many cases of prevention of access to children of British Nationals living in Germany have been reported to the Child Abduction Unit in the last five years. [79518]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Any parent resident in England and Wales may apply to the Child Abduction Unit (CAU) for access (contact) to their child living in a contracting state. The CAU does not keep statistics on whether cases involve British Nationals. The table shows combined figures for applications to Germany from England and Wales in the last five years for access (under Article 21 of the 1980 Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction); and applications seeking registration of existing contact orders (under the 1980 Luxembourg (Council of Europe) Convention on Recognition and Enforcement of Decisions concerning Custody of Children and on the Restoration of the Custody of Children).

Access (contact) cases from applicants within England and Wales pursued in Germany

		Case Outcomes
Year	Total cases	Ordered	Refused	Withdrawn	Pending
1997	10	4	3	3	0
1998	6	4	1	1	0
1999	7	3	1	3	0
2000	4	2	0	2	0
2001	3	1	0	0	2

Lay Justices

Dr. Francis: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the national strategy on the recruitment of lay justices to achieve benches that reflect the community they serve will be published. [78690]

Yvette Cooper: As of 1 April 2002 there were 28,479 active magistrates in England and Wales. A great deal of work has been carried out over the last few years to improve the balance of the lay bench. The latest available figures show 50.91 per cent. male and 49.09 per cent. female magistrates, 8.29 per cent. of whom are from ethnic minority groups. In the next few months, my noble and learned friend the Lord Chancellor, will publish a national recruitment strategy, the core aims of which are to develop a structured campaign to raise the profile of the magistracy and encourage applicants from as wide a cross-section of the community as possible.

Local Management Boards

Dr. Francis: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what role is envisaged for magistrates in the proposed local management boards; which agencies will sit on such boards; and who will ensure that objectives are (a) set and (b) met. [78691]

Yvette Cooper: It is the Government's stated intention to bring together the administration of all courts in England and Wales, below the House of Lords, into a new executive agency. We intend to set up local boards to enable representatives of users and the wider community to be involved in the decision making process about the administration of courts in their area. The precise membership of the boards is yet to be determined, although we envisage that the magistracy will be represented. The setting of the objectives for the new organisation as a whole and the assessment of performance will be a matter for the Lord Chancellor. The local boards will be involved in ensuring that the objectives are met.

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Caton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary Lord Chancellor's Department when will the next annual report of the chief inspector, Magistrates Courts Service Inspectorate, be published. [80387]

Yvette Cooper: I have today placed copies of the chief inspector's annual report in the Library of both Houses.

For the first time the annual report includes the inspectorate's new responsibility for the inspection of the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service (CAFCASS). In March 2002 the inspectorate published a progress report on its work with CAFCASS ("Setting Up") which highlighted some of the difficulties the new body had faced during its first year in existence. In his latest report, the chief inspector points to encouraging signs of progress, such as the publication of CAFCASS's first corporate plan and their work on developing draft national standards.

Magistrates Courts Committees (MCCs) are seen to have contributed significantly to achieving the Government's target to reduce delay in the processing of persistent young offenders. The chief inspector reports that MCCs have also handled well the transfer of warrant execution from the police to the courts. This was a major piece of work and for understandable reasons there was some slippage in performance. Some criticisms remain of MCCs ability to ensure systems are in place to manage performance at a strategic level.

Rape Cases

Vera Baird: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) which of the (a) High Court and (b) Crown Court judges who hear rape trials are criminal law specialists; and of those who are not, by what means they have been selected as experienced to try rape cases; [80250]

(2) pursuant to the Answer of 24 July, Official Report, column 1282W, on rape trials, what efforts are made by the Lord Chancellor to ensure that only those judges with appropriate experience and sensitivity at (a) High Court and (b) Crown Court level hear rape cases; how the experience and sensitivity of judges at each level are ascertained; what record is retained of how judges are selected according to these criteria; and how often the record is updated with regard to their trial performance. [80249]

Yvette Cooper: It is not possible to answer the question before prorogation and I will write with the answer and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Vera Baird: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what training for trying cases of rape and sexual assault is given to High Court Judges (a) on appointment and (b) at a later date; and whether, in each case, this training is compulsory; [80246]

(2) what training High Court Judges undergo on appointment; and whether this training is compulsory. [80247]

Yvette Cooper: It is not possible to answer the question before prorogation. I will write with the answer and a copy of the letter will be placed in the library.

Contact Orders

Ms Debra Shipley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, the Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to her Answer of 11 July (Official Report, column 1200W) on contact orders, what amendments are proposed to court rules to ensure consistency in the treatment of applications for contact where there are allegations of violence. [79719]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We have set up a Safety Working Group (including, amongst others, representatives from children's and women's organisations) to assist in consideration of what practical measures, including possible amendments to court rules and forms, are required to ensure consistency in how courts deal with applications for contact where there are allegations of domestic violence. We hope to have proposals from the Working Group in mid-December.

Columbus House, Newport

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for the Home

Office leased building at Columbus House on the Langstone Business Park in Newport, South Wales; and if it will be used for residential purposes. [79704]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I have been asked to reply. The Home Office has not leased the building Columbus House, Langstone Business Park, Newport. It has been leased by the Court Service for use by the Immigration Appellate Authority as an immigration hearing centre.

The centre has no residential facilities and appellants will attend, on a daily basis, only in connection with oral appeal hearings.

Recruitment (Over-50s)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what percentage of new recruits to her Department in the past two years were aged 50 and over. [79307]

Ms Rosie Winterton: 23.7 per cent. of staff recruited in the two year period between 1 April 2000 and 31 March 2002 were over the age of 50.

Broken down into the two separate years the percentages are:

	Percentage
1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001	14.8
1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002	29.3

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Overcrowding

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to reduce overcrowding of prisons. [74927]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect of prison overcrowding on the treatment of remand prisoners. [76628]

Hilary Benn: As of 30 September 2002, the total prison population was 72,315. Of these 7,963 were on remand, and a further 5,227 were remanded awaiting sentence.

It is obvious that such a high level of prison population will affect both convicted and unconvicted prisoners alike. The Prison Service closely monitors the effects of overcrowding and the conditions in which all prisoners are held are of equal concern.

Asylum Seekers (Private Contractors)

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the private contractors providing accommodation and support for asylum seekers that have been dropped since 1997 because of dissatisfaction with their performance. [78582]

Beverley Hughes: The National Asylum Support Service (NASS) became operational on 3 April 2000. Since that date NASS has not terminated any contracts with private sector contractors providing accommodation or support for asylum seekers.

Information Technology

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of how the additional funds dedicated to information technology to promote closer working and streamline case management across the criminal justice system departments will (a) increase efficiency and (b) improve the system of measuring outcomes. [78686]

Mr. Wills: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Animal Experimentation

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding has been allocated each year since 1997 to develop alternative tests to replace animal experimentation; to which Departments it has been allocated; and what plans there are to increase future funding. [79749]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The United Kingdom Government, across various Government Departments, spends in the region of £2 million each year and at an international level, we will continue to support the European Centre for the Validation of Alternative Methods (ECVAM) through contributions to the European Union. However, most work on the search for and development of alternatives to using animals in scientific procedures is neither done by Government nor with Government money—it is conducted and funded by the research industry itself, which spends many millions of pounds on it each year.

Every year the Home Office makes available to the Animal Procedures Committee a budget for research aimed at developing or promoting the use of alternatives which replace animal use, reduce the number of animals used, or refine the procedures involved to minimise suffering (the 'Three Rs'). Details of annual budgets and completed research projects are published in the annual report of the Animal Procedures Committee, which is available from the Stationery Office. The amount made available to the Committee each year since 1997 was:

1997–98	182,000
1998–99	259,000
1999–2000	259,000
2000–01	265,500
2001–02	280,000
2002–03	280,000

The use of alternatives is widely encouraged, and the use of animals in regulated procedures is prohibited by the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 in cases where a scientifically valid non-animal alternative is available. Any lack of progress in research into alternatives is more often due to the limitations of science rather than inadequate funding. However, this will be considered further in the context of the recommendation of the House of Lords Select Committee on Animals in Scientific Procedures that a Centre for the 3Rs should be set up. The Government are considering their response to the Select Committee's report.

Criminal Records Bureau

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his Answer of 16 October, Official Report, column 872W, on NHS staff, which countries will be included in the Criminal Records Bureau's advisory service to employers about the availability of criminal records checks; and which countries perform a reciprocal service. [78374]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when he expects the Criminal Records Bureau to have completed its backlog of checks on (a) teachers and (b) classroom assistants in England and Wales; [74348]

(2) how many outstanding Criminal Records Bureau checks there are on (a) teachers and (b) classroom assistants in England and Wales. [74350]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long it is taking on average for checks on care workers to be completed by the Criminal Records Bureau at the latest available date. [77087]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many care home staff who would have required Criminal Record Bureau checks for existing staff before 1 April have had checks postponed until (a) 31 March 2003 and (b) 2004. [79813]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research was undertaken by (a) his Department and (b) Capita to determine the (i) likely level of demand for Criminal Records Bureau checks and (ii) Criminal Records Bureau customers' preferred means of submitting applications for checks. [80024]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department will publish guidance to registered bodies about the postponement of Criminal Records Bureau checks as set out in the announcement made on 1 November. [80026]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for criminal record checks have been made using the Criminal Records Bureau's telephone checking service; and what proportion this constitutes of the total number of record check applications. [77982]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) teaching and (b) non-teaching staff have been subject to Criminal Records Bureau vetting; and (i) how many and (ii) what percentage of each category failed. [74310]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) appeals and (b) overturned Criminal Records Bureau checks for each local authority for (i) social workers and (ii) voluntary organisations who work with children there were in each of the last 12 months; [74542]

(2) how many applications (a) were processed by and (b) were outstanding with the Criminal Records Bureau for each local authority for (i) social workers and (ii) voluntary organisations who work with children for each of the last 12 months. [74544]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish the final report by Patrick Carter into the Criminal Records Bureau. [80035]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the (a) value of contract and (b) evaluation mechanism for successful delivery of contract are in the running of the CRB by Capita; and whether penalty charges are in place. [80057]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many outstanding Criminal Records Bureau checks there were on childminder applicants in England and Wales on 23 September. [74347]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) nurses supplied by nurses agencies and (b) staff supplied by domiciliary care agencies will no longer have to have Criminal Record Bureau checks. [79808]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what compensation his Department will offer to (a) staff, (b) private care homes, (c) voluntary organisations and (d) local authorities for the delays in Criminal Record Bureau checks; and if he will make a statement. [75570]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Paul Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his Answer of 16 October, Official Report, column 868W, on Criminal Records Bureau checks, how many checks on (a) social workers, (b) other social care staff and (c) voluntary health organisations working with children have been outstanding for (i) one month, (ii) two months, (iii) three months and (iv) longer than six months. [78373]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) teaching and (b) non-teaching staff who had received Criminal Records Bureau clearance prior to the start of the school term were subsequently checked and found to be unfit for work with children. [74306]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copyof my letter in the Library.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of those subjected to checks by the Criminal Records Bureau as a result of their employment in schools have contested the factual basis of information disclosed about them as a result of such checks; what steps need to be taken by a person who contests such information; and what action he proposes to take in respect of cases where the information disclosed about individuals is found to be incorrect. [74453]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long it has taken on average for checks on care workers to be completed by the Criminal Records Bureau in the last six months. [77759]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will estimate how many persons caring for (a) children and (b) vulnerable adults will now not have Criminal Records Bureau checks; [80023]

(2) what the (a) planned time and (b) actual time taken was for each stage in commissioning the Criminal Records Bureau; [80025]

(3) how many existing staff requiring Criminal Records Bureau checks will have the check postponed from March 2003 to 2004; [80033]

(4) how many Criminal Records Bureau checks have been delayed for (a) teachers and (b) classroom assistants in each of the last six months by (i) one, (ii) two, (iii) three, and (iv) six months or more. [80039]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long it took on average over the last period for which figures are available to carry out Criminal Records Bureau checks on taxi drivers. [80318]

Hilary Benn: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Prison-building Programme

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his Department's proposed spending plans on new prison building in 2003–04. [78627]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he will take to ensure that the contractors in the expanded prison building programme comply with Government requirements regarding the use of timber from legal and sustainable sources; and if he will make a statement. [77672]

Hilary Benn: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Racial Equality (Sikhs)

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department will have in place means to monitor Sikhs separately with respect to (a) employment and (b) the provision of public services. [80370]

Beverley Hughes: We have no plans to do this,

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will amend the statutory Code of Practice on the Duty to Promote Race Equality so that it requires public authorities to monitor Sikhs separately. [78213]

Beverley Hughes: Some Sikh organisations have argued that Sikhs should be monitored as a separate ethnic group rather than subsumed in one of the generic monitoring categories used in the 2001 census. The fact that case law has established Sikhs as an ethnic group for the purposes of the Race Relations Act does not, of itself, justify different treatment from the many other ethnic and racial groups in the United Kingdom. Therefore, we do not intend to amend the statutory Code of Practice.

The statutory Code of Practice is not prescriptive about the form of ethnic monitoring. Rather it encourages authorities to use the same ethnic classification system as used in the 2001 census, or categories that match them very closely. However the statutory Code also recognises that authorities may choose to collect more detailed information to reflect local circumstances. Public authorities with significant Sikh populations in their area may opt to do this. Helpfully, demographic information about British Sikhs will be available for the first time from the results of the religious identity question in the 2001 census due to be published next February.

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many public authorities are monitoring Sikhs as a separate ethnic group following the issue of the statutory Code of Practice on the Duty to Promote Race Equality. [80372]

Beverley Hughes: I will write to the hon Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Sentencing

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on consistency of approach to sentencing; [78689]

(2)when he will implement the provisions in the Crime Sentences Act 1997 regarding (a) the imposition of curfew orders, (b) community punishment orders and (c) driving disqualifications for fine defaulters. [78682]

Hilary Benn: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Sentencing Powers

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which magistrates' powers will be increased to allow their sentencing powers to be raised (a) to 12 months and (b) subsequently to 18 months as indicated in the White Paper, Justice for All. [78687]

Hilary Benn: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Terrorism

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what research he has taken into the threat to departmental computer systems from e-terrorist attack; [78977]

(2) what assessment he has made of the threat to e-government from e-terrorist attack. [78976]

(3) what assessments she has made of the threat to UK business from e-terrorist attack. [78975]

Mr. Blunkett: The threat from terrorists to the Critical National Infrastructure (CNI), in Government and the private sector, is growing but unpredictable. While there is always the possibility of a low level attack (eg, website defacements or narrowly targeted denial of service attacks) we think the current likelihood of a successful major damaging attack against United Kingdom interests is low. However, we keep the situation under constant review, a task which lies with the National Infrastructure Security Co-ordination Centre (NISCC) (see www.niscc.gov.uk). Although focused on CNI institutions, other systems administrators may like to look at the advice and information available through the NISCC website, and also at the linked Unified Incident Reporting and Alert Scheme, www.uniras.gov.uk which contains information on best practice, new vulnerabilities and mitigating actions. www.dti.gov.uk also contains useful information on information security.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what request for assistance he has received from the FBI concerning the links of a UK Moslem cleric with James Ujaama, currently under arrest and indicted in Portland, Oregon concerning an alleged terrorist training camp. [79526]

Mr. Blunkett: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Ageism

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what strategies his Department has to ensure that there is no ageism in recruitment and retention processes. [79287]

Hilary Benn: The Home Office has made a commitment to provide staff of all ages and backgrounds with opportunities to maximise their skills and achieve their potential. This is incorporated into our employment policy on discrimination and is set out in equal opportunities statement which was revised and updated in March 2002.

The Department continues to monitor recruitment, selection and appraisal statistics to ensure that neither age discrimination nor any other form of discrimination is taking place.

Following a comprehensive review of the Department's age retirement policy, all Home Office staff below the Senior Civil Service now have the option to retire at any point between the ages of 60 and 65.

This move was reflected in the Department's recruitment policy. The Home Office will consider job applications from people up to age 64, subject to their meeting normal standards of health. Provided that there is an expectation of a reasonable period of employment and a return on the investment in recruitment and training, the primary criterion for selection will be the ability of the candidate to carry out the duties of the vacant post. In making these various changes, the Home Office is implementing the recommendations of the Performance and Innovation Unit report "Winning the Generation Game".

Separate arrangements apply to Her Majesty's Prison Service who have conducted their own review to tackle age discrimination.

Air Support (Surrey Police)

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will grant the application by Surrey police authority for funding to assist with the purchase of a new EC135 helicopter for use in policing in the county. [79911]

Mr. Denham: Surrey police authority has submitted an application for funding to assist in the purchase of a new police role-equipped helicopter. This application has been made under the guidelines for the allocation of Home Office capital funding for police air support (2003–04).

A number of police forces have submitted applications for funding in 2003–04 for air support purposes and a decision on the allocation of the available funding will be announced in the new year.

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many anti-social behaviour orders have been made in each local authority area in England since May 1997; how many of these orders have been broken by the offender; and what average prison term has resulted from such breaches of ASBOs. [56239]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many anti-social behaviour orders and acceptable behaviour contracts have been issued, broken down by police authority area in England and Wales. [76257]

Mr. Denham: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many anti-social behaviour orders have been issued in (a) Hampshire and (b) Portsmouth South in the last six months; and if he will make a statement. [76502]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many anti-social behaviour orders have been issued since their introduction, broken down by local authority area; and if he will make a statement. [79592]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Area-based Initiatives

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, if he will list for each area-based initiative for which his Department is responsible the amount originally budgeted for in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02, stating in each year what funds budgeted for were not spent and if they were carried forward. [71459]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Arrests (Portsmouth, South)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been arrested in the Portsmouth, South constituency in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [78964]

Mr. Denham: Information on the number of arrests for notifiable offences is collected centrally at police force area level only. Available information shows that in 1999–2000 there were 42,598 arrests for notifiable offences within the Hampshire police force area and in 2000–01 (latest available) 39,420. Information for earlier years is not available on a consistent basis. Figures for 2001–02 will be available in due course.

Asylum Appeals

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applicants under the expedited appeals process (a) between 1 April 2001 and 31 March 2002 and (b) since 1 April 2002 received (i) legal advice and assistance in preparing their asylum appeal and (ii) legal representation at the appeal hearing; [79615]

(2) how many asylum appeals (a) between 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002 and (b) since 1 April 2002 have been (i) lodged and (ii) heard under the expedited appeals process; how many of these appeals have been refused; and in relation to these refusals, how many applications for judicial review have been lodged. [79616]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 6 November 2002]: The expedited appeal process commenced in August 2002.

Appeals are expedited where the appellant's claim has been processed at Oakington, they remain detained after leaving Oakington, and the appeal has been certified as falling within paragraph 9(4)(a) or (b) or paragraph 9(5)(a) or (b) of schedule 4 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 (appeals which are manifestly unfounded).

Appeals in the expedited process have no first hearing and are listed for a full hearing no earlier than six and no later than eight working days from receipt of the appeal by the Immigration Appellate Authority (IAA).

Advice and assistance for preparing an asylum appeal is available to all asylum applicants at Oakington. The Immigration Advisory Service and Refugee Legal Centre both have on-site representatives and will act for any asylum applicants held at Oakington. Subject to means and merits tests, applicants will be entitled to receive legal representation funded by the Legal Services Commission at their appeal hearing.

Asylum statistics are published quarterly. The latest published figures give information up to and including June 2002. Data relating to the period beyond June 2002 are not yet available. The next publication giving figures up to and including September will be available from 29 November 2002 on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Asylum Reception Policies

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library the results of his research to examine asylum reception policies and practice of Sweden, Denmark, the Netherlands and Germany; and if he will make a statement. [75401]

Beverley Hughes: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Asylum Seekers

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent research he has commissioned on the factors which are attracting asylum seekers and illegal immigrants to Britain. [78585]

Beverley Hughes: Research examining the decision making of asylum seekers and the reasons why they seek asylum in the UK in preference to other countries has already been conducted. This was based on interviews with a small sample of asylum seekers and refugees. Because the sample size was relatively small, the conclusion that can be drawn from the research must be interpreted with caution. The report of the findings was published by the Home Office in July 2002 ('Understanding the Decision Making of Asylum Seekers' by Vaughan Robinson and Jeremy Segrott Home Office Research Study number 243 / Home Office Findings number 172).

My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has commissioned research to survey a small sample of people in detention centres who have been illegally resident in the UK (some of whom may not have entered illegally but have become illegal since entering the UK). My right hon. Friend is considering commissioning a study of a small sample of overstayers. Again, the relatively small sample size means that any results would need to be interpreted with caution. Both research studies take the form of in-depth interviews with these people, and the findings are expected to include some information about the factors that attracted them to the UK.

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on asylum towards those seeking refuge from slavery in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [79339]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 5 November 2002]: Applications for asylum in the United Kingdom are considered individually on their merits in accordance with the UK's obligations under the 1951 UN Convention relating to the Status of Refugees and the 1967 Protocol. Unless the Dublin Convention applies or the applicant may reasonably be expected on other grounds to seek asylum in a third country, asylum is granted where the applicant fulfils the criteria of the 1951 UN Convention.

Slavery can constitute persecution. Where the application is based upon slavery we will assess whether that slavery relates to one of the Convention grounds, whether the state authorities are willing or able to offer effective protection against it, and whether the applicant could reasonably be expected to move to another part of the country where he or she would be safe.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to employ independent consultants to assess the effectiveness of asylum accommodation centres that are opened as part of the initial trial of such centres. [79480]

Beverley Hughes: The evaluation will be led by the Immigration, Research and Statistics Service—part of the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate. It will include a combination of management information, consultation with relevant people and more formal research carried out by independent researchers under contract to the Home Office. The results of the accommodation centres evaluation will be publicly available and made available to Parliament.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to invite contractors to tender for the construction and operation of the trial asylum accommodation centres. [79482]

Beverley Hughes: Tender documents for each for the trial accommodation centre sites will not be issued until planning consent has been obtained.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had about the provision of (a) a floating asylum accommodation centre with possible suppliers of such facilities and (b) core and cluster asylum accommodation centres with the Refugee Council; and if he will make a statement. [79484]

Beverley Hughes: I met the Refugee Council on 21 October to discuss their proposals. That dialogue will continue. We have not ruled out the possibility of using floating accommodation centres for asylum seekers.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers there are in Blackburn; and how many are resident in (a) private accommodation and (b) publicly provided accommodation. [79702]

Beverley Hughes: The information is not available in the form requested. We currently only have statistics on the location of asylum seekers supported by the National Asylum Support Service (NASS).

As at the end of June 2002 there were 880[1] asylum seekers (including dependants) who were being supported in NASS accommodation in Blackburn. The number of asylum seekers who have been placed by NASS into private or publically owned accommodation is not available.

[1] Figure rounded to the nearest five and excludes cases where support has been ceased.

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to provide new accommodation for asylum seekers in Newport, South Wales. [79705]

Beverley Hughes: Newport is a designated cluster area. As at 30 June 2002 there were 20* asylum seekers including dependants supported in the National Asylum Support Service accommodation in Newport. Within Wales as a whole a further 175* asylum seekers, including dependants, are in receipt of subsistence only support.

* figures rounded to nearest five.

Bail

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to deal with the bailing of prolific offenders especially where there is a history of non-compliance; if he will offer guidance to magistrates in these matters; and if he will make a statement. [77101]

Hilary Benn: The decision on whether to grant bail or remand a defendant in custody is, of course, one for the courts to make, in each case, in line with the statutory framework primarily set out in the Bail Act 1976.

To help the courts to tackle the problems of persistent offending on bail by juveniles, I announced on 16 April 2002 the extension of the existing powers to enable courts to place on secure remand any 12 to 16-year-old where they are of the opinion that the child or young person has a recent history of repeatedly committing imprisonable offences on bail or in local authority accommodation and that it is necessary to remand him into secure accommodation in order to protect the public from serious harm or to prevent him committing more imprisonable offences. This came into force nationally on 16 September 2002 after implementation on 22 April 2002 in the 10 street crime areas.

In addition to this, the national implementation of electronic tagging for 12 to 16-year-olds on bail and local authority remand was introduced from 1 June 2002. Tagging will strengthen the powers of the courts by increasing their options for dealing with young people who commit repeated imprisonable offences (such as theft and criminal damage) while on bail.

We also intend to include provision, as soon as parliamentary time allows, to weight the court's discretion against granting bail to a defendant who has been charged with an imprisonable offence committed while on bail for another offence. Once this has been introduced we will provide the courts with guidance on the new provision in the usual way.

Brixton Police

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 11 February, Official Report, column 56W, on Brixton Police, for what reasons staff were absent during the periods in question. [37513]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Burglar Alarms

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many false burglar alarm call outs there were in each police force in England and Wales, and what the percentage increase or decrease was in each of the last five years. [37430]

Mr. Denham: The requested information is not available centrally.

Burglary

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what the clear-up rate by police force was for burglaries in (a) urban, (b) rural and (c) suburban areas in each year since 1979; [78757]

(2) what the average clear-up rate by police force was in each year since 1979. [78756]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 4 November 2002]: Recorded crime and detection statistics are not recorded by whether the crimes are committed in urban, rural or suburban areas. The requested figures for clear-up (detections) rate by police force area for each year since 1979 are given in the table, which has been placed in the Library.

There was a change in counting rules for recorded crime on 1 April 1998, which increased the total number of crimes counted in each police force area, and therefore may have affected the detection rate. Detection rates after this date are therefore not directly comparable with previous years.

There was also a change in the counting rules for detections on 1 April 1999, the new instructions providing more precise and rigorous criteria for securing a detection, with the underlying emphasis on the successful result of a police investigation. For example, detections obtained by the interview of a convicted prisoner were no longer included. Numbers of detections before and after this date are therefore not directly comparable.

The adoption of the National Crime Recording Standard (NCRS) in April 2002, aimed to move the crime counts for the 43 forces of England and Wales onto a more consistent national basis, and to take a more victim-centred approach to crime recording. A small number of forces adopted the principles of the standard prior to April 2002. As a result both recorded crime and detection rates will have been affected for 2001–02. Had this effect not occurred, it has been estimated that the overall detection rate in England and Wales in 2001–02 would have been 24 per cent., the same as the previous year.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many burglaries with entry per 10,000 households in (a) 2000–01, (b) 2001–02 and (c) 2002–03 took place in (i) urban and (ii) rural areas of England and Wales; and if he will break them down by region. [78856]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 5 November 2002]: Recorded crime statistics are not recorded by whether the crimes are committed in urban, rural or suburban areas. However, the British Crime Survey (BCS), indicates the percentage of households victims of burglary with entry (once or more) by area type for interviews conducted in the 2001–02 financial year. The BCS estimates that 1.2 per cent. of households in rural areas were victims of burglary with entry (once or more) compared to 2.1 per cent. of those in urban areas.

The latest British Crime Survey produced for the first time, for BCS interviews conducted in 2001–02 estimates of burglary with entry per 10,000 households, and attempted burglary per 10,000 households, by region. Figures were not recorded on this basis before this, and the figures for 2002–03 are not yet available. Regional figures are only given for the BCS due to the variability of specific offence figures at police force level. The figures for 2001–02 BCS interviews are given in the table.

Burglaries recorded by the BCS, by region 2001–02[1]

Care Home Staff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the estimated waiting times were in each of the last six months for (a) new care home staff, (b) registered care home providers, (c) managers of care homes, (d) foster carers and (e) adoptive parents who apply for a Criminal Records Bureau check. [80031]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Category D Prisoners

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Category D prisoners have been transferred from an open to a closed prison for breaching prison regulations in each year since 1997. [77396]

Hilary Benn: The information requested is not routinely collected.

Commission for Racial Equality

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with (a) Ms Beverley Bernard and (b) Mr. Trevor Phillips about the chairmanship of the CRE. [78864]

Mr. Blunkett: The Chair of the Commission for Racial Equality (CRE) is a public appointment governed by the Nolan rules. Ministerial involvement in the process is limited to making the final appointment from a shortlist of candidates drawn up independently by an advisory panel which includes an independent assessor.

Police Service (Civilian Staff)

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what the policy of the Government is in relation to the police service employing civilian staff with (a) spent and (b) unspent convictions. [79617]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Columbus House

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for the Home Office leased building at Columbus House on the Langstone Business Park in Newport, South Wales; and if it will be used for residential purposes. [79704]

Mr. Blunkett: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Community Court Orders

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many community court orders were not allocated to probation officers in England and Wales in the last 12 months. [79628]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Community Orders

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons have been imprisoned following breach proceedings in respect of criminal community orders (a) during 2001–02 and (b) during the first quarter of the current financial year. [79692]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Computers

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many computers were replaced in his Department, including those used by regional staff outside the central departmental offices in each of the past three years; how the replaced units were disposed of and by which companies; and at what cost. [60754]

Beverley Hughes: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Constabulary (Sussex)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many police officers have left Sussex constabulary in the last 12 months because of (a) retirement, (b) early retirement, (c) injury and (d) other employment; [75555]

(2) how many anti-social behaviour orders have been issued in West Sussex in the last six months. [75556]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Cookham Ward Secure Training Centre

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the private finance initiative contract for Cookham Ward (Medway) Secure Training Centre by comparison with a non-private finance initiative alternative. [49654]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Corporate Killing

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress towards the introduction of an offence of corporate killing. [78898]

Hilary Benn: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Corporate Manslaughter

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce an offence of corporate manslaughter; and if he will make a statement. [77918]

Hilary Benn: The Government are committed to extending criminal liability for involuntary manslaughter to corporations, and will legislate when parliamentary time allows.

Correspondence

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Torbay of 18 June concerning Mr. Elias Massif Bousaleh. [74856]

Beverley Hughes: I wrote to the hon. Member on 7 November. I apologise for the delay in replying.

Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department will send a full response regarding a constituent, Miss Barker; and if he will make a statement on his handling of the correspondence. [72405]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the right hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

CRB and Capita

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to receive the report from Patrick Carter on the strategy and operations of CRB and Capita. [79810]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Crime Reduction (Portsmouth, South)

Mr Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (a) those schemes which have received funding under the targeted policing initiative, (b) the amount received and (c) the targets set to reduce crime under the schemes in Portsmouth South; and if he will make a statement. [78962]

Mr. Denham: We did not receive any bids for funding for targeted policing projects in the Portsmouth South area.

Crime Reduction Strategy

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the participation by the London borough of Islington and the police in a crime reduction strategy. [53233]

Mr. Denham: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Crimestoppers

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the number of crimes which have been solved as a direct result of Crimestoppers in the last 12 months. [12014]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Criminal Convictions

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many convictions there were of those prosecuted in magistrates courts in England and Wales, broken down by local authority area since 1997. [79663]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Criminal Justice

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many criminals have been brought to justice in each of the last 20 years; and if he will make a statement. [77499]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 28 October 2002]: Information on offences brought to justice in England and Wales is only available on a consistent basis for the years 1998–99, 1999–2000 and 2000–01 and is shown in the table.

Notifiable offences and those brought to justice in England and Wales, 1998–99, 1999–2000 and 2000–01

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
Notifiable offences	5,109,116	5,301,171	5,170,196

Total offences brought to justice	1,121,292	1,103,755	1,023,748

Criminal Justice White Paper

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will propose that any bill arising from the Criminal Justice White Paper is subject to pre-legislative scrutiny on-line. [77783]

Hilary Benn: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave him on 30 October 2002, Official Report, column 844W.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, if he will publish the responses to his Department on the consultation on the Criminal Justice White Paper, and place them in the Library. [79610]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

CS Spray

Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the follow-up studies into the long-term effects on persons sprayed with CS spray have been commissioned; what the specification for these will be; and if the studies will look at susceptible groups including those being treated with neuroleptic drugs. [77691]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 4 November 2002]: The follow-up studies into the longer-term effects on persons sprayed with CS spray commenced in February 2002.

The specification for the study is to evaluate the longer-term medical effects of CS spray, if any, and to produce a report detailing the findings. The study will include susceptible groups and those being treated with neuroleptic medication.

Television Licences (Non-payment)

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people received a custodial sentence in 2001 for non-payment of the BBC licence fee. [80335]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Daniel Bishop

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what form the investigation into the case of Daniel Bishop, who was released in error from Cardiff prison in March, is taking; and if he will make a statement. [79807]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Day Prison Release

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which types of criminal he proposes should be eligible for day release from prison; what sort of work inmates will carry out if they are on day prison release; and what measures will be put in place to ensure that prisoners on day release do not abscond. [35723]

Hilary Benn: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the (a) capital and (b) revenue underspend in his Department is expected to be in the financial year. [47794]

Beverley Hughes: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Departmental Expenditure (Televisions)

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) analogue and (b) integrated digital television sets his Department has purchased in each of the last 24 months; and if he will make a statement. [38177]

Hilary Benn: The number of (a) analogue and (b) integrated digital television sets bought by the Home Department in each of the last 24 months are as follows.

Month	Digital	Analogue
February 2000	0	0

[1] Prison Service end of year totals. Month by month split could not be provided without incurring disproportionate costs.

The high number of television sets purchased by the Prison Service in the years 2000 and 2001 is a result of a programme of providing prison establishments with in cell television sets.

No guidance as been issued relating to the purchasing of television sets.

Departmental Job Vacancies

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many job vacancies there were at (a) administrative assistant or equivalent, (b) administrative officer or equivalent, (c) administrative executive officer, (d) higher executive officer, (e) senior executive officer, (f) grade 7 principal and (g) positions above grade 7 level in his Department for jobs located in (i) London and (i) the South East between 1 April 2001 and 31 March; and what is the total employment for each Civil Service grade. [76562]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 28 October 2002]: The information requested is not available for all parts of the Department. The tables provide a snapshot of vacancies and staffing at 1 April 2001 and 1 April 2002 for the Home Office and the Prison Service.

[1] Includes IND and the Forensic Science Service unless otherwise indicated.

[2] Vacancies shown are only for the central London-based staff, excluding the Immigration and Nationality Directorate and the Forensic Science Service.

[3] Figures include administrative and equivalent grades.

The Immigration and Nationality Directorate cannot provide information on vacancies at 1 April 2001 for 1 April 2002 without incurring disproportionate cost. The Forensic Science Service does not collect information on vacancies filled by internal candidates.

The 241 vacancies shown at 1 April 2002 have been filled through a variety of external recruitment, Job Specific Selection, managed postings, Selection Boards and trawls to other Government Departments.

[1] Excludes staff in area offices and other split site staff.

[2] Prison Officer and Governor grades are included in equivalent administrative grade at appropriate responsibility level; nurses allocated to Executive Officer level because the forecast planned post data do not distinguish their grade level.

[3] Vacancies calculated as total of forecast planned posts minus full-time equivalent staff in post as at 31 March 2001.

[4] Excludes those staff on reduced pay and maternity leave.

Two national recruitment campaigns were run in April and September 2002 for the Prison Officer grade, specifically for the female estate and the emergency build programme. Due to their success, recruits have been provided and continue to be provided to London establishments, and all officer vacancies in the Kent, Surrey and Sussex area will be filled. In addition, a series of local adverts throughout the London and south-east area are planned, with HMYOI/Remand Centre Feltham currently recruiting.

Departmental Recruitment

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been spent in recruiting staff to his Department in (a) London and (b) the south-east in each year since 1997. [78560]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 4 November 2002]: The table provides information on the total costs of recruitment schemes run by the Home Office Central Personnel Management Unit, based in Central London, and the Croydon based Human Resources Directorate of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate.

These costs relate to recruitment schemes run to fill posts in a number of areas around the UK. Separate records of the costs attributable to filling posts in any particular area are not maintained.

Detection Rates

Albert Owen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of reported crime the North Wales police detected in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [79522]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 5 November 2002]: Details for crime are published for financial years, most recently in "Crime in England and Wales 2001–02", of which table 8.01 contains the data on the amount of recorded crime which is detected. A copy is available in the Library.

The figures available for North Wales are for financial years and are as follows:

(a) 1999–2000: 36 per cent.

(b) 2000–01: 31 per cent.

(c) 2001–02: 28 per cent.

Albert Owen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a league table of police forces in England and Wales by detection rates. [79523]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 5 November 2002]: Details for the financial years 1997–98 to 2001–02, were published in table 8.01 of "Criminal Statistics England and Wales 2000", and are given in the table. A copy of the publication is available in the Library.

As different police forces have different crime mixes, comparing overall detection rates between forces is of limited value. This is because different types of crime tend to have different detection rates, and so a police force with which has a higher proportion of types of crime with high detection rates will tend to have a higher overall detection rate. Also, police forces may give priority to tackling particular types of crime, with the detection rate of those crimes having some effect on the force's overall detection rate.

The detection rates for 2001–02 may have been affected in comparison to those of the previous year as a result of some police forces implementing the principles of the National Crime Recording Standard in advance of its national implementation on 1 April 2002.

There was a change in counting rules for recorded crime on 1 April 1998, which increased the total number of crimes counted in each police force area, and therefore may have affected the detection rate. Detection rates after this date are therefore not directly comparable with previous years.

There was a change in the counting rules for detections on 1 April 1999, the new instructions providing more precise and rigorous criteria for securing a detection, with the underlying emphasis on the successful result of a police investigation. For example, detections obtained by the interview of a convicted prisoner were no longer included. Numbers of detections before and after this date are therefore not directly comparable.

Disability Discrimination (Prisons)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to start applying the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 to prisons and prisoners. [77850]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 20 October 2002]: The Prison Service has already issued policy guidance for the management of disabled prisoners and staff to all establishments. This reflects the requirements of each stage of the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 (DDA).

Prisoners are required to review and change, if necessary, their procedures and practices and to make reasonable adjustments to their services and facilities to ensure that they are accessible to disabled people. Prisons have also published local policy documents outlining what people with disabilities are able to expect at that establishment.

The Prison Service is developing a comprehensive disability strategy which will ensure disability issues are reflected in its practices and policies. This will raise awareness and commitment, and enable the Prison Service to implement the final stage of the DDA in 2004.

Domestic Violence and Rape

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evidence he has collated of variations between different police force areas in England and Wales in (a) recorded instances of rape, (b) recorded instances of domestic violence, (c) the clean up rate of recorded instances of rape and (d) the clean up rate of recorded instances of domestic violence. [75069]

Hilary Benn: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Drug Arrests

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been arrested for possession of (a) cannabis, (b) ecstasy and (c) heroin in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [78961]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Information collected centrally on arrests for notifiable offences does not separately identify individual offences. However, data provided in the table shows persons found guilty, cautioned, given a fiscal fine, or dealt with by compounding for possession of cannabis, ecstasy-type and heroin from 1996–2000. The figures cover the UK.

The data are taken from the annual Home Office Statistical Bulletin, which is available on the RDS website (http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs2/hosb402.pdf), and copies are available in the Library. These figures are due to be updated in the spring of 2003.

Drug Treatment

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total annual cost per drug treatment place, broken down by treatment type, is in 2002–03. [79573]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Information in the format requested is not available. Data is held on the cost per week and the average cost per individual is as follows:

Residential treatment costs between £250 and £1000 per week, depending on the services provided. These range from a hostel place supported by out-patient treatment, to in-patient treatment including medical services.

In 2002–01 there were 118,500 individuals reported as in contact with treatment agencies, at a cost of £310 million. This provides an average cost of £2,616 per individual.

Drug Treatment and Testing Orders

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people have been imprisoned for breaches of drug treatment and testing orders; [78486]

(2) how many drug treatment and testing orders have been made by the courts; and how many have been breached. [78485]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance has been given to judges and magistrates on the enforcement of drug treatment and testing orders in relation to prison overcrowding. [78599]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Drug Treatment Places

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drug treatment places were available in each year since 1997, broken down by treatment type. [79572]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Information in the format requested is not available.

Data is currently held on the estimated number of people in all treatment types as follows:

1998–99	102,133
1999–2000	110,013
2000–01	118,500

From 2001–02 more robust data will be held on the numbers in treatment. These figures are not yet available.

The National Treatment Association (NTA) was set up in 2001 to substantially increase treatment provision.

Drugs (Government Targets)

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his most recent assessment is of the progress made in achieving Government targets on drugs use and harm announced in 1998. [79403]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Information on progress against current Government targets concerning the misuse of drugs can be found in the Home Office Annual Report 2001–2002, a copy of which is in the Library. The section related to drugs, Aim 5, is on pages 170 and 171.

The Government has recently undertaken a review of the drugs strategy, progress against targets, their balance and focus. We will be publishing an updated strategy later this year.

Drugs Education Programmes

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of (a) Operation CHARLIE and (b) other anti-drugs education programmes in reducing drug use in those who took part in them in each of the past five years. [79404]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The results of three major drug education programmes, developed by the Home Office, have been published during the past five years.

In 1997, the Home Office published an evaluation of Project CHARLIE (Chemical Abuse Resolution Lies in Education). This project involved 44 children in primary schools in Hackney between 1991 and 1993. Four years after the programme both tobacco and illegal drug use were significantly lower among Project CHARLIE children than among pupils who had not been involved in the project.

In 2001, final results of the NE Choices programme were published. This prevention programme, based in the north-east of England, was targeted at young people aged between 13 and 16. There was no evidence of an impact of the programme on the overall prevalence of drug use. However, a small proportion (2 per cent.) of pupils changed their drug taking behaviour from consumption of Class A drugs to the use of cannabis, solvents or nitrites or to non-use.

Similar findings are found in the 2002 results of the evaluation of the Integrated Programme (IP). The IP is based on North American evidence that school programmes that are reinforced by parent involvement and community engagement have an impact on reducing drug taking. The IP was designed and delivered to adolescents in Northern England during 1998 to 1999. The IP was a demonstration project that was too small to generate significant reductions in prevalence. However, the results suggest that young people who received the IP were more likely to reduce harder drug use and maintain a lower-risk drug-taking repertoire than those who had not participated in the programme.

Since these three projects were commissioned, an overview of international research has been completed. This identified two prevention programmes with the greatest impact on behaviour which had been developed in the United States. On the basis of this evidence, the Government have established a research programme called "Blueprint". This will determine whether elements of US "what works" programmes: (1) can be implemented within the UK settings; (2) have potential to be effective in reducing drug use, and (3) have added value for schools, parents and young people.

Electronic Tagging

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convicted persons were subject to electronic tags as at (a) 30 September 2001 and (b) 30 September 2002. [76997]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 28 October 2002]: The number of convicted persons who were subject to electronic tags was 3,219 on 30 September 2001 and 5,130 on 30 September 2002.

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance is given to (a) judges and (b) magistrates on the imposition of sentences involving electronic tagging; and if he will make a statement. [76998]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Emergency Telephone Numbers

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research has been done into the provision of a second emergency telephone number to work in conjunction with 999. [41946]

Mr. Denham: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

EU Citizenship

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on the award of EU citizenship to individuals from third countries residing inside the European Union. [80044]

Beverley Hughes: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Evangelical Lutheran Church of England

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans his Department has to grant dispensation to the member churches of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of England to register under the Charities Act 1993 as individual charities making individual returns and submitting individual accounts. [80319]

Beverley Hughes: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Feltham Young Offenders Institution

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young people are detained at Feltham Young Offenders Institute; and if he will provide a breakdown of this figure by ethnic origin. [45715]

Hilary Benn: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Female Prison Population

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department to what he attributes the recent rise in the female prison population. [43535]

Hilary Benn: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Rural Policing

Mr Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what impact he estimates the focus on the fight against urban crime will have on policing rural areas. [76948]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Fine Default

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, how many (a) men and (b) women were jailed in England and Wales for fine default in each year since 1990. [20288]

Hilary Benn: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Fireworks

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many incidents of damage to property were caused by fireworks in (a) the last 12 months and (b) each of the preceding five years. [77972]

Mr. Denham: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Focus Group Research

Mr. Allen To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what use he and his Department has made of focus group research since June 2001; if he will identify for each research project the topics covered, the person or organisation carrying out the research, and the total cost; and if he will publish the research on his Department's website. [74994]

Hilary Benn: The Home Office research department undertakes a wide range of research activities that support the development of information-led policy, including scientific and social research, and includes research gathered from market research and focus groups.

The department conducts or commissions focus groups only when it is justified by the specific needs of a particular policy or programme and when this is the most economical, efficient and effective way to achieve the purpose. Consulting and involving the public helps inform both policy formulation and the delivery of better quality public services. It has not been possible to provide detailed breakdown of costs of projects where this information is either not held centrally or is commercial in confidence.

The Research, Development and Statistics Directorate (RDS) conducts social research supporting all seven Home Office aims. A list of RDS publications is available on the Home Office website and copies are also placed in the Library.

Football (Banning Orders)

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many UK citizens were given banning orders prior to England's international football match in Slovakia; and of these how many did not have a criminal conviction. [78524]

Mr. Denham: All of the 1,301 individuals subject to a football banning order prior to the Slovakia v England match have at least one criminal conviction. In accordance with police powers set out in section 21 of the Football Spectators Act 1989, an additional 13 individuals were intercepted en-route to Slovakia, prevented from travelling and made subject to banning order proceedings. All of the individuals concerned have convictions for violence or public order offences.

Football Matches (Policing)

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what the average cost to public funds was for policing at (a) Premiership, (b) Nationwide league and (c) non-league football ground on a match day in England in the last 12 months; [78885]

(2) what assessment he has made of the cost to public funds of policing at Premiership football grounds in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [78886]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is not held centrally. A working group comprising representatives of Government, police and football authorities has been set up to examine a range of strategic football-related public order issues, including the cost of, and charging arrangements for, policing football matches.

Handcuff Cleaning

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what protocols are in place for cleaning handcuffs used on different prisoners (a) in prisons and (b) by police forces. [74963]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Identity Parades

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will issue a general guidance to chief constables that citizens who help the police and the prosecuting authorities by attending identity parades as witnesses should be entitled, without a supervising discretion, to their reasonable expenses and loss of earnings for so doing. [77100]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Illegal Immigrants (Use of Services)

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policies are on the use by illegal immigrants of (a) the UK's benefits systems, (b) the NHS and (c) the education system. [78588]

Beverley Hughes: The Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 ensures that only those people who have the right to settle in the United Kingdom should have access to social security benefits. The Act excludes from, 3 April 2000, all persons subject to immigration control from income related and other non-contributory benefits. Instead asylum seekers are supported while the National Asylum Support Service (NASS) determines their case.

There remains, however, a stock of existing asylum seekers whose cases date from before 3 April 2000. They and a few other excepted groups still receive social security benefits.

Persons with no status to remain in the United Kingdom who are not seeking asylum are entitled neither to social security benefits nor NASS support.

A person who has made a formal application for permission to take refuge in the United Kingdom, or who has been granted refuge, is fully entitled to National Health Service (NHS) treatment without charge.

People who are not ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom are subject to the National Health Service (Charges to Overseas Visitors) Regulations 1989, as amended. These regulations make people who are not specifically exempt liable for the cost of most types of hospital treatment other than that given in Accident and Emergency departments or some types of treatment which are necessary to safeguard wider public health.

Immigration

Keith Vaz: : To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines he has issued to CIOs at the ports on their dealings with hon. Members. [80045]

Beverley Hughes: The instructions given to all Immigration staff mirror those contained in the booklet entitled "Information for Members of Parliament about immigration and nationality enquiries".

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, when his Department intends to reply to the letter of 1 August from Mrs. S. Jakobi of Stoke Mandeville acknowledged by his Department's Immigration and Nationality Directorate, Liverpool on 29 August. [78365]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 31 October 2002]: I am sorry that my officials at the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) in Croydon cannot trace Mrs. Jacobi's letter. If a further letter with sufficient details such as full name, date of birth and nationality can be sent to the Briefing and Complaints Section 5th Floor, Lunar House, 40 Wellesley Road, Croydon CR9 2BY, IND will ensure that a response is sent as a matter of priority.

Immigration Offences (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were detained by the PSNI and RUC on immigration offences during each of the last three years. [78730]

Beverley Hughes: The Immigration Service does not routinely collect the information requested. A check of information which is held by Immigration Service would be time consuming and disproportionately expensive and would not in any event, represent the full total of police arrests since a proportion of these may have originated, and have been recorded, as matters not related to immigration offences.

Incitement Law

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, if he will make a statement on the guidance he plans to issue to police on enforcing the proposed incitement law covering religious and racial hatred. [16883]

Mr. Denham: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Job Advertisements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the job advertisements placed by his Department in the last 12 months specifying where the advertisements were placed and the cost in each case. [39073]

Hilary Benn: Tables, which have been placed in the Library, show the total advertisements run by the Home Office Central Personnel Management Unit and units with devolved or partially devolved responsibility for recruitment. The tables show details of recruitment schemes run from 1 October 2001 to 30 September 2002.

Details of specific media used for advertisements are not available. The Central Personnel Management Unit normally advertises junior posts in local jobcentres and local or regional press. More senior posts are advertised in "quality dailies" (e.g. Guardian, Times, Sunday Times and Observer) and, where appropriate, specialist journals. The Home Office has a standing policy to advertise vacancies in the Ethnic Minority Press.

Lay Observers

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, (1) if he will publish his responses to Lay Observers' Panels reports, and subsequent recommendations; [79612]

(2) when he received the last Greater London Lay Observers' Panel report; and what actions he plans to take in response to its recommendations. [79613]

Mr. Blunkett: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Auld Review

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what assessment he has made of recommendation 321 of Lord Auld's Review of the Criminal Court in respect of access by the prosecution to appeal hearings [20324]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Market Research

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to issue guidance to local authorities on controlling market research canvassing in town centres. [29840]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Meetings

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent meetings Ministers and officials in his Department have held with the United States Administration Head of Homeland Security. [80355]

Mr. Blunkett: I met Governor Ridge and his staff yesterday and will have further meetings with them today for a discussion of the current terrorist threat and the measures we are both taking in response. To assist Governor Ridge, I have prepared a briefing paper on the UK dimension, a copy of which is available in the Library and on the website www.homeoffice.gov.uk/new.htm.

Mental Health

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when mental health charity MACA can expect an answer to its letters of 22 August 2001, 16 October 2001, 19 December 2001 and 30 January 2002 about police handling of serious incidents involving people with mental health problems. [45194]

Hilary Benn: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Metropolitan Police (Training)

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many recruits have entered training for the Metropolitan Police in each month since 1 July 1999. [18652]

Mr. Denham: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Metropolitan Police Service

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers working shifts at (a) Kennington Police Station and (b) other police stations inside the congestion charging zone will be affected by the introduction of congestion charging; and what arrangement the Metropolitan Police Service has made to compensate officers for their extra costs. [80012]

Mr. Denham: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Ministerial Transport Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his estimate is of the cost of (a) ministerial cars and drivers and (b) taxis for his Department in each of the last four years. [27912]

Beverley Hughes: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mobile Phone Theft

David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the Government is doing to combat mobile phone theft. [27180]

Mr. Denham: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Money Laundering (Egmont Group)

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many reports have been made (a) to the UK and (b) from the UK to other countries under the Egmont Group arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [77216]

Mr. Blunkett: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Moving Traffic Offences

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what statutory powers a non-uniformed police constable may report a driver for a moving traffic offence. [80006]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

North Sea Camp Prison

Mr. Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many category D prisoners from HMP North Sea Camp have been found to have been in breach of their community visit licences for violations of the no alcohol rule and have not been transferred to category A, B or C prisons in the past 12 months. [76653]

Hilary Benn: [holding answer 29 October 2002]: In the 12 months to 22 October 2002 prisoners at North Sea Camp breached the no alcohol rule on 42 occasions. None of the 42 cases resulted in transfer to closed conditions for breach of this rule alone, although in some cases a breach will have contributed to a return to closed conditions.

Mr. Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many category D prisoners from HMP North Sea Camp have been issued in the past 12 months with community day visit licences restricting them to (a) a specific geographical area and (b) a general mileage radius. [76654]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 29 October 2002]: Community day visit licenses have been issued on 1,298 occasions since 22 October 2001. In all cases there were restrictions on geographical location and mileage radius.

Mr. Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of the rules and of the standard licence governing the community visit licences of category D prisoners in (a) HMP North Sea Camp and (b) other category D prisons. [76655]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 29 October 2002]: Instructions about the release of any prisoner on an earned community visit are given in Chapter 3 of Prison Service Order 4000 (Incentives and Earned Privileges, Earned Community Visits and Compacts). Appendix 1 to the chapter contains a template of a standard licence. Copies of all Prison Service Orders are in the Library.

Mr. Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many category D prisoners from HMP North Sea Camp have been transferred to category A, B and C category prisons as punishment for breaches of their community visit licences in the past 12 months. [76652]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 29 October 2002]: Seventeen prisoners have been transferred from North Sea Camp to higher category prisons in the 12 months prior to 22 October 2002 for breaches of community visit licences.

Notifiable Offences

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his estimate is of the number of (a) notifiable offences, (b) convictions and (c) convictions as a percentage of notifiable offences for each year from 1990–91 to 2001–02, (i) in total for England and (ii) broken down by police authority; and if he will make a statement. [77500]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 28 October 2002]: Convictions for notifiable offences are only available on a consistent basis for all areas for 1998–99, 1999–2000 and 2000–01. The available information is contained in the table.

Offenders (Safety)

Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the safety of and conditions for offenders kept in court cells and transported in prison vans in London is being monitored while inspections by the Greater London Lay Observers Panel are suspended. [79068]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Open Prisons

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will review the regime in open prisons; and if he will make a statement. [77393]

Hilary Benn: Open prisons hold large numbers of short-term prisoners who have been carefully assessed and identified as low risk.

In addition to their role with short-term prisoners, open prisons contribute towards the resettlement of prisoners coming towards the end of medium and long-term sentences, including life sentence prisoners. This aspect of their work involved the selection and oversight of prisoners engaged in unpaid community work and, for those within 12 months of their parole eligibility date, in full-time paid employment. These opportunities are only available to prisoners who have passed a stringent risk assessment process, and whose progress and behaviour are subject to constant review.

The arrangements for the resettlement role of open prisons are contained in the National Framework of Requirements for Resettlement Regimes which was issued in November 2001. The Prison Service will shortly review the way in which the National Framework has operated during its first 12 months.

Parliamentary Questions and Letters

Mr. Burstow To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) parliamentary questions and (b) letters to him from hon. Members in this session remain unanswered, broken down by those which are (i) one month old, (ii) two months old, (iii) three months old, (iv) four months old and (v) over six months old. [79943]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Passport Agency Contracts

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for Passport Agency contracts by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative. [49651]

Beverley Hughes: The original business case for replacing the obsolete passport production system (PIMIS) and improve the efficiency, effectiveness and security of the passport document compared a Private Finance Initiative (PFI) solution with non-PFI which resulted in the PFI solution being £32 million cheaper to public funds over the proposed 10 years of any system:

	£ million
Upgrade to digital in-house system	371
PFI solution	339

Since the business case was completed in July 1997 there have been many changes to the Agency, with major initiatives including modernisation, anti-fraud and customer service improvements. The flexibility within the PFI contract has allowed the Agency to drive forward on these initiatives in the most economical fashion calling on our private sector partners' expertise and achieving improvements through a controlled and negotiated contract change control process.

Now that the PFI solution is fully in place at all seven passport offices an efficiency strategy for the remaining years of the contract is being formulated with efficiencies expected to be realised for financial year 2002–03 onwards.

Police (Civilian Employment)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many civilians per thousand population are employed by each police force; [79137]

(2) how many civilians are employed by each police force. [79144]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Police (Overtime)

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average overtime rates were per officer for each police force in the UK in the last year for which figures are available; and what the latest figures are for the cost of overtime in each police force. [25106]

Mr. Denham: The Office of Manpower Economics (OME) undertakes an annual sample survey of police officers' pay, including overtime pay for constables and sergeants, on behalf of the Police Negotiating Board for the United Kingdom.

The latest figures available from the survey show average weekly overtime payments made to constables and sergeants in the different regions, in respect of the pay period—two weeks, four weeks or a calendar month—which included 6 November 2001. These are calculated from grossed up figures by dividing the total overtime payments received by the officers in the rank by the total number of officers in that rank.

The results of the sample survey are set out in the first set of tables.

The Home Department has collected figures for the cost of overtime in 2001–02 for each police force in England and Wales. The figures are set out in the final table.

Police (Pay)

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress in the Police Negotiating Board towards reform of police pay and allowances; what the timetable is for agreement; and what proposals under consideration would require primary legislation. [29680]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Police Checks (Vehicles)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate his Department has made of the percentage of police checks on vehicles that have failed due to vehicles not being registered with DVLC. [79028]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 6 November 2002]: The police carry out checks on vehicles for a number of purposes. Information on such checks and their results is not held centrally. Vehicle registration and the accuracy of the vehicle registration record are matters for the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA).

Police Computers

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to promote the introduction of palm top personal computers in police forces. [78587]

Mr. Denham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 22 October 2002, Official Report, column 243W, on the action I am taking to increase the time police officers can spend on the streets rather than dealing with paperwork. The introduction of Personal Digital Assistants (PDAs) for police officers has the potential to make a major contribution to that aim.

The Police Bureaucracy Taskforce identified a clear and pressing requirement for officers to be able to remotely update force systems via a hand-held device. A number of forces are now taking this forward and are piloting the use of hand-held devices. However we need to ensure that any hand-held device is useable in an operational environment and that the technical and information management infrastructure is also in place to provide and send data. That is why we are taking a pilot approach.

Our aim is to identify and spread good practice and provide practical advice and guidance to forces on the implementation and use of mobile data services. We are also providing forces with the new Airwave radio communication system, which when fully implemented will deliver mobile data facilities.

Police Custody

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on the maximum distance between the place of arrest and a custody suite persons in police custody should be transported. [77766]

Mr. Denham: There is no central policy on the maximum distance persons should be transported between arrest and a custody facility. Such transfers fall within chief constables' operational discretion. Chief constables are required to designate the police stations which are to be used for the purpose of detaining arrested persons. However, the location and distribution of such stations is entirely a matter for chief constables to decide. Constables do have the power to take arrested persons to non-designated stations in certain specific circumstances. For example, where they are working in an area covered by a non-designated station and they think it will only be necessary to detain the person for a relatively short time.

A further important development in this area will be the planned introduction of "street bail". This will remove the absolute obligation on police officers to take arrested persons to a police station as soon as practicable. Officers will be able to exercise discretion and decide to bail arrestees on the street on the basis that they must undertake to attend a police station at a later time.

Police Funding

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will rank police forces in order of expenditure per thousand population in each police force area. [79143]

Mr. Denham: : I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the proposed increase in the sparsity component to one per cent. As one of the possibilities for change to the police funding formula; and what factors contributed to the calculation of that figure.

Mr. Denham: I will write to my hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library. [79969]

Police Major Disaster Teams

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who funds (a) Centrex and (b) the Police Major Disaster Advisory Team; and for what reason British Transport Police Superintendent Tony Thompson has been dismissed from these two bodies; and if he will make a statement. [66445]

Mr. Denham: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Police Numbers

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will rank police forces in order of the number of police officers per thousand population in each force area. [79145]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Police Patrols

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of police officers are patrolling in (a) the Metropolitan Police force and (b) the United Kingdom. [44078]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Police Powers (Confiscation of Alcohol)

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to give further powers to the police to confiscate unopened bottles and cans of alcoholic drinks from youths gathered in public places. [78595]

Mr. Denham: Existing police powers to confiscate alcohol from under-age drinkers in public places are provided by the Confiscation of Alcohol (Young Persons) Act 1997, as amended by section 29 of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001.

We are considering representations from the police and others about these powers, and in particular the restriction to confiscating alcohol in sealed containers. We will introduce any changes in the law that may be necessary as soon as parliamentary time allows.

Police Standards Unit

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the head of the Police Standards Unit will be eligible for a bonus; and what the criteria are for the award of this bonus. [30811]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 29 January 2002]: The terms of Mr. Bond's contract state that he may be entitled to a bonus of up to 20 per cent. of his Home Office salary. His eligibility for such a bonus will be assessed in April 2003, according to the contribution which his unit has made to improving police performance over the preceding year.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the pay and conditions of service and secondment arrangements are for the Head of the Police Standards Unit. [30812]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 29 January 2002]: When first appointed in January 2001, the Director of the Standards Unit, Mr. Kevin Bond was seconded to the Home Office from his employers, Earth Tech Inc. The effect of this was that Mr. Bond's duties and obligations were equivalent to a full-time permanent member of the civil service, but that the Home Office reimbursed Earth Tech for the cost of his services.

From October 2002, Mr. Bond ceased to be an employee of that company and the secondment agreement was replaced with a fixed term employment contract with the Home Office. The salary of £195,000 which Mr. Bond receives from the Home Office is the same as applied under the secondment agreement.

Policing

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of progress in each of the five policing priority areas in England and Wales. [77548]

Mr. Denham: The Home Office is currently assessing the progress made in the Policing Priority Areas (PPAs) established in March this year. Most recently, I chaired an extremely constructive seminar on 8 October, attended by police and Local Authority representatives from each of the five PPA areas, to review and assess the experiences of the pilot sites. I intend to make an announcement about PPAs in the near future.

Policing (Rural Areas)

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will issue guidance on policing in areas where children frequently play. [75099]

Mr. Denham: The Government recognises the importance of providing children with safe places to play and this issue will be carefully considered as part of the Government's review of children's play, jointly launched by the Department for Culture Media and Sport, and the Department for Education and Skills on 15 October. There will be a consultation process as part of the review, which will allow all interested parties to feed in their views.

Policing Charges (Football)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his Answer of 28 October 2002, Official Report, column 640W, on policing charges, when the Working Group on Football will meet; what its remit is; and what opportunities there are for (a) clubs, (b) supporters and (c) other interested parties to make their concerns known in respect of policing charges. [79721]

Mr. Denham: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Prison Deaths

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons died in each (a) prison and (b) young offenders institution in (i) 2001 and (ii) 2002. [78865]

Hilary Benn: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Prison Farms

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his Answer of 26th June, Official Report, column 959W, on prison farms, if he is now able to make a statement about the proposed closure of prison farms following the review of the future of the Farms and Gardens Estate. [78959]

Hilary Benn: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Prison Governers

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on discretionary powers available to prison governors. [77851]

Hilary Benn: [holding answer 29 October 2002]: When exercising their discretion, prison governors must act in accordance with the policies and procedures of the Prison Service as prescribed by the Prison Act 1952, the Prison or Young Offender Institution Rules, and operational instructions.

Prison Statistics

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people now in prison have committed (a) 10+, (b) 25+, (c) 50+, (d) 100+, (e) 200+ and (f) 1,000+ previous notifiable offences; and if he will make a statement. [75737]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Prisoner Exchanges (Australia)

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will open discussions with his Australian counterpart on a prisoner exchange arrangement. [78586]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on prisoner exchange arrangements between the UK and Australia. [78473]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Prisoners

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what his policy is on securing (a) town visits, (b) home leave and (c) early release under the tagging system in respect of (i) Scottish domicile prisoners and (ii) English domicile prisoners held in prisons located in England; [79389]

(2) if he will list the differences in the status and rights of English and Scottish domicile prisoners held in prisons in England. [79391]

(3) if he will make a statement on the definition of Scottish domicile prisoners held in prisons located in England. [79392]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Prisoners (Privacy)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will review the guidance on rules to protect the privacy of prisoners from identification in publications by other prison inmates. [77412]

Hilary Benn: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Prisoners (Release)

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were released in error from prisons in England and Wales in each of the last five years. [79623]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Probation Service

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what steps the National Probation Directorate is taking to set priorities for the workloads of probation staff. [79624]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of each of the 42 budgets for probation areas in England and Wales is being allocated to the National Probation Directorate's central costs for (a) this and (b) next financial year. [79691]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the performance data on enforcement and breach for probation areas in England and Wales meet national standards. [79693]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the establishment for probation officers is in Kent; how many Kent has; and how many of these are (a) fully qualified main-grade officers and (b) trainees. [75189]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, (1) how many trained probation officers left the Probation Service in England and Wales in each financial year since 1997–98. [79625]

(2) how many staff broken down by (a) grade and (b) function were employed at the National Probation Directorate on (i) 1 April 2001, (ii) 1 April 2002 and 1 October 2002. [79690]

(3) how many (a) Probation Service officers, (b) trained probation officers, excluding trainees and (c) clerical, secretarial and administrative staff were in post in the Probation Service in England and Wales on 1 April in each year since 1998. [79626]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the Probation Service's national budget was for (a) 2000–01, (b) 2001–02 and (c) 2002–03. [79689]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, how many court reports have not been prepared in the specified time by the Probation Service in England and Wales in the last 12 months. [79627]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Public Consultations

Claire Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what public consultations have been commenced by his Department in each month since 20 July; and what the (a) start date, (b) closing date and (c) website address of each were. [80270]

Beverley Hughes: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Re-offenders

Mr. Keith Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken to implement the recommendations relevant to his Department in the Social Exclusion Unit report Reducing re-offending by ex-prisoners. [76807]

Hilary Benn: I will write to my right hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Registered Charities

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many registered charities there are in (a) England and Wales, (b) Northern Ireland and (c) Scotland. [79112]

Beverley Hughes: The Charity Commission is the Government Department that registers charities in England and Wales. There are currently 186,320 registered charities in England and Wales. The Inland Revenue is responsible for the recognition of charitable status in Scotland and Northern Ireland. The Inland Revenue recognises approximately 7,500 charities in Northern Ireland and 30,025 in Scotland.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Gates of Remembrance Appeal is a registered charity. [79840]

Beverley Hughes: The Gates of Remembrance Appeal is not a charity registered in England and Wales. I understand there is a web-based appeal with this name, which is said to be sharing the proceeds between six ex-service charities. If the honourable member has any concerns about this organisation, he may wish to raise them with the Charity Commission, the regulatory authority for charities in England and Wales, at Harmsworth House, 13–15 Bouverie Street, London EC4Y 8DP.

Regulation of Investigatory Powers

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Coventry, South of 4 July, Official Report, col. 533–4W, what form the consultation on the extension of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 will take. [73216]

Mr. Blunkett: I will be publishing a consultation paper around the turn of the year and will consider responses before bringing forward proposals in relation to any additional public authorities under Chapter 11 of Part 1 of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 (RIPA).

Retail Crime

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has collated on how many shops in high street shopping centres in England and Wales have CCTV systems. [77979]

Mr. Denham: The Home Office does not hold information on privately operated Closed Circuit Television (CCTV) systems in shops. However, West Bromwich was awarded 465,000 under the Crime Reduction Programme CCTV Initiative for its town centre CCTV scheme.

RoadPeace

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what actions he proposes to take to respond to the representations from RoadPeace following their meeting with Ministers on 10 October; and if he will make a statement. [79618]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Road Safety

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, if he will ensure that the National Policing Plan for England and Wales includes the requirement for road safety to be a priority responsibility for police forces. [79533]

Mr. Denham: The National Policing Plan will set out the Secretary of State's strategic priorities for policing in England and Wales for the coming three years. The Plan will cover a wide range of policing activity including the important contribution of policing to reducing death and injury on roads. The National Policing Plan will be published by the end of November.

Schemes and Initiatives

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the schemes and initiatives sponsored by his Department and its agencies which are not the subject of national roll out, showing (a) the authorities or areas covered by the scheme and (b) the budget of the scheme in the last year for which information is available. [75672]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Schengen Information System

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information on UK nationals is held on the Schengen Information System; and how many nationals this covers. [78120]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Security Operation (Barrow-in-Furness)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what costs were incurred by (a) Cumbrian police and (b) his Department in the security operation at Barrow-in-Furness for the docking of the Pacific Pintail and Pacific Teal vessels in September. [77772]

Mr. Denham: Cumbria Constabulary inform me that their preliminary estimate of the additional costs incurred on this operation is around 140,000.

The force has an agreement with British Nuclear Fuel Limited (BNFL) for full reimbursement of these costs.

No expenditure has been incurred by my Department.

Sentencing Proposals

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to put forward new sentencing arrangements for motorists who (a) kill and (b) seriously injure a cyclist. [77071]

Mr. Denham: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Service Failures

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision has been made in contracts and specifications to cover service failures by (a) Capita and (b) the Criminal Records Bureau that result in (i) postponing the inclusion of categories of person in the disclosure system and (ii) delays in processing disclosure applications. [80029]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Sex Offenders

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 22 October 2002, Official Report, columns 221–22W, on sex offenders, what the reasons were for the delay in answering the questions; and what (a) statutory provision and (b) guidance prevents the publication by Chief Constables of information disaggregated below force level on the number of resident, registered or notified sex offenders. [80056]

Beverley Hughes: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Sexual Offences (Protected Material) Act 1997

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress his Department is making towards implementation of the Sexual Offences (Protected Material) Act 1997. [77275]

Hilary Benn: During the passage of the Regulatory Reform Bill, Ministers announced their intention to use a Regulatory Reform Order to amend the Act, to facilitate its implementation. Officials within the Home Office are currently considering practical proposals to bring about an amendment to the legislation.

Sikhs (Kirpans)

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what basis Sikhs are required to remove their kirpan when entering his Department's buildings. [80369]

Beverley Hughes: I will write to the hon Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Staff Absence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the working target is for the average number of days absence per staff year in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003. [47730]

Beverley Hughes: I will write to the hon Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Stalking

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what figures he has collated on the extent of stalking of women; and how many women aged 16 to 24 years old have been stalked in the last three years. [78820]

Mr. Denham: The 1998 British Crime Survey included an innovative computerised self-completion questionnaire designed to provide the first reliable measure of the extent of 'stalking' in England and Wales. A nationality representative sample of 9,988 16 to 59 year olds were asked whether they had been subject to 'persistent and unwanted attention' during their lifetime and during the preceding year. Persistent and unwanted attention was described to respondents at the beginning of the questionnaire in the following way:

"People may sometimes be pestered or harassed either by someone they know or a stranger. This person might do things like phoning or writing, following them or waiting outside their home or workplace".

Those who had been subject to such incidents were asked details about their experience. The questionnaire was deliberately designed to capture a wide range of experiences that could potentially be regarded as incidents of 'stalking'. However it should be stressed that these incidents were not necessarily regarded as crimes by the respondents and do not equate to offences under the Protection for Harassment Act 1997.

These results are published in Home Office Research Study 210, which is deposited in the Library. This report indicates that four per cent of women had experienced persistent and unwanted attention in the last year, compared to two per cent of men. 17 per cent of women aged 16 to 19 and eight per cent of those aged 20 to 24 had experienced such in this period. It is possible that those patterns are, at least in part, accounted for by differences in how men and women, particularly young women, interpret both the term persistent and unwanted attention and their own experiences.

Last year prevalence, by age and sex

	Percent victims
Age	Women	Men	All
16–19	17	3	10
20—24	8	5	7

Age	Percent victims Women	Men	All
All	4	2	3

Note:
Definition of stalking: persistent and unwanted attention (excluding incidents in which the victim and perpetrator were living with each other throughout the period over which the incidents occurred).

Statistics Commission (Management Information)

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library his reply to the Statistics Commission correspondence on the release of management information following the meeting of the Statistics Commission on 25 September; and if he will make a statement. [78411]

Mr. Denham: It is a matter for the Statistics Commission to decide how to handle my reply.

Stray Dogs

Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will issue guidance to police forces on appropriate temporary housing for stray dogs. [52575]

Mr. Denham: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Street Crime Action Group

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the role of the Street Crime Action Group. [48575]

Mr. Denham: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Street Crime Initiative

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the figures for burglary and violence against the person were for (a) April, (b) September and (c) in four week periods in the intervening months, for each of the ten force areas in the Street Crime Initiative; and what the figures were for the corresponding period last year. [76168]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Superintendent Ali Dizaei

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many members of the Independent Advisory Group were consulted by the Metropolitan Police Service when investigating Superintendent Ali Dizaei. [42742]

Mr. Denham: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Targets

Simon Hughes: : To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the non-public service agreement targets for his Department. [79614]

Hilary Benn: [holding answer 6 November 2002]: The Home Department's current targets are set out in the Home Office Annual Report 2001–02 (CM 5106), and in the relevant business plans of the Department's executive agencies and Non-Departmental Public Bodies.

Television Purchases

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) integrated digital and (b) analogue television sets have been bought by his Department in each of the last 24 months; and if he will publish the guidance given to officials making decisions on television purchases. [33229]

Beverley Hughes: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Thames Valley Police

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers transferred out of Thames Valley Police in each year from 1998–99 to date. [7914]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) police officers and (b) civilian police employees were recruited by Thames Valley Police in the most recent period for which figures are available; how many left Thames Valley Police during that period; and if he will make a statement. [79141]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Throckmorton

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason he has delayed submitting the notification of the proposed development of an asylum accommodation centre at Throckmorton to Wychavon District Council; and if he will make a statement. [79483]

Beverley Hughes: I announced on 5 November 2002, Official Report, column 151W, that we have decided not to pursue our proposal for an accommodation centre at Throckmorton airfield in Worcestershire as part of the trial. While we consider that the site itself is suitable, we have not been able to settle the necessary land acquisition arrangements to allow us to develop the site within the time frame of the trial.

Treatment Programmes (Prisons)

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many treatment programmes operate in prisons in England and Wales for (a) drug dependency, (b) alcohol dependency and (c) self-harm; and how many of them have been evaluated. [79611]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Turnberry Bilderberg Meeting

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests were made in connection with security arrangements for the Turnberry Bilderberg meeting; if the status of one arrested individual as special constable was consequently revoked; what the costs of policing this event were; what arrangements were made for the use of military transport for security of attendees; how many Bilderberg events have taken place in the UK requiring notification of his Department; when the next such is planned; and if he will make a statement. [78119]

Mr. Blunkett: This is a matter for the Scottish Executive.

Vacancies (Probation Service)

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many vacancies there are in the (a) London, (b) Sussex and (c) Kent probation services. [79629]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Women's Prison, Wales

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans she has to build a women's prison in Wales. [78684]

Hilary Benn: The Prison Service currently has no plans to build a prison for women in Wales. The Prison Service view is that new prison development should primarily be concentrated in areas of the greatest shortage of places. Currently these are the north west, the Midlands and London.

The number of women prisoners from Wales, currently around 170, does not justify the building of a female prison. However the Prison Service is well aware of the geographical difficulties being posed for some small sections of the prison population, and their needs would certainly be a consideration in any future plans for the development of the prison estate.

Work Permit Initiative

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact on the Work Permit Initiative for teachers on the shortage of teachers in the United Kingdom. [53640]

Beverley Hughes: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Young Offender Institutions

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young offender institutions do not possess in-house child protection protocols and committees. [78016]

Hilary Benn: All young offender institutions in the juvenile estate have developed child protection policies in line with a centrally produced protocol. Each establishment has also appointed child protection co-ordinator (and deputy) and has established a child protection committee.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which agency is responsible for investigating deaths in custody which take place while in young offender institutions. [78058]

Hilary Benn: All deaths in prison custody are investigated by the police who assess any criminal culpability and are subject to a coroner's request, which is held before a jury.

The Prison Service investigates all self-inflicted deaths in custody and conducts a clinical review of the treatment provided to a prisoner dying in prison from natural causes. These procedures apply in respect of adult prisoners, young offenders (18 to 20-year-olds) and juveniles (15 to 17-year-olds).

In addition, juvenile deaths give rise to a serious incident inquiry by the Youth Justice Board, which has responsibility for the placement of juvenile offenders and the appropriate Child Protection Committee may commission a "Part 8" case review, pursuant to Part 8 of "Working Together to Safeguard Children".

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many assaults on children under the age of 16 have occurred at each young offender institution in each of the past five years; [78062]

(2) what percentage of (a) boys and (b) girls under the age of 16 in young offender institutions in each of the past five years have been children in local authority care; [78064]

(3) what percentage of children under 16 who left young offender institutions to return to the community in each of the past five years has had residential accommodation arranged prior to discharge; [78063]

(4) how many of those resident in each young offender institution have been referred, whilst resident, to child protection services in each of the last five years. [78061]

Hilary Benn: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Payment by Giro Order Book

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the implications for crime rates of the phased reduction in use by the Department of Work and Pensions of payment by giro order book. [74851]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Scottish Executive

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many formal and official inter-ministerial meetings his Department has held with the Scottish Executive since May 1999, broken down by (a) Scottish Executive Department, (b) subject and (c) date. [72724]

Mr. Blunkett: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Recorded Crime

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the annual change in total recorded crime has been in (a) Avon and Somerset and (b) England from 1985–86 to 2001–02; and if he will make a statement. [66886]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Street Crime

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether street crime (a) fell and (b) rose (i) in London and (ii) nationally in each September since 1997, compared with (A) the preceding month and (B) the previous September. [71889]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Cambridgeshire Police

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate (a) the total funding given by him to Cambridgeshire police in each of the last three years and (b) the real terms change in this support in each of those years. [74784]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Air Conditioning (Refrigerant)

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the climate change impact will be of the refrigerant to be used in the air conditioning in his Department's new building in Marsham Street. [74757]

Beverley Hughes: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Crime (Harrow)

Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how much (a) street crime and (b) burglary was committed in each year since 1996 in Harrow; [74582]

(2) how many crimes were committed in each year since 1996 in Harrow. [74581]

Mr. Denham: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Young Offenders

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will provide a breakdown of young offenders by (a) types of offence and (b) length of sentence in the last 12 months; [73765]

(2) what proportion of those convicted in the last 12 months were young offenders. [73856]

Hilary Benn: The information requested, relating to England and Wales in 2000, is contained in Table 1 (persons aged 10 and under 18 sentenced by offence group) and Table 2 (persons aged 10 and under 18 sentenced to immediate custody by length of sentence).

6 per cent. of those convicted of all offences in 2000 were aged 10 and under 18.

Statistics for 2001 will be available in December.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Development Projects (UK)

Ms Walley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what development projects in the UK receive funding from the (a) European Investment Bank and (b) European Regional Development Fund, and when these projects will be completed; and what development projects in the UK with funding from the (i) European Investment Bank and (ii) European Regional Development Fund will start in the next six months. [77676]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 28 October 2002]: I have been asked to reply.

In 2001, the European Investment Bank invested €2,337 million (£1,469 million) in respect of projects in the UK. This comprised individual loans (for projects in a single sector or region) of €1,734 million (£1,090 million) and global loans (for projects covering more than one sector and/or region) of €603 million (£379 million). Individual loans focused on energy (€144 million (£91 million)), communications (€736 million (£463 million)); three-quarters of which were for improvement of telecommunications networks, water management, together with urban infrastructure (€641 million (£403 million)) and health and education (€212 million (£133 million)). Information on individual projects has been published in the EIB's Annual Report 2001, a copy of which is available in the Library. Information on the EIB's project pipeline is available on the EIB website (www.eib.org). This includes information on loans signed, approved and under appraisal. Annual Reports can also be accessed from the website.

A total of €8,434 million (£5,174 million) will be available from the European Regional Development Fund (ERDF) for projects in the UK over the current funding period, 2000–06. As with the European Investment Bank funding, detailed information on individual projects could be obtained only at disproportionate cost as it is not held centrally by the DTL However, if you are interested in a particular ERDF or EIB-backed project, please write to me again and I will endeavour to obtain the relevant information.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 392

SESSION 2001–2002

4th November—7th November 2002

Printed indexes to Hansard

The volume index is one of three printed indexes to Commons Hansard produced from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Indexing Service (POLIS). It contains references to material in the bound volumes of Hansard. The other indexes produced are:

- The fortnightly index to Hansard. This covers the same date range as the volume index but references are to the column numbering in the daily parts and weekly edition of Hansard.
- The sessional index to Hansard. This contains references to material in the bound volumes for a whole session.

Indexes on the Parliamentary website

Fortnightly, volume and sessional indexes covering material from the beginning of the 1999/2000 session will also appear on the Parliamentary website at http://www.parliament.uk with links to the full text of Hansard.

SCOPE

The indexes include entries covering:

- The content of all material recorded in Hansard, including debates, procedural motions and questions.
- The names of all Members contributing to the Parliamentary business recorded in Hansard.
- The names of some types of Parliamentary business whenever they occur in Hansard. These are 'Ministerial statements', 'Business statements', 'Opposition days' and 'Estimates days'.

ARRANGEMENT

- All headings are in one word-by-word alphabetical sequence, with Members' contribution entries distinguished from other entries by italics.
- Where a Member contributes to Parliamentary business and is the subject of Parliamentary business there are separate contribution and subject entries, the subject entry coming first.
- Entries beginning 'Mac' and 'Mc' are sorted in one sequence as 'Mac'.
- 'St', when abbreviated for Saint, is filed as 'Saint'.
- Numbers are filed as if spelt out, e.g. '10 Downing Street' as if 'Ten Downing Street'.

HEADINGS

Choice of headings

- Specificity—Entries summarise the overall content of a debate or question as specifically as the various POLIS thesauruses allow. For example, Education, Higher education, Universities or the name of a particular university is used depending on the breadth of the item.
- Name headings—Specific entries are included for the names of people, places, institutions, organisations, committees, programmes, initiatives, publications and legislation when these constitute the overall subject of an item.
- Organisations and subjects—Organisation entries are preferred for material about the general performance, administration and staffing of an organisation (for example, United Kingdom Passports Agency, Standards). Subject entries are preferred for what organisations do as part of their duties (for example, Passports, Fees and charges).

Geographical coverage

- Subject headings—Subject headings are assumed to refer to the whole of England, Great Britain or the United Kingdom unless otherwise stated.
- Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales—Material relating to the whole of Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales is indexed under these headings.
- Places within the UK—Material about specific towns, areas and institutions is entered under the name of the specific town, area or institution.
- Foreign countries—Most material relating to foreign countries is collected under the name of that country. Some additional material may be found under the names of—groups of countries, areas within countries, geographical features, place names associated with particular issues, politicians and heads of state, international bodies, and institutions and companies operating in those countries.
- EC/EU material—General material about the European Communities and European institutions as bodies is entered under 'European Communities' and 'EC institutions'. Organisational material about specific communities and institutions is entered under the name of the body, for example 'European Coal and Steel Community' or 'European Parliament'. Material about what the Communities and institutions are doing or propose to do is entered under various subject headings beginning 'EC' such as 'EC environmental policy'.

Parliamentary material and business

- Material about Parliament—This is indexed under 'Parliament', the names of the two Houses, the 'Palace of Westminster' and parts of the Parliamentary estate (such as 'Portcullis House').
- Committees—Material about committees is indexed under 'Committees', types of committee (such as 'Select committees') and the names of individual committees (such as 'Home Affairs Select Committee').
- Parliamentary proceedings/procedures—Material discussing these is indexed under the specific type of proceeding (such as 'Parliamentary questions' or 'Oral questions'), procedure (such as 'Calling of Members') or issue (such as 'Unparliamentary expressions').
- Legislation—Entries for Parliamentary proceedings on bills and statutory instruments are entered under their titles. Where the lead word of the bill or statutory instrument does not provide a full or clear indication of the subject there are additional subject entries when the bill or instrument is debated. For example, debates on the 'Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill' have entries under 'Pensions' and 'Social security benefits' as well as under the title of the Bill.
- Members' names—These are given in the form by which the Member prefers to be known.
- Speaker and Chair—Contributions by the Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker and deputies'. Contributions from the chair during Committees of the Whole House are brought together under 'Chairman of Committee of the Whole House'. Significant rulings and statements (as opposed to routine comments) are indicated by the sub-heading 'Rulings and statements' in both cases.

Guidance on headings

- Cross references—'See' references indicate all the material has been entered under another heading. 'See also' references indicate that additional information may be found under another heading.
- Concept thesaurus—A copy of the subject thesaurus to POLIS, listing the concept entries used in the index, is available on the Parliamentary website. A hard copy is available from the Head of the POLIS Unit, House of Commons Library, 1 Derby Gate, London, SW1A 2DG (020 7219 6456).

REFERENCES

- References in the indexes are to columns rather than pages.
- References to debates, but not questions, are accompanied by the date of the item.
- There are separate sequences in Hansard for the material taken on the floor of the House, Westminster Hall sittings and written questions:
  - References consisting of a number by itself indicate material taken on the floor of the House.
  - References ending in 'wh' indicate Westminster Hall sittings.
  - References ending in 'w' indicate written questions.
- References under all headings except the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in one numerical sequence irrespective of whether the material is taken on the floor of the House, is discussed at a Westminster Hall sitting or is a written question.
- References under the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in numerical sequence under the following headings:
  - Debates etc. (which includes interventions and points of order as well as significant contributions to debates);
  - Sittings in Westminster Hall (covering all debates held as part of the Westminster Hall sittings); and
  - Questions (which includes written, oral and private notice questions).

ABBREVIATIONS

The following abbreviations are used in connection with the progress of bills:

- 1R=First reading
- 2R=Second reading
- Com=Committee stage
- Rep=Report stage
- 3R=Third reading
- res=resolution
- amendt(s)=amendment(s)
- *=matter taken formally without debate or division.

Parliamentary background

- The Parliamentary website at http://www.parliament.uk contains a range of information about Parliament and the full text of some Parliamentary papers and proceedings including Hansard.
- Information on current Parliamentary business is provided in the House of Commons Information Office Weekly Information Bulletin, available on the website and from The Stationery Office (020 7873 8499).
- Further information on Parliamentary proceedings and procedures is available from the House of Commons Information Office (020 7219 4272).
